INTIMATIONS FROM HIGH SOURCES THAT ITALY IS HEADED FOR PARTICIPATION IN THE EUROPEAN WAR--SPOKEN WITH GREAT FIRMNESS, THOUGH PURPOSELY VAGUE AS TO WHY, WHEN, WHERE AND WITH WHOM--HAVE BEEN COMING OUT OF ROME WITH THE FREQUENCY OF PEAS POPPING OFF A HOT SKILLET.

THESE STATEMENTS, COUPLED WITH EVEN MORE POINTED REMARKS IN THE PRESS, BEAR ALL THE EAR-MARKS OF PROPAGANDA DIRECTED TO A SPECIFIC END. IT IS NATURAL, THEREFORE, THAT EUROPE SHOULD HAVE EMBARKED ON ANOTHER ANXIOUS GUESSING BEE AS TO WHAT SIGNOR MUSSOLINI'S INTENTIONS ARE.

I HAVE SAID BEFORE THAT THE INDICATIONS WERE IL DUCE WOULD REMAIN OUT OF THE WAR AS LONG AS HE COULD, AND THEN ADOPT A COURSE WHICH WOULD BEST SERVE ITALY'S INTERESTS. CIRCUMSTANCES AT THE MOMENT PROBABLY WOULD DETERMINE THE SIDE ON WHICH THOSE INTERESTS LAY.

BE IT REMARKED HERE THAT IL DUCE IS A THOROUGHLY PRACTICAL INDIVIDUAL WHO ISN'T SWAYED BY HIS EMOTIONS AND IS LONG ON HORSE-

30.24-1983

THERE SEEMS TO ME TO BE NO REASON FOR CHANGING THIS ESTIMATE OF THE LINE THE ITALIAN LEADER WILL PURSUE. HOWEVER, IT DOES STRIKE ME THAT HE PROBABLY SEES IN THE WRITING ON THE WALL THAT THIS WAR IS LIKELY TO BE TRICKY IN FAST CHANGES FROM NOW ON. HE KNOWS THAT HE MAY HAVE TO MAKE A QUICK DECISION--AND HE IS PREPARING HIS PEOPLE FOR AN EVENTUALITY.

ON THREE SUCCESSIVE DAYS LAST WEEK THE POSSIBILITY OF ITALY'S ENTRANCE INTO THE WAR WAS DISCUSSED IN THE CHAMBER OF FASCES AND GUILDS BY MUSSOLINI'S TRUSTED LIEUTENANTS. AND IN EACH INSTANCE THE FASCIST CHIEFTAIN WAS PRESENT TO HEAR THE HINTS AT HIS COUNTRY'S INVOLVEMENT IN THE CONFLICT. THUS IT IS FAIR TO SAY THAT THE WORDS WERE SPOKEN WITH HIS BLESSINGS. MAY 1 - 19[illegible]

MUCH OF THE RECENT ITALIAN PROPAGANDA HAS HAD A PRO-NAZI AND ANTI-ALLY TINGE, AND RELATIONS BETWEEN ITALY AND THE ALLIED BROTHERHOOD HAVE BEEN RATHER STRAINED. THIS HAS GIVEN THE IMPRESSION--AND PROBABLY WAS INTENDED TO--THAT MUSSOLINI WAS PREPARING TO JOIN HERR HITLER AGAINST ENGLAND AND FRANCE. EVEN IN THE CHAMBER OF FASCES AND GUILDS, IN IL DUCE'S PRESENCE, FRANCESCO GIUNTA REMARKED:

"AS FOR ENGLAND, WHOSE POWER IS BEGINNING TO BE PLACED IN DOUBT, HER TRADITIONAL FRIENDSHIP FOR US IS NOTHING BUT A COMMONPLACE, REFUTED BY HISTORY AND BY FACT."

THE SITUATION GOT SO PEPPERY RECENTLY THAT BRITISH MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE CROSS IN A SPEECH WARNED ITALY TO BEHAVE LIKE A NEUTRAL IF SHE WANTED TO BE TREATED AS ONE. TO THIS VIRGINIO GAYDA, AUTHORITATIVE FASCIST WRITER, REPLIED THAT ITALY "HAS NOTHING TO LEARN FROM ANY ONE ABOUT ITS RULES OF CONDUCT AND WOULD NOT ACCEPT A WARNING FROM ANYONE."

NOW IT IS INDEED POSSIBLE THAT ALL THIS MEANS MUSSOLINI IS LEANING TOWARDS GERMANY. HOWEVER, I STILL THINK IL DUCE WILL BE GOVERNED BY CIRCUMSTANCES AT THE TIME HE HAS TO CHOOSE HIS SIDE. THERE HAVE BEEN NO INDICATIONS THAT HE HAS ANY DEEP AFFECTION FOR EITHER THE ALLIES OR HIS PARTNER IN THE AXIS. WHAT I BELIEVE MUSSOLINI IS DOING IS THIS:

MAY 1 - 1940

THE ITALIAN PEOPLE, WHILE LOYAL TO THEIR DUCE, HAVE LITTLE LIKING FOR HERR HITLER OR NAZI PRINCIPLES. WHEN I WAS IN ITALY AT THE END OF 1938 I FOUND SENTIMENT VERY STRONG AGAINST THE NAZI REGIME, AND AGAINST THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS, FOR THAT MATTER.

IT SEEMS QUITE LOGICAL TO THINK THAT MUSSOLINI NOT ONLY IS PREPARING THE PUBLIC MIND FOR WAR BUT IS BUILDING UP A CASE SO THAT IF HE FEELS IT NECESSARY TO JOIN HITLER HE WILL HAVE GOT ITALY READY FOR IT. IL DUCE ALREADY KNOWS THAT HIS PEOPLE WOULD FOLLOW HIM INTO WAR ON THE SIDE OF THE ALLIES, AND HE MAY WANT TO STRENGTHEN THE OTHER SIDE--JUST IN CASE.

YESTERDAY MUSSOLINI APPOINTED ONE OF HIS CLOSEST ADVISERS, DINO ALFIERI, AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN. MANY THOUGHT THEY SAW SIGNIFICANCE IN THE FACT THAT ALFIERI IS DECIDEDLY PRO-GERMAN. COINCIDENTLY IN BERLIN ROBERT LEY, LEADER OF THE NAZI LABOR FRONT, REPRESENTED ENGLAND AND FRANCE AS COMMON ENEMIES OF GERMANY AND ITALY, AND PROCLAIMED ITALO-GERMAN SOLIDARITY FOR "VICTORY."

THAT SOUNDS PRETTY OMINOUS TO THOSE WHO WOULD LIKE TO SEE ITALY WITH THE ALLIES. ALL IN ALL, HOWEVER, I BELIEVE IL DUCE IS FREE TO CHOOSE EITHER SIDE WHICH LOOKS GOOD TO HIM WHEN THE TIME COMES.

IT IS REASONABLE TO BELIEVE THAT HE EXPECTS TO HAVE TO COME INTO THE WAR, POSSIBLY IN THE NEAR FUTURE. CERTAINLY HE HAS MADE IT CLEAR THAT HE EXPECTS TO HAVE A LARGE HAND IN PEACE, AND IN THIS CONNECTION ONE RECALLS HIS WORDS OF TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO WHEN HE SUCCESSFULLY CAMPAIGNED TO BRING ITALY INTO THE WORLD WAR ON THE SIDE OF THE ALLIES:

MAY 1 - 1940

"THE VANQUISHED WILL HAVE A HISTORY, BUT NOT THE ABSENT. IF ITALY REMAINS ABSENT, SHE WILL BE ONCE MORE 'THE LAND OF THE DEAD.'"

British Sink or Fire 2 Nazi Ships In Raid on Kattegat Supply Line; Germans Quit Roeros and Tynset

Planes and Surface Craft Battle for 2 Hours 10 Miles Off Gothenburg

3 Nazi Air Fields Bombed by R.A.F.

MAY 2 - 1940

Invaders Retire in East Norway, Presumably to Let Supports Catch Up

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, May 1.—British naval raiding units, apparently varying their submarine attack on Germany's supply and transport line across the Kattegat to Norway, were reported to have brought planes and surface ships into play in a large-scale naval engagement off the Swedish west coast today.

Observers at Gothenburg, Sweden, said they saw one German ship set afire and another sunk during a two-hour battle about ten miles northwest of that important Swedish naval base. German warships convoying transports and supply ships returned the British fire.

This sea fight came almost simultaneously with an announcement by Norwegian authorities that German troops, composing an excellently equipped tank unit of about 150 men, had retreated southward from Roeros, key point in the upper Oesterdal, and had withdrawn from Tynset, twenty-five miles farther south.

The Norwegians said Norse troops with "foreign volunteers" had reoccupied the area around Roeros but not the town itself, because the Germans had threatened to subject it to aerial bombardment if they did. The "foreign volunteers" may have included Swedes, Norwegian sources said, but they were not positive about it. Norwegian authorities quoted a German officer as saying that "our retreat is necessary because our communications have been cut."

Planes Busy Over Steinkjer

An Allied-Norwegian communique issued from Grong, back of the Steinkjer front, said there was little ground activity but much warfare in the air in that sector.

[A United Press dispatch from Stockholm said a correspondent of "Social Demokraten" reported that Allied and Norwegian troops had repulsed German units advancing north from Steinkjer, killing twenty-three German soldiers.

[At London, successful raids by

MAY 2 - 1940

The Norwegian troops entered Roeros suburbs about 5 a. m., after the Germans had withdrawn during the night, and established communication with Sweden. Norwegian military sources indicated that reorganized Norwegian forces, now geared to shift quickly, were harassing the Germans' rear, making necessary their retreat from their northernmost posts, and were interfering with their supply lin

It was not yet clear whether the German withdrawal was only a temporary move to await reinforcements. This strategy is a favorite one with the Germans. It was not yet clear either whether the Germans' retreat would affect their position at Trondheim, on the west-central coast.

Situation More Puzzling

The Oesterdal is the easternmost of two valleys used in the Nazis' campaign to establish a connection between Oslo and Trondheim. The Germans reported this connection completed yesterday in the Gudbrandsdal, the valley to the west. The eastern line would be of less importance to them if the Gudbransdal line was secure.

The latest developments gave a puzzling twist to the military situation in central Norway. Even if the Germans retain control of the Gudbrandsdal, military experts pointed out, Tynset would be an important key to maintaining the German forces which advanced from that point to Kvikne to cut the western valley railwa'.

Adding to the puzzle was the report from British quarters in Norway denying that Dombaas, railway junction in the Gudbrandsdal, had been vacated by the British. On the contrary, the British here said, the Allies have now brought fairly heavy artillery up to defend that junction. It was clear, at least, that the British had made a strong fight.

Late tonight the Swedish radio broadcast a Norwegian communique saying that German forces were defeated in an attack at Otta, twenty miles south of Dombaas, and suffered "heavy losses."

Despite the German retreat, foreign military observers expressed doubt that the British and Norwegians were equipped to cope with the German methods.

They explained that the nature of these tactics made Norwegian re-occupation of Roeros and Tynset of minor importance, if true; that these towns may well have been abandoned by the on-pushing advance columns pending arrivals of reinforcements coming up behind. This same thing, the experts said, occurred farther south in Norway.

The German tactics involve taking long chances. Small, well armed patrols operate a considerable distance from their base, with the prime purpose of breaking up Allied and Norwegian communications. Aerial units precede and protect the hard-hitting patrols. These measures have been successful in Norway—so much so that foreign military men, following the unique pattern of the fighting, said they could not understand why the narrow valley passes of southern and central Norway were not longer defended. They could only conclude that the British, who fought hard and well when they had a chance, were baffled by the unorthodoxy of the German advance.

As in Poland, the Germans, despite the rough terrain, went around difficult positions wherever possible instead of smashing through—always under cover of an airplane barrage.

For instance, the first contact with Trondheim, sketchy though it may be, was established by Oslo units which left the main column at Tynset, some fifty miles south of Stoeren, struck across mountain trails to the western railway line at Ulsberg and on that railroad met southbound German troops from Trondheim who had gone through or around Stoeren. Meanwhile, other German units, advancing up the east spur of the railway after passing Tynset, were forcing their way past Roeros, with some difficulty because of Norwegian defenses.

Dombaas, where the Allied troops from coastal Aandalsnes met the main German column coming up the Gudbrandsdal, is about fifty miles west and slightly south of Tynset. It was on the railroad branch above Dombaas that the first junction of Germany's Trondheim and Oslo troops was effected.

If the German contact between Trondheim and Oslo is effective for the transportation of supplies and reinforcements, a real battle is in the offing. The Germans can hardly rest on their laurels at Trondheim, with increasing Allied forces concentrated just to the north, about Steinkjer. Intense German air activity from north of Steinkjer to Namsos, Allied disembarkation point, is regarded as a prelude to a land attack.

Coupled with these reports were dispatches asserting that a British destroyer had been sunk with heavy loss of life during an eleven-hour German air raid on the Allied landing base at Namsos and that the British gradually were closing in on a Nazi force isolated at Narvik, in the far north.

Heroic Norwegian Blocks Advance.

The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen printed a dispatch from a special correspondent declaring that a German column moving south from Trondheim to meet another Nazi force advancing northward from Oslo had been halted before reaching Storen.

It was not clear whether this dispatch was written before or after the German announcement yesterday that the two columns had met south of Storen.

The Tidningen story said that the Norwegians still were holding positions a mile north of Storen, after delaying the Germans' southward march at Lundamo, where a young Norwegian had dynamited a bridge as two Nazi cars were crossing the span, killing himself and eighteen of the enemy.

Lundamo is about ten miles north of Storen and twenty miles south of Trondheim.

Bombers Attack Namsos.

The German air raid on Namsos, approximately 100 miles north of Trondheim, was recounted by the correspondent of the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, who said the Nazi bombers attacked persistently from 7:15 A. M. to 6 P. M. yesterday, despite a steady fire from British anti-aircraft batteries.

Two of the German raiders were reported shot down.

The Swedish correspondent said the Nazi bombers concentrated their attack on a British cruiser and a destroyer which had entered Namsos harbor during the night. One bomb fell squarely on the stern of the destroyer, he declared, starting a fire which spread to the magazine and caused an explosion that "blew the entire vessel to pieces."

"Scores of British marines and sailors were believed killed," the correspondent wrote. "The remainder, number unknown, were taken aboard the cruiser, which then managed to get out of the fjord."

The British warships were said to have been at anchor when the German bombers appeared, but got under way and steered a zigzag course in an attempt to escape.

Six planes participated in the first attack, the correspondent said, and bombers continued to fly over at intervals in groups of three each.

Fugitives fleeing across the Swedish border from the Arctic Norwegian port of Narvik reported that the German garrison besieged there by the British was running short of provisions and could not hold out for more than a week.

British guns were said to have silenced all the German artillery, compelling the Nazis to retire from mountains around the town to a precarious position along the coast.

Among the fugitives reaching the Swedish border were 134 Norwegian soldiers who were captured by the Germans when they occupied the town. The Norwegians, who were interned on crossing the frontier, said they had been released by the Germans because provisions were running low.

Weak From Lack of Food.

Many of the Norwegians were so weak from lack of food that their companions were compelled to carry them.

Some of the refugees said that all the higher German officers had disappeared from the town in the last few days, and expressed the belief that they had made their way across the Swedish border disguised as civilians.

Military activity on the Steinkjer front, midway between Trondheim and Namsos, apparently was stalled temporarily by the beginning of the spring thaw.

German mechanized forces were reported unable to get under way against positions held by the French and supported by the British.

A Swedish business man who succeeded in making his way from Trondheim to the border estimated that the original force the Germans landed there totaled no more than 1,200 men.

More than five times that number, however, he said, have since been brought in by planes, which also transported light anti-aircraft guns.

Nazis Omit Contact Claim

German War Communique Merely Reports Fighting Near Trondheim.

MAY 2 - 1940

BERLIN, May 1 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced in its regular communique today that fighting "still went on" yesterday at Trondheim, the north Norwegian port which the Germans had previously described as linked by land with Oslo by the German columns driving northward.

Nevertheless, said today's communique, "the German advance in Norway continues," and the capture of a total of 4,900 Norwegian troops and forty Britons was claimed.

MAY 2 - 1940

The High Command also said that German aerial bombs had sunk a British "anti-aircraft cruiser," a destroyer and five transports; and damaged another cruiser and five other transports.

Resistance Still Strong.

The report of continued fighting in the Trondheim region indicated that Allied resistance was still formidable in some areas in the path of the German advance.

A lack of any reports from north of the Nazi-held port, where the British are believed to be strongly entrenched, was regarded as a sign of Allied opposition there. That the cruisers reported bombed were said to have been off Namsos, 100 miles north of Trondheim, also was taken to indicate newly arriving reenforcements for the British.

The Germans, presumably, were engaged chiefly in consolidating their positions on the Dombas-Trondheim railroad.

'Drive in Norway Continues.'

The communique follows:

"The German advance in Norway continues. At Trondheim fighting still went on yesterday.

"Surrender of arms on the part of Norwegian troops northwest of Lillehammer proved more extensive than reported yesterday. The rest of the Second Norwegian Division was captured with 200 officers and 3,500 men belonging to various regiments, as were forty Britons.

"Booty consisted of seven cannon, 125 machine guns, 250 motor vehicles in good condition.

"An additional 1,200 men surrendered in the mountainous region near Lomm, between Fafernes and Sogne Fjord.

Says Cruiser Was Sunk.

"The air force attacked British sea forces successfully before Namsos. One anti-aircraft cruiser was sunk by two direct hits, one heavy cruiser was damaged seriously aft by a direct hit of light caliber.

"In addition one destroyer and five British transports sank after being hit, while five others suffered severe damage.

"During a British air attack on Stavanger eight enemy planes were shot down by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft guns, while during a British attack on Fornebu Airport, near Oslo, on the night of April 30 one British plane was shot down by anti-aircraft artillery.

"In the course of a renewed attack on this airport during the early morning of May 1 only slight damage was done."

Late this afternoon DNB, the official eGrman news agency, said that more recent reports put the British losses at Stavanger at planes, and that isolated British efforts to attck the Aalborg Airport failed. Although a bomb landed in a garden plot in an Aalborg suburb and caused slight damage to houses in the vicinity.

Picture British as Trapped.

Meanwhile today the German army, jubilant over swift successes in central Norway, turned to plans for a sweeping concentric attack on "trapped" British forces perched on the Norwegian west coast, hoping to drive them back into the sea.

Taking its cue from Fuehrer Hitler himself, who praised the army for having "fulfilled a tremendous assignment" the Nazi press predicted the destruction of the Allied forces operating in the region of Andalsnes, on the coast south of Trondheim, unless they withdraw speedily.

"They will be caught by the closing German fist and will be lost," said the Berlin newspaper Lokalanzeiger.

The Germans say it is only a question of time before they mop up the Allied troops there and the Norwegian troops further south, around Vaga on the Bergen-Oslo Railway.

MAY 2 1940

Hitler Mentions Contact.

Hitler's own newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, flatly stated: "The enemy has been defeated. The landing in the Molde Fjord was a failure."

The Molde Fjord is the body of water on which Andalsnes lies. The British troops which landed here were those which last week smashed down the railway to the important junction of Dombas and then north to Storen, cutting off German-held Trondheim from Oslo. It was these forces which the Germans defeated yesterday, capturing both Dombas and Storen, according to the German Army, and thereby, in their eyes, making the conquest of Norway virtually complete after three weeks of fighting.

From Hitler came a spirited order of the day to his troops in Norway in which he said, after mentioning the establishment of land communications between Oslo and Trondheim, that "therewith the aim of the West Powers still to be able to force Germany to her knees by a belated occupation of Norway has been definitely frustrated."

Credit Motorized Units.

"You have fought on the Norwegian front," he said, "against all hardships on sea, land and in the air and against the resistance of the enemy. You have fulfilled a tremendous assignment which I, believing in you and your strength, had to give you. . . . You have made a decisive contribution in the most difficult and fateful battle of our nation for existence."

The Germans credit their air force and their motorized and mechanized units especially with having enabled the army command to carry out its task with such lightning rapidity.

Wherever possible, said the press, the air forces attacked first. "Shattering the nerves of the enemy by continuous bombings and power dives," thus preparing the way for advancing infantry and at the same time reducing German losses to a minimum.

100 Bombers at Once.

One authoritative spokesman said that the air force was operating in continuous waves of 100 bombers each. After such attacks armored cars, motorized infantry and tanks would move up. In this way the Germans, according to the authoritative commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, routed "English troops of the first line, mostly experienced soldiers, of whom many had fought in the colonies."

Dienst aus Deutschland also declared that "the right flank of the German front, against which England planned a flanking movement with the occupation of Norway, has now been finally secured."

The Berliner Borsen Zeitung described England's sacrifices as "enormous," claiming that "roughly eighty British ships, among them approximately fifty-five warships and twenty-five transport vessels," had been "sunk, set afire or more or less severely damaged by direct hits in fighting around Norway."

"These are losses," the paper stated, "which even the strongest sea power is unable to stand for any length of time."

MAY 2 - 1940

British Silent on Claim.

LONDON, May 1 (A. P.).—British naval spokesmen declined to comment on the German claim today that a British cruiser had been sunk and another damaged at Namsos.

One spokesman did say, however, that "having sunk all our battleships, they are now reduced to sinking our cruisers."

MAY 2 - 1940

Prior German Claim Denied.

On April 21 Germany announced that Great Britain had lost five cruisers, ten destroyers and eight submarines sunk, one cruiser beached and numerous other warships, including four battleships, severely damaged in the Scandinavian fighting up to that point.

The next day Great Britain issued a summary stating that only eighteen British warships had been sunk during the entire war, including five submarines and the armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi. This statement said that Great Britain had lost no cruisers and only ten destroyers of a prewar fleet of 185.

land. One civilian has been killed at the Orkney Islands during the raids on the Scapa Flow naval base and other civilians have been wounded in Scotland proper.

Crashes at Busiest Corner.

The spot where the bomber crashed is at the busiest crossing on the main street of Clacton, which is less than fifty miles from London.

The crash occurred shortly after enemy planes had been sighted flying at a low altitude—apparently mine-laying aircraft.

Apparently crippled by the anti-aircraft batteries, one of the planes headed inland, circled Clacton for half an hour, dropped a landing flare, and then suddenly plunged into a row of seven houses, which it demolished. The explosion blasted out a crater which witnesses called "as big as a house." The walls of neighboring homes collapsed, burying their occupants.

A baby carriage, standing beside one house, was blown into a treetop. Other trees were uprooted and fell across the street.

As air raid crews went to the aid of the injured another plane was heard overhead and all lights were ordered extinguished, adding to the difficulty of rescue work.

The crash caused the biggest

Residents along the Yorkshire coast told of hearing two airplanes overhead and several heavy explosions and seeing tracer bullets fired from guns at sea.

British Admit Dombas Retreat

London Says Troops Withdrew to Prepared Positions After Hard Battle.

MAY 2 - 1940

LONDON, May 1 (A. P.).—The War Office announced today that British troops "withdrew to prepared positions" in the important Dombas area, 100 miles south of Trondheim, after having stubbornly resisted strong German attacks.

The communiqué, issued after a military spokesman had described the position of British forces in central Norway as "dangerous and very obscure," said, in full:

"At Narvik (arctic ore port) areas occupied by Allied forces have been extended and operations are continuing satisfactorily.

"In the Namsos area (central Norway, north of Trondheim) the situation at the front remains unchanged.

"In the Dombas area our troops, after stubborn resistance in the face of strong enemy attacks, withdrew to prepared positions."

Relief Efforts Pressed.

Efforts to relieve the Allied forces of the center continued, while the British air force struck savagely at three German air bases in Scandinavia.

The spokesman admitted that it was "quite possible" that Dombas and Storen, vital railway junctions in the Trondheim theater of war, had been taken by the Germans, as reported in Berlin yesterday, but there was no official confirmation today that the British had lost the two big towns.

Fresh Troops Are Landed.

Indications that the British were seeking to relieve the pressure on their forces in Norway was seen in a War Office announcement last night that fresh troops had been landed.

The military spokesman declined to speculate on Norwegian developments, declaring that "speculation at this stage may mean the loss of men's lives."

He said that the situation at Namsos and Steinkjer, north of German-held Trondheim, was "good" and that the Allied forces were moving closer to Narvik.

The Air Ministry said that seven British bombers had been lost in raids on German airdromes at Stavanger, on the southwestern coast of Norway, on Fornebu, near the German-occupied capital, Oslo, and on Aalborg, in Denmark, but declared three German planes had been shot down and "heavy damage" had been inflicted on the three airfields.

British Silent on Claims.

At sea the German High Command reported new attacks on the British power, announcing that German aerial bombs had sunk a British anti-aircraft cruiser, a destroyer and five transports, and had damaged another cruiser and five other transports.

The British followed their "shutmouth" policy in declining to comment on the German naval claims.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Chamberlain informed the House of Commons today that he would make a statement on the Norwegian situation tomorrow.

Mr. Chamberlain may reply to a sharp personal attack made on him last night by the Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Mr. Chamberlain was believed to have given King George VI a confidential account of the war at an audience last evening before the King and Queen Elizabeth left for Lancashire. There was no immediate indication that the consultation with the King implied any ministerial changes.

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 1—Neutral military sources in London, reviewing the first two weeks of the Norwegian campaign, tonight called the Allied situation "grave but far from hopeless."

MAY 2 - 1940

They said there is an opportunity for an Allied counter-attack in the south but "only if they obtain parity in the air."

"Germany may have lost Narvik," these sources said, "but she has gained something a thousand times more valuable—submarine and air bases in Britain's front yard."

London, May 1—An unconfirmed report carried by the Exchange Telegraph Agency from Goteborg, Sweden, said Allied forces were advancing southward on the Steinkjer front, north of Trondheim.

The Air Ministry said seven British bombers were lost in raids on German airdromes at Stavanger, on the southwestern coast of Norway, on Fornebu, near the German-occupied capital, Oslo, and on Aalborg, Denmark, but declared three German planes were shot down and "heavy damage" was inflicted on the three air fields.

Silent On Naval Claims

The British followed their "shutmouth" policy in declining to comment on the German naval claims that German aerial bombs had sunk a British anti-aircraft cruiser, a destroyer and five transports and had damaged another cruiser and five other transports.

Confronted with repeated German reports of successes in Norway, there was no attempt by Britain's military spokesman to discount the Nazi announcement that German forces in Oslo and Trondheim had joined hands.

Doubts "Constant Flow"

However, he pointed out that "we must remember that what with demolitions and bombing German communications will not be easy." He said that if only small parties of Germans had made contact this "does not mean there is a constant flow of men and material."

MAY 2 - 1940

(Swedish reports that Norwegian troops still were occupying positions north of Storen cast doubts on German claims that the Nazis had established land communications between Oslo and Trondheim.)

The Air Ministry communique follows:

"Large concentrations of enemy aircraft were reported yesterday at air bases in Norway and Denmark.

"Extensive attacks were, therefore, launched by strong forces of Royal Air Force bombers and aircraft last night on the airdromes at Stavanger, Fornebu and Aalborg.

Heavy Damage Reported

"The attacks were pressed home in the face of strong opposition from anti-aircraft guns and fighters. Preliminary reports indicate that heavy damage was done on the airdromes and on aircraft dispersed there.

Falling Nazi Plane Blows Up; Wrecks Center of English Town

Three Houses Destroyed and 50 Damaged by Blast Which Kills Two and Injures 156 Civilians

MAY 2 - 1940

LONDON, May 1 (A. P.).—The crash of a German bomber, shot down by anti-aircraft guns, and the explosion of its deadly load of mines and bombs at the very center of the Essex coast resort town of Clacton-on-Sea, killed the Nazi crew of four men last night and caused England's first civilian air raid casualties—two dead and 156 injured, 34 severely.

Air raid rescue workers dug charred bodies from the debris resulting from the crash, which resembled a giant skyrocket exploding a box of fireworks. The explosion destroyed three houses, damaged fifty others and left a huge crater in the street.

Although the casualties were England's first air raid losses in the war, others have occurred in Scotturnout of Air Raid Precaution units under actual wartime conditions in Britain since the start of the war.

Witnesses said that the center of Clacton looked as though it had undergone an artillery bombardment. Traffic was completely disorganized today and bus service was rerouted around the town.

By an ironic coincidence, Clacton Hotel operators, seeking to assure the public of the safety of their resort, announced only yesterday that guests would get one-third rebate on their bills for any day a bomb or mine exploded near the town.

MAY 2 - 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 1—Rows of wrecked homes, a list of more than 160 casualties and a great crater in the center of the quiet resort town of Clacton-On-Sea tonight marked the end of the trail of havoc of a crippled German bomber which crashed last night with its load of mines and bombs.

The giant mine layer, victim of British fighting planes and anti-aircraft guns, plowed through two streets of small red brick villas, smashing them to pieces, ripping off walls and roofs and exploded with a vast roar.

Toll Of First Civilian Raid

Tonight England's first civilian air-raid casualties were listed as follows:

Two killed, some 160 injured, 34 seriously.

In addition the crew of four of the Heinkel bomber were killed.

Between twenty-five and thirty houses were wrecked, more than fifty others made unsafe. Windows were shattered all over town. Unofficial estimates placed the damage at $350,000.

Hundreds of homeless were sheltering with friends or in hotels. Many had almost incredible escapes.

The crater, marking the exact spot of the crash, was at the busiest intersection of the main street, less than fifty miles from London.

Ironically, Clacton Hotel operators, in an effort to assure the public of the safety of their resort, announced only yesterday that guests would get one-third rebate on their bills for any day a bomb or mine exploded near the town.

The liberal News Chronicle declared that responsibility for any faulty decisions rested with Chamberlain and not with Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty and head of the fighting services.

"The Norwegian campaign has produced—if reports are to be believed—at least one case where divided counsels have checked effective action," the newspaper said.

"There are strong reasons for believing that at the outset of operations—when the feat would have been easier and less costly than now—naval chiefs were in favor of a sea attack on Trondheim and thought it would succeed.

BRITISH SHIP MOVE STUDIED

Italy Ponders Order Diverting English Merchantmen Around Africa.

ROME, May 1 (A. P.).—William Phillips, United States Ambassador, was understood today to have been assured by Premier Mussolini that no war move is contemplated by Italy at present.

Mr. Phillips conferred with Il Duce this morning to receive first-hand information on Italy's position and intentions in view of recent international developments.

With much anxious speculation current in Rome over Great Britain's order preventing through merchant ships from using the Mediterranean Sea, the British Charge D'Affaires, Sir Noel Charles, conferred with the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, presumably to explain the British action.

Visit Is Called Timely.

Mr. Phillips's visit to Premier Mussolini was regarded in political circles as particularly timely for the opportunity it provided to obtain a clarified view of the Italian policy in the face of the strained Mediterranean situation.

[In Paris, a French Foreign Office spokesman declared that the Italian attitude toward the Allies "has become definitely alarming" and said that France was "frankly uneasy" over her relations with Italy.]

Mr. Phillips was reported to have found Il Duce in excellent health and good spirit.

The first word of the British diversion of shipping from the Mediterranean appeared in the Italian papers in the form of a communique issued by the Italian Government under a London date line. This was merely the verbatim report of an announcement issued yesterday by the British Foreign Office. There was no comment.

Meanwhile, however, there was evidence of German propaganda activity in Italy at a press conference for Italian newspaper men at which the German view of the war was outlined by the diplomatic correspondent of the Berliner Boersen Zeitung. The conference was arranged by the German embassy.

Fishing Technic Is Seen.

Before the shipping communique was sent to the papers, Italian spokesmen insisted they knew nothing about the action.

The Italian authorities appeared to be genuinely unaware of it until informed by foreign correspondents, although the British decision presumably was communicated to the Italian Ambassador in London several days ago.

In some foreign circles the British announcement was interpreted as a move to draw some clearer statement of Italy's intention in the war, particularly since there was little sign of tension in the Mediterranean itself.

The newspaper Il Corriere Padano, owned by Air Marshal Italo Balbo, Governor of Libya, declared today in protest against what it called "insupportable" British handling of Italian merchant ships in the Mediterranean that Italy is becoming "ever more impatient . . . to throw the intruder out of that sea."

The newspaper reiterated Italy's claim to vital rights in the Mediterranean, which she calls "Mare Nostrum," and declared that Great Britain, at best, has the "right of passage."

It charged that contraband control at Gibraltar and other British Mediterranean bases was "exercised with rigor not unmixed with capricious hatefulness" and that this offended Italian dignity.

No Report to Welles.

WASHINGTON, May 1 (A. P.).—Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said today that William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Rome, has standing instructions to seek an audience with the head of the Italian Government whenever the situation seems to warrant.

Mr. Welles said that he had not received any report from Mr. Phillips on the results of his conference with Il Duce today.

Italy Alarms the French.

PARIS, May 1 (A. P.).—The Italian attitude toward the Allies "has become definitely alarming" in the last two days, a Foreign Office spokesman declared today, adding that the Foreign Ministry's concern over the future relations of France with her Mediterranean neighbor was "frankly uneasy."

He said that the Ministry's apprehension was based on the general atmosphere in Government and diplomatic circles in Rome rather than on specific facts.

The statement was made at a press conference.

The Paris papers gave front page display to the precautions taken by the British in forbidding use of the Mediterranean Sea to British through merchant traffic.

War Risk Rate Doubled.

LONDON, May 1 (A. P.).—The Institute of London Underwriters doubled war risk insurance rates today for voyages to the Mediterranean and the Black Sea, effective tomorrow.

MAY 2 - 1940

The announcement of the new insurance rate schedule followed the Admiralty's diversion of trans-Mediterranean shipping around the Cape of Good Hope.

The rate between Mediterranean ports and the Americas is £4 for each £100 ($14 for $350).

A Cairo dispatch to Reuters, a British news agency, said that defense precautions officially described as "usual under present circumstances" were enforced throughout Egypt this afternoon.

The precautions, the nature of which was not disclosed, were said to have been taken because of the uncertainty of the Mediterranean situation.

REX SAILS, COOLS ITALY WAR TALK

MAY 2 - 1940

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK.

Rome, May 1 (AP).—Italy's transatlantic flagship, the Rex, sailed from Naples for New York today and President Roosevelt's Ambassador to Italy, William Phillips, was understood to have received assurance that Italy considers no move into the war at present.

The sailing of the Rex was considered most significant, since it is believed unlikely that Italy would embark in a war while the flagship is in foreign seas.

Ambassador Phillips called upon Mussolini to obtain a clear view of Italy's foreign policy, at a time when the expressions of the Italian press and high Fascist leaders have made it appear Italy might be getting ready for war on the side of Germany.

He found Mussolini affable.

Talk 45 Minutes.

Details of this interview are not available, but Il Duce was reported to have confirmed the widely held impression that Italy, pending some important development, will remain the non-belligerent ally of Germany.

Phillips' visit preceded Mussolini's attendance at a cabinet session at which heavy surtaxes on war industry profits were imposed. The interview, in the Premier's office in the Interior Ministry, lasted 45 minutes. Phillips and Mussolini met alone.

While Phillips was so occupied, the British Charge d'Affaires, Sir Noel Charles, was explaining to Foreign Minister Count Ciano the meaning of Britain's diversion of her through shipping from the Mediterranean to the long Cape of Good Hope route.

This meeting was described as cordial, and it was indicated there was mention of Britain's desire for good relations with Italy and resumption of long-suspended trade negotiations. The meeting took place at Ciano's request.

Belief was expressed in British circles that the decision to divert British ships from the Mediterranean reflected no change in relations between Britain and Italy.

Italy's press reported the British announcement of the decision to divert shipping verbatim. This announcement said "certain precautions" were being taken in regard to British shipping which normally follows the Mediterranean route because of the recent anti-Allied expressions of the Italian press and some Fascists.

There was no official Italian comment and no developments to indicate any imminent danger to Mediterranean shipping, despite evidence of considerable anxious speculation as to what inspired the British decision.

To some foreigners it looked as if the British move was designed to draw some clear statement of policy from Italy.

There still was criticism of Britain in the Fascist press. Air Marshal Italo Balbo's paper, Il Corriere Padano, said Italy was itching to "throw the intruder out" of the Mediterranean because of the way the British are handling Italian ships in their Mediterranean blockade of Germany. It accused British contraband control authorities of "capricious hatefulness," and added that England had only "rights of passage," at best, in Italy's "Mare Nostrum."

Yet England is acting like St. George with Italy in the perpetual role of horse, said Il Corriere.

Germans were active in Italy. The diplomatic correspondent of the Berliner Boersen Zeitung, at a conference arranged by the German Embassy, told Italian journalists that the war is one between Germany and "imperialistic plutocracies." and that there is a close bond between Italy's Fascist revolution and Germany's National Socialist revolution.

The German sports fuehrer, Capt. Hans von Tschammer und Osten, was honor guest at a German Embassy reception at which Dino Alfieri, new Italian Ambassador to Berlin, was present.

Sailing of Rex Held To Be Hopeful Sign

NAPLES, May 1 (A. P.).—The Italian Line's flagship, the Rex, continued her journey to New York today from this port, and foreign observers believed this was a sign that Italy does not intend to drop her non-belligerent policy within the next two weeks at least. She left Genoa yesterday.

MAY 2 - 1940

Observers said it was unlikely that Italy would send her finest ship out of the Mediterranean if there were a likelihood that the sea would be closed to her.

The Rex carries as passengers Alexander Weddell, United States Ambassador to Spain, and Sir Thomas Beecham, the noted London conductor.

...zis Return To Namsos Area After Blasting British Ship

Two Planes Draw Fire Of Guns, While Other Dives From Sun With Dead Load

MAY 2 - 1940

By J. NORMAN LODGE

Associated Press Correspondent

Namsos, Norway, May 1—Their appetites whetted by the destruction of the 1,190-ton British escort vessel Bittern, German warplanes returned with machine guns spouting today to strafe this Norwegian countryside with clock-like regularity at thirty-minute intervals.

With the first crack of dawn, the Nazis took up where they left off yesterday and ranged from this British landing place, where the Bittern was blasted to pieces by a power-diving bomber with heavy loss of life, all the way to the Swedish frontier on the east.

Virtually everything moving on the roads from Namsos to Grong, twenty-five miles on the east, and in the mountain pass between Formofoss and Gaddede, on the Swedish border, came in for bursts of machine-gun fire from the canny Nazi airmen.

Attack From Behind

They zoomed, they dived and slipped up from behind with motors cut off to catch their prey unawares and were off again to repeat the performance farther down the road.

I was rolling along serenely from Namsos to Grong when all of a sudden a single-motored pursuit job swept down silently from the rear, sped over my car at fifty or one hundred feet, then turned and came back with guns blazing.

My chauffeur and I got to a ditch in nothing flat and escaped with only a bad scare. But our car was not so lucky. Its radiator was punctured and its top, just above where we'd been sitting, was filled with bullet holes.

No Air Defenses

Twice the German pilot dived and raked the road with machine-gun fire while we held our breath.

There is no air defense in the inland regions hereabouts, and the civilian population was kept busy all day dashing in and out of the woods.

The persistence of the Nazi pilots resulted in a warning from British and Norwegian military authorities that henceforth correspondents are "on their own."

It took the Germans six hours yesterday to hit the Bittern, and then they resorted to an old trick to do the job.

Between Bittern And Sun

Observers who witnessed the performance from a hill overlooking the fjord at Namsos said the Nazis aimed their bombs all morning at the British but were kept at a high altitude by British and French anti-aircraft guns.

Then a squadron of three planes put themselves between the Bittern and the sun. Two of them dropped to about 9,000 feet to draw the attention of the anti-aircraft guns.

The third plane, which had remained high and out of sight in the sun, power-dived and at 1,000 feet dumped the full load of bombs in its right wing.

Struck Depth Charges

One bomb hit the Bittern's stern, where depth charges are carried, and there was a terrific explosion which rent the entire aft end of the little warship.

The British managed to down two of the attackers, but the maneuver had succeeded. One German plane got away.

An undisclosed number of dead and wounded were removed from the Bittern and the latter were placed in Namsos hospitals. French medical officers did heroic work in helping rescue their Allied comrades.

Victim Fells Two Nazi Bombers

British Escort Vessel Brings Raiders Down Before It Is Itself Sunk off Namsos.

By J. NORMAN LODGE.

MAY 2 - 1940

NAMSOS, Norway, May 1 (A. P.).—The Germans sacrificed two bombers to sink the British escort vessel Bittern, at anchor in the fjord off Namsos, yesterday.

Observers on a hill overlooking the fjord said the Germans tried all morning to nail the little warship but were kept so high by British and French anti-aircraft guns they could not find their target.

Finally, after six unsuccessful hours, the squadron of three planes resorted to an old trick. They put themselves between the Bittern and the sun. Then two dropped to about 9,000 feet to draw a full barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

While the ship's guns were trained on them, the third, which had remained high and out of sight in the sun, suddenly power dived from nowhere.

The maneuver succeeded—but at a cost of two warplanes.

[The German High Command reported a British destroyer sunk by air attack off Namsos. The Bittern, of similar appearance to a destroyer but less heavily armed and slower, was a 1,190-ton vessel with a normal complement of 125 men. Although launched less than three years ago she was capable of only about nineteen knots and had no torpedo tubes.

[The Germans also said they sank a British cruiser and five transports and damaged another cruiser and five other transports.]

Whole Load of Bombs Dropped.

The third German bomber, pulling out of his dive at barely 1,000 feet, loosed the whole load of bombs in his right wing.

One of them struck the Bittern in the stern, where depth charges are carried. There was a terrific explosion and the entire after-end of the ship was destroyed. The British, however, were able to take off an unknown number of dead and wounded. The latter were placed in hospitals in the vicinity of Namsos.

Germany's air circus started out again this morning in the Namsos area, taking up where it left off yesterday. Before 9 A. M. three flights had headed inland, over Grong. There is no air defense at all in the inland regions and the bombers have kept the civilian population dashing in and out of the woods all day.

Valiant work by French medical officers who quickly removed all the wounded from the Bittern saved many of them from death.

Travelers Machine-gunned.

The Germans continued their air raids every half hour this morning over Grong, Namsos and the mountain pass between Formofoss and Gaddede, on the Swedish frontier.

Two Heinkels returned to the pass and strafed traffic with their machine-guns wide open.

En route to Grong, which is about twenty-five miles east of Namsos, my automobile was attacked twice by a single-motored pursuit plane. The pilot dived twice and raked the road with machine-gun fire.

The attacker came in from the rear with his motor shut off to within 50 to 100 feet, then opened up full blast, shot over the car and turned back at us head-on. Bullets pierced the radiator and tonneau of our car but I got to safety in a ditch without a scratch. So did my chauffeur.

So persistent have the Nazis been in strafing all roads in this vicinity that correspondents were warned by military authorities that they are "on their own."

SWEDES DRAW FIRE IN NORWAY

AMBULANCE MACHINE-GUNNED

Intensity of German Air Action Suggests New Drive Coming.

By J. NORMAN LODGE.

FORMOFOSS, Norway, May 1 (A. P.).—German bombing planes have ranged this northern war front from the coast to the Swedish frontier for twenty-four hours, strafing the Allied communication lines with an intensity that has led observers to wonder whether a new Nazi land offensive is in the making.

An almost complete lack of activity by German infantry patrols has accompanied these aerial operations, intensifying rather than relieving the alert expectancy of the Allied outposts.

Two Nazi patrols which ventured out on the Norwegian-held sector of the front were captured yesterday, but there was little movement in front of the British and French lines.

MAY 2 - 1940

Ambulance Raked by Fire.

Among the objects of the latest German air attacks, according to information received here, were a truck train filled with Swedish volunteers and a Red Cross ambulance train being brought into Norway by British Quakers.

Dr. Richard Early, commander of the Red Cross unit, said that the Germans twice swooped down on the ambulances as they were nearing Formofoss. One of the ambulances was raked with machine-gun fire, he said, but there were no casualties.

German planes sighted the truck column of Swedish volunteers on the narrow winding road that leads from Gaddede, a Swedish frontier town, and swept it with their machine guns, but again they failed to do any serious damage.

Food Trucks Attacked.

A seven-truck supply convoy, bringing food from Sweden to residents of this community on Snasa Lake, also was attacked.

Namsos, the British debarkation point, which has been raided repeatedly from the air, was again visited yesterday by German planes, but they were forced by newly installed anti-aircraft guns to fly at a high altitude.

From Namsos the Germans swung over Grong, thirty miles to the east, dropping a number of bombs and strafing the area with machine guns, but without causing extensive damage. The Nazis also flew over Formofoss, but did not attempt to attack.

One of their planes, "hedgechopping" a clump of trees near the headquarters, passed overhead at an altitude of not more than seventy-five feet and the smiling faces of the two men in the front cockpit could be seen very clearly.

SWEDEN DEMANDS SHE BE LEFT FREE

Premier Stresses Neutrality in May Day Speech.

STOCKHOLM, May 1 (A. P.).—Premier Per Albin Hansson today declared that Sweden was determined to assert and defend her neutrality "with all the means in our power."

Addressing a May Day gathering, Premier Hansson asserted "this neutrality implies that we demand that our independence and our freedom be left unmolested."

He pleaded for loyalty and solidarity of the Swedish people and with their co-operation with the Government in meeting the present situation.

"Even if we succeed—and in this respect my trust is strong—in preserving neutrality and peace for our people," he continued, "war has confronted us with tasks requiring all our efforts."

He said that the Swedish Government had received "with satisfaction" repeated assurances from the belligerents that they would respect Sweden's neutrality and integrity.

MAY 2 - 1940

"We know these assurances," he said, "are made not only from good will but also from a consciousness of our own unyielding determination and our ability to defend our neutrality and integrity."

He expressed the hope that "the sun will shine again over the north and that its three peoples (Sweden, Denmark, Norway) can mutually resume and continue their peaceful work."

"The northern institution such as we inhabitants of the north wish to shape it," he concluded, "has been broken up for how long we do not know. Nevertheless we will not mourn this institution as lost."

Sweden turned May Day into an enormous demonstration of national unity today instead of the Socialist rally of former years.

The Social-Demokraten, organ of the Social Democratic party, said:

"The illusion that an unarmed country can live as a neighbor of armed countries had been tragically exposed in the case of Denmark, where the Germans are now establishing air bases from which to attack the Danes' brother people in Norway.

"Only people who are ready and willing to die for their freedom can live in freedom."

IRON GATE PATROL PLAN IS REJECTED

Yugoslavia and Rumania Spurn Hungarian Idea.

BELGRADE, May 1 (A. P.).—Yugoslavia and Rumania have rejected Hungary's proposal for international policing of the stretch of the Danube River under their sovereignty, it was announced officially today.

The Hungarian plan would have made all Danubian countries responsible for guarding the river near the "Iron Gate." It was understood to have been advocated by Dr. Karl Clodius, German trade negotiator, in an interview yesterday with the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Aleksander Cincar-Markovic.

MAY 2 - 1940

It was said the Yugoslav and Rumanian rejection of the Danube patrol proposal followed an agreement between the two countries that they were able to prevent the sabotage of transportation on the section of the river which forms their common boundary along an eighty-mile stretch. It was said that Hungary's international patrol proposal had failed to win approval in the other Balkan States because Germany, both a belligerent and a Danubian country, might take advantage of the scheme to send Nazi gunboats down the river.

200 Germans to Be Ousted.

BUCHAREST, May 1 (A. P.).—The Rumanian Government was reported today to have signed orders for the expulsion of 200 Germans after a canvass of 600 homes in the oil field districts and other strategic areas of Rumania.

The raiders reported resistance in one case near Craiova which resulted in an exchange of revolver shots.

The police said that quantities of firearms had been found in many houses inhabited by Germans suspected of being members of a "Fifth Column" which was said to have planned to rise in case German troops marched across Rumania.

Most raids were made just after dawn.

French Repel Attacks on 2 Outposts Near Vosges.

PARIS, May 1 (A. P.).—The War Ministry reported today that the French had captured several German prisoners in the Nied sector of the western front, where fog and rain have reduced activity in general.

West of the Vosges the Germans attacked two French outposts behind a curtain of artillery fire but were repulsed, a spokesman said.

Aerial activity on both sides was limited to occasional reconnaissance.

The French High Command's regular communique said:

"Patrol activity in the region of the Nied (River). Some artillery fire in the region of the Blies (River). Yesterday at nightfall a short encounter took place between our reconnaissance unit and an enemy party."

BARS FETE IN NORWAY

Nazi Council Forbids Celebration of Independence Day

OSLO, May 1 (AP)—The Norwegian Administrative Council for the German-occupied area of Norway proclaimed tonight that its authority covered the whole Norwegian coast from the Swedish frontier to Stavanger, on the Atlantic. The council decreed that Norway's Independence Day, May 17, would be an ordinary working day with no celebrations in the Nazi-held zone.

Cooperating with German military authorities, it is directing conversion of ammunition and arms factories to civil production and has named a five-man commission to assure full output of civil trade and industry.

Regular coastal shipping services have been re-established connecting Halden, near the mouth of Oslo Fjord, Oslo itself and Kristiansand, on the Skagerrak coast, with occasional calls at Stavanger. These routes are important for Eastern Norway's food supplies.

EDEN WARNS BRITAIN

Says Nothing Short of Utmost Effort Will Win War.

LONDON, May 1 (A. P.).—Major Anthony Eden, the Secretary of State for the Dominions, declared today that "nothing less than the greatest effort of which our people are capable will insure victory."

Major Eden spoke at a luncheon to which the guests had carried newspapers with headlines reporting "Allied Troops Fighting With Backs to Wall" in Norway.

"It is inevitable as this war proceeds," Major Eden said, "that we shall have bad days as well as good before the struggle is closed in final victory."

Paris Says Nazis Use War Lies to Sway Mussolini

Foreign Office 'Uneasy' as Italy's Recall of Military Class of '06 Is Reported

PARIS, May 1 (AP).—French observers kept a wary eye tonight on developments in Italy in the light of what they called false German reports of Norwegian victories to influence Premier Benito Mussolini to declare himself on Germany's side.

"Paris-Soir," most widely circulated French afternoon newspaper, said in an article by Andre Chaumeix, one of the "forty immortals" of the French Academy, that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's "design above all is to persuade Italy that the French-British fleet, concentrated in the north, has been weakened in the Mediterranean."

MAY 2 - 1940

This and similar expressions appeared in the press after a Foreign Ministry spokesman declared that the Italian attitude toward the Allies in the last two days had become "definitely alarming" and that the Foreign Office was "frankly uneasy" over future relations with the Mediterranean neighbor. The spokesman added, however, that this apprehension was based on the general atmosphere in Rome's government and diplomatic circles rather than on specific facts.

Great Britain's announcement of "precautions" taken to safeguard British shipping in the Mediterranean as the result of hostile Italian utterances was widely described in the French press as "strictly necessary." Reports circulated here, but not yet confirmed in Rome, that Italy had recalled her military class of 1906 more than offset for the French press the lack of public statements following today's meeting of the Italian Cabinet with Il Duce.

Premier Paul Reynaud, in a ten-minute May Day broadcast to the nation, reiterated that France's sole "claim" is to win the war against Germany and the right to "live as free men."

"The struggle will be hard," he warned again as he has repeatedly heretofore in his efforts to whip up the spirit of Frenchmen behind the lines to support Allied troops on the western and northern fronts. "What is the great claim of all of us?" he asked, drawing a parallel between workers' claims for social improvements in peace time and in war time. Then he answered himself: "The claim of all of us is to live as free men."

The speech was heard by workers who abandoned their usual May Day holiday and remained at their posts throughout the day to speed up wartime production.

Ship Notice Soft Pedaled

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 1—A source close to the Foreign Office today declared "we should frankly deprecate too much attention being paid to the notice that his Majesty's Government has closed the Mediterranean for through traffic."

He described the measure as "purely precautionary and of a defensive character," added that it is the Government's "earnest hope" that the measure prove temporary and declared the British still were hopeful of reopening trade negotiations with Italy.

MAY 2 - 1940

The measures are a result of certain utterances "which seem provocative," the authority said, and the Government decided that in the present situation "every precaution must be taken" on all fronts.

Soviet Legions Reminded U. S. S. R. Is Only Standing Aloof From War

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, May 1—Soviet Russia celebrated May Day today with an impressive demonstration of its military and political might, and the mixed theme of armed preparedness and a world-wide union of workers against "capitalism and war."

Joseph Stalin, flanked by Premier Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff and Gen. Grigori M. Stern, commander of Red forces in the war with Finland, stood in bright sunlight at the base of Lenin's tomb for hours while tens of thousands of troops with every type of war implement in Russia's formidable armory rumbled through the Red Square. The dense throng of spectators included American and other members of the diplomatic corps.

Must Strengthen Forces

From the reviewing stand Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, the War Commissar, told the Red legions it was necessary "to double our vigilance and strengthen our army and navy. . . . The U. S. S. R. is only standing aloof from the war."

Voroshiloff echoed the Comintern May Day manifesto by saying the "abyss between Soviet and capitalist countries is deeper than ever"; that the latter were trying to involve Russia in the European war.

Comintern executive Georgi Dimitroff, in commemorating the day, wrote in the party newspaper Pravda that "the courageous struggle of American Communists against war encounters more sympathy in American labor and industrial unions, even in all ranks."

75,000 March in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, May 1 (AP).—The greatest parade of militarized workers' units ever seen here marked May Day. The three great streams of marchers which poured into the Presidential Plaza were estimated to total 75,000. The Mexican Workers' Confederation (C. T. M.) alone was said to have sent 30,000 uniformed worker-marchers.

Some organizations, such as workers in schools for army children, carried banners declaring opposition to full militarization of workers.

President Lazaro Cardenas and Cabinet officials watched the spectacle from a balcony of the Presidential Palace. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the confederation, and Manuel Avila Camacho, the Cardenas party's Presidential candidate, reviewed the parade from the C. T. M. headquarters.

War Commissar at Lenin's Tomb Says Soviet Is 'Only Standing Aloof From War.'

MAY 2, 1940

MOSCOW, May 1 (A. P.).—The War Commissar, Klementi E. Voroshilov, declared in a May Day address from Lenin's Tomb today that it is necessary "to double our vigilance and strengthen our army and navy. . . . The U. S. S. R. is only standing aloof from the war."

Joseph Stalin and the Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov stood with Voroshilov and other Soviet leaders for hours on the tomb in Red Square reviewing a tremendous parade of troops and singing workers.

The dominant theme of the May Day celebration in this world capital of Communism was that the workers of the world should unite under the Communist banner against capitalism and war. In contrast to the practice of former years, the marching workers carried no caricatures of Adolf Hitler.

Lesser celebrations were held in all cities, towns and villages.

Reds Celebrate in Conquered Lands.

For the first time, May Day was celebrated in Communist fashion in the territories acquired in Poland and Finland.

There was an imposing military review in Leningrad, principal base of the recent war with Finland.

Diplomats and military attaches of foreign Powers witnessed the spectacle in Red Square. Mrs. Laurence A. Steinhardt, the wife of the American Ambassador; Walter Thurston, Counselor of Embassy, and others of the embassy staff were spectators. Mr. Steinhardt is en route to the United States.

Mechanized units, infantry and cavalry swung past the tomb of Lenin, followed by almost interminable lines of workers. Numerous military men were awarded the title of Hero of the Soviet Union and other decorations.

Sees Widening Abyss.

Speaking to the Red Army troops after an impressive review, the War Commissar said:

"Today there is a deeper difference between the capitalistic and Soviet countries and deep is the abyss between them.

"The international situation is very tangled. The incendiaries of war will try to involve our country in the war."

Nazi Germany Celebrates, Too.

BERLIN, May 1 (A. P.).—Nazi Germany today celebrated May Day with the keynote set by the triumphs claimed for the German troops in Norway yesterday.

Rudolf Hess, Adolf Hitler's Nazi party deputy, told a May Day audience of workers in the Krupp Locomotive Works at Essen that the German people were celebrating "with the certainty of victory as never before."

"The guaranty of victory is our Fuehrer," he said, "and the great community of the nation which he created through his movement. The fighting expression of this community of the nation is our wonderful armed force."

He ridiculed the Allied hope of internal German collapse.

May Day is known as "National Labor Day" in Germany.

Pushes Trade With Russia.

Meanwhile Germany was directing her efforts toward increasing her trade with Russia.

The German Industrial Financing Corporation formed by the Deutsche Bank and the Dresdner Bank declared its readiness to grant cheap credits to German manufacturers dealing with Russia. The credits, it was explained, are to be used chiefly for buying raw materials.

This action, it was said, will greatly facilitate the German-Russian exchange of manufactured goods and raw materials.

MAY 2 - 1940

MEXICO CITY, May 1 (A. P.).—About 32,000 workers were called out today for a May Day parade before President Cardenas and Cabinet members.

REYNAUD HAILS LABOR

Tells Workers of France, 'You Are an Army.'

PARIS, May 1 (A. P.).—Premier Paul Reynaud declared in a May Day broadcast today that France's sole "claim" on this traditional labor day in Europe is to win the war against Germany and the right to "live as free men."

The Premier spoke for ten minutes on a nation-wide hookup after French workers had abandoned their usual holiday and remained at their posts throughout the day to speed up wartime production.

"You are an army," M. Reynaud said in addressing himself to French workers.

Stripped And Fully Loaded, Ile De France Slips Away

Two Unknown Passengers Aboard As French Luxury Liner Leaves Supposedly For Halifax

[By the Associated Press]

MAY 2 - 1940

New York, May 1—The French liner Ile de France, once the "floating art gallery," but now daubed a camouflage gray and loaded with the tools of war, lifted anchor at 4.55 P. M. today and steamed slowly down the bay into the gathering dusk for an unknown destination.

Two passengers were aboard. They were described as a French general and the 16-year-old daughter of a French army officer. They refused to give their names.

Capt. Herbert Fontaine, a veteran of the French merchant marine, was on the bridge. He had a crew of 375, many of them French-Canadians brought here to augment her skeleton crew.

Workmen had labored for the past week at loading the ship with planes, machinery, bars of copper and steel sheets and tubing. She had been stripped bare of her furnishings and her luxurious cabins were crammed with 12,000 tons of cargo.

The "Eel" had been tied up here since last September 8, when she brought over the first large group of war refugees.

Shortly before the Ile de France sailed, the Rev. Peter Jalbert, a Montreal priest, came off and was asked: "How does the ship look inside?"

"It looks like war," he answered.

Bound For Halifax?

Unofficial reports said the liner would proceed to Halifax, Nova Scotia, transship her cargo there and sail for Australia to join the British liners Queen Mary and Mauretania in troop transport service.

Sailors aboard the vessel, however, expressed belief the "Eel" would dash directly for Europe with her huge cargo of metal and planes.

Maritime men said that if she did cross the Atlantic, she probably would travel most of the journey without convoy, depending on her speed of twenty-three knots to carry her safely past any lurking submarines and pick up warship protection as she neared England or France.

Got Here In September

The "Eel," greatest liner in the French merchant fleet until the Normandie was built, last left her French port on September 2, and was at sea when the sinking of the crowded British liner Athenia on September 3, the first day of declared hostilities, electrified the world.

As the ship plied a circuitous northerly course, passengers learned in a dramatic announcement by the captain that the Allies and Germany were at war. The news the ship's company tried to keep from them—the sinking of the Athenia—they heard over small private radios.

In New York the "Eel" took a place beside the Normandie, tied up before the "war of nerves" warmed to gunfire, and several weeks later was moved over among the rusty freighters off Staten Island. It cost $20,000 to dredge a berth great enough to sleep her.

Two Big Ships Remain

The Normandie remained at her North River dock, idling at an estimated cost of $1,000 a day above pier rental.

The first sign of rousing the "Eel" from her wartime somnolence came in March, after the long idle British liners Queen Mary and Mauretania slipped away to become Empire troopships.

Left here for possible future use in wartime activities are the Normandie and the incomplete British liner Queen Elizabeth, the greatest of them all, which slipped into New York in March, a fugitive from German war bombers, after a furtive dash from England.

American Freighter Spent 14 Days At Norwegian City As Nazis Dug In U. S. Renews Efforts To Free Ship Stranded In Fjord With War Supplies

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 1—The American freighter Flying Fish approached New York tonight after a maiden voyage that gave her a closeup view of the German capture of Bergen, Norway, and fourteen days of watching the Nazis consolidate their position in the face of fierce bombarding from British planes.

As the $2,000,000 Government-owned vessel, one of three American ships caught in Norway by the invasion, neared her home port, the State Department in Washington renewed efforts to free the freighter Charles R. McCormack, still stranded in a tiny fjord twenty miles from Bergen.

Operators of the McCormack Line expressed concern over the safety of the 6,027-ton vessel and her crew of thirty-three because of the ship's failure to answer a cable ordering her to return home at once.

Reported At Vaksdal

She was reported to be at Vaksdal with a heavy load of war supplies, including munitions and trucks consigned to Finland. It was feared that some attempt had been made to remove her cargo.

The State Department ordered an investigation by Maurice P. Dunlap, American consul at Bergen.

L. N. Stockard, who chartered the ship for the special voyage, said he had sent her German-born captain, William Schutz, orders to sail at once.

The National Broadcasting Company repeated the order in a short-wave broadcast when Stockard felt that his cable might have gone astray, but the ship failed to reply.

Reports "All Well"

The 7,194-ton Flying Fish left Bergen April 23 and was expected to dock here at 3 P. M. tomorrow.

Her skipper, W. W. Wollaston, a native of Denver, radioed the Moore-McCormack Lines "all well, crew and ship unharmed, Consul Dunlap and staff well."

Wollaston, 50, said he was returning with 1,800 tons of cargo which he had been unable to discharge because of the invasion and with nineteen rolls of paper loaded at Narvik.

He sailed his ship and her crew of forty-two from New York last March 10, reached Narvik on the twenty-third, put in there for two days and arrived at Bergan on the twenty-seventh—thirteen days before the Germans captured the busy city.

Nazis Delayed Ships

The day after the Germans took the city wave after wave of British planes bombed Nazi naval vessels in the harbor.

Commander Robert C. Lee, executive vice-president of the Moore-McCormack Lines, said the British ordered neutral ships to leave the harbor before the attack, but the Germans refused to let them go.

An eyewitness account of Bergen's capture has never been published because of the disruption of communications.

Suggests Gibraltar Plan Is War Aim Of Germany

Dr. Borchers, Consul General At New York, Denounces British As "Unwanted Oppressors"

New York, May 1 (AP)—Dr. Hans Borchers, German Consul-General, suggested broadly tonight that the attempted ouster of the British from Gibraltar was a German war aim.

Any such campaign presumably would presuppose material support from the Italians.

Dr. Borchers' denunciation of the English as "unwanted oppressors" in Gibraltar and in other areas was included in a speech at the Schwabenhalle in Brooklyn.

"Are we to believe," he asked rhetorically, "that the Lord himself gave England authority to lock both ends of the Mediterranean with fortresses, in order to subject to her will all nations living within these confines? Or is her rule based on force—naked and brutal force?

"The only possible answer is that conditions such as these should not and cannot last forever."

Spee's Sailors Reported Thriving in Buenos Aires

Americans Say Men Seem to Have Plenty of Money

SAN DIEGO, Calif., May 1 (AP).—Passengers arriving today from South America on the McCormick steamer West Ira reported that German sailors from the scuttled "pocket battleship" Graf Spee were walking the streets of Buenos Aires in uniform and appeared plentifully supplied with money. William R. Burke, retired lumberman, said there was no indication the Argentine government had taken measures to send the sailors into the interior.

"It was reported in Montevideo," Mr. Burke said, "the hulk of the Spee had been sold to a syndicate for $100,000. Sailors from the German ship were quoted as saying the original cost of the warship exceeded $20,000,000.

"Work of removing the scrap iron had started, but the ship's superstructure still was jutting out of the water and could be plainly seen from inside Montevideo harbor.

"Warships of England and France are rigidly patrolling South American ports, where from two to five German merchant ships are awaiting an opportunity to dash back to Germany with supplies. We sighted two French submarines at Trinidad and British patrols in the vicinity of Barbadoes in the British West Indies."

AN AUTHORITATIVE GERMAN SPOKESMAN, EVIDENTLY PLEASED AT WHAT HE CONSIDERED AN EVIDENCE OF BRITISH WEAKNESS, SAID OF THE ORDER KEEPING BRITISH THROUGH SHIPPING OUT OF THE MEDITERRANEAN, "IT'S THE GREATEET NEWS OF THE DAY BH FAR."

GERMANY'S CELEBRATION OF MAY DAY, KNOWN IN THE REICH AS "NATIONAL LABOR BAY," WAS LED BY CUDOLF HESS, NUMBER THREE NAZI AND ADOLF

HITLER'S PARTYLDEPUTY, WHO TOLD AN AUDIENCE OF KRUPP LOCOMOTIVE WORKERS AT ESSEN THAT THE GERMAN PEOPLE WERE CELEBRATING THE DAY "WITH THE CERTAINTY OF VICTORY AS NEVER BEFORE."

"THE GUARANTEE OF VICTORY IS OUR FUEHRER," HE SAID, "AND THE GREAT COMMUNITY OF THE NATION WHICH HE CREATED THROUGH HIS MOVEMENT. THE FIGHTING EXPRESSION OF THIS COMMUNITY OF THE NATION IS OUR WONDERFUL ARMED FORCE."

IN ITS REPORT OF THE AIR RAIDS OFF NAMSOS, THE HIGH COMMAND SAID THE CRUISER WHICH WENT DOWN BEFORE GERMAN BOMBS BRISTLED WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS. (BRITAIN HAS SIX WARSHIPS, FORMERLY CRUISERS, CONVERTED TO ANTI-AIRCRAFT VESSELS.)

THE HIGH COMMAND SAID GERMANY HAD TAKEN MORE THAN 4,900 PRISONERS AND A QUANTITY OF GUNS AND MUNITIONS IN NORWAY. THE PRISONERS WERE SAID TO INCLUDE 40 BRITONS CAPTURED NORTHWEST OF LILLEHAMMER, ABOUT 140 MILES NORTH OF OSLO ON THE ROAD TO TRONDHEIM.

HESS DEVOTED THE MAJOR PART OF HIS ADDRESS TO RIDICULING ALLIED HOPES FOR COLLAPSE WITHIN GERMANY.

"YOUR HOPE IS AND WILL REMAIN IN VAIN," HE SAID. "ANOTHER 1918 WILL NOT REPEAT ITSELF--COME WHAT MAY."

THE PARTY CHIEFTAIN SAID THAT THE ENGLISH IN NORWAY FINALLY "HAVE ONCE MORE BECOME ACQUAINTED WITH THE GERMAN SOLDIER IN THE ORIGINAL, AND I DON'T BELIEVE THIS ACQUAINTANCE HAS EXACTLY INCREASED THE CONFIDENCE OF VICTORY IN LONDON."

HESS REVEALED THAT 24 LABORERS WORKING ON THE WEST WALL NEAR THE FRONT HAVE LOST THEIR LIVES.

GERMAN FORCES VIRTUALLY SURROUNDED THEM, SINCE THEY DROVE UP BOTH THE RAILWAYS FROM THE SOUTH LEADING INTO STOREN AND ALREADY WERE ENTRENCHED AT THE END OF THE LINE RUNNING NORTH TO TRONDHEIM.

THE BRITISH AND NORWEGIAN FORCES IN THE STOREN AREA WERE KNOWN TO BE IN A CRITICAL SITUATION, SINCE THEIR SUPPLY LINES ARE BROKEN.

ALL CANADIAN RESIDENTS WITH SUCH BALANCES PRIOR TO SEPT. 15 AND ARE STILL IN POSSESSION OF THEM MUST SELL THEM TO THE CONTROL BOARD BEFORE MAY 31 DEADLINE AT THE OFFICIAL RATE OF EXCHANGE EXISTING TODAY.

THOSE WHO HELD FOREIGN SECURITIES PRIOR TO SEPT. 15 AND HAVE SOLD THEM, HAVE UNTIL THE SAME DATE TO RE-INVEST IN STRICTLY FOREIGN SECURITIES OR BRING THEIR FOREIGN EXCHANGE BACK TO CANADA AT THE PREVAILING RATE OF EXCHANGE.

CANADIANS HOLDING FOREIGN SECURITIES AND SELLING THEM IN THE FUTURE CAN SWITCH TO OTHER FOREIGN SECURITIES ONLY BY PUTTING THROUGH SELLING AND BUYING ORDERS AT THE SAME TIME WITH THE CONTROL BOARD'S PERMISSION. OTHERWISE, THE BOARD BUYS UP THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALE.

THE NEW ORDER MAKES IT CLEAR THAT THERE WILL BE NO INTERFERENCE WITH EXCHANGE TRANSACTIONS REQUIRED TO MEET DEBT PAYMENTS OR OTHER CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS.

IN ITS BROAD TERMS, THE ORDER GENERALLY WILL AFFECT BUSINESSES AND INDIVIDUALS MAINTAINING BANK BALANCES OF CONSIDERABLE PROPORTIONS ABROAD.

ROME, MAY 1-(AP)-THE FASCIST PRESS TODAY IGNORED THE LONDON ANNOUNCEMENT THAT BRITISH SHIPPING WOULD BE DIVERTED FROM NORMAL MEDITERRANEAN ROUTES TO THE FAR EAST BECAUSE OF THE PRO-GERMAN ATTITUDE OF THE SPOKESMEN OF THE ITALIAN REGIME.

MORNING NEWSPAPERS GAVE A MAXIMUM OF ATTENTION TO GERMAN NEWS OF THE GERMAN OCCUPATION OF DOMBAS, NORWAY, WHICH IL MESSAGGERO TERMED "A GREAT STRATEGIC SUCCESS."

MAY 2-1940

OTHERWISE THERE WAS NO NEW MANIFESTATION OF HOSTILITY TOWARD THE ALLIES AFTER YESTERDAY'S BITTER ANTI-FRENCH OUTBURST IN WHICH VIRTUALLY THE ENTIRE ITALIAN PRESS COMMENTED STRONGLY ON THE FRENCH TREATMENT OF ITALY. THE OCCASION WAS THE 91ST ANNIVERSARY OF GARIBALDI'S DEFEAT OF A FRENCH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE SENT AGAINST ITALIAN REPUBLICAN TROOPS IN ROME.

CONCERNING THE EVENTUAL POSSIBILITY OF A MORE FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, FASCISTS OBSERVED THAT IT ALREADY HAD BEEN MADE CLEAR THAT FREE ACCESS TO THIS SEA, BOTH ENDS OF WHICH ARE CONTROLLED BY BRITAIN, IS ESSENTIAL TO A CLARIFICATION OF BRITISH-ITALIAN RELATIONS.

ON THE OTHER HAND DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS SAW NO SIGN OF ANY IMMEDIATE CHANGE IN ITALY'S NON-BELLIVERENCY.

THE FACT THAT THE ITALIAN LINER REX SAILED YESTERDAY FOR NEW YORK ON SCHEDULE AND THAT OTHER ITALIAN LINERS WERE DEPARTING REGULARLY FOR NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA AND THE FAR EAST WAS CONSIDERED ONE INDICATION THAT ITALY IS PLANNING NO DRASTIC ACTION IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

THEN, WHEN THE WAR STARTED AND ADOLF HITLER APPEARED SUDDENLY IN THE REICHSTAG IN FIELD GREY, THE WILHELMSTRASSE AND THE DIPLOMATS FOLLOWED SUIT. HITLER'S GARB WAS NOT A MILITARY UNIFORM; MERELY THE NAZI UNIFORM IN GREY INSTEAD OF BROWN, AND HE SAID HE WOULD WEAR FIELD GREY AS LONG AS THE WAR LASTED.

FIELD GREY FOR HITLER AND HIS AIDES WAS PERFECTLY ALL RIGHT WITH THE ARMY; THE FUEHRER WAS AT THE FRONT AGAIN, AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ANYWAY.

BUT THE DIPLOMATS? NO! WHY, ASKED THE ARMY, SHOULD MEN WHO ARE SAFE IN THEIR OFFICES GO AROUND THE STREETS DRESSED AS IF THEY WERE USED TO THE SMELL OF GUNPOWDER?

AND WHY SHOULD THEY WEAR EPAULETTES, CORDS AND BRAIDS? THOSE WERE T E PREROGATIVES OF THE ARMY.

THE UPSHOT WAS THAT RECENTLY AN ORDER WAS CIRCULATED THROUGH THE GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE, "EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY", CONSIGNING THE FIELD GREY UNIFORM TO THE CEDAR CHEST AND ONLY A SUBSEQUENT ORDER REMOVED THE EPAULETTES AND CORD, BUT LEFT THE FANCY BELTS AND DISTINGUISHING MARK ON THE LEFT ARM. WASHINGTON MAY 1-(AP)-POINTING TO STATISTICS AS PROOF, UNITED STATES OFFICIALS DECLARED TODAY THAT THE COUNTRY'S EXPORTS OF TIN AND RUBBER TO SOVIET RUSSIA HAVE CEASED AND THAT COPPER SHIPMENTS HAVE GREATLY DIMINISHED DESPITE RUSSIA'S RECOGNIZED NORMAL NEED OF THOSE COMMODITIES.

MAY 2-1940

THEY CITED EXPORT FIGURES FOR 1939 AND THE FIRST QUARTER OF 1940 IN REPLYING TO ASSERTIONS OF RONALD CROSS, BRITISH MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE, THAT GERMANY WAS OBTAINING VITALLY NEEDED WAR MATERIALS FROM THE UNITED STATES VIA SIBERIA.

CROSS TOLD THE AMERICAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN LONDON THAT STOPPAGE OF SUCH AMERICAN SHIPMENTS WAS THE MAJOR OBJECTIVE OF THE BRITISH BLOCKADE NOW IN FORCE AGAINST VLADIVOSTOK, THE SOVIET'S ONLY PACIFIC PORT.

TIN, RUBBER AND COPPER WERE MENTIONED BY THE BRITISH ECONOMIC MINISTER AS THE PRINCIPAL ITEMS WHICH THE BRITISH NAVY SOUGHT TO INTERCEPT.

TWO SOVIET FREIGHTERS CARRYING METALS--THE 2,492-TON SELENGA AND THE 3,972-TON VLADIMIR MAYAKOVSKY--HAVE BEEN SEIZED RECENTLY BY THE BRITISH, AND ANOTHER SOVIET STEAMER TURNED BACK TO AN AMERICAN PORT WHEN WARNED.

OFFICIALS HERE POINTED OUT, HOWEVER, THAT AMERICAN EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET IN 1939 ACTUALLY SHOWED A DECLINE OF 19 PER CENT FROM 1938 FIGURES. THE TOTAL WAS $56,638,000, AND OF THAT, 70 PER CENT WENT FOR METAL-WORKING MACHINERY, FERRO-ALLOYS, COPPER, AIRCRAFT AND PETROLEUM PRODUCTS.

SHIPMENTS OF AIRPLANES AND PARTS, MOLYBDENUM, ALUMINUM, AND PLANTS AND PLANS FOR MANUFACTURE OF AVIATION FUEL, THEY ADDED, CEASED LAST DECEMBER WHEN THE "MORAL EMBARGO" WAS INSTITUTED. THAT "MORAL EMBARGO" IS STILL IN FORCE, GREATLY REDUCING AMERICAN EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET.

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT STATISTICS FOR 1939 SHOW AMERICAN EXPORTS TO SOVIET RUSSIA OF THE THREE COMMODITIES CITED BY CROSS WERE:

RUBBER: 11,383,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $2,521,000.

TIN: 1,957,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $1,012,000.

COPPER: 45,496,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $5,791,000.

MAY 2 - 1940

THE SOVIET NORMALLY IMPORTED ABOUT 60,000 TONS OF COPPER TO SUPPLEMENT ITS ANNUAL PRODUCTION OF 145,000 TONS TO MEET PEACETIME REQUIREMENTS FOR THAT METAL.

CONCERNING AMERICAN EXPORTS OF COPPER, RUBBER AND TIN TO RUSSIA, THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT'S DIVISION OF FOREIGN TRADE STATISTICS STATED:

"IT IS OBVIOUS THAT SOVIET BUYING AGENCIES, UNABLE, BECAUSE OF CONDITIONS IN EUROPE, TO OBTAIN THESE COMMODITIES FROM THEIR USUAL SOURCES OF SUPPLY, HAVE TURNED TO THE UNITED STATES FOR ASSISTANCE IN OBTAINING THEIR NORMAL IMPORTS OF THESE COMMODITIES."

THE DEPARTMENT EXPORT FIGURES SHOW THAT THERE HAVE BEEN NO SHIPMENTS OF RUBBER FROM THE UNITED STATES TO RUSSIA SINCE LAST DECEMBER.

MAY 2 - 1940

TIN EXPORTS IN JANUARY CONSISTED OF 2,743,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $1,403,000, AND IN FEBRUARY (AS A RESULT OF THE "MORAL EMBARGO") HAD DECLINED TO 509,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $187,000.

COPPER EXPORTS TO RUSSIA IN JANUARY TOTALED 53,205,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $6,910,000, AND IN FEBRUARY DROPPED TO 12,816,000 POUNDS VALUED AT $1,684,000.

WASHINGTON,MAY 1-(AP)-THE OFFER BY SAMUEL HARDEN CHURCH, PRESIDENT OF THE CARNEGIE INSTITUTE OF A $1,000,000 REWARD FOR THE CAPTURE OF ADOLF HITLER PROMPTED STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS TODAY TO MAKE A CLOSE STUDY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S PROCLAMATION OF UNITED STATES NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

MAY 2 - 1940

THEY DECLINED TO COMMENT OPENLY ON WHETHER THE REWARD OFFER DIRECTLY INVOLVED ANY SECTIONS OF THE PROCLAMATION BUT THERE WERE VARIOUS ONES WHICH THEY SAID MIGHT BEAR UPON THE SITUATION.

30.24-2003

THEY EXPLAINED, FOR INSTANCE, THAT THE PROCLAMATION (ISSUED SEPTEMBER 5) DECLARED THAT "THE LAWS AND TREATIES OF THE UNITED STATES, WITHOUT INTERFERING WITH THE FREE EXPRESSION OF OPINION AND SYMPATHY, NEVERTHELESS, IMPOSE UPON ALL PERSONS WHO MAY BE WITHIN THEIR TERRITORY AND JURISDICTION THE DUTY OF AN IMPARTIAL NEUTRALITY DURING THE EXISTENCE OF THE CONTEST."

CITIZENS ALSO WERE DIRECTED BY THE PROCLAMATION TO "REMAIN AT PEACE WITH ALL OF THE SAID BELLIGERENTS" (GERMANY AND THE ALLIES) AND TO "MAINTAIN A STRICT AND IMPARTIAL NEUTRALITY."

MAY 2-1940

WASHINGTON, MAY 1-(AP)-JAPAN, ITALY AND YUGOSLAVIA HAVE ESTABLISHED NEUTRALITY ZONES AROUND THEIR BOUNDARIES SINCE THE AMERICAN NATIONS SET AN EXAMPLE BY CREATING SUCH AN AREA AROUND THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE. THIS UNEXPECTED DEVELOPMENT HAS HAD THE EFFECT OF CIRCUMSCRIBING THE THEATER OF WAR.

JAPAN WAS THE FIRST TO FOLLOW THE LEAD OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE 20 LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS. SHE TOLD BRITAIN AND FRANCE THAT SHE CONSIDERED THE SEA OF JAPAN TO BE NEUTRAL WATER WHICH SHOULD BE FREED OF BELLIGERENT ACTIVITIES. THE SEA SEPARATES JAPAN FROM CHINA AND RUSSIA.

THIS DECLARATION WAS MADE WHEN THE ALLIES LAID PLANS TO INTERCEPT SHIPMENTS TO RUSSIA OF AMERICAN COPPER, CHILEAN NITRATES AND MEXICAN OIL ON THE GROUNDS THAT THEY WERE ULTIMATELY DESTINED TO GERMANY. INSTEAD OF PATROLING THE ENTIRE PACIFIC, THE ALLIED WARSHIPS INTENDED TO INTERCEPT THE RUSSIAN FREIGHTERS AS THEY CROSSED THE SEA OF JAPAN TO VLADIVOSTOK, RUSSIA'S FAR EASTERN PORT.

BUT SINCE JAPAN REGISTERED HER OBJECTION, ALLIED WARSHIPS HAVE BEEN WARY OF INTERCEPTING RUSSIAN SHIPS THERE.

JAPAN ALSO PROTESTED BRITAIN'S ACTION IN REMOVING 21 GERMAN SEAMEN FROM A JAPANESE MERCHANT SHIP. THE OBJECTION WAS BASED LARGELY ON THE FACT THAT THE SAILORS WERE SEIZED 35 MILES FROM THE JAPANESE MAINLAND. EVENTUALLY BRITAIN RETURNED NINE OF THE SAILORS TO JAPAN.

WHEN THE ALLIES THREATENED TO INTERCEPT YUGOSLAV SHIPS CARRYING TO TRIESTE, ITALY, RAW MATERIALS PURCHASED BY GERMANY ITALY AND YUGOSLAVIA INTIMATED TO THE ALLIES THAT THEY CONSIDERED THE ADRIATIC SEA A ZONE IN WHICH THERE SHOULD BE NO BELLIGERENT ACTIVITIES. YUGOSLAV SHIPS HAVE CONTINUED TO SAIL TO TRIESTE WITH GERMAN PRODUCTS ABOARD AND HAVE NOT BEEN MOLESTED.

MUSSOLINI, ACCORDING TO PRESS DISPATCHES, ALSO PUT HIS FOOT DOWN ON THE POSSIBILITY OF GERMAN SUBMARINE ACTIVITIES AGAINST ALLIED SHIPPING IN THE MEDITERRANEAN. THE DISPATCHES SAID MUSSOLINI REGARDED THE WHOLE MEDITERRANEAN AS A SEA IN WHICH HOSTILE ACTS SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN.

MAY 2-1940

OFFICIALS HERE HAVE BEEN INTERESTED IN THESE NEW DEVELOPMENTS AND THE REACTIONS OF THE BELLIGERENTS TO THEM. THIS IS, IN FACT, A REVOLUTION IN THE CONDUCT OF WAR, SINCE IN PAST CONFLICTS IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN THE BELLIGERENTS WHO SET DANGER ZONES AND PROHIBITED AREAS, AND THE NEUTRALS HAVE EITHER HAD TO PROTEST OR GIVE IN.

THERE IS ONE DISQUIETING FEATURE ABOUT THE SPREAD OF NEUTRALITY ZONES, HOWEVER. IF THE BELLIGERENTS WHO CONTROL THE SEAS, NAMELY THE ALLIES, FIND MORE AND MORE OF THE WORLD'S WATERS CLOSED TO THEM,

THEY MAY REACT FORCEFULLY AGAINST ALL SUCH ZONES. THEY MAY ARGUE THAT TO GIVE IN ON ONE WILL SET A DANGEROUS PRECEDENT THAT WILL RESULT IN A MULTIPLICATION OF THE ZONES.

NEW YORK, MAY 1-(AP)-CARL W.ACKERMAN, DEAN OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY'S GRADUATE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM AND EX-WAR CORRESPONDENT, DECLARED TODAY THAT THE OFFER OF A $1,000,000 REWARD FOR THE CAPTURE OF ADOLF HITLER WAS "CALCULATED TO CONTRIBUTE TO THE INVOLVEMENT OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE PRESENT EUROPEAN WAR."

WHILE OFFICIAL WASHINGTON STUDIED THE OFFER IN THE LIGHT OF U.S. NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION, ACKERMAN ASSAILED THE PROPOSAL IN AN OPEN LETTER TO SAMUEL HARDEN CHURCH, PRESIDENT OF THE CARNEGIE INSTITUTE, WHO MADE PUBLIC THE OFFER IN BEHALF OF AN UNIDENTIFIED GROUP OF PITTSBURGH RESIDENTS.

MAY 2-1940

TO COLLECT UNDER THE OFFER, ANY PERSON OR PERSONS WOULD HAVE TO DELIVER THE GERMAN FUEHRER "ALIVE, UNWOUNDED AND UNHURT" TO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS DURING MAY FOR TRIAL "FOR HIS CRIMES AGAINST THE PEACE AND DIGNITY OF THE WORLD."

"TO OFFER A MONETARY REWARD FOR THE SACRIFICE OF HUMAN LIFE, WHICH WOULD BE NECESSARY TO CAPTURE HERR HITLER, IS A DANGEROUS NATIONAL AS WELL AS INTERNATIONAL PROPOSAL," ACKERMAN DECLARED. "THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WILL NEVER SANCTION A POLICY OF KIDNAPING EITHER AT HOME OR ABROAD.

"YOUR PROPOSAL IS NOT AN APPEAL TO PUBLIC OPINION OR TO THE REASONED JUDGMENT OF THE NATION. IT IS AN EFFORT TO STAMPEDE PUBLIC SENTIMENT BY MOBILIZING PUBLIC EMOTION, FOR THE OBVIOUS PURPOSE OF PRECIPITATING EVENTS CALCULATED TO FORCE THE CONGRESS TO DECLARE WAR UPON GERMANY.

"NEVERTHELESS YOUR OFFER SERVES A USEFUL PUBLIC SERVICE. IT INDICATES THAT THE TIME HAS ARRIVED FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO BEGIN TO LIST OUR WAR MAKERS. YOU HAVE WON THE UNIQUE POSITION OF WAR MAKER NO. 1, X X X

"IN THE LAST WORLD WAR, THE WAR MAKERS WERE THOSE WHO WISHED TO PROFIT BY THE WAR. IN THIS CRISIS IT APPEARS THAT THE NEW WAR MAKERS IN THE UNITED STATES ARE THE INTELLECTUAL LEADERS, WHO ARE TOO OLD THEMSELVES TO FIGHT BUT WHO ARE QUITE WILLING THAT YOUNG MEN SHOULD DIE IN ORDER THAT A FEW PITTSBURGH MILLIONAIRES MAY LIVE IN LUXURIOUS SECURITY.

"IF A GROUP OF CITIZENS IN PITTSBURGH HAVE ONE MILLION DOLLARS CASH TO SPEND SO FREELY IT COULD BE USED BY HUNDREDS OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS, PHILANTHROPIC AND RELIEF ORGANIZATIONS FOR HUMANITARIAN PURPOSES AND SOCIAL WELFARE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

"FORTUNATELY, I THINK, THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE NOT AS UNINTELLIGENT AS OUR INTELLECTUAL WAR MAKERS."

MAY 2-1940

IN WASHINGTON, STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS DECLINED TO SAY WHETHER THE OFFER DIRECTLY INVOLVED ANY SECTIONS OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S NEUTRALITY PROCLAMATION BUT POINTED OUT SEVERAL SECTIONS WHICH THEY SAID MIGHT HAVE A BEARING ON THE SITUATION.

FOR INSTANCE, THEY EXPLAINED THAT THE SEPT. 5 PROCLAMATION DIRECTED TO ALL U.S.CITIZENS TO "REMAIN AT PEACE WITH ALL" THE BELLIGERENTS AND TO "MAINTAIN A STRICT AND IMPARTIAL NEUTRALITY."

ANOTHER SORT OF COMMENT ON THE REWARD OFFER CAME, MEANWHILE, FROM LARRY MACPHAIL, NOW PRESIDENT OF THE BROOKLYN DODGERS BASEBALL CLUB,

30.24-2005

WHO PARTICIPATED WITH OTHER AMERICANS AFTER THE WORLD WAR IN AN ABORTIVE ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP FORMER KAISER WILHELM.

"THE ONLY PERSON WHO COULD FIGURE THAT OUT WOULD BE SOME GENERAL OF THE ALLIES' ARMIES AND DON'T WORRY, THAT'S WHAT THEY'RE ALL TRYING TO DO RIGHT NOW," MACPHAIL SAID.

"NOW WHEN WE TRIED TO GET WILHELM, THE CLOSEST WE GOT TO HIM WAS 15 FEET, AND THIS FELLOW WAS OUT OF HIS OWN COUNTRY, OVER IN HOLLAND AND NOT PROTECTED BY ANY BODYGUARDS. I HOPE SOMEBODY GETS THAT MILLION, BUT -----."

IN THE BELLIGERENT NATION OF CHINA ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WORLD WORKERS CARRIED ON WITHOUT A HOLIDAY, IN-LINE WITH OFFICIAL PRESS EXHORTATIONS THAT WORKERS CAN DO MORE TOWARD DEFEATING JAPAN BY STICKING TO THEIR JOBS THAN BY DEMONSTRATIONS.

IN THE WAR-FREE WESTERN HEMISPHERE MAY DAY CELEBRATIONS OF CUSTOMARY PROPORTIONS WERE HELD IN BUENOS AIRES AND MEXICO CITY. THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

MAY 2-1940

THERE IS SOME DISPUTE WHETHER THE GERMANS ACTUALLY HAVE ESTABLISHED FULL COMMUNICATION BETWEEN OSLO AND THEIR GARRISON IN THE STRATEGIC RAIL-HEAD OF TRONDHEIM, BUT THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT THAT THE NAZIS HAVE WON A VERY CONSIDERABLE VICTORY.

IMMEDIATE CONCERN OF THE ALLIES AND THEIR SUPPORTERS HAS TURNED TO THE EFFECT OF THE BLOW TO ALLIED PRESTIGE AND THE CORRESPONDING RISE

IN NAZI STOCK, RATHER THAN TO THE MILITARY RESULTS.

THE WAR WILL BE NEITHER WON NOR LOST IN NORWAY, BUT THIS IS A BAD TIME FOR A MAJOR MILITARY SET-BACK, SINCE IT MIGHT STAMPEDE SOME NERVOUS NEUTRALS INTO HASTY MILITARY COMMITMENTS.

QUICK RECOGNITION OF THIS DANGER CAME IN BRITAIN'S SUDDEN ORDER DIVERTING ALL HER MERCANTILE TRAFFIC FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN -- A BLUNT INDICATION THAT SHE WAS SUSPICIOUS OF ITALY'S INTENTIONS.

SO FAR AS ONE CAN SEE FROM THIS DISTANCE THE PROBABILITIES ARE THAT THIS SENSATIONAL MOVE WAS INSPIRED BY PRECAUTION RATHER THAN ANY DEFINITE SIGN THAT SIGNOR MUSSOLINI WAS PREPARING TO JOIN HITLER. THIS MANEUVER ALSO WOULD SERVE AS A WARNING TO ROME TO SIT TIGHT AND NOT BE STAMPEDED BY THE NORWEGIAN SITUATION.

MAY 2 - 1940

THE BRITISH DOUBTS OF IL DUCE'S POSITION HAVE BEEN AROUSED BY THE STEADY STREAM OF ANTI-ALLY, PRO-GERMAN PROPAGANDA WHICH HAS BEEN COMING OUT OF ITALY RECENTLY. HOWEVER, ROME DISPATCHES TODAY REPORT THAT THERE IS NO SIGN OF ANY RUSH TO THE GERMAN SIDE.

THERE IS SMALL DOUBT THAT ONE OF THESE DAYS MUSSOLINI WILL HAVE TO MAKE A QUICK DECISION AND GET INTO THE WAR. ONE WOULD EXPECT HIM TO AWAIT SOMETHING MORE SUBSTANTIAL THAN THE PRESENT STATUS OF THE BATTLE OF NORWAY, HOWEVER, BEFORE ABANDONING NON-BELLIGERENCY.

IN PICKING THE SIDE HE WANTS TO FIGHT WITH, THE ITALIAN LEADER IS LIKELY TO KEEP IN MIND THE AXIOM TO WHICH A BRITISH OFFICIAL REFERRED THE OTHER DAY--NO NATION HAS EVER BEEN DEFEATED WHILE HAVING CONTROL OF THE SEAS. THAT IS A SOLID THOUGHT TO CHEW ON. GERMANY'S TASK IS TO DISPOSE OF THE ALLIED FLEET.

AS REGARDS THE ACTUAL BATTLE OF NORWAY, THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT THAT THE ALLIES HAVE A TREMENDOUS JOB AHEAD OF THEM. THEY WILL ALMOST LITERALLY HAVE TO BLAST THE GERMANS OUT IF THEY ARE TO LIBERATE THE COUNTRY.

IF THE NAZIS HAVE ACTUALLY JOINED THEIR SOUTHERN AND NORTHERN FORCES AND THUS PLACED A BARRIER BETWEEN THE TWO ARMS OF THE ANGLO-FRENCH EXPEDITION, THE ALLIES PROBABLY WILL HAVE TO ABANDON THEIR BASE AT ANDALSNES, SOUTHWEST OF TRONDHEIM AND BASE FURTHER OPERATIONS ON NAMSOS, THE PORT THEY HOLD TO THE NORTHEAST OF TRONDHEIM.

THE PREDICAMENT OF THE ALLIED FORCE BASED ON ANDALSNES IS SERIOUS. THE JUBILANT GERMANS ARE PREPARING TO ATTACK THIS ISOLATED UNIT WITH THE IDEA OF DRIVING IT INTO THE SEA.

THE TIGHT PLACE THE ALLIES FIND THEMSELVES IN IS DUE PRIMARILY TO THE FACT THAT THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN ABLE TO EMPLOY THEIR AIR-FLEET TO FULL ADVANTAGE WHILE THE ANGLO-FRENCH HAVE BEEN HAMSTRUNG IN THIS RESPECT. NOT ONLY HAVE THE GERMANS HAD AIR BASES IN DENMARK, CLOSE TO NORWAY, BUT RIGHT AT THE OUTSET THEY SEIZED ALL THE NORTH-WHILE NORWEGIAN AIRPORTS AND THEREBY ESTABLISHED BASES IN THE FIELD OF OPERATIONS.

MAY 2 - 1940

THE ALLIES, ON THE OTHER HAND, HAVE TO OPERATE LARGELY FROM HOME BASES, INVOLVING LONG FLIGHTS. THEIR PLANES HAD TO MAKE RETURN FLIGHTS ON THEIR INITIAL LOAD OF GASOLINE, IN ADDITION TO DOING THEIR BOMBING AND FIGHTING OVER NORWAY.

THAT WAS AN IMPOSSIBLE HANDICAP. THE GERMAN SUCCESS HAS BEEN DUE ALMOST ENTIRELY TO AIR SUPERIORITY AND UNTIL THE ALLIES FIND A WAY OF CHALLENGING THAT THEY ARE NOT LIKELY TO GET AHEAD WITH THEIR JOB OF EVICTING THE NAZIS FROM NORWAY.

MAY 2 - 1940

ANY SUGGESTION THAT THE ALLIES MIGHT ABANDON THE CAMPAIGN IS PERHAPS WELL ANSWERED IN A BRITISH COMMUNIQUE WHICH ANNOUNCES IN A MATTER OF FACT WAY THAT "FRESH LANDINGS HAVE TAKEN PLACE ON THE COAST OF NORWAY."

Paris, May 2—The French tonight announced officially the loss of one warship and serious damage to another in a North Sea naval battle.

A communique added, however, that a French submarine had torpedoed a German U-boat.

The names of the lost ship, a patrol boat, and the destroyer which was damaged were not disclosed. The fighting was understood to have taken place within the last forty-eight hours.

MAY 3 - 1940

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain today disclosed the withdrawal of British troops from the Andalsnes area and the abandonment of the attempt to take German-held Trondheim from the south, but declared that Great Britain would keep on fighting Germany in Norway and refused to be trapped into letting down her guard in the Mediterranean.

Andalsnes is 100 miles south of Trondheim.

"We have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a side show," Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons, "but neither are we going to be trapped into such a dispersal of our forces as would leave us dangerously weak at the vital center."

He asserted that blows to the German fleet permitted "an important redistribution of the main Allied fleets" and announced that a British-French battle fleet is in the eastern Mediterranean on the way to Alexandria, Egypt.

Mr. Chamberlain's statement was his second report on the Norwegian campaign but he made it clear at the outset that it was only an interim report, that there was much he could not say for fear of disclosing strategy to the Germans, and announced that a debate in the House of Commons on the campaign would be held next Tuesday.

Mr. Chamberlain's announcement indicated that the Allies were abandoning to Germany all Norway south of a line running from Trondheim east to the Swedish frontier including nearly half the country's total area, six-sevenths of the population and nearly all industrial centers.

The troops withdrawn from the Andalsnes front were being transferred "elsewhere," Mr. Chamberlain said.

This led to speculation whether they were joining the British-French army based at Namsos, 100 miles north of Trondheim.

A war communique reporting the withdrawal, however, said "there is nothing further to report from Namsos." It told of "continuing" operations in the far northern Narvik sector, where a German garrison is holding off Allied forces.

As to Withdrawal.

Telling of the withdrawal the communique said: "Allied forces which have been carrying out delaying operations south of Trondheim during the past few days have, after repulsing many enemy attacks, been withdrawn in the face of ever-increasing enemy strength."

The Prime Minister promised further disclosures next Tuesday, insisting that more information now would merely help Germany and endanger lives of British fighting men.

He did not amplify his statement that an Allied battle fleet was in the eastern Mediterranean, but Britain this week has given evidence of anxiety over the possibility of Italy entering the war on the side of Germany by forbidding her merchant marine to use the Mediterranean for through voyages.

Mr. Chamberlain pictured Germany as prepared for invasion of the Netherlands or Belgium or both, action he said she "would not scruple" to undertake.

"Or it may be that their savage hordes will be hurled against southeast Europe," he said.

"They might well do more than one of these things in preparation for an attempt at a large scale attack on the western front or even a lightning swoop on this country."

In announcing the abandonment of the west Norwegian base of Andalsnes, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"We have now withdrawn the whole of our forces from Andalsnes under the very noses of German planes without, so far as I am aware, losing a single man in the operation." MAY 3 1940

He said the Norwegian campaign has "merely concluded a single phase" in which neither Britain nor Germany thus far has achieved their objectives and "their (the German) losses were far greater than ours."

"German losses in men cannot be estimated but they must have amounted to many thousands."

The crowded House received Chamberlain's report in comparative silence. Many members appeared to be stunned by its implications.

Though it has not been possible to capture Trondheim, Mr. Chamberlain said he was satisfied "that the balance of the advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces."

"Norway is not conquered," he stated, "after three weeks of war in which heavy losses have been sustained by the enemy on the sea, on land and in the air."

The naval movement to Alexandria, he said, was to effect "more normal distribution" of ships through release of some from the North Sea.

He said he could not give details of casualties in Norway but believed they were not proportionately heavy.

Lists Naval Losses.

Mr. Chamberlain gave German naval losses as two capital ships damaged, three or four cruisers sunk, eleven destroyers sunk, five submarines sunk, and thirty transports and store ships sunk, scuttled or set on fire with the loss of several thousand lives. In addition, he said, ten German transports or store ships probably were sunk.

The losses of the German Navy, he said, "were so substantial as to alt - the entire balance of naval power" and permitted "an important redistribution of the main Allied fleets."

MAY 3 - 1940

British losses at the same time, he said, were four destroyers, three submarines, one sloop and five trawlers sunk and "five other warships" damaged by air attack. One store ship had been sunk by torpedoing, he said.

Early in his report to an anxious and critical House, the Prime Minister asserted Germany had forestalled Britain in Norway by "long planning and carefully elaborated treachery."

He disclosed that Allied forces had been gathered originally to help Finland but these were dispersed when Norway and Sweden refused to allow transit of the troops.

About a month ago, however, he said, it was decided to keep ready "certain small forces" to occupy western ports of Norway at short notice in case of invasion by Germany of the northern kingdom.

Start of Chamberlain Speech.

"I can only make an interim statement today," he told the House at the start, adding that it "is impossible to make public as yet plans and movements which are not complete." Mr. Chamberlain said he hoped "the First Lord of the Admiralty (Winston Churchill) and I may be able to say a good deal more early next week."

"I know how many must have been longing for news even of the most meager description," he went on. "But members have realized the difficulty of making any such statement without disclosing information of value to the enemy."

"How was it Germany was able to forestall us?" Mr. Chamberlain asked. "By long planning and carefully elaborated treachery against an unsuspecting and almost unarmed people."

He disclosed that when Britain made ready for the dispatch of an Allied force to Finland's aid, she took into account the possibility that Germany might attack Norway's "western ports."

After permission to send troops to Finland through Norway and Sweden was refused, he said, the greater part of the forces which had been accumulated were dispersed, since both they and the ships were wanted elsewhere.

About a month ago, however, it was decided that certain small forces should be kept in readiness to occupy Norwegian western ports at short notice in case of aggression by Germany against southern Norway, Mr. Chamberlain said.

Knew of German Preparations.

"Accordingly further forces were made ready to occupy these places," he declared.

He said instructions to the commanders of these forces provided they were to proceed to the occupation only under "one of two conditions—either that they were invited to do so by the Norwegian Government or that Norwegian neutrality had already been violated."

The Prime Minister declared Britain "had been aware for many months that the Germans were accumulating transports and troops in Baltic ports and that these troops were constantly being practiced in embarkation and disembarkation."

"It was evident some act of aggression was in contemplation," the Prime Minister said. "But these forces were equally available for attack upon Finland, Sweden, Norway, Holland or this country and it was impossible to tell beforehand where the blow would fall," he added.

"If we had known that Denmark and Norway were to be the victims we could not have prevented what happened without the co-operation of those countries."

Those countries took no precautions against invasion "in the belief that their neutrality" would save them, the Prime Minister asserted.

Referring to British mine-laying in Norwegian waters, he said: "It was a curious chance that this date of April 8 decided upon by the Government should have coincided almost exactly with that chosen by Germany for the invasion of Norway."

Fleet Sailed to Engage Foe.

Mr. Chamberlain related how, after "we got information on Sunday, April 7, that a large German naval force was moving toward and along the west coast of Norway," the main battle fleet and second cruiser squadron sailed from Scapa Flow and Rosyth "in the hope of engaging the enemy."

He continued:

"Our objectives in deciding on further action were:

"1. To give all support and assistance in our power to the Norwegians;

"2. To resist or delay the German advance from the south;

"3. To facilitate the rescue and protection of the Norwegian King and Government."

Amid rousing cheers, Mr. Chamberlain explained that it was obvious that these objectives could be most speedily attained if it were possible to capture Trondheim and, in spite of the hazardous nature of the operation, "we resolved to make the effort."

"Two landing places were selected respectively north and south of Trondheim," he reported. British naval forces landed at Namsos, 100 miles north of Trondheim, on April 14, and British troops followed April 16 to 18.

A few days later French "Chasseurs Alpins" landed and their arrival was "a welcome support to our men," the Prime Minister said.

Withholds Details of Fighting.

Part of this force advanced rapidly to the neighborhood of Steinkjer, midway between Namsos and Trondheim, to support Norwegians known to be holding that place.

Mr. Chamberlain declared he could not give any details of fighting on both fronts since the landings.

MAY 3 - 1940

"All that can be said at present is that our troops fought with gallantry and determination and inflicted heavy losses upon the enemy," he told the House.

He acknowledged that the Allied forces were faced with "serious difficulties" and described as "foremost" the fact that available airdromes were in German hands and "the use of fighter aircraft was thus largely denied to us."

The Prime Minister said that "it became evident to us some days ago that it would be impossible, owing to German local air superiority, to land the artillery and tanks which would be necessary to enable our troops to withstand the enemy drive from the south.

"Accordingly we decided last week that we must abandon any idea of taking Trondheim from the South and that we must withdraw our troops from that area and transfer them elsewhere.

"We have now withdrawn the whole of our forces from Andalsnes under the very noses of the German airplanes."

He asserted that it was possible for the Germans, "with their usual disregard of life, even of their own people," to send re-enforcements to Norway "at a much greater rate" than the British "with the inadequate landing places we have to rely on."

"I have no doubt the Germans expected a walk-over" in Norway, as in Denmark, Mr. Chamberlain said, and declared this expectation was "frustrated by the courage of the Norwegian people and by the efforts of the Allies."

Claims 'Balance of Advantage.'

Although Mr. Chamberlain admitted that "in the face of overwhelming difficulties it has not been possible" to capture Trondheim, he declared he was satisfied "that the balance of the advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces."

He said he expected "more detailed reports before long" and trusted that "this most distressing but inevitable period of uncertainty may not be prolonged."

Germany's "considerable supplies of ore which she was formerly obtaining from Narvik have been indefinitely suspended," he declared.

The Prime Minister said the German losses in transport to Norway or in the fighting there could not be estimated "with any accuracy but they must have amounted to many thousands."

Expects Emergencies Elsewhere.

He warned that the Allies "must not disperse or tie up" their forces as to weaken their "freedom of action in vital emergencies which may at any moment arise."

"We must seize every chance, as we have done and shall continue to do, in Norway to inflict damage upon the enemy, but we must not allow ourselves to forget the long-term strategy which will win the war," he told the House and Empire.

After Mr. Chamberlain sat down, Labor Leader Major Clement R. Attlee and Liberal Opposition leader Sir Archibald Sinclair announced amid cheers that they would not make any comment or ask questions today.

Mr. Chamberlain reviewed the situation last night with Sir Archibald and the Laborite leaders, Major Attlee and Arthur Greenwood. The Prime Minister was reported to have taken the Liberal leader to task in a heated talk for his personal attack and criticisms of the conduct of the Norwegian campaign. Speaking in Glasgow on Tuesday night Sir Archibald accused the Government of "muddling" in Norway and said: "We shall pay for the feebleness of our political direction by prolongation of the war."

Prime Minister Reveals Anglo-French Fleets Are In Mediterranean

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, May 2—Great Britain abandoned her struggle in lower Norway today and, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons, snatched her battle-tired troops from Andalsnes from under the very bomb sights of the German air force that they may live to fight another day for Norway and for England.

His face etched with the lines of anxiety and fatigue, Chamberlain gave Commons a precise, if incomplete accounting of the first phase of the Norwegian campaign, now twenty-three days old, and then faced suddenly south to brandish the whip of Allied naval power in the direction of Italy.

After proudly asserting that the Royal Navy's feats in the north had "altered the entire balance of naval power" he disclosed that a strong British and French battle fleet is steaming through the eastern basin of the Mediterranean, toward Alexandria, where it can keep its eyes on Italy.

Says Allies Will Fight On

Chamberlain told the listeners who packed the benches and steep balconies of the house that the Allies intend to fight on in Norway, to "seize every chance to inflict damage on the enemy" from their land concentrations above Trondheim and in the Arctic region and by air and sea.

Although Chamberlain refused to disclose the course of future operations in Norway, now that the campaign from south of Trondheim has been scrapped, it was learned the Allies almost certainly will fling a line across the country above Trondheim from the coast to the Swedish frontier.

This would provide favorable bases for counter-attacks on the Germans and protect "mopping up" operations at Arctic Narvik, where the Allies are moving slowly but steadily in on the Germans who occupy the port.

Warns Of New Thrust

An Allied blow from above Trondheim, aimed at that port, cannot be entirely discounted.

Although Chamberlain said Norway is not to become "a sideshow," he warned his homeland as well as the neutrals in the west of Europe and in the southeast that they must be ready for new German lightning strokes. Germany, he added, could not trap the Allies into dispersing their forces and weakening "the vital center."

The Germans, he said, may even make a lightning swoop "on this country."

Chamberlain insisted it was too early to strike a true "balance sheet" in Norway, despite his frank declaration that Britain has had to abandon the campaign to assault Trondheim from the south and has taken its troops below Trondheim "elsewhere."

A British communique said that the retiring troops embarked at Andalsnes and other nearby points — apparently on waiting transports and warships.

The Prime Miister argued that "the balance of advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces."

Calls Death List Small

He explained it this way: The British loss of life in Norway has been small in proportion to the scale of the engagement; German losses on land, sea and in the air "must have amounted to many thousands"; Germany has lost 2 or 3 capital ships damaged, 4 cruisers, 11 destroyers and 5 U-boats sunk and 30 or 40 transports as compared with British losses of 4 destroyers, 3 submarines, a sloop, 5 trawlers and a store-ship; as a result, Britain has been able to divert part of its fleet to the Mediterranean.

Soon after the Prime Minister had told of the withdrawal of "the whole of our forces from Andalsnes (one hundred miles southwest of Trondheim) without, as far as I am aware, losing a single man," the War Office chronicled the withdrawal as the result of "ever - increasing enemy strength."

Covered By Norwegians

Reinforced German troops, moving up from Oslo, had forced the Allies back from Dombas, a main railway junction for Trondheim, toward Andalsnes. Norwegian troops, it was indicated tonight, covered their withdrawal action.

The War Office also said there was "nothing to report" from the Namsos area, where some thought the Andalsnes troops might be used to reinforce strongly intrenched British units and French Alpine Chasseurs.

At Narvik, far in the north, the Germans still held the iron-ore port, but the British surrounding it were stated to have been in "contact with the enemy."

Admits Nazi Air Might

Acknowledging Germany's "central position" on the eve of the eight-month anniversary of the declaration of war by the Allies, Chamberlain's old voice took on a metallic rasp.

The Nazis, he declared, may now attack "with lightning rapidity the Netherlands, Belgium, or both; the Balkans, on the western front, or Britain herself."

Strong, almost frenzied cheers accompanied his declaration: "We must seize every chance, as we have done and shall continue to do in Norway, to inflict damage on the enemy."

His speech followed new Royal Air Force blows against Nazi air bases at Stavanger and Tornebu, Norway, and Aalborg, Denmark, bases which Chamberlain declared had given Germany the "local air superiority" which made the British southern campaign a failure.

Opposition Silent

They have made a total of twenty-seven raids on these bases. The planes returned today unscathed and shot down one German seaplane.

Both the opposition leaders, Clement R. Attlee, for Labor, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, for the opposition Liberals, agreed to Chamberlain's suggestion that they make no comment and ask no questions pending the further statement and debate which he promised for next Tuesday.

Chamberlain preceded his announcement of the Andalsnes retreat with a lengthy explanation of why the British were "forestalled," as he put it, in Norway. He blamed "long planned, carefully elaborated treachery against an unsuspecting and almost unarmed people."

MAY 3 - 1940

He recalled evidence, months ago, of Nazi troop practice in getting on and off ships in Baltic ports (stories which reached Europe's neutrals as early as November), but said it was impossible to tell beforehand which country was intended for invasion, and that, at any rate, Britain could not move without the cooperation of Norway and Sweden, which it did not get.

Landing Difficulties

Without going into details of the fighting since the British landed in

Norway, Chamberlain sketched a brief picture of the impossibility of landing artillery and tanks south of Trondheim because of the "local air superiority" of the Germans.

"It must be remembered," he went on, "that . . . it has always been possible for the Germans, with their usual disregard of life, even of their own people, to send reinforcements to Norway at a much greater rate than would be open to us with the inadequate landing places we have to rely on."

Recalls Corunna

Taking this into consideration, he said, "we decided last week that we must abandon any idea of taking Trondheim from the south and that we must therefore withdraw our troops from that area and transfer them elsewhere."

He compared the British withdrawal at Andalsnes to the historic withdrawal of British forces before Napoleon's superior army at Corunna, Spain, in 1809.

He praised the work of the navy in this action and lauded British-French flotillas for their hampering of German communications and storming of Narvik.

Norse Protest Charges Attack on Hospital Ships

MAY 3 - 1940

By The Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 2 —The Norwegian Legation announced tonight that the Norwegian Government had lodged a strong protest with the International Red Cross at Geneva, charging German planes had bombed Norwegian hospital ships en route to northern ports, "causing serious loss of life including doctors and nurses."

In asking the Red Cross to forward the representations to Berlin, the Norwegians asserted the ships, which they said had been attacked yesterday in Norwegian waters, were plainly designated with Red Cross markers.

The ships presumably carried soldiers wounded in the southern campaign to northern ports held by the British and Norwegians.

Norway's Ships Escape Nazis

MAY 3 - 1940

Stockholm, May 2 (By Radio)—An official broadcast tonight said all but one-sixth of the Norwegian merchant marine escaped German hands and is still active.

The broadcast said the fleet consisted of 1,987 ships before the German invasion, and totaled 4,833,000 tons.

TWO SUBMARINES RETURN

One Reports Torpedoing Pair of Nazi Transports.

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today the loss of the sloop Bittern.

A communique said:

"The secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce the loss of H. M. S. Bittern, a sloop of 1,109 tons, Lieut.-Commander R. H. Mills.

MAY 3 - 1940

"This ship was repeatedly attacked by enemy aircraft and after prolonged fighting, in which one aircraft was shot down in flames and others severely handled, was set on fire.

"Efforts to extinguish the fire were unsuccessful and the crew were taken on board another warship. H. M. S. Bittern was finally sunk by our forces in order to avoid her becoming a danger to navigation.

"No casualties have yet been reported."

The Bittern, completed in March, 1938, cost £223,668 (currently about $780,000) and was a sister ship of the Admiralty yacht Enchantress which took King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to France in 1938.

Forty-sixth Naval Loss.

The sinking of the Bittern brought Britain's announced naval war losses to forty-six vessels—equally divided between regular naval ships and trawlers drafted for mine-sweeping and anti-submarine work. About 2,775 men have been lost in addition to sixty-nine who are German prisoners.

The Admiralty also disclosed the loss of the 710-ton minesweeper Dunoon, which struck a mine off the East Coast. Twenty-four men of her crew and three officers were killed outright by the explosion. Another war vessel picked up forty survivors.

Two British submarines returned to their bases safely, it was announced, following hazardous patrol work in Norwegian waters. One of them, the Sea Wolf, was credited with the sinking of two 4,000-ton German transports.

It Cost Two Nazi Planes.

J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press correspondent on the Norwegian front at Namsos, yesterday reported the destruction of the Bittern in the fjord off Namsos Tuesday.

Observers said they watched Nazi warplanes try for six hours to hit the little warship and then sacrifice two of their bombers to get her by a time-worn ruse.

The Germans put the sun at their backs so that anti-aircraft batteries peppering them did not see one streak away and make a sudden power dive on the Bittern. The trick worked, but the witnesses said that two Nazi planes were lost.

The German High Command announced in Berlin earlier that a British cruiser, a destroyer and five transports were sunk by air attack off Namsos and another cruiser and five transports damaged. Of similar appearance to a destroyer, but slower and less heavily armed, the Bittern is classified in Jane's Fighting Ships, authoritative register of war vessels, as an "escort vessel." She normally carried 125 men.

NORWEGIANS ARE MOVING IN

Hitler's Columns in This Branch of Drive Short of Food—British Planes Active.

STOCKHOLM, May 2 (A. P.).—Norwegian troops, strengthened by foreign volunteers, were reported today moving west from the Swedish frontier and south through the Glomma River valley as German forces fell back from their advance posts to protect their supply lines in central Norway.

The Norwegians' occupation of Roros, point of the Nazis' furthest advance in the Glomma River valley, and Tynset, twenty-five miles south of Roros, after the Germans had withdrawn apparently has prevented the Germans from linking their northern and southern forces, at least temporarily, along this route. Roros is 195 miles north of Oslo.

Norwegians were noncommittal as to the nationality of the foreign volunteers aiding them, but reports have told of numerous Swedes crossing the border to fight the Germans.

MAY 3 - 1940

While the guerrilla tactics of reorganized Norwegian forces were harassing the sketchy Nazi line, a new British sea and air offensive to halt the flow of German troops into Norway appeared to be taking shape.

Germans Hold Kvikne.

Latest reports indicated that the Germans still held Kvikne, west of the Glomma valley and northeast of Dombas.

Norwegian accounts of the German withdrawal in the Glomma Valley indicated a severence of communications between Oslo and Trondheim, the establishment of which Berlin announced earlier in the week after reports of sweeping successes.

The Germans were said by the Norwegians not only to have surrendered the key point of Roros, in the northern part of the Glomma Valley, but also to have retired to a position below Tynset.

Run Short of Supplies.

A captured Nazi officer was quoted as saying that the withdrawal was necessitated by a lack of supplies and adequate reinforcements.

The full significance of the German withdrawal in the Glomma Valley was offset, however, by developments in the Gudbrands Valley to the West. If the Germans have control of the railway line extending northward through the Gudbrands Valley, through Dombas and Steven to Trondheim, their retreat from Roros is not strategically important.

Even if the Germans control Dombas, military observers pointed out, it is still important for them to keep a grip on Tynset to maintain communications with a column reported to have advanced westward from that point in an attempt to cut the railway north of Dombas.

There apparently was little change in the situation on the Steinkjer front, fifty miles north of Trondheim, or at Narvik, the arctic ore port where the Allies were reported to have a German force surrounded.

An Allied-Norwegian communique issued last night from Grong, Norway, said there was little ground activity in the Steinkjer sector but that aerial warfare was continuing there unabated. Reports from that area in the last few days have told of repeated forays by Nazi planes engaged in strafing Allied lines of communication.

Meanwhile observers on Sweden's west coast said that British warships, re-enforced by bombing planes, invaded the Kattegat yesterday and fought a two-hour battle with German naval vessels during which one Nazi ship was sunk and another set afire.

London Hears of Improvement.

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—Reports reaching here today from the Scandinavian battle front indicated that British warships continued to bombard German-held forts in Trondheim Fjord.

MAY 3 - 1940

The Air Ministry announced that Norway's largest airport at German-held Stavanger "was bombed twice during daylight hours of yesterday and this airdrome, together with airdromes at Aalborg and Fornebu, was heavily bombed during last night."

Fornebu is Oslo's chief airport and Aalborg is the Danish starting point for German aerial transports.

The Ministry's communique said the British had suffered no casualties in these forays and had shot down one German plane in an encounter at sea near the island of Norderney, off the German north coast.

The communique read as follows:

"The Royal Air Force maintained their pressure on enemy air bases in Norway and Denmark.

"Stavanger (on Norway's Atlantic coast) was bombed twice during daylight hours of yesterday, and this airdrome, together with airdromes at Aalborg and Fornebu, was heavily bombed during last night.

"In the course of the night's reconnaissance over the southern area of the North Sea, one of our aircraft encountered an enemy seaplane near the island of Norderney and shot it down into the sea. No losses were suffered in these operations."

ADDRESS HELD SIGNIFICANT

Sir Kingsley Wood Says Britain Won't Rest Till Norway Is Free.

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—Sir Kingsley Wood, the Lord Privy Seal, today pledged Great Britain not to rest until Norway again is free.

Addressing the Primrose League, Conservative party political organization, Sir Kingsley said:

"I believe this country regards restoration of the freedom of the Norwegian people as vital to world peace and that we shall not rest until that has been achieved.

"It is perfectly true that we are fighting to defend ourselves in a life-and-death struggle, but we are also waging war against an evil thing, a wicked force, which, if it could, would destroy humanity itself just as it has broken every international rule, sunk merchant ships without warning and sought not only to conquer but to exterminate."

MAY 3 - 1940

No Abandonment There.

Sir Kingsley's reference to the restoration of Norway as vital was interpreted as an indication that the Government was entertaining no thought of abandoning the campaign there.

"The issue is clear and unbridgable," Sir Kingsley said.

"The stake is humanity and civilization itself.

"The German dictator is driving his people into the gulf."

Warns Mussolini.

Brig.-Gen. Henry Page Croft, Conservative member of Parliament, conveyed an indirect warning to Premier Mussolini in another address before the league.

"For every German capital ship, cruiser or destroyer," he said, "the Allies can dispatch two capital ships or cruisers to any other ocean, such as the Mediterranean or the Black Sea, where a possible Ally might be persuaded to enter the conflict on Germany's side."

Asserting that Norway had been betrayed, Sir Henry declared that "had she asked our protection before the event, and also had fought, we could have held all her ports and even today no troops would have entered Oslo."

He estimated that the German death toll in Norwegian waters might reach 25,000.

Conservative Party Group.

In England Primrose Day falls on Ascension Thursday, which is considered the anniversary of the death of Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield.

The primrose was his favorite flower and the Primrose League was founded in his memory by his followers in the Conservative party.

Text of Chamberlain's Speech

LONDON, May 2 (AP).—The condensed text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in Commons today follows:

Three months ago we had made preparations for the dispatch of an Allied force to the assistance of Finland. The possibility of reaching Finland was dependent upon the collaboration of the governments of Norway and Sweden, and, realizing that even their acquiescence in the passage of Allied troops might involve them in an invasion by Germany, we prepared other forces to go to their assistance in that contingency.

It did not escape our attention that in such a case Trondheim and other western ports of Norway, as well as the airdromes at Stavanger, might well be subject to attack by Germany and, accordingly, further forces were made ready to occupy these places.

Cites Two Conditions

Instructions to the commanders of these forces provided that they were only to proceed to the occupation in one of two conditions, either that they were invited to do so by Norwegian government, or that Norwegian neutrality had already been violated.

Germany was able to forestall us by long planned, carefully elaborated treachery against an unsuspecting and almost unarmed people.

We had been aware for many months that the Germans were accumulating transports and troops in Baltic ports and that these troops were constantly being practiced in embarkation and disembarkation.

It was impossible to tell beforehand where the blow would fall.

I cannot today give any details of the fighting which has taken place on both fronts since the landing took place.

It became evident to us some days ago that it would be impossible, owing to the German local air superiority, to land the artillery and tanks which would be necessary to enable our troops to withstand the enemy drive from the south.

"Usual Disregard for Life"

It must be remembered that it has always been possible for the Germans, with their usual disregard for life, even of their own people, to send reinforcements to Norway at a much greater rate than would be open to us with the inadequate landing places we have to rely on.

Accordingly we decided last week that we must abandon any idea of taking Trondheim from the south and that we must therefore withdraw our troops from that area and transfer them elsewhere.

Thanks to the powerful forces which the navy was able to bring to bear and the determination and skillful dispositions of Gen. Paget, in command of the British land forces in the area, backed by the splendid courage and tenacity of the troops, we have now withdrawn the whole of our forces from Andalsnes under the very noses of the German airplanes without, as far as I am aware, losing a single man in this operation.

I am satisfied that the balance of advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces.

Recounts Nazi Losses

German naval losses include two capital ships damaged certainly, three possibly; four cruisers sunk; 11 destroyers sunk and five U-boats sunk. Thirty transports and storeships have been sunk, scuttled or set on fire with a loss of several thousands of lives. A further ten transport or storeships have been struck by our torpedoes and probably sunk.

The losses sustained by the Royal navy in the same period are four destroyers, three submarines, one sloop and five trawlers sunk. Five other warships have been damaged by air attack. One storeship has also been sunk by a U-boat.

The injury to the German navy has been so substantial as to alter the entire balance of naval power and to permit an important redistribution of the main Allied fleets. It has been thought possible to revert to the more normal distribution of ships in the Mediterranean, which has, for some time, been affected by our requirements in the North Sea.

Already in Eastern Basin

A British and French battle fleet with cruisers and auxiliary craft is already in the eastern basin of the Mediterranean on its way to Alexandria.

At this moment I would say to any who may be drawing hasty conclusions from the fact that for the present we have not succeeded in taking Trondheim: It is far too soon to strike the Norwegian balance sheet yet, for the campaign has merely concluded a single phase in which it is safe to say that if we have not achieved our objective neither have the Germans achieved theirs, while their losses are far greater than ours.

But I would take this opportunity of addressing a warning both to this House and to the country.

We have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a sideshow but neither are we going to be trapped into such a dispersal of our forces as would leave us dangerously weak at the vital center.

Concedes Nazi Position

We know that our enemy holds a central position. They have immense forces always mounted ready for attack and the attack can be launched with lightning rapidity in any one of many fields. We know that they are prepared, and would not scruple, to invade Holland or Belgium or both. Or it may be that their savage hordes will be hurled against their innocent neighbors in the southeast of Europe. They might well do more than one of these things in preparation for an attempt at a large scale attack on the western front or even a lightning swoop on this country.

It would be foolish, indeed, to reveal to the enemy our conception of the strategy best calculated to secure their defeat. But this can be said—for it is obvious—that we must not so disperse or tie up our forces as to weaken our freedom of action in vital emergencies which may at any moment arise.

We must seize every chance, as we have done and shall continue to do in Norway, to inflict damage upon the enemy, but we must not allow ourselves to forget the long-term strategy which will win the war.

Certain operations are in progress and we must do nothing which might jeopardize the lives of those engaged in them. I would therefore ask the House to defer comment and questions until we can have the debate next week when I anticipate that that particular difficulty will not arise.

Germans Claim British Rout

Say Nazi Troops Are Closing In Rapidly on Andalsnes as British Flee

MAY 3 - 1940

BERLIN, May 2 (A. P.).—Germany reported today that the British forces in Norway were in a "head-over-heels" withdrawal in the strategic Andalsnes region, and also claimed the capture of 3,500 Norwegian officers and men by the German columns which succeeded, they said, in establishing an unbroken line from Bergen to Oslo in south Norway.

The High Command said that the German vanguards had driven to about twenty-five miles southeast of Andalsnes, the British base, 100 miles south of Trondheim, capturing 300 Norwegian troops in the operation as well as "enormous quantities of British supplies" at Dombas, the railway junction in the interior southeast of Andalsnes and southwest of Trondheim.

DNB, official German news agency, in a report from the front later said that fights around Andalsnes "no longer offer a difficult military problem" and a thrust on that base now appears to be one of the main German objectives.

The agency, which earlied had said the British left Dombas in "headlong flight," asserted the German troops now are breaking the last vestiges of enemy resistance in the region.

Meet Isolated Resistance.

"The opponents' effort to halt the advance of the German troops definitely has failed," DNB said. It asserted that desperate resistance was being encountered in isolated spots.

DNB reported that "enemy troops" which last were about thirty miles northwest of Dombas, near Kleven, were overwhelmed and 300 Norwegians, among the forces covering the British withdrawal, taken prisoner.

In the war on the Allied sea power, the High Command announced the sinking of one British merchant ship, the severe damaging of six others and a hit on the after deck of a cruiser.

In the air war, it said, German warplanes "continued successfully on schedule disturbing and destructive air attacks against enemy landing places." The shooting down of six British planes was also claimed.

Claims Control of South.

The High Command said that the troops which advanced east from Bergen and those from Oslo had joined on the Bergen-Oslo railway line, giving the Germans control of communications over the breadth of South Norway.

DNB said that northeast of Bergen and northwest of Oslo the German forces which advanced from Oslo had reached the Sogne Fjord with 300 officers and 3,200 men, 290 horses, three mountain guns and eighty-five machine guns from the Fourth Norwegian division failing to the Germans.

The capture of 300 additional Norwegians in the Andalsnes region was explained by DNB as a German success after the Norwegian forces there had been ordered to cease resistance but continued to fight.

MAY 3 - 1940

Charges Prior Statement.

The agency reported that the "Norwegian," Gen. Haug, supreme commander of the Norwegian troops in Moren and Romsdal (the Andalsnes region) on the night of April 30 offered to capitulate and ordered his troops to cease resistance. Unconditional surrender was demanded." Opposition again was offered, however, it said, but it was "overwhelmed and 300 Norwegians were taken prisoner."

At the same time DNB issued a correction on yesterday's army communique which had said that fighting was continuing at Trondheim. Dombas, instead of Trondheim, was meant, it said.

Trondheim has been held by the Germans since their invasion on April 9 and was the key objective of Allied troops landed on the west coast of Norway to the south and north.

Andalsnes is one of the two main British landing places in central Norway and is about 100 miles south of the German-held port of Trondheim. The other major British point of debarkation is Namsos, about the same distance north of Trondheim.

It is from Andalspes that the British have been directing operations in the Dombas sector of the strategic Gudbrands Valley, where the Germans claimed a sweeping victory on Tuesday.

Text of Communique.

The text of today's army communique follows:

"Operations in Norway between Oslo and Trondheim have assumed a state of pursuit fights. The British are moving out head over heels in the region around Andalsnes. Enormous quantities of British supplies fell into the hands of German troops at Dombas.

"German vanguards are already forty kilometers (about twenty-five miles) southeast of Andalsnes. There 300 resisting Norwegians who were to cover the British retreat were taken prisoners. Under the impact of these events the Norwegian commander of the Moren and Romsdal regions offered to capitulate and ordered his troops to cease a hopeless resistance.

"The undestroyed railway line between Dombas and Ulsberg (south of Trondheim) is in our possession in its entire length. German troops which advanced from Bergen eastward and from the region north of Olso joined each other on the Bergen-Oslo rail line.

"The number of prisoners and the amount of booty is increasing steadily. No special events at Narvik and Trondheim.

"The air force continued successfully on schedule disturbing and destructive air attacks against enemy landing places. At Namsos enemy batteries also were attacked.

"Additional losses were inflicted on enemy naval forces. One cruiser sustained a hit on the after deck which caused a fire and detonation. One British merchant ship was sunk and six others severely damaged. Six British airplanes were shot down."

"There were no special events on the West Front."

The other communique said:

"A strong British naval unit composed partly of airplane carriers neared the Norwegian west coast May 1. Immediately on reception of this scouting report a squadron of German fighting planes was dispatched against it from their Norwegian base.

"Despite the enemy defense by pursuit planes and concentration of anti-aircraft fire from all the warships, the Germans unerringly carried out their orders and also shot down two enemy planes.

"One airplane carrier received a direct hit by a medium-caliber bomb forward. A large blaze and heavy smoke resulted from this

BERLIN, MAY 2-(AP)-GERMAN TROOPS HOISTED THE NAZI WAR FLAG TODAY AT ANDALSNES, ON NORWAY'S RUGGED LOWER WEST COAST, AND THE REICH HAILED WITH UNDILUTED JOY WHAT IT CALLED THE "WILD FLIGHT" OF THE BRITISH FROM LOWER NORWAY.

A HIGH COMMAND COMMUNIQUE TONIGHT SAID THE GERMAN FLAG WAS HOISTED AT 3 P.M., IN THE LANDING PORT ABANDONED BY THE BRITISH AFTER GERMAN TROOPS HAD TIRELESSLY PURSUIED THEIR ENEMIES TO THE SEA.

GOVERNMENT SPOKESMEN SAID THEY WERE NOT SURPRISED AT THIS ACTION, FORESHADOWED BY THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF BRITISH WITHDRAWAL BY BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN.

MAY 3-1940

CHAMBERLAIN'S STATEMENT CAME AS GERMANS LEARNED FROM THE HIGH COMMAND THAT AN ALLIED "HEAD OVER HEELS" RETREAT HAD DELIVERED VIRTUALLY ALL OF SOUTHERN AND CENTRAL NORWAY INTO NAZI HANDS AND THAT GERMAN BOMBERS HAD RAINED NEW DESTRUCTION ON BRITISH SEA FORCES.

"WE LOOK SOON TO THE COMPLETE ABANDONMENT OF NORWAY BY THE ALLIES," DECLARED ONE AUTHORIZED COMMENTATOR.

TWICE TODAY THE HIGH COMMAND TOLD OF SEVERE AERIAL BLOWS TO BRITISH WARSHIPS IN NORWEGIAN WATERS, INCLUDING TWO AIRCRAFT CARRIERS AND A CRUISER.

IT ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THAT GERMAN WARPLANES, ATTACKING A STRONG BRITISH NAVAL UNIT OFF THE NORWEGIAN WEST COAST WEDNESDAY, HAD STRUCK ONE AIRCRAFT CARRIER SQUARELY AMIDSHIPS, CAUSING HEAVY FIRE AND SMOKE; FOUND THEIR TARGET ALSO ON ANOTHER CARRIER AND SCORED A HIT WITH A MEDIUM-WEIGHT BOMB ON A BRITISH DESTROYER.

THE HIGH COMMAND SAID THE GERMAN FLIERS DISPERSED THE BRITISH WARSHIPS. IT REPORTED TWO BRITISH WARPLANES SHOT DOWN AND SAID ONE GERMAN PLANE HAD FAILED TO RETURN.

ITS EARLIER COMMUNIQUE, ALSO COVERING WEDNESDAY'S OPERATIONS, SAID FIRE AND AN EXPLOSION HAD FOLLOWED A HIT ON A BRITISH CRUISER, A MERCHANT SHIP WAS SUNK, SIX OTHERS WERE SEVERELY DAMAGED AND SIX BRITISH AIRPLANES WERE SHOT DOWN.

"ONCE AGAIN OUR HIGH COMMAND HAS PROVEN ITS COMMUNIQUES ARE ABSOLTELY TRUSTWORTHY," ONE AUTHORIZED COMMENTATOR OBSERVED JUBILANTLY OF THE BRITISH PRIME MINISTER'S DISCLOSURE.

"ONLY MR.CHAMBERLAIN DOES NOT TELL THE FULL STORY. WHEN HE SAYS THE WITHDRAWAL (FROM ANDALSNES) OCCURRED WITHOUT LOSSES WE CAN ONLY LAUGH AND REFER HIM TO TODAY'S GERMAN COMMUNIQUE."

UNDER THE IMPACT OF THESE EVENTS THE NORWEGIAN COMMANDER OF THE MOREN AND ROMSDAL REGIONS OFFERED TO CAPITULATE AND ORDERED HIS TROOPS TO CEASE A HOPELESS RESISTANCE."

ITALY'S PEACE ASSURANCE TO U. S. LIMITED

MAY 3-1940

Ciano Reported to Have Promised No War-like Acts for 10 Days.

ROME COLD TO FLEET MOVES

Hears Phillips Hinted U. S. May Keep Its Ships Out of Mediterranean.

ROME, May 2 (A. P.).—United States Ambassador William Phillips has received only limited assurances of Italy's peaceful intentions from Foreign Minister Count Ciano, reliable political informants reported tonight, as official Italians expressed indifference at Allied precautionary measures in the Mediterranean, including the dispatch of a battle fleet to Egypt.

Mr. Phillips was reassured today by Count Ciano that Italy contemplates no war-like moves within the next ten days, it was reported.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement that the British and French battle fleets are in the eastern Mediterranean were reenforced by extraordinary defense measures in Egypt and the calling of ten classes of reserve officers to the colors by Greece.

Diplomats interpreted these developments as an emphatic warning that Great Britain and her Allies are prepared to combat any Italian attempt to profit from the Allied set-back in Scandinavia.

Hint by U. S. Rumored.

A report was circulated in foreign quarters here that Ambassador Phillips had indicated that the United States might keep her merchant ships out of the Mediterranean in view of this week's British action keeping her commercial shipping out of that sea. This report, however, was without confirmation either in American or Italian circles.

[The State Department in Washington insisted late today that there was no basis for the rumor of a warning to Rome.]

On being interviewed on the latest Allies naval move, one high Fascist commented that "if the British feel their ships are safer at Alexandria out of range of German bombs, it is Britain's affair, not ours."

Britain Seen Preparing.

Similar feelings were expressed over Britain's move Tuesday in routing commercial shipping around Africa instead of permitting it to use the shorter Suez Canal route through the Mediterranean.

MAY 3 — 1940

But in foreign circles, already made anxious by Britain's earlier precautionary move this new action was taken as a further sign of Britain's preparedness for any eventuality.

General preparedness was the order of the day in both southeastern Europe and the Mediterranean.

Egypt Cancels Leaves.

Egypt canceled all army and police leaves and placed all strategic points under armed guard.

Greece called up ten classes of army reserve officers.

Italian and German diplomats in Belgrade and elsewhere told the Balkan States that these Powers intend no aggression against them. This helped alleviate the feeling, especially strong in Yugoslavia, that Italy is planning a thrust, but it was no curb on military preparedness in any of the Balkan countries.

Before Mr. Chamberlain made his speech, tension had eased somewhat following a conference between Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and Ambassador Phillips. Phillips was understood to have received assurance that Yugoslavia would be safe from any Italian action in the near future.

Twice in Two Days.

Most diplomats seemed to accept the Italian assurances, both those made by Count Ciano in his second talk with Mr. Phillips in two days and those given the Ambassador yesterday by Premier Mussolini when Il Duce was said to have told Mr. Phillips that Italy planned no war move for the present.

However, the diplomats remained on the alert. The Yugoslav legation continued to examine carefully all applications for visas to visit that country.

Shortly after Mr. Phillips's visit to Ciano, he conferred with French Ambassador Francois-Poncet, Soviet Charge d'Affaires Leon Helfand and Polish Ambassador-General Boleslaw Wieniwa-Dlugoszowski.

In the face of conflicting rumors, it was widely believed that Italy is delaying any possible action until it sees how the war is developing, particularly in Scandinavia.

Spain Comes to Fore.

Speculation as to what part Italy might play in the future activities of the various Powers in the Mediterranean, already spurred by Mr. Chamberlain's announcement, was given further interest by the recent passage, through Rome of a Spanish air mission to Germany.

[Such a mission arrived in Berlin Wednesday.]

Spain is believed to be tied up closely with the Germans and Italians still, and it has been the Spanish and Italian claim for some time that Britain's stronghold at Gibraltar should be returned to Spain.

The close relations between Italy and Germany were emphasized once more in the announcement today that King Victor Emmanuel and the Queen will open the annual exposition of the German Academy of Fine Arts on May 11.

Meanwhile today the Italian Communications Minister, Giovanni Host-Venturi, informer Premier Mussolini that Italy was within sight of her goal of filling her whole need for foreign coal by overland imports from Germany. He reported that these imports totaled 986,000 tons in April, only slightly under the 1,000,000 tons a month which Italy must buy.

An agreement to increase Italy's land importations of German coal was signed in March after the British blockade had shut off shipmets by sea.

Foreign circles already had been made anxious by Britain's diverting her shipping from the Mediterranean as a precautionary step.

Ambassador Phillips, it was learned, called on Count Ciano at the request of the State Department in Washington, and not, as had previously been reported, at the request of Ciano.

It was assumed the Ambassador's second call arose from his conference with Premier Mussolini yesterday.

Yugoslavia Safe Now

In yesterday's conference Mussolini indicated he had no war intentions for the present, and today Ciano is understood to have let it be understood Yugoslavia is safe from any Italian action in the near future.

These assurances were limited, however.

The slight easing of tension that followed first reports of these conversations was succeeded by the radio announcement of British and French fleet movements in the Mediterranean, and the uneasiness revived.

Tonight, Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, indicated its opinion that Italy's attitude is none of the United States' business.

"Italy already is in the conflict, from the first day," said the paper. "As for quitting its position of waiting, this is an affair which concerns only him (Mussolini). He has the responsibility of guiding and safeguarding the fortunes of the Italian people."

One unconfirmed report circulated in foreign quarters said the American Ambassador had indicated the United States might, like Britain, keep her merchant ships out of the Mediterranean in view of the latest British

"THAT IS WHY WE CAN NOT BE PACIFISTIC AND SO IF THE HOUR COMES WE WILL ALL BE AFOOT UNDER IL DUCE'S ORDERS; HE WILL LEAD US UNFAILINGLY TO VICTORY."

BULLETIN.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 2 (A. P.).—In the face of Anglo-Italian tension, army and police leaves were cancelled today and all strategic points placed under armed guard throughout Egypt, bound by military alliance to Great Britain.

Premier Aly Maher Pasha, after conferring with the British Ambassador, Sir Miles Lampson, and defense chiefs, said that the situation is serious but that there "is no occasion for immediate alarm," and the Defense Minister, Saleh Harb Pasha, said that Egypt is ready for any eventuality.

A bill providing the death penalty for spies and traitors was introduced in Parliament.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (A. P.).—Prince Ascanio Colonna, the Italian Ambassador, conferred for fifteen minutes today with Sumner Welles, after which Mr. Welles, acting as Secretary of State, escorted him to the White House for a talk with President Roosevelt.

The conversations, coming a day after the Rome conference between the American Ambassador, William Phillips, and Premier Mussolini, created a stir of interest in the State Department.

ROME, May 2 (A. P.).—The announcement that a British and French battle fleet was in the Mediterranean today revived tension which earlier had been relieved by Italian disclaimers of any intentions of going to way immediately.

Shortly before Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons concerning the British fleet, United States Ambassador William Phillips was understood to have received from Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano assurances that Yugoslavia was safe from any Italian action in the near future.

Mr. Chamberlain said that the Allied battle fleet was in the eastern basin of the Mediterranean on its way to Alexandria, Egypt.

This was regarded in foreign circles as further indication that Britain is preparing for any eventuality.

Mr. Phillips's visit to Count Ciano was his second in two days. The Ambassador called at the Foreign Ministery yesterday after having seen Premier Mussolini, who, it is said, assured him that Italy did not plan any war move for the present.

Although nothing was made known at the American embassy, it was said in political circles that Germany wanted to keep all the Balkan countries, including Yugoslavia, at peace as sources of supply for the Nazis. It was explained that Italy, as an ally of Germany, would adhere to this policy, which she has followed since the outbreak of the war.

Yugoslav circles were said to feel reassured and Allied circles also showed signs of an easier attitude.

The French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, consulted with Mr. Phillips today after the American envoy had returned from his interview with Count Ciano.

Fear Seems Dispelled.

British diplomats in Rome were reported reliably to have been unaware of the rerouting of British Mediteranean shipping before the announcemet was made in London the night before last. This precautionary measure was believed to have been taken as long ago as last week, when the pro-German tone of the Italian press was at its height.

Premier Mussolini himself was understood to have given Mr. Phillips the clear impression yesterday that Italy would make no war move within the next ten days at least. There was an impression that the future of Italy's non-belligerent policy after that was less certain although it seemed to depend on the turn which events might take elsewhere.

Today's conversation took place at Count Ciano's request, whereas Il Duce had received Mr. Phillips yesterday at the American's request.

In both instances the talks were described as exchanges of information and viewpoints on the general war situation.

Meanwhile today the Italian Communications Minister, Giovanni Host-Venturi, informer Premier Mussolini that Italy was within sight of her goal of filling her whole need for foreign coal by overland imports from Germany. He reported that these imports totaled 986,000 tons in April, only slightly under the 1,000,000 tons a month which Italy must buy.

An agreement to increase Italy's land importations of German coal was signed in March after the British blockade had shut off shipmets by sea.

MAY 3 — 1940

Balkan Capitals Assured.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 2 (A. P.).—Italian and German diplomats today assured the Yugoslav Government that any fears of aggression by these countries against the Balkan States are groundless. Similar assurances were reported delivered to other Balkan capitals.

These assurances seemed to produce a feeling of created security in southeastern Europe, especially in Yugoslavia, where there had been much tension recently over the possibility of an Italian thrust. The full force of Italian and German propaganda organizations was put behind the diplomatic moves to allay the tension. The Italians and Germans laid the Balkans' alarm to the British, and accused Great Britain of trying to divert attention "from reverses in Norway." They cited the suspension of British Mediterranean shipping to back up this charge.

The Balkan countries continued all their military precautions, however, despite the assurances. They felt the situation might change at any moment.

The British Ambassador to Turkey was en route to Sofia, Bulgaria, meanwhile, to confer with the British Minister there.

ice as tension increased over Italy's possible plans in the Mediterranean. The officers were ordered to report for duty on Sunday next.

The call to the colors followed a May Day speech by Premier John Metaxas declaring that Greece is "strong and united in this most formidable of all wars, which will decide the destinies of mankind for many centuries."

Speaking at Piraeus Mr. Metaxas disclosed that the Government was negotiating with "a great friendly Power" which is engaging great numbers of unemployed Greek workmen.

Identified as France.

Although Mr. Metaxas failed to identify the nation, informed spokesmen said it was France who wanted thousands of Greeks to work in French war industries, in the mines and on farms.

[The Allies have both given Greece pledges similar to those made to Rumania that any threat to her independence or territorial integrity would bring Allied assistance. Ever since Premier Mussolini occupied Albania in April, 1939, the Greeks have feared that he might strike on eastward to take Salonika and obtain a foothold on the Ægean.]

French Are Optimistic.

PARIS, May 2 (A. P.).—The French press showed cautious optimism today in its reaction to the talk between Premier Mussolini and Ambassador William Phillips at Rome yesterday.

L'Intransigeant, in quoting Rome reports that Mussolini was believed to have given Mr. Phillips to understand that Italy isn't thinking of abandoning her non-belligerency for the time being, emphasized the last four words.

The situation, L'Intransigeant commented, "is not fully clarified" inasmuch as Il Duce gave only temporary assurances.

Paris-Soir declared that, regardless of the reported assurances, "there remains the possibility of new, brusque decisions."

For Appeasing Italy.

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard declared today that the main purpose of diplomatic effort "must be to limit our enemies." Appealing for better relations with Soviet Russia and Italy, it said: "We cannot expect to dictate an absolute blockade."

"We would be foolish to jeopardize the prospect" of influencing Russia in the Baltic and Balkan areas, the Evening Standard said, "by rigid insistence that no trade agreement can be made with her unless she forbids export of her own manufactures to Germany. We do not seek to enforce such a provision on Holland, Belgium or even the United States."

Britain Orders Ships Home Via Suez From Italy

Word Believed Sent to All in Mediterranean to Avoid Gibraltar in Getting Out

By The Associated Press

GENOA, Italy, May 2.—British merchant ships in Italian ports were ordered tonight to sail with all possible speed for England by way of the Suez Canal, avoiding Gibraltar. It was believed that the urgent instructions were transmitted to all British merchantmen in the Mediterranean.

Ships anchored at the crowded port of Genoa were the first to receive the order. Four British vessels were here at the time. One sailed at once and the others prepared to weigh anchor by morning.

The order, coming on the heels of an order one day earlier that all British lifeline shipping avoid the Mediterranean by rounding the Cape of Good Hope at the southern tip of Africa, reflected increasing international tension. Concurrently, British and French naval forces were concentrating in the eastern Mediterranean.

The Dutch destroyer Van Galen received an order from home to proceed immediately to Dutch territorial waters. It left tonight.

There was no immediate explanation for routing the ships homeward by the much longer way of Suez, a voyage of 15,128 miles to Southampton, instead of through the straits of British-fortified Gibraltar, which would cut the distance to 2,000 miles. Nor was there any apparent change in Italy's professed attitude of indifference toward the British precautions.

The first British ship to sail from here was the 10,640-ton Llandovery Castle, which left with 150 passengers for Durban, South Africa. The other British ships were the Switzerland, 1,291 tons; the Baltara, 3,292 tons, and the Alex, 3,907 tons.

The steamers Switzerland, Baltara and Alex are expected to leave shortly.

The ships, by sailing via the Suez Canal, were taking the long way around, going by way of the Cape of Good Hope instead of via the more direct route past Gibraltar.

Route Is 13,000 Miles Longer

The route the English ships would have to take through the Suez Canal and then around Africa past Cape Town to Southampton, England, is approximately 15,000 miles. The route via Gibraltar to Southampton is about 2,000 miles.

The United States steamer Excalibur left Genoa on her regularly scheduled sailing for New York with twenty-four American refugees from Norway and Denmark among her passengers.

A large group of other Americans fleeing the Scandinavian war zone are expected to embark for New York Sunday aboard the liner Manhattan.

All May Have Gotten Orders

London, May 2 (AP)—British sources tonight said all British ships in the Mediterranean probably have received orders, similar to those to ships at Genoa, to sail for England.

There was no explanation here why the ships reported sailing from Genoa were taking the Suez route unless their destination was an African port as in the case of the Llandovery Castle.

U. S. FEELS ITALY WILL AVOID WAR

Envoy and Welles Call at White House for Talk.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (A. P.).—A governmental belief that Italy was not on the brink of entering the European war was implied at the State Department today after conferences embracing President Roosevelt and Premier Mussolini's Ambassador. Talking to the press after receiving Prince Colonna, the Italian envoy, and visiting the White House with Prince Colonna, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles refused to comment directly on Italy's attitude toward belligerency.

Mr. Welles, however, did assert that the State Department was giving no consideration whatever to the idea of warning Americans in Italy to get out. This was taken by his hearers as indirect confirmation of press dispatches from Rome that Premier Mussolini had assured American Ambassador William Phillips yesterday that Italy was not contemplating going to war.

Repeated warnings to Americans in other European countries have been given whenever the State Department or American embassies and legations abroad had any reason to believe that war might overtake them. While the talks were going on in Washington, there came word from Rome that Yugoslavia had received assurances that it was safe from any Italian action in the near future.

BALKAN STATES REASSURED BY ITALY, GERMANY

Rome And Berlin Diplomats Insist Aggression Fears Are Unfounded

But Nations There Weigh Import Of Several Disturbing Factors

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 2—Reassured by Germany and Italy that Balkan fears of aggression were unfounded, but nevertheless aware that the situation may change at any moment, the capitals of southeastern Europe tonight weighed the import of several disturbing developments.

German diplomats officially assured Balkan officials that there was no "real peril" to themselves except some attempted intervention by the Allies which would provoke German action as in Norway.

Hope To Keep Area Peaceful

The Germans argued that it was to their interest to keep southeastern Europe peaceful and productive.

Italian diplomats said there was no reason to believe that Italy intended in the immediate future to change from her status of a non-belligerent ally of Germany.

While these quieting words bolstered the assurances reported given United States Ambassador William Phillips in Rome, the news that the British and French war fleets were steaming through the eastern Mediterranean was an upsetting influence.

Greece Calls Up Reservists

Greece, aware that an Italian thrust might be aimed from Italian-occupied Albania toward Saloniki on the Ægean, suddenly called up ten classes of reserve army officers for active service.

Greece, like Turkey, has received pledges of British and French assistance.

Along the Danube other countries continued their defense preparations. Among these was Yugoslavia, who a few days ago heard reports of German troop concentrations near her northern frontier, and of Italian precautions at Fiume and Trieste, cities near the Yugoslav border.

The British Ambassador to Turkey traveled to Sofia, Bulgaria, to confer with the British Minister there.

Look To Russia

In Bulgaria and Yugoslavia there were new indications of a tendency to look toward Russia as a balancing influence.

The Bulgarian Parliament ratified a commercial treaty with the Soviet.

Yugoslavia is negotiating a trade treaty with Russia, announced that a new steamship line between Dalmatia, on the Adriatic, and Odessa, in the Black Sea, was being established.

Several Arabian States May Settle Differences

Beirut, Lebanon, May 2 (AP)—A possible settlement of long-standing differences between Arabia's several reigning princes was foreseen today in reports from Amman in Transjordan.

If accomplished, a coalition of Arabian states would unify the whole eastern coastline of the Red Sea, a vital link in the British Empire lifeline through the Mediterranean.

French news agency dispatches asserted that "well-informed sources" in Amman said Emir Talal, Crown Prince of Transjordan, is en route to Sanaa, capital of Yemen, to see the Iman of Yemen.

They will be joined there, these sources said, by King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, who since the World War has been the "strong man" and chief spokesman of the thirty-nine-year-old movement to forge one united Arabian state out of the vast desert spaces.

"Existing circumstances" were quoted by the Amman sources as making necessary a union of the various kingdoms.

BRITAIN EXPANDING AIR RAID DEFENSES

Calls for Quarter-million More Rescue Workers.

LONDON, May 2 (A. P.).—Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, issued an appeal today for 250,000 more Air Raid Precaution volunteers, pointing to the "lesson" of the German bombing plane's disastrous crash at Clacton on Tuesday night in which two civilians were killed and more than 150 injured. The bomber's crew of four men also were killed.

In other ways the nation was being warned anew of the dangers of air raids. Hotels, for instance, distributed fresh cards reminding residents how to reach air raid shelters.

Scotland Yard Puts Curb On Pacifist Propaganda

Moves as Anderson Plans for Guarded, Limited Action

LONDON, MAY 2 (A. P.).—Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, told the House of Commons today that he was considering "guarded, limited provision" to enable restrictive action to be taken against propaganda deliberately designed to impede the national war effort.

Earlier it was learned that Scotland Yard had served summonses on five members and officials of the Peace Pledge Union for the publication of a pacifist poster.

Sir John informed Commons on April 25 that he was considering further defense measures against "fifth column" subversive activities and that he was keeping an eye on the Communist party and the Peace Pledge Union.

BUDAPEST NAZI IRKED

Reported Challenging Cabinet Member to a Duel.

BUDAPEST, May 2 (A. P.).—The Minister of the Interior, Ferenc Keresztes-Fischer, was today reported challenged to a duel by Kalman Hubay, Fuehrer of the Hungarian Nazi party, as the result of an angry Parliamentary debate.

Hubay was said to have sent two deputies to demand "chivalrous satisfaction" from the Minister, whom he blamed for the arrest and prosecution of another Nazi deputy.

The Minister told Hubay on the floor of Parliament late yesterday: "Because of you I feel anxiety for Hungary."

Hubay delivered a bitter attack against the Government of Count Pal Teleki, calling it "the nation's misfortune."

Wooderson Resigns in London

LONDON, May 2 (AP).—Sydney Charles Wooderson, twenty-five-year-old British distance runner, resigned today from the war-time auxiliary fire service following a dispute over his request for additional leave for athletic training. Mr. Wooderson said he was registered for military service and wanted to join the Royal Air Force.

Czech Fortifications Used to Train Nazis

PARIS, May 2 (A. P.).—The news service of the Czech National Committee reported today that Germany, after starting to destroy the "Czech Maginot Line," now is restoring part of the fortifications to train her troops for action on the western front.

The news service said the Czechs' former bastions in the Sudeten Mountains and France's own Maginot Line are of the same type and asserted that in the region of Kraliky, on the former German-Bohemian border, German soldiers are being trained night and day.

By the Munich accord of September 29, 1938, part of the Czech defense system fell into Germany's hands.

Britain Bars Flour for Animals

The remaining 400,000 Norwegians are scattered through some 80,000 square miles of chiefly mountainous, non-productive territory, almost all of which lies north of Trondheim.

PARRY PROMOTED

Attacker of Graf Spee Heads New Zealand Fleet.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, May 2 (A. P.).—Capt. William Parry, commanding the cruiser Achilles, the first warship to engage the German pocket-battleship Admiral Graf Spee in the battle off the coast of Uruguay last December, was appointed commodore of the New Zealand Naval Division today and the first member of the naval board.

BUENOS AIRES, May 2 (A. P.).—The Argentine Minister of the Interior, Diogenes Taboada, was reported today to have accepted in principle the German embassy's suggestion that the more than 150 members of the crew of the scuttled German pocket-battleship Admiral Graf Spee, now quartered in the naval arsenal here, be distributed among German business concerns which have offered to employ them.

The crew members would be placed in groups of from twenty to thirty each in German-owned factories, but Senor Taboada was said to be insisting that no dismissals be made to make room for the Germans.

German "Spy Center" Raided Near Rumanian Royal Palace

Number Of German And Polish Refugees Arrested In Bucharest—Wireless Set Also Found

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Friday, May 3—A German "espionage center" was raided today in the basement of a building in the heart of the Rumanian capital near the Royal Palace.

A wireless sending and receiving outfit was confiscated and many Germans and Polish refugees were arrested.

Following the raid, it was learned unofficially that wholesale expulsion of a great number of Polish refugees would begin today.

Meanwhile it was reported from Sibiu, in Transylvania, that the Rumanian bureau of espionage had arrested and expelled a large number of German army officers.

In Sibiu, which is the capital of an area populated largely by Saxons, there was a great number of arrests. Many Germans accused of sheltering German army officers were expelled from the country.

Officials declined to disclose the number of arrests in the Bucharest raid and declined to state what action would be taken against the prisoners.

The Polish arrests followed recent charges that Polish refugees had been selling to German agents passports which had been obtained by the Poles for passage to France.

NEW YORKERS LAND IN FRENCH PRISON

Two Medical Students Lose Way at Lausanne.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, May 2 (A. P.).—Two American medical students at Lausanne University who went rowing on Sunday on Lake Leman, were tonight the bewildered central figures of an "incident." They sat dejectedly in a French military prison while Swiss officials and the American consular authorities tried to obtain their release.

The students were Paul Lustwig and Antony Aragona, both 25 years old and both New Yorkers.

They arrived at Lausanne ten days ago. On Sunday they went rowing and a storm blew them to the southern shore.

After a rest on the beach, they blundered through the underbrush until French bayonets halted them. They had landed on a well-known "spy trail" by which German agents attempt to reach France and they had no identification.

According to the United States Consulate in Geneva, a military magistrate sentenced them to a month in prison and 100 francs ($1.90) fine for trying to enter France illegally. The consulate officials said they "hoped" the French would release the pair "within a few days."

The American Consul at Lyon took the matter up with the French police Prefecture at Thonon-les-Bains, where the youths are held, but said it might take a week to get them out of jail.

Man Found In Station With 'Offensive Weapon' As Royalty Arrives

London, Friday, May 3 (AP)—It was disclosed early today that a man was arrested last night at Euston railway station and charged with possessing an "offensive weapon" shortly before King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrived from Lancashire.

The identity of the prisoner was not disclosed but he was scheduled to appear at Clerkenwell Police Court today.

The return of the King and Queen from a tour of arms factories in Lancashire was otherwise uneventful. The customary crowd had assembled to greet them at the station.

WEDDELL IN MADRID

Envoy Won't Sail for U. S. Till Next Tuesday.

MADRID, May 2 (A. P.).—The American Ambassador to Spain, Alexander Weddell, announced today that he and Mrs. Weddell would fly to Lisbon, Portugal, and sail from there on Tuesday next on the Italian liner Roma for a month's leave in the United States.

The Ambassador, explaining that he had not been called home to report, said he had requested the leave because he was anxious "get back home, get the feel of things and find out what the State Department is thinking."

He expects to return to Madrid by the end of June.

Commander Ben H. Wyatt, naval attache for air, will fly the Ambassador and his wife to Lisbon.

Ambassador Weddell had been reported aboard the liner Rex when she sailed from Genoa, Italy, on Tuesday. Apparently he changed his bookings.

Pius Scores Thirst for Power

Pope Says Covetousness Has Brought On War Now Raging in Europe.

VATICAN CITY, May 2 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII blamed "excessive human covetousness and thirst for power" for the war raging in Europe in speaking briefly at St. Peter's today at the canonization of two saints.

Men, blinded by these passions, have "repudiated the laws of God" in loosing the horrors of war, he said.

In approving the canonization of the two saints, the Pope appealed to them to intercede with God on behalf of mankind for the restoration of unity, concord and "the counsels of peace."

First Canonized by Pius XII.

Those added to the canon of saints were a French nun and a humble Italian girl, the first persons to be canonized by the present Pope.

The sainted women were Marie Euphrasia Pelletier, who founded the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, and Gemma Galgani, who was noted for her stigmata, or marks corresponding to the wounds of Christ.

Today's ceremonies will be followed by a series of beatifications, preliminary steps toward canonization, during the next two months. Among five persons to be declared blessed will be another French nun, Mother Philippine Rose Duchesne, who introduced the Society of the Sacred Heart in the United States and who died at St. Charles, Mo. Her beatification is scheduled for May 12.

Trumpets Sound Pope's Entry.

The great church of St. Peter's sparkled with the brilliance of thousands of electric candles for today's ceremony. Twelve thousand lights glistened in 600 chandeliers especially hung in the naves, while other thousands shone from 170 immense candelabra.

Thousands of nuns, priests and laymen crowded the basilica to see the Pope enter on the Sedia Gestatoris, or portable throne. Six silver trumpets heralded the approach of the pontifical procession, in which marched Cardinals, Bishops and uniformed officers of the Papal Guards.

Seated on a throne near the central altar, the Pope was approached by a Cardinal and two other priests who thrice petitioned him to declare the blessed women saints.

On the third request, the Pope arose, put on this three-tiered crown and pronounced in Latin the words that created St. Marie Euphrasia and St. Gemma.

After mass the Pope bestowed his apostolic blessing on the congregation, the trumpets sounded and he was borne to his apartments.

Marie Euphrasia Pelletier was born in 1796 at Noirmoutier, France, and at the age of 18 years joined the order of Our Lady of the Charity of the Refuge. Some years later she was made superior of the house at Tours, then founded a chapter at Angers and petitioned the Pope to make it the motherhouse of the whole order.

She was accused of disobedience, ambition and innovations, and, although upheld by the Pope, was forced to found a new order, the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, which spread throughout the world and was introduced in the United States in 1843. She died in 1868.

Gemma Galgani, the daughter of a pharmacist, was born in Lucca, Italy, in 1878, and was reported to have had heavenly visions as a child. Her biographers relate that the stigmata appeared in her side, hands and forehead in 1899. She died in 1903 and has been known since then as the Virgin of Lucca.

Both women were beatified by Pope Pius XI in 1933 on the basis of healings attributed to their intercession.

Hitler's Secret War Chest

Nazis Said to Have Grabbed $200,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP).—Germany's secret war chest, fortified by acquisition of convertible assets in Denmark and Norway, now totals more than $200,000,000, American economic experts estimate.

The Federal Reserve Bank's figures credit the Third Reich with only $29,000,000 in gold, but that total has not varied since December, 1937, and officials do not doubt the existence of unreported reserves.

The amount of gold and convertible assets Germany may have gained in Denmark and Norway is not known. At the time of Hitler's thrust into Scandinavia, Norway reported $51,000,000 in gold reserves, and Denmark had $53,000,000.

Gold Shipped Out

Financial authorities pointed out, however, that both nations reputedly had sent large consignments of gold to London prior to the invasion. Norway also shipped $33,000,000 to the U. S. during January and February.

President Roosevelt's executive order, meanwhile, has frozen Danish and Norwegian assets in this country, preventing their transfer to Copenhagen or Oslo where they might fall into German hands.

A large part of Germany's gold resources is believed to have been seized in Austria, which had $46,000,000 in gold reserves, and Czecho-Slovakia, which reported $67,000,000.

Poles Cheated Nazis

The Poles spirited their gold stores out of the country in time to cheat the conquerors.

Although Germany has shipped only $1,318 in gold to the U. S. since the war started, the Reich's commercial commitments are reported to have been met promptly.

Students here see poor prospects of Germany's increasing her gold supply. The country's annual gold production amounts to only $650,000, counting in $350,000 from Czecho-Slovakia. German trade is virtually on a barter basis.

Balkan Reserves

Involvement of Balkan nations would bring additional gold reserves into the picture. Rumania has $152,000,000, Hungary $24,000,000, Yugoslavia $60,000,000, Bulgaria $24,000,000 and Greece $28,000,000. Turkey's gold stores are estimated at $56,000,000.

If Sweden's neutral status should be altered, her gold reserves of $258,000,000 might be jeopardized. Since the war's start, however, Sweden has shipped $170,000,000 in gold to the U. S.

Chamber Bids U.S. to Rearm On Cash Basis

Speeding Up of Defense Program Advocated on Pay-as-You-Go Policy

Isolationist Ideas Decried by Douglas

National Business Forum Is Told Country Cannot Crawl in Cyclone Cellar

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Business leaders from cities throughout the country heard Lewis W. Douglas decry a policy of "isolation" for the United States tonight a short time after they had called upon the government to expedite further armament on a "pay-as-we-go" basis.

Mr. Douglas, the Roosevelt administration's first Budget Director and now president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, asserted that America's national interests were deeply involved in the outcome of the European war and that it would be impossible to reconstruct a peaceful world if England and France were defeated.

In a broadcast address at a dinner ending the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States he added:

"There are some who may hold the opinion that we can isolate ourselves from world events, crawl into our economic and political cyclone cellar, draw in the trap door after us, and thus preserve the essential elements of the American experiment.

Fears Central Planning

"But this course means ultimately the creation of a government here vested with sufficiently broad and arbitrary powers to restrict our production to our internal demands, to plan our consumption so that it meets our production and thus to distribute whatever products we may cultivate or manufacture—not by the measure of the individual's capacity—but by the standards of a central planning authority, dispensing favors here, subsidizing efforts there, directing the production of synthetic articles which can be produced and obtained elsewhere in the world for less, expending an ever-increasing part of our production and our patrimony in a necessarily expanding system of national defense.

"To retreat to the cyclone cellar here means, ultimately, to establish a totalitarian state at home."

Mr. Douglas, who quit the New Deal in disagreement with its fiscal policies, spared neither the government nor business in placing responsibility for domestic ills. He called upon business men to demonstrate that they could support the national interest at the expense "of our pocketbooks, if need be." And, on the other hand, he said that continuation of the Administration's spending policies would lead ultimately to "economic and social disintegration."

The address of the former Congressman and government official followed a business session at which the chamber, without debate, adopted a twenty-four-point program proposed by its resolutions committee and elected James S. Kemper, of Chicago, president of the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Company, as its president for the coming year.

Opposes War Entry

In calling for increased armaments the organization said that Congress should reaffirm "its determination to keep the United States out of war, unless our nation is endangered."

Commending steps thus far taken to strengthen the Army, Navy and Air Force, the resolution said it was imperative to speed up preparations so that "any potential aggressor, however powerful and ambitious, will be fearful to attack us."

"We should carry our national defense on a pay-as-we-go basis," the resolution added. "We believe that substantial economies can be effected in the operations of the government and that such economies should be made at once in the interest of national safety. With these economies we believe that any additional burden necessary for our safety will be assumed readily by business men and all other citizens."

There was no reference in the resolution to the question whether loans should be granted to the French and English governments in the event that their assets in the United States were exhausted before the end of the European war.

Although some Western members had advocated opposition to such loans, the committee was represented reliably as feeling that any stand on the issue would be premature, because the Allied assets here were estimated to be sufficient for from one to two years.

Resolutions Define Policy

Other resolutions included declarations that:

Prolongation of the government's "easy money" policy "threatens the whole system of private savings and private enterprise."

Congress should stimulate the free flow of capital into investments by removing "deterrents" from the laws regulating issuance of private securities.

The wage-hour act should be repealed, and the labor relations act fundamentally amended this session of Congress.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority should remain independent, contrary to President Roosevelt's order putting it in the Commerce Department.

Reduced expenditures, not additional taxation, must be relied upon to end annual Federal deficits, and "the internal revenue act should be revised to encourage maximum productive activity and a long-term revenue structure should be developed."

Business men should co-operate in an expedited armament program by granting vacation leave with pay to men in the National Guard while they are in training.

Congress should make it a criminal offense to advocate violent overthrow of established government or to advocate physical injury to Federal officials.

The Department of State should continue to take prompt diplomatic action against discriminations and interferences prejudicial to American rights abroad.

The Maritime Commission in its construction program "should work most closely with private operators" and limit construction to vessels which they can employ.

Guard Posted For Sponsor of Hitler Reward

Patrolman Put at Door of Dr. Church in Pittsburgh; Nazi Embassy Aid Smiles

PITTSBURGH, May 2 (AP).—A plainclothes patrolman was stationed today at the home of Dr. Samuel Harden Church, eighty-two-year-old president of Carnegie Institute, who offered a $1,000,000 reward on behalf of unnamed Pittsburgh residents for the "capture" of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and his delivery, unharmed, to Geneva, Switzerland.

Police Inspector Edward J. Brophy said the guard was established at the request of Dr. Church's son, who expressed fear for his father's safety because he lived alone. Inspector Brophy said the son asserted, however, there had been no threats against his father.

Dr. Church, who refused to discuss the reward offer, which he announced April 30, said: "Stationing of the policeman there was a kindness I didn't know about."

Meanwhile, the Rev. A. W. Forney, head of the Pittsburgh Holy Name Society, proposed if the $1,000,000 remained unclaimed upon expiration of the reward offer May 31 that "Dr. Church's group donate the money to the relief of refugees from Germany—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish."

He added: "In return for this act of charity, I will undertake to find at least 1,000,000 Americans—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish—who during the month of June will spend at least one hour extra in prayer to God . . . for peace and for the conversion of the whole world, including Adolf Hitler and myself, to the ways of justice and mercy and love."

Nazi Aid Laughs It Off

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2 (AP).—The offer of $1,000,000 for the capture of Adolf Hitler drew the smiling comment from the first secretary of the German embassay at Washington today that "I notice the offer is only good for the month of May."

It was the only statement that Wilhelm Tannenberg, arriving on the liner Matsonia from Hawaii, would make regarding the international situation.

(BOX) WHO HAS WHAT IN NORWAY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOW THAT THE BRITISH HAVE ABANDONED THEIR CAMPAIGN FROM SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM, GERMANY HAS, EXCEPT FOR SCATTERED NORWEGIAN RESISTANCE:

ALL OF THE WIDE BOTTOM OF THE COUNTRY, BELOW A LINE STRETCHING FROM TRONDHEIM ON THE WEST COAST TO SWEDEN; SIX SEVENTHS OF THE POPULATION OF ABOUT THREE MILLION; NEARLY HALF THE COUNTRY'S TOTAL AREA OF 125,000 SQUARE MILES; NEARLY ALL INDUSTRIAL CENTERS AND A NETWORK OF RAILWAY LINES RUNNING WEST AND NORTH FROM OSLO, TO TRONDHEIM, BERGEN, AND ANDALSNES.

BRITAIN IS ENTRENCHED NORTH OF TRONDHEIM IN THE NAMSOS AREA, REINFORCED BY FRENCH TROOPS, AND IS BESIEGING NARVIK, IRON ORE PORT IN THE ARCTIC, FROM LAND AND SEA, CUTTING OFF SWEDISH ORE SHIPMENTS TO THIS PORT WHICH NORMALLY GO TO GERMANY.

LONDON, MAY 2-(AP)-NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S OPPOSITION AND MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT CRITICAL OF THE GOVERNMENT'S CONDUCT OF THE WAR IN NORWAY WILL MAKE NEXT TUESDAY'S SESSION A STORMY ONE WHEN THE PRIME MINISTER MAKES HIS FULL REPORT, POLITICAL SOURCES PREDICTED TONIGHT.

PENDING THE FULL REPORT, HOWEVER, THE CRITICAL MEMBERS WITHHELD THEIR FIRE.

DEMANDS FOR GOVERNMENT CHANGES TO GET A SMALLER WAR CABINET ARE CONSIDERED LIKELY TO BE REVIVED, ALTHOUGH CHAMBERLAIN REJECTED SUCH A PROPOSAL ONLY YESTERDAY.

SIR ARCHIBALD SINCLAIR, THE LIBERAL LEADER WHO ALREADY HAS SCORED DIRECTION OF THE NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN, AND OTHER OPPOSITION AND CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS ARE EXPECTED TO ATTACK IN FULL FORCE UNLESS THE REPORT DISCLOSES SOME BRIGHTER SIDE TO THE BRITISH ABANDONMENT OF SOUTHERN NORWAY.

THE AVERAGE LONDONER TOOK THIS NEWS SOLEMNLY.

"IT'S PRETTY BAD," WAS A FREQUENT REMARK, "BUT WAIT AND SEE--WE HAVEN'T EVEN STARTED YET."

THE MORNING PRESS RECEIVED CHAMBERLAIN'S STATEMENT IN MUCH THE SAME VEIN.

THE INFLUENTIAL YORKSHIRE POST SAID "BRITAIN MUST ACKNOWLEDGE A FAILURE IN SOUTH NORWAY, BUT AN EXCUSABLE FAILURE AND NOT AN IRREPARABLE ONE."

THE LONDON DAILY TELEGRAPH SAID "NATIONAL EXPERIENCE OF MANY A LONG WAR HAS TAUGHT US TO RESPOND TO CHECKS TO OUR ARMS BY RENEWED AND INTENSIFIED EFFORT."

THE DAILY MAIL SAID: ANOTHER NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN IS DUE TO OPEN NEXT WEEK. IT WILL BE WAGED AGAINST THE WAR CABINET IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS X X X CHAMBERLAIN HIMSELF WILL BE UNDER FIRE.

"MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE WILL WANT TO KNOW WHY EIGHT DAYS AFTER THE INVASION HAD BEGUN, INSTEAD OF STRESSING THE HAZARDS OF THE ALLIED EXPEDITION, HE SAID GERMANY HAD MADE NO BIGGER BLUNDER."

THE TIMES OF LONDON SAID PARLIAMENT WOULD "CERTAINLY WISH TO INQUIRE MORE NARROWLY INTO THE TIMETABLE OF OUR OPERATIONS."

THE TIMES SPOKE OF PRECAUTIONS TO PRESERVE SECRECY OF THE ALLIED PLANS AND COMPLAINED:

"IT MAY, AS MR. CHAMBERLAIN SAID, HAVE BEEN MERE COINCIDENCE THAT THE GERMAN INVASION WAS SO TIMED AS TO FOLLOW A FEW HOURS AFTER OUR MINE-LAYING IN NORWEGIAN WATERS; BUT THAT CAN HARDLY BE AN EXPLANATION OF THE FACT THAT THE GERMAN WIRELESS ANNOUNCED TWO DAYS AGO OUR INTENTIONS TO LEAVE ANDALSNES."

MAY 3 1940

THE LABORITE DAILY HERALD, SHARPLY CRITICIZING CHAMBERLAIN, COMMENTED THAT "IF THE PUBLIC HAS BEEN SHOCKED BY THE NEWS IT HAS BEEN BEWILDERED BY THE PRIME MINISTER'S EXPLANATION OF THE NEWS."

THE NEWSPAPER SAID THAT FOLLOWING CHAMBERLAIN'S STATEMENT "SOME 15 GOVERNMENT BACK BENCHERS WHO FOR SOME TIME HAVE BEEN CRITICAL OF CABINET POLICY HELD A PRIVATE MEETING" AT WHICH THE QUESTION OF THE CABINET'S RESIGNATION WAS RAISED.

IT SAID THOSE ATTENDING INCLUDED FORMER WAR SECRETARY LESLIE HORE-BELISHA, LIEUT.COL.L.C.M.S.AMERY, FORMER FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, AND CAPT.HAROLD MACMILLAN.

THE DAILY HERALD ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT "SWEEPING CHANGES IN THE GOVERNMENT--OR ITS RESIGNATION" ARE UNLIKELY.

LONDON, MAY 2-(AP)-A CRITICAL HOUSE OF COMMONS DEMANDED AN ACCOUNTING TODAY FROM PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN ON GREAT BRITAIN'S WAR EFFORTS AND AN EXPLANATION OF THE APPARENT FAILURE OF THE FIGHTING SERVICES TO HALT THE GERMAN MARCH THROUGH SOUTHERN NORWAY.

IN PARLIAMENTARY CIRCLES IT WAS SAID THAT A GROWING UNEASINESS AMONG MEMBERS, INCLUDING SOME MEMBERS OF THE CONSERVATIVE PARTY, OVER REPORTS OF "MUDDLING" IN THE NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN WOULD COMPEL CHAMBERLAIN TO MAKE SOME EXPLANATION IN A STATEMENT HE HAS PROMISED THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THIS AFTERNOON. (EXPECTED ABOUT 9:30 A.M., E.S.T.)

AN UNDERCURRENT OF CRITICISM OF THE GOVERNMENT'S CONDUCT OF THE WAR ALREADY HAD FLARED INTO THE OPEN IN SHARPLY-WORDED SPEECHES BY THE OPPOSITION LIBERAL LEADER, SIR ARCHIBALD SINCLAIR, AND THE SECRETARY OF THE IMPORTANT TRANSPORT WORKERS UNION, ERNEST BEVIN.

CHAMBERLAIN REVIEWED THE SITUATION LAST NIGHT WITH SIR ARCHIBALD AND LABORITE LEADERS CLEMENT R.ATTLEE AND ARTHUR GREENWOOD. THE PRIME MINISTER WAS REPORTED TO HAVE TAKEN THE LIBERAL LEADER TO TASK IN A HEATED TALK FOR HIS PERSONAL ATTACK AND CRITICISMS OF THE CONDUCT OF THE NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN.

SPEAKING IN GLASGOW, SIR ARCHIBALD ON TUESDAY NIGHT ACCUSED THE GOVERNMENT OF "MUDDLING" IN NORWAY AND SAID "WE SHALL PAY FOR THE FEEBLENESS OF OUR POLITICAL DIRECTION BY PROLONGATION OF THE WAR."

BEVIN JOINED THE ATTACK ON THE GOVERNMENT IN A MAY DAY ADDRESS, DECLARING THAT HE AND OTHERS IN TOUCH WITH GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS "ARE INTENSELY DISSATISFIED WITH THE KIND OF OBSTRUCTION, THE LACK OF DRIVE, THE ABSENCE OF IMAGINATION AND THE KIND OF COMPLACENCY WHICH EXISTS."

"THE BRITISH WORKING CLASS WANT THIS WAR WON," HE SAID. "THEY KNOW WHAT IS AT STAKE. IT IS THEIR LIBERTY. BUT THEY WANT A GOVERNMENT THAT IS GOING TO PLACE THE NATION BEFORE ITS FRIENDS OR PRIVATE INTERESTS."

THE DAILY MAIL DESCRIBED AS PREMATURE "REPORTS AROUND WESTMINSTER ABOUT DRASTIC GOVERNMENT CHANGES," BUT ADDED THAT "DRASTIC CHANGES MAY COME LATER." THE USUALLY WELL-INFORMED BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION HAD SAID THAT THERE WAS MUCH TALK OF STRENGTHENING THE CHAMBERLAIN GOVERNMENT ANEW AS A RESULT OF "DIFFERENT VIEWS AS TO RECENT WAR POLICY."

THE MAIL SAID THAT CHAMBERLAIN MIGHT ANNOUNCE "A HIGHLY IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT IN STRATEGY WHICH HAS BEEN DECIDED UPON AS A RESULT OF LAST SATURDAY'S MEETING OF THE SUPREME WAR COUNCIL."

MEANWHILE BORDER REPORTS INDICATED A SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT IN THE ALLIED POSITION IN NORWAY. THE NORWEGIAN TELEGRAPH AGENCY REPORTED THAT THE GERMANS, FOLLOWING WITHDRAWAL FROM RORos YESTERDAY, HAD RETREATED FROM TYNSET TOWARDS KVIKNE ON THE MOUNTAIN ROAD TO ULSBERG.

A WAR OFFICE COMMUNIQUE LAST NIGHT DESCRIBED OPERATIONS IN THE AREA ABOUT THE NORTHERN IRON ORE PORT OF NARVIK AS "CONTINUING SATISFACTORILY." THE COMMUNIQUE SAID THAT ALLIED TROOPS WITHDREW "TO PREPARED POSITIONS" IN THE AREA ABOUT THE DOMBAS RAILWAY JUNCTION, WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE REPORTED CAPTURING.

SWEDISH BORDER REPORTS DESCRIBED DOMBAS AS A "NO MAN'S LAND" WITH BRITISH TROOPS PUTTING UP A STOUT FIGHT SOUTH OF THE TOWN. THE WAR OFFICE COMMUNIQUE DID NOT GIVE THE LOCATION OF THE POSITIONS

TO WHICH IT SAID THE ALLIED FORCES HAD WITHDRAWN.

OPERATIONS ON THE VITAL STEINKJER FRONT NORTH OF TRONDHEIM APPEARED TO HAVE SLOWED DOWN, BUT SWEDISH REPORTS INDICATED THAT BOTH SIDES WERE MANEUVERING FOR DECISIVE FIGHTING IN THAT SECTOR.

UNCONFIRMED REPORTS SAID THAT BRITISH WARSHIPS CONTINUED TO BOMBARD GERMAN-HELD FORTS IN TRONDHEIM FJORD.

IN NAVAL WARFARE THE ADMIRALTY DISCLOSED THE LOSS OF THE 710-TON MINESWEEPER DUNOON WHICH STRUCK A MINE OFF THE EAST COAST. TWENTY-FOUR MEN OF THE CREW AND THREE OFFICERS WERE LISTED AS MISSING AND IT WAS BELIEVED THAT MOST OF THEM WERE KILLED OUTRIGHT BY THE EXPLOSION. ANOTHER WAR VESSEL PICKED UP 40 SURVIVORS.

TWO BRITISH SUBMARINES RETURNED TO THEIR BASES SAFELY, IT WAS ANNOUNCED, FOLLOWING HAZARDOUS PATROL WORK IN NORWEGIAN WATERS. ONE OF THEM, THE SEA WOLF, WAS CREDITED WITH SINKING OF TWO 4,000-TON GERMAN TRANSPORTS.

THE EVENING NEWS EDITORIALLY APPLAUDED BEVIN'S MAY DAY ADDRESS, SAYING:

"COMPLACENCY IS STILL THE MOST POWERFUL CAPTAIN IN THE STATE. UNTIL THAT MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL QUISLINGS IS EXPELLED FROM HIS PLACE IN THE CABINET AND IN GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, HE WILL CONTINUE TO LEAD US THROUGH A FOOL'S PARADISE TOWARDS DISASTER."

(THE REFERENCE TO "QUISLINGS" WAS TO MAJOR VIDKUN QUISLING, PRO-NAZI NORWEGIAN WHO PROCLAIMED A REGIME FAVORING GERMANY IN OSLO WHEN THE GERMAN INVASION OF NORWAY STARTED.)

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S EVENING STANDARD SAID THE MAIN PURPOSE OF DIPLOMATIC EFFORT "MUST BE TO LIMIT OUR ENEMIES." APPEALING FOR BETTER RELATIONS WITH SOVIET RUSSIA AND ITALY, IT SAID "WE CANNOT EXPECT TO DICTATE AN ABSOLUTE BLOCKADE."

"WE WOULD BE FOOLISH TO JEOPARDIZE THE PROSPECT" OF INFLUENCING RUSSIA IN THE BALTIC AND BALKAN AREAS, THE EVENING STANDARD SAID, "BY RIGID INSISTENCE THAT NO TRADE AGREEMENT CAN BE MADE WITH HER UNLESS SHE FORBIDS EXPORT OF HER OWN MANUFACTURES TO GERMANY. WE DO NOT SEEK TO ENFORCE SUCH A PROVISION ON HOLLAND, BELGIUM OR EVEN THE UNITED STATES."

LONDON, MAY 2 (AP).-THE "DETERMINATION AND SKILFUL DISPOSITIONS" OF MAJOR-GENERAL BERNARD PAGET BROUGHT PRAISE TODAY FROM PRIME MINISTER NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN AS ONE OF THE CHIEF FACTOR IN THE SUCCESSFUL WITHDRAWAL OF BRITISH TROOPS FROM ANDALSNES.

THE MAN WHO DIRECTED THIS OPERATION IS CALLED "TOLLY" BY HIS TROOPS. HIS MIDDLE NAME ACTUALLY IS TOLVER, BUT TOLLY HAPPENS TO BE THE NAME OF A POPULAR ENGLISH ALE.

MOST RECENTLY COMMANDANT OF THE STAFF COLLEGE AT CAMBERLEY, THE CRADLE OF BRITAIN'S MILITARY LEADERS, GEN. PAGET SERVED THROUGH THE WORLD WAR AND RETURNED WITH THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER, THE MILITARY CROSS AND THE ITALIAN SILVER MEDAL FOR MILITARY VALOUR.

STOCKHOLM, MAY 3-(FRIDAY)-(AP)-WITH ALLIED RESISTANCE IN SOUTHERN NORWAY COMPLETELY WITHDRAWN, GERMAN TROOPS FROM THE OSLO DISTRICT TODAY BEGAN FLOODING NORTHWARD TOWARDS TRONDHEIM AND A POSSIBLE BATTLE WITH ALLIED FORCES NORTH OF THAT BIG PORT.

R122AED

MAY 3 1940

THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED ALREADY ADVANCING QUICKLY TO RECAPTURE SUCH POINTS AS RORDS AND TYNSET IN THE GLOMMA RIVER VALLEY, WHICH THEY ABANDONED TUESDAY.

HOW MUCH RESISTANCE SCATTERED NORWEGIAN UNITS WERE OFFERING COULD NOT BE ASCERTAINED, BUT IT WAS BELIEVED THAT FORMAL RESISTANCE SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM WAS PRACTICALLY FINISHED.

FULL ATTENTION, ETC., PICKING UP SECOND GRAPH.

(DISREGARD NYC OUT SLUG)

R126AED

FULL ATTENTION NOW IS FOCUSSED ON THE BRITISH-HELD NAMSOS FRONT, 100 MILES ABOVE TRONDHEIM.

THE IMPRESSION PREVAILS THAT THE ALLIES WILL MAKE A DETERMINED EFFORT TO HOLD THIS AREA FOR THE TIME BEING AT LEAST, WITH THE POSSIBILITY OF LARGE SCALE BATTLES IN THE NEAR FUTURE--UNLESS THE GERMANS CONTENT THEMSELVES WITH HOLDING THEIR PRESENT LINE ACROSS NORWAY FROM TRONDHEIM TO SWEDEN.

CONSIDERABLE ACTIVITY ALONG THE NAMSOS FRONT WAS REPORTED TONIGHT BY A SWEDISH CORRESPONDENT IN A TELEPHONE CALL FROM GRONG, 25 MILES EAST OF NAMSOS, BUT HE SAID HE WAS UNABLE TO DETERMINE WHETHER THE ALLIES WERE PLANNING A RETREAT OR AN OFFENSIVE THERE.

SUBSEQUENT EFFORTS TO CONTACT GRONG FAILED, THE STOCKHOLM EXCHANGE EXPLAINING THAT CALLS COULD NOT BE PUT THROUGH "FOR UNEXPLAINED REASONS."

A NORWEGIAN LEGATION SPOKESMAN HERE DECLARED NORWEGIAN TROOPS IN SOUTHERN AND CENTRAL NORWAY "ARE DETERMINED NEVER TO RETREAT" REGARDLESS OF THE ALLIED WITHDRAWAL.

THE NORWEGIANS WERE SAID TO BE ENTRENCHED SOUTH OF RORDS, BETWEEN TYNSET AND TOLGA, AND HOLDING BACK GERMAN PATROLS ATTEMPTING TO ADVANCE NORTHWARD.

"THE MORALE OF OUR TROOPS IS HIGH," SAID THE SPOKESMAN.

SWEDEN HEARD, ETC., PICKING UP FOURTH GRAPH PVS.

R813PED

SWEDEN HEARD THE NEWS OF THE ALLIED WITHDRAWAL WITH NATURAL SYMPATHY FOR THE NEIGHBORING NORDIC NATION BUT WITH THE FEELING THAT THE THREAT OF THE WAR SPREADING TO THIS COUNTRY HAS EASED SOMEWHAT.

THE CONFUSING MILITARY SITUATION OF THE PAST FEW DAYS IN NORWAY IS CLARIFIED NOW.

GERMAN WITHDRAWALS FROM ROROS, SOME 70 MILES SOUTHEAST OF TRONDHEIM, AND FROM TYNSET, 35 MILES FURTHER SOUTH, WERE REGARDED AS MERE TACTICAL MANEUVERS.

THE GERMANS, WITH THE BRITISH PULLING OUT OF THE GUDBRAND VALLEY, FURTHER TO THE WEST, SIMPLY ABANDONED THEIR EFFORT TO GET THROUGH THE MORE DIFFICULT EASTERLY GLOMMA RIVER VALLEY ROAD.

IN SHORT, THE GERMANS FINDING SUCCESS ON THE LEFT FLANK OF THE CONE SHAPED BATTLE AREA SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM, TEMPORARILY ABANDONED THEIR EFFORTS TO DRIVE THROUGH WITH THE RIGHT FLANK OPERATION.

AS MATTERS STAND, THE NAZIS ARE IN POSSESSION OF ALL OF NORWAY'S MAIN CITIES AND INDUSTRIAL CENTERS, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE MAMDALLEN SECTOR NORTH OF TRONDHEIM, WHERE THE ALLIES ARE ENTRENCHED. AT THE PORT OF NARVIK IN THE FAR NORTH A SMALL GARRISON OF GERMANS STILL ARE HOLDING OUT AGAINST THE ALLIED SIEGE.

IT WAS NOT AN EASY VICTORY FOR THE GERMANS. ALL INDICATIONS POINT TO THE FACT THAT THEY ENCOUNTERED MORE RESISTANCE THAN THEY ANTICIPATED, BUT IT IS A SIGNIFICANT VICTORY NEVERTHELESS.

ONLY A TREMENDOUS ALLIED CAMPAIGN FROM THE LIMITED SECTION OF NORWAY REMAINING AVAILABLE TO THEM CAN DISLODGE THE GERMAN HOLD--AND THERE EVEN IS SPECULATION HERE THAT THE ALLIES MAY NOW WITHDRAW FROM THE NAMSOS SECTOR.

THE DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS LEAVE SWEDEN, LONE SCANDINAVIAN NEUTRAL, EXPOSED TO THE UNHAMPERED INFLUENCE OF GERMANY IN AS MUCH AS SWEDISH TRADE TO THE WEST IS BLOCKED.

REGARDING FUTURE MILITARY OPERATIONS IN NORWAY, IT IS ABOVE ALL A QUESTION OF HOW FAR THE ALLIES CARRY OUT CHAMBERLAIN'S ANNOUNCED PLANS OF CONCENTRATING ALLIED FORCES "ELSEWHERE."

IT IS ASSUMED HERE THAT THE BRITISH SHOULD BE ABLE TO CAPTURE NARVIK IN A FEW DAYS, SINCE IT IS UNLIKELY THE GERMANS HAVE ANY READY MEANS OF RELIEVING THE SMALL FORCE HOLDING THE STRATEGIC IRON ORE PORT.

THE ONLY REPORTS OF ACTIVITY TODAY IN THE NAMSOS SECTOR TOLD OF PATROL SKIRMISHES AND CONTINUED GERMAN AIR ATTACKS.

TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS BETWEEN THAT SECTOR AND STOCKHOLM COULD NOT BE COMPLETED TONIGHT.

IT WAS POINTED OUT HERE THAT THE ALLIES' DIFFICULTY IN LANDING HEAVY EQUIPMENT TO COMBAT THE GERMAN DRIVE SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM MIGHT APPLY ALSO TO ANY EFFORT TO INCREASE THEIR EFFECTIVENESS IN THE NAMSOS AREA.

THIS IS IMPORTANT SINCE THE GERMANS HAVE ACQUIRED UNBROKEN COMMUNICATIONS TO AIR BASES CLOSE TO THE REMAINING ALLIED POSITIONS.

THAT THE ALLIES WERE FORCED TO YIELD SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM WAS REGARDED LARGELY AS DUE TO THE EFFECTIVE MANNER IN WHICH THE GERMANS MANAGED TO GET THROUGH FAST ENOUGH TO PREVENT ANY SOLID OPPOSITION

30.24-2027

DEFENSES, PLUS THEIR UNCEASING PLANE ATTACKS AGAINST THE ALLIES AND NORWEGIANS, WHO WERE WITHOUT PROPER ANTI-AIRCRAFT PROTECTION.

IN THEIR THREE WEEK ADVANCE NORTHWARD FROM OSLO THE GERMANS, MOSTLY BAVARIAN AND AUSTRIAN TROOPS, FOUGHT THEIR WAY SOME 250 MILES OVER MOUNTAINOUS TERRAIN UNDER THE MOST DIFFICULT CONDITIONS.

THEY FIRST CONTACTED THE BRITISH AT LILLEHAMMER, ABOUT 200 MILES NORTH OF OSLO, ON APRIL 22. THE ALLIES WERE FORCED TO WITHDRAW AFTER ORGANIZING A HASTY DEFENSE IN COOPERATION WITH THE NORWEGIANS.

THE DRIVE THEN BEGAN THROUGH THE GUDBRANDS AND THE OSTER VALLEYS, NORWAY'S MAIN NORTH AND SOUTH ARTERIES. THE NAZI CAPTURE OF THE IMPORTANT RAILWAY JUNCTION AT DOMBAS, 60 MILES SOUTHEAST OF ANDALSNES, AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF LAND COMMUNICATIONS THE SAME DAY BETWEEN OSLO AND TRONDHEIM GAVE THE GERMANS A STRATEGIC ADVANTAGE ON WHICH THEY QUICKLY CAPITALIZED.

WE658PED

STOCKHOLM, MAY 2-(AP)-SWEDEN, WITH HER BORDERS STRONGLY GUARDED LEST THE WAR IN NORWAY SPILL OVER INTO HER TERRITORY, RELAXED SOMEWHAT TONIGHT UPON HEARING THE NEWS OF THE BRITISH WITHDRAWAL FROM LOWER NORWAY.

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S ANNOUNCEMENT WAS RECEIVED CALMLY BY THE SWEDES, WHO HAVE SAID IN UNMISTAKABLE TERMS THEY WOULD DEFEND THEIR NEUTRALITY AT ALL COSTS.

BUT WITH THE BRITISH ACTION, THE QUESTION OF EXPORTS OF SWEDISH IRON ORE TO GERMANY CAME BACK TO THE FORE.

MAY 3 1940

GERMANY'S INFLUENCE IN SCANDINAVIA NATURALLY HAS BEEN STRENGTHENED BY HER TIGHTER HOLD ON NORWAY, A FACTOR WHICH WILL SERVE TO STRENGTHEN HER HAND IN THE FORTHCOMING RESUMPTION OF SWEDISH-GERMAN TRADE NEGOTIATIONS.

THERE WAS A QUESTION WHETHER THE BRITISH WOULD SEEK CONTINUED SHIPMENTS OF SWEDISH ORE, PROVIDED THEY GAIN CONTROL OF NARVIK AND HOLD THE RAIL LINE RUNNING FROM THAT ARCTIC PORT TO THE SWEDISH BORDER.

ANOTHER QUESTION WAS WHETHER THE BRITISH WOULD TRY TO BLOCK ORE SHIPMENTS TO GERMANY THROUGH THE BOTHNIAN GULF, THUS INTRUDING ON SWEDEN'S NEUTRALITY.

THE GERMANS NOW COMMAND THE ORESUND CHANNEL BETWEEN DENMARK AND SWEDEN ON THE SOUTH AND ARE IN A POSITION TO ABSORB AND PERHAPS DIRECT SWEDISH TRADE UNLESS SWEDEN FINDS A NEW ROUTE TO OTHER CUSTOMERS BY WAY OF FINLAND.

R744PED

BOSTON, MAY 2-(AP)-REPORTS IN WATERFRONT CIRCLES INDICATED TONIGHT THE CARGO OF THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER TRAFALGAR, ORIGINALLY INTENDED FOR OSLO, WOULD BE UNLOADED HERE AND RETURNED TO THE SOUTHERN PORTS FROM WHICH IT WAS SHIPPED. MAY 3 1940

THE TRAFALGAR DROPPED ANCHOR IN THE LOWER HARBOR TWO WEEKS AGO AFTER TURNING BACK ON HER VOYAGE TO OSLO WHEN GERMAN INVASION OF NORWAY MADE IT IMPRACTICAL TO COMPLETE DELIVERY.

MARITIME LAWS PROVIDE THAT NO FOREIGN-FLAG VESSEL CAN ENGAGE IN COASTWISE TRADE, AND SHIPPING CIRCLES BELIEVED THE 7,600 TONS CARGO OF THE TRAFALGAR WOULD BE FORMALLY SEIZED BY CUSTOMS MEN WHEN UNLOADED, THEN IMMEDIATELY RELEASED AND THE SHIP GIVEN CLEARANCE WITHOUT PENALTY.

THE VESSEL'S CARGO WAS PICKED UP AT NEW ORLEANS, GALVESTON, PORT ARTHUR, SAVANNAH AND HAVANA, CUBA.

(ADVANCE)..NEW YORK,MAY 3--BECAUSE PILOTS ON EUROPE'S FIGHTING FRONTS ARE TAUGHT TO RECOGNIZE THE SILHOUETTES OF FRIENDLY AND ENEMY WARPLANES, ONLY ONE INSTANCE OF MISTAKEN-IDENTITY ATTACK HAS BEEN REPORTED IN EIGHT MONTHS OF COMBAT ALOFT.

THAT OCCURRED ON MARCH 3 WHEN, THE ADMIRALTY ANNOUNCED, A BRITISH PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN BY BRITISH FIGHTERS NEAR GRAVESEND.

UNDER CONDITIONS OF GOOD VISIBILITY TAIL AND WING MARKINGS ARE CLEARLY OUTLINED EVEN AGAINST CAMOUFLAGE, BUT THE TELL-TALE OUTLINES BUILT INTO A PLANE BY THE DESIGNER INSTANTLY ARE RECOGNIZABLE TO PILOTS IN HEAVY WEATHER.

IT IS A COMMON SAYING AMONG AIRMEN THAT A DESIGNER WRITES HIS "SIGNATURE" ON THE TAIL SURFACES OF A PLANE.

THE COMMA-SHAPED RUDDER OF THE PLANES DESIGNED BY THE LATE ANTHONY FOKKER IN WORLD WAR DAYS MARKED THEM AS GERMAN. IN FACT, ALLIED AIRMEN AT ONE PERIOD IN THE WAR, ATTEMPTING TO USE CAPTURED FOKKER PURSUITS BECAUSE THEY WERE FASTER THAN THEIR OWN, HAD TO GIVE IT UP BECAUSE THEY DREW THE FIRE OF ALLIED PILOTS AND ALLIED ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES.

THE SHALLOW VERTICAL STABILIZER IN THE TAIL GROUP OF THE AMERICAN CURTISS HAWK, BEING USED BY THE FRENCH, IS EASILY RECOGNIZABLE.

OTHER FEATURES OF WARPLANES IN SILHOUETTE ARE UNMISTAKABLE. THE BRITISH BLENHEIM BOMBER HAS ITS TWO WING ENGINES CLOSER INBOARD THAN THE BI-MOTORED GERMAN HEINKEL "111." THE GERMAN MESSERSCHMIDT "109" FIGHTER HAS STUBBY WING-TIPS, A WIRE-BRACED TAIL, A BELL-SHAPED RUDDER AND A BIG SCOOP UNDER THE ENGINE TO DELIVER AIR TO THE RADIATOR.

BOTH THE BRITISH HAWKER HURRICANE AND SUPERMARINE SPITFIRE FIGHTERS HAVE A GREATER WING CHORD (OR WIDTH) AND SMALLER SPAN THAN THE GERMAN HEINKEL "112." MOREOVER, THE HEINKEL HAS FIRST A DOWNSWEEP AND THEN AN UPSWEEP OF THE WING AS IT LEAVES THE FUSELAGE, KNOWN TO ENGINEERS AS CATHEDRAL AND DIHEDRAL ANGLES.

AMONG FRENCH PLANES THE POTEZ "63" FIGHTER-BOMBER-RECONNAISSANCE PLANE, LIKE THE AMERICAN CURTISS ATTACK-BOMBER, HAS A SLIM, KNIFE-LIKE FUSELAGE, AND THE MORANE FIGHTER'S STUBBY, FAT LINES AND NOSE-HEAVY APPEARANCE DUE TO ITS HIGH, LIQUID-COOLED ENGINE COULD BE MISTAKEN FOR NOTHING ELSE.

THE BRITISH ~~[illegible]~~ LAST (THURSDAY) NIGHT GAVE

INCREASING INDICATION IT THINKS THERE IS DANGER OF WAR BREAKING

OUT AT ALMOST ANY MOMENT IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

SUCCEEDING A BRITISH ANNOUNCEMENT WEDNESDAY THAT

BRITISH MERCHANT SHIPPING WAS BEING DIVERTED OUT OF ~~[illegible]~~

WAR IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AS A "PRECAUTIONARY" STEP, PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN YESTERDAY ANNOUNCED A BRITISH AND FRENCH WARFLEET ALREADY HAD PASSED THE BOTTLENECK IN THAT SEA OFF THE "TOE" OF ITALY AND WAS IN THE EASTERN BASIN NEARING SUEZ CANAL DEFENSES HERE AT ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT.

SOME PASSAGES IN THE PRIME MINISTER'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE BRITISH ARE GIVING UP SOUTH NORWAY TO THE GERMANS APPEARED TO HINT THAT DANGER ELSEWHERE, PERHAPS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, HAD WEIGHED IN THAT DECISION.

BEGINNING LAST NIGHT, THE BRITISH ORDERED ALL MERCHANT SHIPS AT GENOA, ITALY, TO LEAVE FOR HOME BY WAY OF THE SUEZ CANAL--THE LONG WAY HOME. AND IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THAT THIS ORDER APPLIED TO ALL HER BRITISH MERCHANTMEN IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

A DUTCH DESTROYER AT GENOA, ALSO WAS ORDERED TO DUTCH TERRITORIAL WATERS BY THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT.

MAY 3 1940

THERE WERE OTHER SCATTERED SIGNS OF ALARM--THE GREEKS SUMMONED 10 CLASSES OF RESERVE OFFICERS TO ACTIVE SERVICE, EGYPT CANCELEED LEAVES FOR SOLDIERS AND POLICE AND SET A STIFFENED GUARD ON STRATEGIC DEFENSE POINTS.

BUT OTHERWISE, THE ALARM APPEARED TO BE EXCLUSIVELY BRITISH.

THE ITALIANS SHOWED OUTWARD UNCONCERN AT BRITAIN'S STEPS.

EARLIER IN THE DAY, UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR WILLIAM PHILLIPS REPORTED WAS GIVEN LIMITED ASSURANCES THAT ITALY IS NOT PLANNING TO CHANGE HER STATUS FROM A NON-BELLIGERENT ALLY OF GERMANY --AT LEAST NOT WITHIN THE NEXT TEN DAYS.

THIS RATHER OMINOUS "ASSURANCE" WAS GIVEN WHEN PHILLIPS CALLED ON ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT CIANO AT THE REQUEST OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON.

PRESUMABLY AMBASSADOR PHILLIPS' CONVERSATION WITH PREMIER MUSSOLINI HIMSELF THE DAY BEFORE, WHEN SIMILAR ASSURANCES WERE REPORTED GIVEN,

HAD BROUGHT ABOUT THE TALK WITH CIANO.

CIANO WAS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE SPECIFICALLY INDICATED YUGOSLAVIA IS IN NO IMMEDIATE DANGER FROM ITALY.

IN BELGRADE, YUGOSLAV CAPITAL, IT WAS REPORTED THE GERMAN AND ITALIAN DIPLOMATS HAD HASTENED TO ASSURE NOT ONLY YUGOSLAV OFFICIALS, BUT ALSO OTHER BALKAN OFFICIALS, THAT "BRITISH STORIES" OF IMPENDING AGGRESSION BY EH THE AXIS PARTNERS IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WERE GROUNDLESS.

YUGOSLAVIA AND THE BALKANS APPEARED SLIGHTLY LESS UNEASY, BUT DID NOT RELAX THEIR PRECAUTIONS.

RUMANIA, IN PARTICULAR, INCREASED ACTIVITY AGAINST AN ALLEGED "FIFTH COLUMN" ELEMENTS. A GERMAN ESPIONAGE CENTER NEAR THE ROYAL PALACE IN BUCHAREST WAS RAIDED, A WIRELESS EQUIPMENT CONFISCATED, AND MANY GERMANS , REPORTED TO BE GERMAN ARMY OFFICERS, WERE ARRESTED IN VARIOUS PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

MAY 3 1940

SINCE WAR STARTED SEPT. 1 WITH ADOLF HITLER'S INVASION OF POLAND, ITALY HAS REMAINED THE BIG QUESTION MARK OF EUROPE: WOULD PREMIER MUSSOLINI JOIN HIS AXIS PARTNER IN MAKING WAR ON BRITAIN AND FRANCE ?

ITALY DECLARED SHE WAS NOT NEUTRAL, FAVORING GERMANY, BUT WAS A NON-BELLIGERENT. THE ITALIAN PRESS CHORUSED DISLIKE OF THE ALLIES, DISCOUNTED ALLIED MILITARY SUCCESS AND LINKED GERMANY'S AIMS WITH WHAT ITALY HOPES TO ACHIEVE EVENTUALLY.

ITALY CLASSED HERSELF AMONG THE "HAVE NOT" NATIONS AIMING AT A REDISTRIBUTION OF THE WORLD'S COLONIES, PARTICULARLY THE RICH BRITISH AND FRENCH EMPIRES.

ITALIAN DISCONTENT PREDATED THE WORLD WAR. WHEN THAT CONFLICT STARTED, ITALY IMMEDIATELY ARMED AND STARTED NEGOTIATIONS WITH BOTH SIDES.

MAY 3 1940

THE ALLIES MADE THE BETTER OFFER SO BY THE TREATY OF LONDON, APRIL 26, 1915, ITALY ENTERED THE WAR ON THE SIDE OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE WITH THE PROMISE OF GAINING THE AUSTRIAN TYROL, ALL OF THE DALMATIAN COAST AND PROTECTION OF ITALIAN INTERESTS IN THE NEAR EAST.

30.24-2031

ITALY HAS CONTENDED THOSE PROMISES NEVER WERE FUL-
FILLED BY THE VICTORIOUS ALLIES. SHE WON THE TYROL UP TO BRENNER
PASS, BUT THE DALMATIAN COAST WENT TO NEWLY-CREATED YUGOSLAVIA.
THE ITALIANS HAVE BEEN SORE EVER SINCE.

BRITISH-ITALIAN RELATIONS REACHED THEIR BITTEREST PHASE
WHEN BRITAIN ACTING THROUGH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS ATTEMPTED TO HALT THE ITALIAN INVASION OF ETHIOPIA WHICH STARTED IN OCTOBER, 1935.

THE LEAGUE IMPOSED SANCTIONS--ECONOMIC PENALTIES--ON ITALY, BUT THE ITALIAN WAR MACHINE OVERRAN ETHIOPIA ANY WAY
AND PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S GRUDGE AGAINST BRITAIN GREW MORE INTENSE, AND HELPED PERSUADE HIM TO FORM THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS WITH HITLER.
THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR, WITH ITALIAN TROOPS OPENLY AID-
ING GENERALISSIMO FRANCO'S NATIONALISTS, CREATED NEW MEDITERRAN-EAN TENSION. ITALY AND BRITAIN FINALLY REACHED A "GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT" APRIL 16, 1938 WHICH RECOGNIZED ITALIAN AND BRITISH SPHERES OF INFLUENCE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AND PROVIDED FOR EVENTUAL ITALIAN WITHDRAWAL FROM SPAIN.

MAY 3 1940

30.24-2031

SINCE THEN THE ITALIAN PRESS HAS WAGED SPORADIC ANTI-BRITISH CAMPAIGNS, BUT NOTHING MORE THAN THREATS HAVE DEVELOPED.

ALLIED ATTEMPTS TO WOO ITALY FROM HER ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY HAVE BORN NO SIGNS OF SUCCESS. during the current conflict

ON MARCH 18 HITLER AND MUSSOLINI MET AT BRENNER PASS FOR A CONFERENCE WHICH ROUSED WIDESPREAD SPECULATION WHETHER THE AXIS PARTNERS WERE PLANNING TO EXTEND THE WAR WITH ACTIVE ITALIAN PARTICIPATION.

GERMANY'S INVASION OF NORWAY CAME WITHIN A MONTH.

BELIEF WAS EXPRESSED IN MANY QUARTERS THAT SIGNS OF GERMAN SUCCESS ON THE NORTHERN FRONT WOULD BRING ITALY INTO THE WAR ON THE SIDE SHE THOUGHT WAS WINNING.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MAY 3 1940

THE FLEETS OF THE ALLIED POWERS AND THE ARMIES OF THE BALKANS WERE PUT TO A NEW PREPAREDNESS PITCH IN SOUTHEAST-

ERN EUROPE TODAY, DESPITE WIDESPREAD ASSURANCES FROM BOTH ITALY AND GERMANY THAT THE AXIS MEANS [redacted] TO MAKE NO TROUBLE THERE.

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN OF BRITAIN DISCLOSED THAT A BIG COMBINED ALLIED BATTLE FLEET WAS MOVING TOWARD ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, FROM THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN BASIN.

GREECE CALLED UP TEN CLASS OF ARMY RESERVE OFFICERS, [redacted] ITALIAN AND GERMAN DIPLOMATS IN BELGRADE AND ELSEWHERE TOLD THE BALKAN STATES THAT THESE POWERS INTEND NO AGGRESSION. THE WAR TODAY

BY HEWITT MACKENZIE

MAY 3 1940

THE BATTLE OF NORWAY WHICH BLEW UP IN OUR FACES WITHOUT WARNING IS STILL SHOWING SUFFICIENT VITALITY SO THAT IT WOULDN'T BE SAFE TO BET A LOT THAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES CAN'T PUT FRESH LIFE INTO IT--IF THEY WANT TO.

PERSONALLY I'D LIKE TO KNOW A BIT MORE ABOUT WHAT'S IN THE MINDS OF THE ALLIED COMMAND (AND THE POLITICAL LEADERS) BEFORE WRITING AN

EPITAPH FOR THIS ENGAGEMENT.

THE VIEW THIS MORNING REMAINED PRETTY FOGGY. STOCKHOLM REPORTED THAT A NEW BRITISH SEA AND AIR OFFENSIVE APPEARED TO BE BOILING UP TO STOP GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS FROM REACHING NORWAY. NORWEGIAN QUARTERS ALSO AVERRED THAT GERMAN WITHDRAWALS IN THE GLOMMA VALLEY INDICATED THE NAZI COMMUNICATION BETWEEN OSLO AND TRONDHEIM, OF WHICH HERR HITLER MADE SO MUCH, HAD BEEN SEVERED.

BE THAT AS MAY, ONE OF THE THINGS WE CAN SEE IS THAT THE ALLIES HAVE RECEIVED ENOUGH OF A KNOCK SO THAT IT WOULD SEEM THEY MUST ADOPT ONE OF TWO COURSES IMMEDIATELY. THEY WILL HAVE TO PUT ON A REALLY BIG SHOW AND TRY TO BLAST THE HITLERITES OUT OF SOUTHERN AND CENTRAL NORWAY, OR MUST CALL IT A DAY AND WITHDRAW FROM THAT PART OF THE COUNTRY.

OBVIOUSLY WITH THE GERMANS HOLDING TRONDHEIM AND BACKED BY THEIR AIR FORCE, SUCH AN ALLIED ASSAULT WOULD BE A MAJOR OPERATION. IT ALSO WOULD BE A RISKY ADVENTURE, FOR IT WOULD INVOLVE THE EMPLOYMENT OF A LARGE NAVAL AND AIR FORCE.

BUT YOU CAN'T PLAY ABSOLUTELY SAFE ALL THE TIME AND WIN WARS. THE ALLIES WILL HAVE TO RISK A LOT OF LIVES AND VALUABLE EQUIPMENT IF THEY BELIEVE POSSESSION OF NORWAY IS WORTH IT.

THE MARTIAL TRADITION OF ENGLAND AND FRANCE IS NOT TO QUIT. BUT THERE ARE TIMES WHEN DISCRETION IS THE BETTER PART OF VALOR. THE ALLIES MAY DECIDE THAT, SINCE THE GERMANS ARE SO WELL INSTALLED, IT WOULD BE UNSOUND MILITARILY TO TRY TO DISLODGE THEM, NO MATTER HOW GREAT THE POLITICAL AND SENTIMENTAL URGE.

IN THE LATTER CASE THEY PRESUMABLY WOULD STILL MAINTAIN AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN THE NARVIK REGION, WAY UP WITHIN THE ARCTIC CIRCLE. YOU KNOW NARVIK AS THE NOW FAMOUS PORT THROUGH WHICH HAS BEEN PASSING MOST OF THE SWEDISH IRON ORE THAT HAS GONE TO KEEP THE GERMAN ARMAMENT FACTORIES RUNNING.

THAT'S THE STUFF WHICH CAUSED THE BATTLE OF NORWAY. JUST PLAIN IRON ORE THAT ONE DAY WILL FIND ITS WAY INTO A JUNK YARD. IF THE ALLIES CAN CUT DOWN THE SUPPLY OF THIS ORE IT WILL GREATLY LESSEN THE ENEMY'S RESISTANCE.

SHOULD THE ALLIES ADOPT THE COURSE OF CONTINUING TO TRY TO OUST THE NAZIS, THE LOGICAL STRATEGY WOULD SEEM TO BE TO LAY SIEGE TO THE GREAT PORT AND RAILHEAD OF TRONDHEIM. THAT IS THE KEY TO CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN NORWAY.

I SAW A LOT OF FINE FELLOWS DIE ON THE BATTLE FIELD IN THE WORLD WAR FOR SENTIMENT. SCORES OF THOUSANDS, FOR INSTANCE, GAVE THEIR LIVES TO KEEP THE GERMANS OUT OF THE ANCIENT CITY OF YPRES WHEN THE PLACE WAS IN UTTER RUINS AND HAD NO STRATEGIC VALUE.

THE ALLIES FELT THAT THE MORAL EFFECT OF THE LOSS OF YPRES WOULD BE BAD. MAYBE IT WOULD HAVE BEEN, BUT I DOUBT IT. ANYWAY HUMAN LIFE IS WORTH MORE THAN WAS PAID FOR IT AT HELL'S FIRE CORNER IN THOSE DAYS.

OF COURSE NORWAY ISN'T YPRES, AND THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT THE MORAL EFFECT OF AN ALLIED WITHDRAWAL WOULD BE HEAVY, THOUGH IT NEEDN'T BE DISASTROUS. MAIN CONCERN UNDOUBTEDLY REVOLVES ABOUT ITALY. SIGNOR MUSSOLINI TALKED WITH AMERICAN AMBASSADOR PHILLIPS YESTERDAY AND IS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE GIVEN THE IMPRESSION THAT ITALY WOULD NOT MAKE ANY WAR MOVE WITHIN THE NEXT TEN DAYS AT LEAST.

AFTER THAT MUSSOLINI'S POSITION APPARENTLY WILL DEPEND ON THE COURSE OF EVENTS.

IL DUCE IS A SMART MAN, AND IT'S MY GUESS HE ISN'T SATISFIED THAT ANY DECISIVE VICTORY HAS BEEN WON IN NORWAY THUS FAR. WHETHER AN ALLIED WITHDRAWAL WOULD CONVINCE HIM THAT GERMANY IS ON THE ROAD TO WINNING THE WAR IS PROBLEMATICAL, BUT HE CERTAINLY KNOWS THAT THE WAR WILL NOT BE EITHER WON OR LOST IN THE BATTLE OF NORWAY.

ACTUALLY, HERR HITLER IS LIKELY TO PAY A FAIRLY HEAVY PRICE FOR THE ADVANTAGES WHICH MAY ACCRUE TO HIM FROM HIS NORWEGIAN VICTORY--IF THAT'S WHAT IT PROVES TO BE. HE HAS GREATLY EXTENDED HIS MILITARY COMMITMENTS AT A TIME WHEN HE WISHES TO CONSERVE HIS RESOURCES TO MEET THE DRAIN OF THE ECONOMIC BLOCKADE.

HE IS BURNING UP RESERVES, ESPECIALLY GASOLINE WHICH IS WORTH MORE TO HIM THAN LIQUOD GOLD BECAUSE OF ITS SCARCITY. HE SOON WILL HAVE TO FEED HELPLESS NORWAY, JUST AS HE WILL HAVE TO CARE FOR DENMARK, WHILE THAT BLOCKADE KEEPS ON SQUEEZING AND SQUEEZING.

THE POINT IS THAT EVERY OUNCE OF POWER WHICH GERMANY BURNS UP NOW, IS A CONTRIBUTION TO THE ALLIED PLAN OF ECONOMIC STRANGULATION. SO MAYBE THE ALLIED COMMAND IS SMARTER THAN THEY HAVE BEEN GIVEN CREDIT FOR BEING. ANYWAY, THE ALLIES CAN CONSOLE THEMSELVES WITH THE THOUGHT THAT IT'S AN ILL WIND, ET CETERA.

BRANCH NUMBER TWO, SLIGHTLY TO THE NORTH, THE GERMANS SAID, REACHED SOGNE FJORD, AN INLET WHICH EXTENDS 115 MILES INTO NORWAY. THIS APPARENTLY LAID ANOTHER BAND OF OCCUPATION ACROSS NORWAY.

BRANCH NUMBER THREE SHOOTS NORTH OF OSLO TOWARD TRONDHEIM THROUGH THE GUDBRANDS VALLEY WITH OFFSHOOTS IN THE REGION WHERE THE ALLIES HAVE ESTABLISHED BASES ON THE WEST COAST AND IN THE INTERIOR BELOW TRONDHEIM.

GERMAN REPORTS SAID THAT THE FORCES OF BRANCH NUMBER THREE HAD DRIVEN TO ABOUT 25 MILES SOUTHEAST OF ANDALSNES, ALLIED LANDING POINT 100 MILES SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM, AND THAT IN THE REGION AROUND DOMBAS, RAILWAY JUNCTION POINT IN THE INTERIOR, THEY HELD "THE UNDESTROYED RAILWAY LINE BETWEEN DOMBAS AND ULSBERG." ULSBERG IS ABOUT 55 MILES NORTH OF DOMBAS AND 90 MILES SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM. THE BRITISH YESTERDAY HAD ANNOUNCED A WITHDRAWAL IN THE DOMBAS REGION.

BRANCH NUMBER FOUR WAS SHOOTING UP THE OSTER (EASTERN) VALLEY AND THE GLOMMA RIVER VALLEY ALONG A LINE PARALLELING THE GUDBRANDS VALLEY BRANCH AND THE NORWEGIAN-SWEDISH BORDER.

IT HAD REACHED RORDS, SOME 70 MILES SOUTHEAST OF TRONDHEIM, BUT SCANDINAVIAN REPORTS SAID THE GERMANS HAD FALLEN BACK ABOUT 35 MILES, SURRENDERING RORDS AND TYNSET.

FROM TYNSET, A BRANCH LINE HAD STARTED NORTHWEST TO JOIN FORCES WITH THE GERMANS DRIVING NORTH IN THE GUDBRANDS VALLEY. THAT BRANCH WAS REPORTED STILL IN KVIKNE, NORTHWEST OF TYNSET AND SOUTHEAST OF ULSBERG.

THE STEINKJER FRONT, NORTH OF TRONDHEIM, REMAINED QUIET EXCEPT FOR GERMAN AERIAL ACTIVITY. AT NARVIK, IN THE ARCTIC, THE GERMAN

GARRISON CONTINUED TO HOLD OUT AGAINST ENCIRCLING ALLIED AND NORWEGIAN FORCES.

Helpless Norse Yield to Nazis In Central Area

Commander Asks a Truce, Charges Allies Left His Troops Without Defenses

STOCKHOLM, May 3 (AP).—The Norwegian central command, left almost without bullets to face the German war machine after the Allied expeditionary armies abandoned the whole of Norway below the Arctic Circle, bitterly gave up the fight tonight and sued for an armistice to negotiate peace in the central area.

From the little town of Grong, on the Steinkjer-Namsos front above Trondheim, emptied of Allied troops in the startling two-day withdrawal, the acting Norwegian commander, Col. Ole B. Getz, sent word of the surrender in an order of the day, surcharged with disillusionment and asserting that the Allies had not informed him of their plans. German forces later were reported to have reached Grong and to have made contact with the Norwegians, with all fighting reported stopped.

Government Action Lacking

Col. Getz, at the reported instigation of a majority of his officers, decided to ask for the armistice for the whole Trondheim area after the Allies left. He did not, however, spake for the Norwegian government, which alone has power to sue for peace for the country as a whole, and which so far has made no such move.

He placed full blame for his plight on the Allies.

"The British and French—for reasons unknown to us—have given up helping us in our fight and have withdrawn their troops from Namsos," he said.

"We stand today alone against the entire German war machine, already outflanked and encircled on the line which the British and French should be holding . . . without aid from outside . . . with only enough ammunition for one day . . . without planes and other necessary war materials.

"Any further fighting would only lead to destruction, with serving any military purpose.

"I therefore am notifying the German military command to establish contact toward establishing peace in the Tronddlag area ((all the area both north and south of Trondheim), as has been done in the southern part of the country.

"It is my heavy duty as acting commander of Tronddlag to give this notice to the soldiers under my command."

To this, Col. Getz added: "It was an incomprehensible action on the part of the British and French, without notifying me, to lay open my flanks in the rear so I was cut off from any possible retreat toward Mosjoen."

The British War Office issued a statement in London that "there is no foundation for the statement that the Norwegian commander-in-chief was not informed of the Allied decision to evacuate the Trondheim area or that he has negotiated an armistice. The commander-in-chief of the Norwegian Army and his staff embarked on a British man-of-war on the night of May 1-2, 1940."

London sources named the Norwegian commander-in-chief as Otto Ruge. Col. Getz issued his order of the day as acting commander.

Other advices reaching Stockholm said a number of Norwegian troops, commanded by a Lieut. Dahl, "a fanatical patriot but nevertheless a good soldier," had decided against capitulation and fled to the mountains.

"We'll fight on and we'll make a determined stand, despite the severe thinning of our ranks," they said.

The Swedish news agency correspondent at Grong sent a dramatic account of a hastily called council of war at which a majority of the Norwegians decided that further resistance was futile and directed Col. Getz, their superior, to sue for peace.

Officers Urge Surrender

"From his headquarters at Grong the Nerwegian commander ordered all available officers to appear before him to confer on what best to do," the correspondent related. "Surrender was decided upon by a majority of the officers who expressed the belief that further fighting was useless. The commander thereupon advised all troops stationed in this sector to cease firing immediately and to capitulate.

"Meanwhile, the Norwegian commander established contact with the German commanders. The Norwegian troops set up a camp until they could be interned. The German forces are advancing on Namsos from the south, and according to latest advices which I have received already have reached Grong with the vanguard of their motorized units."

The Swedish correspondent, describing Namsos, said "shot to pieces," and Allied troops milled about in a small area of the town awaiting their turn to make for the departing transports while swarms of German planes bombed the harbor incessantly. The high-flying planes came in droves, some of them roaring down in power dives to dump tons of bombs on the harbor, adding an earsplitting din to the confusion. Anti-aircraft guns on the transports kept the night skies filled with bursting shells, but the speedy German airmen were hard targets.

"That the British and French were leaving in a most peculiar fashion," the Swedish correspondent wrote, "was shown by the fact that motorized anti-aircraft guns on the shore were covered with canvas instead of standing by for possible action."

War Materials Abandoned

The "Aftonbladet" correspondent said the departing troops left behind huge quantities of valuable war materials such as heavy anti-aircraft guns, heavy artillery and stacks of ammunition. They had no means of getting the heavy equipment aboard the transports, he explained, because the big cranes which unloaded them had been blasted to pieces by the German bombers.

ALLIES QUIT NAMSOS, MOVE NORTH; NORSE ASK TRONDHEIM ARMISTICE; U.S. ACTS TO AVERT SPREAD OF WAR

THE KING, AFTER WATCHING HIS COUNTRY YIELD TO MODERN WARFARE FROM SOME SECRET MOUNTAIN FASTNESS, WAS REPORTED WITHOUT CONFIRMATION, TO HAVE EMBARKED FROM SOME WESTERN PORT.

SWEDEN'S FOREIGN OFFICE DENIED THAT THE ROYAL FAMILY HAD ENTERED THIS COUNTRY.

The docks at Namsos also had been leveled, forcing the Allies to scurry down steep, rocky cliffs to board launches for the trip to the transports. Some of the heavy pieces close to the water's edge were pushed in and the firing mechanisms of the others were smashed. Here and there beside the big guns were piles of smaller arms, although the troops loaded much quipment of this type

The British and their French Blue Devil supporters pulled out of the Steinkjer-Namsos front, 60 to 100 miles north of German-occupied Trondheim, leaving behind entrenchments, supplies and ill-equipped, hopelessly outflanked Norwegians. Then they sailed away in their ships.

GERMAN TROOPS WERE EXPECTED IN THE AREA HELD BY THE NORWEGIANS AT ANY MOMENT.

THE ALLIES' GENERAL WITHDRAWAL FROM ALL THE CENTER OF THE COUNTRY LEFT THEM WITH A GRIP UPON NORWAY ONLY IN THE FAR NORTHERN SECTOR ABOUT NARVIK, THE GERMAN-HELD IRON ORE PORT.

WHETHER SOME OF THE TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM CENTRAL NORWAY WOULD GO THERE WAS IN DOUBT--(ONE BRITISH OFFICER SAID THEY WERE GOING TO "ENGLAND")--BUT IN ANY EVENT, THE WAR IN CENTRAL NORWAY WAS FINISHED.

ALL FIGHTING WAS REPORTED STOPPED.

RUMORS WERE HEARD TONIGHT THAT THE ALLIES MIGHT SEEK TO ESTABLISH A NEW BASE AT MOSJOEN AS PROTECTION AGAINST ANY GERMAN ATTEMPT TO DRAW NEARER NARVIK BY LAND, BUT THE MAJORITY OPINION HERE WAS THAT THE ALLIES WERE PULLING OUT OF NORWAY ENTIRELY EXCEPT FOR NARVIK.

THE ONLY IMPORTANT QUESTION REMAINING IN THE NORWEGIAN SITUATION TONIGHT WAS WHETHER THE GERMANS WOULD BE CONTENT WITH THE AREA NOW IN THEIR POSSESSION OR WOULD PUSH NORTHWARD AND POSSIBLY TRY TO GAIN NARVIK AS WELL.

IF COLONEL GETZ CAN BE BELIEVED, THEY DID THIS WITHOUT EVEN TELLING THE NORWEGIANS AND HENCE RUINING HIS LINE OF RETREAT NORTHWARD ALONG THE RAILWAY AND MOTOR ROAD TO MOSJOEN, SOME 80 MILES AWAY.

At Narvik, the Arctic ore port which the Allies have ringed—some three hundred miles north of Namsos—the British and French, apparently, expect reinforcements preliminary to starting a push from three directions on the town. German forces still are holding out at Narvik and, even there, are reported in some advices to be showing signs of offensive action in an effort to break the siege. German bombers also have penetrated now to the Narvik area and are described as active.

News of the Allied departure from Namsos came suddenly and stunningly, on the 24th day of Norway's invasion.

The world already knew of the withdrawal of the British expeditionary force, in the face of German air superiority, from its Aandalsnes foothold 100 miles southwest of Trondheim.

But it had been presumed that the British troops from Aandalsnes would go to Namsos and that the British and the French Alpine Chasseurs who were with them there would try to form a line across the country above Trondheim, from the coast to the Swedish border.

Instead, it became known today that the French began moving out of Namsos Wednesday night and the British—under heavy plane attack—Thursday night.

THE BOMB-POCKED STREETS OF NAMSOS WERE FILLED ALL THURSDAY WITH TROOPS MARCHING TO THE DOCKS, SAID CORRESPONDENTS WHO GOT THEIR STORIES ACROSS THE BORDER ONLY TODAY.

THEY WERE TAKEN OUT TO SIX TROOPSHIPS, GUARDED BY DESTROYERS, WHICH LAY AT ANCHOR IN THE FJORD.

"A GERMAN BOMB DROPPED NEAR ONE DESTROYER, KILLING THIRTY AND WOUNDING SIXTY," SAID ONE SWEDISH CORRESPONDENT.

Steinkjer Awaits Nazis

On the Steinkjer front, the Germans were expected at any time. The British had suffered heavily there—a whole battalion was cut up by a Nazi company ten days ago. The main factor in stemming the German advance, since then, has been the valiant defense by Norwegian troops.

Now, however, the Norwegians' fight seems hopeless. Although the British left trucks, army cars and a wealth of other supplies on hand, and these supplies now are being speedily distributed to the remaining Norwegian troops on the Steindjer front, it is not enough. The Norwegians themselves, with scarcely enough ammunition for ten minutes of heavy firing, were being encircled.

In any event, advices coming across the border tonight indicated Narvik now is the chief area of combat, and theer was speculation that the Namsos Allies may be headed for there. The Allies at Narvik now include both British and French troops.

Within the port the Germans have blown up the ore docks while German air bombs drum steadily on the Allied siege lines. Destruction of the ore docks will keep the British from using them for shipments from Narvik, even though they take the town. Moreover, the Germans still are masters of the iron-ore line to the Swedish border and Swedish mines, and could destroy the line and tunnels if need be.

Besides the British and French troops at Narvik, there may be some British patrols at Tromsoe, 125 miles farther north.

HOWEVER, THE SITUATION IN THE NORTH IS GREATLY CONFUSED.

HERE, BRITISH, SWEDISH AND NORWEGIANS WERE IN AGREEMENT THAT UNLESS THE ALLIES HIT QUICKLY AND SHARPLY WITH AN OFFENSIVE FROM THE ARCTIC, GERMANY IS ASSURED OF ANY EASY TERRITORIAL VICTORY, AND, TOGETHER WITH RUSSIA, OF ECONOMIC DOMINATION IN ALL SCANDINAVIA.

AS FOR KING HAAKON AND THE NORWEGIAN GOVERNMENT, THEIR WHEREABOUTS REMAINED OBSCURE TONIGHT.

Military Leader Left to Fight Alone Calls Resistance Futile---Narvik Remains Only Foothold Retained by Expeditionary Force.

MAY 4 1940

STOCKHOLM, May 3 (A. P.).—Dispatches from Grong, Norway, tonight said that the Norwegian command had announced the conclusion of hostilities in the Grong area, east of Namsos, evacuated today by the Allies, and the Norwegians' intention of negotiating peace with the Germans.

The dispatches said that the following order of the day had been issued by Col. O. B. Getz, acting Norwegian commander:

"As the British and French, for reasons unknown to us, have given up helping us in our fight and have withdrawn their troops from Namsos we today stand alone against the entire German war machine, already outflanked and encircled on a line which the British and French should be holding without aid from the outside and with only enough ammunition for one day and without planes and other necessary war materials.

"Any further fighting will only lead to destruction without serving any military purpose.

Calls British Action Incomprehensible.

"I therefore am notifying the German military command to establish contact for the purpose of establishing peace in the Tronddlag district (around Trondheim), as has been done in the southern part of the country.

"It is my heavy duty as acting commander of Tronddlag to give this notice to my soldiers."

To this communique Col. Getz appended the following:

London Admits Namsos Evacuation.

"It was an incomprehensible action on the part of the British and French, without notifying me, to lay open my flanks and rear, so that I was cut off from any possible retreat toward Mosjoen (north of Namsos)."

It was disclosed tonight that the Allied armies of Norway had abandoned the whole center of the country to the relentless spread of the German war machine, retaining a grip only on the rugged coastal ledges north of the arctic circle.

[London admitted tonight that the Allies had evacuated the port of Namsos, as well as that of Andalsnes.]

The British and their French "Blue Devil" supporters, leaving behind intrenchments and supplies, withdrew from the Namsos-Steinkjer front, sixty to 100 miles north of the German occupied port of Trondheim, and sailed away in their ships.

They left only small and ill-equipped Norwegian units to dispute the swift German advance in Norway's narrow midriff, and this resistance was conceded to be hopeless.

Even in the arctic sector about Narvik, according to one report printed in the Stockholm newspaper Aftenbladet, German forces who hold that ore port are on the offensive against Allied and Norwegian siege lines.

The Germans, already controlling southern Norway, spread out rapidly today over the central sector after the Allied withdrawal from Andalsnes and Namsos, south of Trondheim. Only the far north was seriously contested.

The Norwegian legation in Stockholm lacked official confirmation of the Namsos withdrawal, but the press attache said he believed the report was correct.

Nazis Consolidate Positions.

Meanwhile the German Army moved rapidly to consolidate its control of all Norway except the narrow rugged coastal strip north of Trondheim and the Narvik front in the far north.

The reports reaching Stockholm said that the Allied retreat from Steinkjer, sixty miles north of Trondheim, and the embarkation at Namsos, forty miles farther north, took place in orderly fashion, despite intensive German air attacks which were reported to have killed thirty persons and wounded sixty.

The British were reported to have withdrawn last night and the French the night before.

Reporters Barred From Front.

The first indication of a possible withdrawal came from correspondents were prevented from visiting either the front lines at Steinkjer or the port of Namsos. The withdrawal apparently was timed to fit in with that from Andalsnes.

The Germans' cleanup operations were moving fast, according to reports. The swastika was unfurled unchallenged in town after town, while the Nazi troops expected only limited resistance from scattered Norwegian troops still intrenched or in action.

The Germans now have complete control of Trondheim and Bergen, two of Norway's chief west coast ports, and thus have attained their goal of establishing bases in the North Atlantic. However, these were won only at the price of heavy sacrifices in the German naval forces, for which these bases might have been valuable.

Forces Flow Northward.

Meanwhile German forces flooded northward for a consolidation of positions in roughly half of Norway—an area which is inhabited, however, by six-sevenths of Norway's 3,000,000 population.

German airmen, trying to turn the Namsos withdrawal into a rout, made repeated attacks on the port, spreading new ruin and churning the ashes and debris of former attacks.

Buildings were said to be smouldering and the docks a vista of tangled wreckage.

Move Up Glomma Valley.

The German lines of field gray-green moved relentlessly up the Glomma River Valley toward Trondheim, scattering Norwegians before them. Roros, which the German advance guard had relinquished once, was reported recaptured.

Military observers said that the Norwegians could hardly hope to continue their resistance in central Norway without Allied aid, and it appeared on the basis of the latest reports of Allied withdrawals that no such aid remained in Norway, save the forces ringing the German garrison at the ore port of Narvik, more than 400 miles north of Trondheim.

Between Trondheim and Narvik lies the most barren part of Norway—a strip of choppy coastline and tumbled terrain with but scant means of communication. The only rail line there goes directly east into Sweden.

With British and French help the Norwegians had been able to hold the Germans at Steinkjer, but now that German re-enforcements were flooding from the south and with the Allies gone all hope of resistance seemed lost.

Steinkjer Viewed as Lost.

The Germans were expected to push forward at Steinkjer immediately.

The last British in the area took to their transports a few hours after Prime Minister Chamberlain in London told the House of Commons that the British were abandoning the Andalsnes area.

Although no definite word has been received from the Narvik sector in several days the British, French and Norwegians there were believed to be still laying siege to the German garrison landed there on the first day of the Norwegian invasion, April 9.

The British and French troops in the Steinkjer region, based on Namsos, thirty-five miles further north, had the choice of giving battle to the Germans, who had gained full benefit of land communications and air bases in southern and central Norway, or of leaving by way of Namsos as the British did from Andalsnes yesterday.

A special correspondent for one Swedish newspaper, the Social Demokraten, reported that both Namsos and Grong, twenty-five miles to the east, were bombed and machine-gunned by German warplanes both Wednesday and yesterday. Efforts to reach Grong today failed when telephone operators said that calls could not be put through because of "unexplained reasons."

Swedish Press Pessimistic.

Even before the report reached Stockholm of the Allied withdrawal from Namsos, the Swedish press took a pessimistic view of the chances of the Allies to hang on above Trondheim.

"If it was not possible to take Trondheim from the south," the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter stated, "one can expect that it will be more difficult to take this city from the north, since the Germans now have full communication from Oslo and can throw practically their entire Norway army against the Norwegian-Allied line in the Namsos district."

This newspaper also took a pessimistic view of the possibility of Norwegian troops carrying on alone. The newspaper Svenska Dagbladet paid tribute to Norwegians and said in part:

"One wonders if it is fear of German bombers or threatening tendencies in the Mediterranean which has forced the British Admiralty to abstain from a deciding operation.

"Will the British save their battle fleet in the same manner as Kaiser Wilhelm did during the world war and do they intend to keep up these defensive tactics until the moment when they have won equal power in the air?"

Sweden herself breathed somewhat more easily in the belief that Germany now has no immediate motive at least for attacking this country; on the other hand, however, Sweden found herself squarely up against the matter of German control of her outlets to the west.

KING IS TAKEN TO NARVIK AREA ON BRITISH SHIP

Norse Commander In Trondheim Sector Asks Nazis For Armistice

Blames Allies For Withdrawing Troops And Abandoning Namsos

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 3—King Haakon of Norway was reported tonight to have left an undisclosed Norwegian port aboard a British warship with British troops for the northern part of Norway.

The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent, Wilson Broadbent, said the Norwegian monarch could have sought refuge in London but that "he preferred to remain with his Government and the British forces which have taken up new positions around Narvik."

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 3—The War Office said early today "there is no foundation for the statement that the Norwegian commander in chief was not informed of the Allied decision to withdraw from the Trondheim area or that he has negotiated an armistice; the Norwegian commander in chief and his staff embarked on a British man o' war the night of May 1, 1940."

"The commander in chief has been conveyed to an undisclosed destination in Norway and any Norwegian order of the day announcing negotiations for an armistice was obviously made without his authority," the War Office communique asserted.

London sources named the Norwegian commander in chief as Otto Ruge.

American Leaves With British

Correspondent Describes Scenes at Namsos Before Boarding a Destroyer.

By J. NORMAN LODGE.

NAMSOS, By Courier to Grong, May 2 (11:30 P. M.) (A. P.).—The British forces in the Namsos area are embarking tonight and leaving this Norwegian war theater north of Trondheim. The French already have departed.

I am writing this account of the Allied departure in the smoke-filled lobby of a small hotel as I prepare to embark on a British destroyer to accompany the British contingent.

Only a few minutes ago, after having been under military arrest here since Wednesday, I learned that the British troops were embarking and that I had my choice either of staying here to meet the oncoming Germans or going with the British.

Together with Arthur Menken and Bonney [illegible], camera men for Paramount and Fox Movietone, I have decided to leave with the British.

French Appeared Like Ghosts.

Frank Mute, correspondent for the London Daily Express, decided to remain.

The events which led up to this moment have been unusually exciting.

With the other three, I went to Namsos Wednesday night.

As we passed a British outpost into territory occupied by the French, we became conscious of an air of suppressed excitement. French officers were rushing about issuing orders to soldiers who were busy getting their gear together and then going into marching formation.

For a considerable distance along the road we passed marching units, trucks and field pieces.

It was shimmering twilight and the marching groups had a ghost-like appearance as the men moved along silently.

At Spillem Inn, a Namsos hotel, we asked for lodging and immediately were placed under arrest.

We were told bluntly that we were not welcome visitors and that we were to ask no questions and not to move from the vicinity of the hotel until instructions regarding us could be obtained from headquarters.

At 9:30 A. M. Thursday we heard the roar of approaching planes and immediately there followed blasts of anti-aircraft fire.

These airplane attacks lasted throughout the day, directed, we later discovered, against a ship in the harbor.

We were permitted to wander outside the hotel sufficiently to see the rush and confusion as soldiers checked their belongings.

It was quite obvious that something unusual was taking place, but such questions as we dared to ask went unanswered.

At intervals we shuddered under air attack.

Feeling of Being Cooked.

We had the feeling of being cooked in a burning prison with only the medley of sound such as war can produce to guide us as to what was going on.

Now our vigil of suspense appears over.

We just have been informed by a British officer that British troops now are boarding ships and that the French already have left. We must choose, he says, our individual destiny as regards Namsos.

"Where," we asked, "are you proceeding?"

As calmly as though he were commenting on the weather, he replied, "England."

Three of us decided to go with the British forces who for hours had been embarking into launches for transfer to the ships in the harbor.

I am told the embarkation is taking place in the full glare of a large fire started by air bombs and the glow is visible from the hotel where I am writing.

I am informed further that the British had to leave behind large quantities of stores and heavier equipment.

It also seems that the news the troops are going only now has reached the residents of Namsos, leaving them stunned and bewildered.

It also seems that the news the troops are going has only now reached the residents of Namsos, leaving them stunned and bewildered. All the British soldiers appeared downcast over having to leave without getting a further chance to fight. The entire embarkation has, it seems, proceeded in excellent fashion.

[At this point Lodge's dispatch contains the parenthetical note that the rest was written "from the harbor."]

Behind us, as we step into a launch, is the ruined little town that caught the full fury of an air attack. Ahead of us in ships taking them to a new destination are the British tommies who only a short time ago landed in this area.

In the haste of the departure one British soldier was left behind. He took too long with his packing and arrived at the dock too late to catch the last launch. I was told that he was P. N. Brew, twenty-one years old, a British anti-aircraft gunner, and that Norwegian authorities started him toward the Swedish frontier. He will be interned after crossing the border.

It also seems that the news the troops are going only now has reached the residents of Namsos, leaving them stunned and bewildered.

All the British soldiers appeared downcast over having to leave without getting a further chance to fight.

The entire embarkation has, it seems, proceeded in excellent fashion.

It is apparent that this means the end of the campaign in the Steinkjer sector since only the Norwegians now are left to hold the Germans.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—At this point Lodge's dispatch contains the parenthetical note that the rest was written "from the harbor."]

Behind us, as we step into a launch, is the ruined little town that caught the full fury of an air attack.

Ahead of us in ships taking them to a new destination are the British Tommies who only a short time ago landed in this area.

British Soldier Left Behind

It is a strange scene—curious product of a great war. . . .

In the haste of the departure one British soldier was left behind. He took too long with his packing and arrived at the dock too late to catch the last launch.

I was told he was P. N. Brew, 21, a British anti-aircraft gunner, and that Norwegian authorities started him toward the Swedish frontier.

He will be interned after crossing the border.

NORSE SEE THEIR WAR OVER

Paris Hears Troops Withdrawn Are Going to Narvik—British Units Badly Cut Up.

By GUNNAR KNUTSSON,
Staff Correspondent of the Stockholm Svenska Dagbladet.

ON THE STEINKJER FRONT, Northern Norway, May 3 (AP).—British and French troops which had landed north of German-held Trondheim for the campaign against the Nazi invasion embarked last night in Namsos Harbor and sailed away.

The entrance of German troops in this sector is awaited at any moment—perhaps within 24 hours.

As a result of the new withdrawal north of Trondheim following the removal of allied forces from the Andalsnes region south of Trondheim, it is believed here that the war in Norway virtually is finished.

Tried to Get to Namsos.

Despite various denials given out last night, it was obvious then that the British intended to leave the Steinkjer area (60 miles north of Trondheim and 35 miles south of Namsos).

The first became clear to me when late last night I tried to get to Namsos. A British officer told me that if I did succeed in getting through, I could not get back. I therefore assumed something was going on which I was not supposed to witness.

It can now be stated freely that the Steinkjer fighting proved somewhat disastrous for the British. In heavy fighting on April 21 an entire British battalion was cut up by a German company. (A company is about one-fourth the size of a battalion, which is usually about 800 men.)

What really has hindered the Germans from advancing for several days past has been the heroic defense by Norwegian volunteer units.

Norse Fight Now Hopeless.

The Norwegian fight against the invaders now appears hopeless.

The Norwegians are suffering from lack of ammunition and other supplies.

I was told that their total munitions would not suffice for 10 minutes of heavy firing.

The British left great quantities of supplies behind them at Namsos, including trucks and high-wheeled army cars, when they embarked on six large transport ships which were escorted by several destroyers.

All available Norwegian trucks and cars have been mustered to rush these suppliess down to the Norwegian troops remaining on the Steinkjer front.

Even so, the fight appears hopeless to the extreme and the Norwegians now are being encircled.

NIGHT LEAD EMBARKATION (BUDGET--SUBS FRONT)

BY J.NORMAN LODGE

NAMSOS, NORWAY-(BY COURIER TO GRONG, NORWAY)-(THURSDAY)-MAY 2-(11:30 P.M.)-(AP)-I AM EMBARKING TONIGHT ABOARD A BRITISH DESTROYER AFTER A PRISONER'S FURTIVE GLIMPSES OF THE ALLIED WITHDRAWAL FROM THE NAMSOS SECTOR. A BRITISH OFFICER TELLS ME CALMLY THAT THE TROOPS' DESTINATION IS "ENGLAND."

THIS SAILING TAKES PLACE AFTER AN ALL-DAY AIR ATTACK ON RUINED NAMSOS.

THE BRITISH TOMMIES GOING ABOARD THEIR SHIPS APPEAR DOWN IN THE MOUTH ABOUT IT ALL. THEY WANT A FURTHER CHANCE TO FIGHT. THEY LANDED HERE, READY FOR WAR, ONLY A COUPLE OF WEEKS AGO.

MY IMPRESSION IS THAT THE EMBARKATION PROCEEDS IN EXCELLENT FASHION, IN SPITE OF THE BOMBS.

MAY 4 1940

I AM TOLD THE TROOP DEPARTURE WAS LIGHTED BY THE GLARE OF A HUGE FIRE SET BY AIR BOMBS. SOME OF THAT GLARE WAS VISIBLE IN A SMOKY LITTLE HOTEL WHERE I, UNDER BRITISH ARREST, WROTE SOME OF THESE LINES

ALSO, I HAVE JUST BEEN INFORMED THAT THE RESIDENTS OF NAMSOS ARE STUNNED AND BEWILDERED BY THE NEWS THAT THE TROOPS ARE GOING. I HAVE LEARNED THE BRITISH LEFT BEHIND THEM LARGE QUANTITIES OF SUPPLIES AND WAR EQUIPMENT.

A LAUNCH IS TAKING US AWAY AND WE CAN LOOK BACKWARD TO WRECKED LITTLE NAMSOS--A STRANGE SCENE, CURIOUS PRODUCT OF A GREAT WAR.

THIS WEIRD ADVENTURE STARTED WEDNESDAY NIGHT WHEN I, WITH OTHER NEWSMEN AND CAMERAMEN, PASSED A BRITISH OUTPOST INTO TERRITORY OCCUPIED THEN BY THE FRENCH AND BECAME CONSCIOUS OF GREAT EXCITEMENT.

FRENCH OFFICERS RUSHED ABOUT ISSUING ORDERS AND SOLDIERS BUSILY GOT THEIR GEAR TOGETHER AND PLACED THEMSELVES IN MARCHING FORMATION.

I WAS WITH ARTHUR MENKEN AND BONNEY POWELL, CAMERAMEN FOR PARAMOUNT AND FOX MOVIETONE, AND FRANK MUTO, PHOTOGRAPHER AND CORRESPONDENT FOR THE LONDON DAILY EXPRESS.

AFTER WE PASSED INTO THE AREA OCCUPIED BY THE TROOPS WE WALKED THROUGH SHIMMERING TWILIGHT ALONG A ROAD ON WHICH COLUMNS OF MEN WERE MARCHING SILENTLY ALONG.

ONCE IN NAMSOS WE TRIED FOR LODGINGS--AND IMMEDIATELY WERE PLACED UNDER MILITARY ARREST.

WITHOUT CEREMONY THE BRITISH TOLD US WE WEREN'T WELCOME THERE, THAT WE COULD ASK NO QUESTIONS AND WE SHOULD MAKE NO MOVE FROM THE VICINITY OF THE HOTEL UNTIL HEADQUARTERS COULD GIVE INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING US.

THROUGHOUT THAT NIGHT WE GOT VERY LITTLE IDEA OF WHAT WAS GOING ON AND THIS MORNING THERE CAME THAT FAMILIAR RACKET OF MODERN WAR--THE ROAR OF ATTACKING PLANES.

AT ONCE THERE FOLLOWED THE ROAR OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS.

THROUGHOUT THE DAY THESE AIR ATTACKS WENT ON. LATER WE LEARNED THEY WERE DIRECTED AGAINST A SHIP IN THE HARBOR.

EVEN THOUGH WE WERE PERMITTED TO WANDER ONLY IN THE CLOSE VICINITY OF THE HOTEL WE WERE CONSCIOUS OF THE RUSH AND CONFUSION AS SOLDIERS PACKED THEIR BELONGINGS.

THE QUESTIONS WE ASKED WENT UNANSWERED.

TIME AND AGAIN WE CRINGED FROM THE AIR ATTACK.

MAY 4 1940

WE HAD THE FEELING OF BEING COOKED IN A BURNING PRISON. WE HAD ONLY THE MEDLEY OF WAR TO TELL US WHAT WAS GOING ON.

FINALLY A BRITISH OFFICER TOLD US THE FRENCH ALREADY HAD LEFT, THAT THE BRITISH WERE LEAVING AND THAT WE MUST CHOOSE WHETHER WE WANTED TO STAY OR REMAIN.

WE WANTED TO KNOW WHERE THE TROOPS WERE PROCEEDING.

"ENGLAND," HE SAID, AS IF HE WERE ANSWERING A QUESTION ABOUT THE WEATHER.

MENKEN, POWELL AND I DECIDED TO GO WITH THE BRITISH FORCES. MUTO ELECTED TO REMAIN.

SAYS BRITAIN MUST ACT TO SAVE PRESTIGE

Attention Turns Mainly To Mediterranean And Mussolini

Reich To Fulfill Obligations, Spokesman Says, When Duce Decides

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 3—Germany boasted of full preparedness tonight to resist any stroke by Britain to offset her "catastrophic defeat" in Norway.

Alert for action they said must come from the British in an effort to revive their prestige, Germans said "we are prepared, come what may," in any new theater of war while mopping up proceeds quickly in Norway. They predicted this task would be finished in less than two weeks except for the besieged far northern port of Narvik.

Attention mainly was riveted on the Mediterranean as the possible scene of British action following Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement yesterday of the concentration of a British and French battle fleet at Alexandria.

Authorized sources emphasized, however, that it is up to Premier Mussolini of Italy to decide what to do about the Mediterranean situation.

Whatever his decision, it was said, Germany then will fulfill her obligations.

Germans asserted their attention also was directed unceasingly toward the Netherlands, Belgium and Scandinavia as possible places for British action.

In this atmosphere Germans said their motto is: "Wherever Britain strikes, we will strike back doubly hard."

At almost the same hour that authorized spokesmen boasted of German preparedness, Adolf Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering were giving confidential pep talks to 6,000 army and air-force officers and S. S. (Elite Guard) leaders in Berlin's Sportspalast.

Hitler, according to the only sentence of his talk released for publication, paraphrased Shakespeare's words in Hamlet, "To be, or not to be: That is the question," in saying the present war is "a fight for being, or not being, of the German people."

In late afternoon reports on the Norwegian campaign, DNB, official news agency, said there was increased fighting in the Narvik region, that in the Steinkjer region north of Trondheim there was "lively reconnaissance activity," and that in western and southern Norway "the situation . . . can generally be designated as pacified."

Claims 135 Units Of Fleet

Following the regular high command communique, containing claims to blows against Allied sea power, DNB reported that 135 units of the British fleet had been put out of action since April 9, the day the Norwegian invasion started.

Basing its compilation on official reports of the high command, the agency said ships sunk or set on fire included nine cruisers, nine destroyers, twenty-two submarines, twenty-three troop transports and one miscellaneous craft, while ships severely damaged included seven battleships, fourteen cruisers, nine destroyers, three airplane carriers and thirty-eight transports.

Today's high command communique said the German navy had destroyed two enemy submarines in the Skagerrak, while warplanes on Wednesday hit at least one aircraft carrier, and probably two, and one destroyer, in bombing attacks, and on Thursday severely damaged a cruiser, raided another and sank a transport.

Foreign Office sources charged Chamberlain with "plans for widening the area of combat" because of the sending of a battle fleet to Alexandria and asked whether Rumania, Greece or Yugoslavia was to be "the next victim."

"Or is all this one gigantic bluff to camouflage plans elsewhere?" they asked.

"After his catastrophic defeat in Norway," they added, "Churchill (British First Lord of Admiralty Winston Churchill) is yearning for vengeance.

"He will try to convince his defeat by success elsewhere, but we are forewarned and ready."

Plans Ready If Dikes Are Cut

Informed quarters said Germany stands ready to give a military account of herself on every possible sector.

Along the entire Western Front millions of trained soldiers and modern engines of war have been in readiness for months in case the Allies should try to pierce the West Wall.

Germans said that measures to meet the situation, even if dikes in the Netherlands are cut, had been envisaged long ago for use in event that the Netherlands or Belgium should be involved in the war.

German ports opposite Sweden have been closed to travelers for weeks because they were filled with troops Germans said were ready to meet any British attempt at brushing aside Swedish neutrality.

Germany also was portrayed as missing no opportunity for strengthening her position in the southeast. It was reported from Bucharest that Herbert Goering, a cousin of Field Marshal Goering, is in the Rumanian capital seeking conferences with King Carol.

Germans expressed a belief that in event of British action in the Mediterranean, Hungary would permit the passage of German troops.

Germany 'Prepared' For Counter-Drive In Mediterranean

Allies Are Defied to Find Success Outside Norway As Nazis Press 'Mop-up'

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER,
Associated Press Foreign Correspondent.

BERLIN, May 3.—Foreign Office quarters, proclaiming the allied withdrawal from Andalsnes "a catastrophic defeat," today defied the British to find "success elsewhere" while Adolf Hitler suddenly broke his silence to reiterate that the war was a fight for existence for the Germans.

Speaking before 6,000 army and air force officers and leaders of the SS, black-shirted Elite Guard in Berlin's Sportspalast said the conflict is "a fight for being, or not of being, of the German people."

FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN WILHELM GOERING, HEAD OF THE NAZIS AIR FORCE, ALSO GAVE THE OFFICERS A "PEP" TALK, BUT THIS AND HITLER'S SPEECH, EXCEPT THE SINGEE SENTENCE RELEASED FOR PUBLICATION, WERE KEPT CONFIDENTIAL.

Foreign office quarters asserted that Prime Minister Chamberlain, forced to look to other fields to wipe out the stain of the Norwegian defeat, was threatening action in the Mediterranean, but "come what may, Chamberlain will find Germany prepared for a counter-blow."

Rapid Progress in Cleanup.

The German high command concurrently announced rapid progress of the German forces in Norway in the cleanup against "isolated" resistance, acknowledged that the allies were squeezing the Nazi garrison at Narvik, in the far north, and summarized claims of new blows against allied sea power.

DNB, in its daily front summary this afternoon reported "lively reconnaissance activity north of Steinkjer," sixty miles north of Trondheim.

Namsos, the British had a base in that region, was seen as the next goal of the German forces.

Despite the scouting activity, the situation in the Namsos sector was reported by DNB in general to be unchanged.

DNB reported "increased fighting activity in the Narvik region" by the British and asserted this obviously was aimed at wiping out the unfavorable impression created by their withdrawal from Andalsnes, south of Trondheim.

Germany's possession of Andalsnes after the Allied withdrawal so consolidated her position, DNB said, that "the situation in western and southern Norway can generally be designated as pacified." A major part of Norwegian divisions there were said to have capitulated and their demobilization was described as "proceeding on schedule."

In the war at sea the high command said the navy destroyed two submarines in the Skagerrak, while warplanes on May 1 scored hits on at least one aircraft carrier, and possibly two, and one destroyer and on May 2 "severely damaged" a cruiser, attacked another cruiser and sank a transport ship.

135 Ships Claimed.

DNB, official German news agency, reported that 135 units of the British fleet had been put out of action since April 9, the day Germany invaded Norway.

Basing its claim on official reports of the high command, the agency said 84 ships either were sunk or set afire and 71 were damaged.

The DNB compilation listed twenty-three British transports as sunk or set on fire and thirty-eight as damaged. Most of these losses occurred after April 23, it said. Seven battleships were listed as damaged up to April 22.

The figures given for ships sunk or set on fire since April 9 were: Cruisers, 9; destroyers, 9; submarines, 22; troop transports, 23, and miscellaneous, 1.

Ships severely damaged: Battleships, 7; cruisers, 14; destroyers, 9; airplane carriers, 3, and transports, 38.

WE934PED

Of these it claimed that forty-three cases of damage occurred after April 22. The seven battleships were reported damaged between April 9 and 22.

While the Germans were cleaning up Norway in the region south of Trondheim, the High Command said that quiet prevailed north of Trondheim except at Narvik, where "enemy forces were slowly advancing toward our positions north and southwest" of the ore shipping port.

Affirming Germany's readiness for any British counter-blow as a result of the Norwegian defeat, Foreign Office circles said:

"We ask Chamberlain before the world: Who is the next victim of British plans for widening the area of combat?"

"Is it Rumania? Greece? Yugoslavia?" they asked.

"Or is all this one gigantic bluff to camouflage plans elsewhere?

"Is it another criminal plan coming from Churchill's (Winston Churchill, Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty) brains for exerting pressure upon Italy?

"Is Weygand (Gen. Maxime Weygand, allied commander in chief in the Near East) a trump card to be played while meanwhile action is launched in an entirely different region?

"We shall watch all this with icily cold deliberation.

"Wherever the British strike we will strike back.

Yearning for Vengeance Seen.

"After his catastrophic defeat in Norway, Churchill is yearning for vengeance.

"He will try to equalize his defeat by success elsewhere, but we are forewarned and ready."

Authorized sources intimated that the German intelligence service knows exactly where Britain is taking her forces from Norway.

In government circles, Mr. Chamberlain's speech is regarded as the "most embarrassing speech for him since the beginning of the war." He must do something, it was asserted, to save his prestige.

Authorized sources reiterated Germany's claim to the authenticity of the documents presented to foreign diplomats in facsimile by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop on April 27, which the Germans claimed, proved the allies responsible for spread of the war to Scandinavia.

Foreign correspondents have been invited to examine the originals for water marks and other evidences of their genuine character.

Allied Drive Seen Smashed.

Germany hailed the capture of Andalsnes as effectively smashing allied resistance in Norway. The morning press devoted practically all its front pages to the event.

Similar optimism prevailed in foreign office circles. An authoritative spokesman even voiced the opinion that the British withdrawal from Andalsnes, in which large quantities of war supplies were said to have been left behind, was only the beginning, and that "the rest of Norway will soon be abandoned by the allies."

Under the heading "Gallipoli 1940," the newspaper Deutsche Allegmeine Zeitung compared the British retreat from strategic Andalsnes with the defeat the allies suffered in the World War when they tried to force an entrance into the Dardanelles Straits, entrance to the Black Sea.

The only difference today, the paper said, "is that the new Gallipoli of Churchill wasn't lost at the faraway Dardanelles, but right before England's gates."

The well-informed Dienst aus Deutschland in commenting on the situation as a result of yesterday's military developments said that all of Central and Southern Norway south of Steinkjer is in German hands.

With possession of all railways and other lines of communication connecting Oslo, Bergen and Trondheim, the commentary said, the Norwegian campaign in that region is practically concluded. The mopping up of a few isolated and unimportant nests of resistance within this territory does not constitute a military problem, the Dienst aus Deutschland asserted.

Text of Nazi Communique

The high command's communique said:

"After the last British troops evacuated the Aandalsnes region and the city itself was in German hands, the pacification of all Norway is making rapid progress.

"The demobilization of Norwegian troops in west Norway is proceeding. German clean up troops are meeting resistance only at isolated spots from dispersed Norwegian units who are without knowledge of the situation in general.

"The enemy remained quiet north of Trondheim.

"Enemy forces were slowly advancing toward our positions north and southwest of Narvik. Attacks were repelled by our patrols.

"German naval forces, successfully continuing a submarine hunt in the Skagerrak, destroyed two additional U-boats.

"As reported in a special announcement the air force May 1 succeeded in dispersing an enemy naval unit with the certainty that one airplane carrier and one destroyer and probably a second airplane carrier were hit by bombs of medium caliber and two enemy chasers shot down.

"The air force on May 2 again raided enemy forces. One cruiser was severely damaged by two square hits forward. The effects of bombs on a second cruiser were not observes because of fog. One large transport ship was sunk by two hits of medium caliber.

"Several airports in Norway and Denmark were bombed by the British without success.

"No special events on the Western Front."

DESPITE TONIGHT'S ANNOUNCEMENT, A RELIABLE MILITARY SOURCE EARLIER IN THE DAY HAD DECLARED EMPHATICALLY THAT GREAT BRITAIN HAS "NO INTENTION OF ABANDONING NORWAY."

GLOOM NEVERTHELESS SPREAD OVER THE ROOMS OF THE NORWEGIAN LEGATION AND THE OMINOUS WORD "SUBMISSION" WAS HEARD THERE FOR THE FIRST TIME.

EVIDENCE THAT THE BRITISH PLAN WAS TO TRANSFER AT LEAST SOME TROOPS TO OTHER NORWEGIAN AREAS WAS SEEN, HOWEVER, IN A STATEMENT ISSUED TONIGHT TO THIS EFFECT:

"MAJOR GENERAL PAGET, IN HIS PLAN FOR THE EVACUATION OF ANDALSNES, PROPOSED TO TRANSFER WITH THE BRITISH FORCES ALL THE NORWEGIAN TROOPS WHICH THE NORWEGIAN HIGH COMMAND DECIDED COULD BEST BE EMPLOYED IN OTHER AREAS. THESE FAILED, HOWEVER, TO DIVERT LONDON FROM THE CRUX OF THE SITUATION--FURTHER WITHDRAWALS FROM NORWAY.

EVEN THE NEWS THAT THE ALLIED FLEET HAD SLIPPED INTO ALEXANDRIA RAISED HARDLY A RIPPLE IN DIPLOMATIC AND MILITARY CIRCLES.

ADMITS QUITTING NAMSOS

Paris Reports Troops From South of Norway Have Been Shifted to Narvik Sector.

LONDON, May 3 (A. P.).—The War Office announced tonight that the Allied forces re-embarked aboard their ships at Namsos Thursday and withdrew from that sector north of Trondheim.

The withdrawal was carried out without loss, the communique said.

The text of the War Office communique:

"In accordance with the general plan of withdrawal from the immediate neighborhood of Trondheim, Allied troops were re-embarked at Namsos last night.

"The withdrawal and re-embarkation was carried out with complete success and without loss.

"Allied troops advancing in the Narvik area were counter-attacked on May 1 and May 2 by the enemy. Both attacks were repulsed.

"Many enemy dead were left in front of our positions and some prisoners were taken by the Allied troops."

BritishSpokesmen Reemphasize Determination to Carry on in Norway; Royal Air Force Successes Against Nazis Danish, Norwegian Bases Reported

London, May 3—(AP)—British spokesmen today reemphasized Britain's determination to fight on in Norway while the arrival of powerful British-French naval forces at Alexandria stressed the Allies' determination to be on guard in the Mediterranean against any German or Italian move.

As if in confirmation of statements that the war in Norway would go on, the air ministry reported new successes for Royal Air force bombers in raids on German bases in Denmark and Norway.

In the face of reports from Stockholm that the Namsos region north of Trondheim had been abandoned by the Allied forces as was the Andalsnes sector to the south, and that both moves indicated a general Allied withdrawal, one reliable military source said:

"The government of Norway is still in being and we have no idea of abandoning it or the campaign."

While other authorities supported this statement, there was no word official or otherwise, on the situation at Namsos.

The Stockholm reports said the British left the Steinkjer-Namsos area last night, and the French the night before, thereby abandoning the northern jaw of the pincers by which the Allies sought to capture Trondheim. The southern jaw collapsed with the withdrawal from Andalsnes, dramatically announced to Commons yesterday by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

(In Berlin the high command reported new damage inflicted by Germany's far-ranging air force to British warships and transports, but DNB, the official news agency, reported the situation at Namsos unchanged. The agency, however, indicated that area would be the next goal of the Nazi war machine's drive.)

Destination of Troops Unknown.

The air ministry communique revealed that the British warplanes had been engaged in protecting the convoy of warships and transports by which the British army withdrawn from Andalsnes was being carried "elsewhere," as Chamberlain announced yesterday, without indicating whether it was bound for another Norwegian battlefield or one more distant.

The air ministry said the Royal Air force extended its bombing attacks on German bases in Denmark and Norway.

The ministry announced the R. A. F. "heavily and successfully" bombed the Danish airfield at Ry, in North Jutland, which is used extensively by the Norway-bound Nazi air transports ferrying troops to the war zone. The attacks began yesterday evening and continued during the night.

The day and night bombings of Stavanger, on Norway's southwest coast, continued, the ministry said, and the Fornebu airport near Oslo was attacked again last night.

British fighting planes drove invading aircraft off the southeast coast of England today, the air ministry announced.

Chamberlain Faces Test.

While diplomatic circles predicted a severe test for Prime Minister Chamberlain's government when the House of Commons begins its inquiry into the Norwegian campaign Tuesday the prime minister himself conferred for half an hour today with opposition Leader Clement R. Attlee and Deputy Leader Arthur Greenwood.

London newspaper military surveys credited German air power with the important victory in the second phase of operations, while giving British sea power the upper hand in the first phase.

The average Briton was shocked by Chamberlain's announcement of the withdrawal from southern Norway.

"It's bad, isn't it?" was a frequent comment.

The Evening News commented that the man in the street "will take a good deal of convincing before he joins Mr. Chamberlain's placid satisfaction that 'the balance of the advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces."

"Public opinion has received a shock," was The Star's view, "but it is certain that the general effect will be to strengthen rather than to weaken the general determination that the campaign in Norway shall be continued with all possible vigor."

Fears of Italy Alleged.

Chamberlain's announcement yesterday that the Allied battle fleet was moving into the eastern Mediterranean allayed somewhat the feeling of some members of Parliament and the public that the blow to British military prestige in Norway might encourage Italy to enter the war on Germany's side.

Press and public generally reserved judgment on Chamberlain's conduct of the war pending a fuller report next week by the prime minister and Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty.

The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor party, commented sarcastically on Chamberlain's statement, declaring editorially, "Britain, democracy's champion, has suffered a major defeat in Norway.

"For that defeat Mr. Chamberlain must accept first responsibility.

"Did he appear to understand the severity of the shock which he was delivering to the British people? . . . No. His deepest emotion—apart from complacency—appears to have been one of injured surprise."

The Herald added that within a few hours of Chamberlain's "confession, one of his mouthpieces, Lord Stanhope, was denying that the Norwegian defeat was a setback and even doubting whether it could be called a 'check'."

The Herald's political commentator said cabinet changes were unlikely since the cabinet would take "joint responsibility for what has happened."

The press in general displayed no concern over Chamberlain's warning of the possibility of a direct Nazi attack on England but criticisms reflected uneasiness over wnether the government was prepared to counter German strokes in other directions.

MAY 4 1940

Despite the charges made in many quarters that the Norwegian campaign had been mishandled, the British people seemed to have retained confidence in their inherent strength to gain ultimate victory.

Under the caption, "Still True," the London News Chronicle published on its front page a statement Mr. Churchill made in 1915 after the withdrawal from the Dardanelles:

"We are passing through a bad time now and it will probably be worse before it is better, but that it will be better if we only endure and persevere I have no doubt whatever. . . .

"All the small States are hypnotized by German military pomp and precision. They see the glitter of the episode, but they do not see or realize the capacity of ancient and mighty nations, against whom Germany is warring, to endure adversity and to put up with disappointments and mismanagement."

[A dispatch from Oslo stated that the Germans in charge of the erstwhile Norwegian capitol had announced that British bombers had raided the city last night for the third time in a week, and that several houses, including one which contained numerous paintings by Norwegian masters, were set afire by incendiary bombs. Four British airmen, who bailed out when their plane was hit by anti-aircraft fire, were captured, the Germans asserted. A fifth occupant, wounded in the plane, crashed with the craft near Drammen, twenty-five miles southwest of Oslo on the east side of Oslo Fjord it was said.]

British Bomb Nazi Airports

Air Ferry Terminals in Denmark and Norway Under Heavy Attack.

LONDON, May 3 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today that British planes had carried out heavy attacks on German air bases in Denmark and Norway.

"The large Danish air field known as Ry, lying in open country on the shore of Lake Salten Langso in north Jutland, is known to be extensively used by the enemy in connection with operations by the enemy in Norway," the Ministry declared in a communique.

"This air base has been heavily and successfully bombed by Royal Air Force aircraft.

"The attacks began yesterday evening and continued during the night.

"A daylight attack was made on Stavanger (Norway), and both this base and Fornebu (the airport outside Oslo) also were bombed during the night.

"Numerous R. A. F. aircraft were engaged throughout yesterday in providing protection against air attack for the convoy transporting British military forces from Andalsnes.

"No British aircraft was lost in any of these operations."

German Plane Shot Down.

Later the Air Ministry announced that the gunner of a British reconnaissance plane had shot down one of three German fighting planes today in a fierce air battle near the island of Borkum, in the North Sea off the German coast. The gunner later was killed by bullets from one of the other German fighters.

The Ministry's communique said:

"Early today a reconnaissance aircraft of the Royal Air Force was attacked by three enemy fighters near the Island of Borkum. In the fierce battle which followed the gunner of the British aircraft was killed, but not before he had shot down one of the enemy.

"The two remaining fighters eventually broke off the engagement. Our pilot and navigator were both wounded, but succeeded in bringing their aircraft safely back to the base."

Report on Naval Aviation.

Also today the Admiralty issued a communique stating that the British Naval Air Force had inflicted "severe losses" on German aircraft in Norway and that "the most vigorous attacks have been pressed home against vital German bases, transports and supply ships."

The communique said:

"'We are proud of the fleet air arm.' A message of congratulation in these words has been signaled to officers and men of the fleet air arm who for the past week have been taking part in sustained and large scale operations in Norway during which they have achieved the most brilliant success.

"Severe losses have been inflicted on enemy aircraft attempting to bomb Allied troops and ships in Norway while the most vigorous attacks have been pressed home against vital German bases, transports and supply ships.

Ten Nazi Planes Destroyed.

"From the evening of Wednesday, April 24, onward, naval aircraft have been supporting our forces on land against a vastly superior air force working from shore bases. In the course of these operations alone at least ten enemy aircraft have been destroyed and many others damaged.

"On Thursday, April 25, naval aircraft delivered an attack in force on enemy bases and shipping in the Trondheim area. At Varnes three large hangars were destroyed and other buildings on the airdrome were damaged and destroyed.

"A grounded enemy bomber aircraft and nine seaplanes at their moorings were successfully attacked with bombs and machine-gun fire.

Enemy Tankers Set Afire.

"At Thanshavn two enemy tankers were set on fire while four supply ships and two transports were attacked with good results and a direct hit was obtained on a large store depot.

"On Sunday, April 28, naval aircraft returned to attack at Varnes when in a most determined onslaught all remaining hangars on the airdrome were destroyed together with several grounded aircraft.

"The attack on enemy flying boats and seaplanes achieved excellent results. In the course of these operations five more enemy aircraft were shot down.

"On the same day three naval aircraft broke up an attack on one of his Majesty's carriers by seven enemy aircraft. Two of the enemy aircraft were brought down.

"Operations of this magnitude must inevitably be attended by some loss, and it is regretted that the crews of six aircraft are missing. Details of casualties are being communicated to the next of kin as soon as possible.

"Since the German invasion of Norway his Majesty's ships have been exposed to repeated enemy bombing attacks. No losses other than those already announced have been incurred while at least twenty enemy aircraft have been shot down and others damaged by anti-aircraft gunfire of the fleet."

LONDON SAYS NORWAY WON'T BE ABANDONED

Spokesmen Declare Britain Will Keep Up War in That Quarter.

GENERAL RETREAT IS DENIED

Paris Announces Blue Devils Have Joined Siege Forces at Narvik.

LONDON, May 3 (A. P.).—A reliable military spokesman reiterated today that Great Britain has "no intention of abandoning Norway."

Other authorities, in the face of reports from Stockholm that the Namsos area above Trondheim had been abandoned like the Andalsnes region below that German-held port, also emphasized Britain's determination to press the fight for Norway.

There was no official comment on the Swedish report and the military spokesman who discussed operations in Norway refused to discuss the situation in the Namsos sector.

This informant scoffed at reports that the withdrawal from Andalnes, port south of Trondheim, was preliminary to a general retreat.

Headquarters Transferred.

"The Government of Norway is still in being and we have no idea of abandoning it or the campaign," he said, adding that the Norwegian commander-in-chief has transferred headquarters to another region.

There is no news from the Narvik area, the spokesman said. However, he asserted "our forces probably still are closing in on the town—but it is slow business."

He said that the British rear guard action before the abandonment of Andalsnes "handled the Germans roughly."

The technical military inference drawn from the withdrawal, he said, was that "our troops have shown they are as good as their forefathers ever were. They were able after weeks of marching and fighting to perform the most difficult of military operations, rear guard action, without loss of life in the face of overwhelming air superiority.

"This air superiority is the greatest problem we have to deal with today."

PAGET'S STRATEGY COVERED RETREAT

Deploying by Day, He Got Out of Norway by Night.

LONDON, May 3 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Bernard Paget, who won the praise of Prime Minister Chamberlain for his direction of the British retreat from south Norway, was virtually unknown to the public until today.

Gen. Paget is 51 years old, the red-headed son of the late Bishop of Oxford.

The Prime Minister credited him with successfully directing the most difficult of military operations—withdrawal to the sea in the face of an enemy with superior numbers and arms.

Troops, supplies and wounded retreated and embarked by night while by daylight the British attempted to deceive the German air scouts by pretending to deploy for an offensive.

Gen. Paget, formerly commandant of the Army Staff College at Camberley, received wounds in the world war that crippled his left arm permanently.

Today strategists were comparing his Norwegian withdrawal with the 1915 operation by which 134,000 men were withdrawn from Gallipoli on the failure of the Allied campaign to force the Dardanelles for a contact with Russia in the world war.

British Bombers Wage Oslo Raid

Oslo, May 3 — (AP) — British bombers raided this German-occupied capital of Norway last night for the third time in a week, an official German announcement said, reporting one raider had been downed.

Several houses, including one which contained numerous paintings by Norwegian masters, were set afire by incendiary bombs, the Germans said.

Four British airmen, who bailed out when their plane was hit by anti-aircraft fire, were captured. A Fifth occpant, wounded in the plane, crashed with the craft near Drammen, 25 miles southwest of Oslo on the east side of Oslo fjord.

(In previous raids the British have said their attacks were centered on Oslo's airport, terminus for German aerial transports ferrying troops to Norway.)

Swedes Indorse Editorial Picturing Neutrals' Plight

Mediterranean Now Seen as New Battleground by Newspaper

STOCKHOLM, May 3 (AP).—Swedes in general tonight subscribed to this belief, published by the newspaper "Tidningen," following the Allied withdrawals from Norway:

"It seems as if the search for a battleground has been resumed; as if Norway had been given up as being too difficult, to be replaced by the Mediterranean. . . . Neutrals have been told again they must rely on themselves if threatened."

The Swedish government refrained from comment but one source close to it said bluntly: "It appears we can expect nothing from the western powers. . . . Sweden's position from the point of view that she might be attacked seems considerably lessened.

"Economically it leaves Germany and Russia as our natural customers."

Mrs. Florence Jaffray Harriman, American Minister to Norway, at present is here. A friend said it was unlikely she would make a new effort to contact the Norwegian government.

London, May 3 (AP)—The Swedish radio said tonight that a "sabotage plot" had been uncovered in Stockholm with the finding of large quantities of explosives and more than a hundred bombs in a private house.

Several foreigners were reported arrested.

The announcer said acts of sabotage apparently were planned all over Sweden.

Russia And Germany Reported Interested In Swedish Neutrality

Moscow, May 3 (AP)—Germany and Russia in an exchange of information two weeks ago "noted that both states regard themselves interested in the preservaion of Sweden's neutrality," Tass said tonight.

The official news agency said the exchange took place in Moscow between Soviet and Nazi representatives under the Russian-German non-aggressino pact "regarding mutual information and consultation."

The statement described as "not corresponding to the facts" statements which it said were published abroad to the effect that Moscow had sent Berlin a not ethat it would consider German acion agasint Sweden as an unfriendly act.

It said other reports that Russia had stated she could not permit German occupation of the Finnish-owned Aland Islands at the entrance of the Gulf of Bothnia likewise failed to "correspond to the facts."

Paris Sees New Allied Campaign To Woo Italy

Paris, May 3 (AP) — Semi-official French sources indicated tonight that as a result of conversations between the United State sand Italy, a new Allied campaign is in the offing to woo Italy away from Germany with economic benefits.

The Telefrance News Agency, after stressing the risk Italy would run if she entered the war on the side of the Axis, declared:

"An attitude of neutrality clearly and definitely affirmed would, without in any way touching Italian prestige, safeguard her from this risk and permit her to play the role which belongs to her in the Mediterranean basin after all the tension and distrust disappears."

Hamsun Urges Norwegians to Abandon Fight

Germany Is Helping Crush 'England's Tyranny Over Us,' Novelist Tells People

OSLO, May 3 (AP).—Knut Hamsun, Norwegian novelist who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1920, sent to all Oslo newspapers today a manifesto accusing the British of infringing on Norway's neutrality and urging Norwegians to lay down their arms against Germany. The Germans, Hamsun declared, were helping crush English "tyranny."

His statement, addressed to his fellow Norwegians, said:

"When the Britishers in their prodigious savagery forced a passage into Joessing Fjord and infringed our neutrality, you did nothing about it.

[He referred to the British invasion of Norwegian territorial waters when the German prison-ship Altmark was boarded Feb. 17 and 300 captive Britons were freed in Joessing Fjord.]

"But when the Germans occupied Norway to prevent war in our country, you did something: You conspired with our runaway King and his private government, and mobilized.

"It is no use. . . . England is incapable of helping you, except with small flocks here and there roving about the valleys begging for food.

"Norwegians! Throw away your rifles and return home. The Germans are fighting for us and now are crushing England's tyranny over us and all neutrals."

Denies German Air Force Bombed Red Cross Ships

D. N. B. Asserts Norwegian Reports Are 'Propaganda'

BERLIN, May 3 (AP).—D. N. B. German official news agency, denied today Norwegian reports that the Nazi air force had attacked Red Cross ships in Norwegian waters.

The Norwegian Legation in Stockholm asserted yesterday that the Norwegian government had lodged a protest with the International Red Cross at Geneva charging that German planes had bombed Norwegian hospital ships identified by Red Cross markings en route to northern ports, "causing serious loss of life, including doctors and nurses."

D. N. B. asserted that the Nazi air force "never attacks buildings, cars or ships under the Red Cross sign," and said such reports were "propaganda."

THE WAR OFFICE SPOKESMAN WOULD NOT CONFIRM OR DENY UNOFFICIAL REPORTS THAT THE BRITISH WITHDRAWN FROM THE AREA SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM HAD BEEN TAKEN TO THE NARVIK SECTOR, BUT HE DID SAY THAT "ADDITIONAL STRATEGIC SHIFTING OF TROOPS WAS POSSIBLE," AND THAT SUCH SHIFTS WERE MORE PRACTICAL BY BOAT THAN OVER NORWAY'S POOR ROADS.

WHILE PARIS COMMENTATORS SAID THAT THE ABANDONMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN SOUTH OF TRONDHEIM WAS A "SETBACK, THE IMPORTANCE OF WHICH IT WOULD BE VAIN TO DENY," THE WAR OFFICE SPOKESMAN ASSERTED THAT THE BRITISH OPERATIONS AROUND THE CENTRAL NORWEGIAN PORT HAD DELAYED THE LIAISON OF NAZI FORCES FROM OSLO AND TRONDHEIM AND HAD ENABLED THE ALLIES TO CONSOLIDATE THEIR POSITION IN THE NORTH.

THE SPOKESMAN ASSERTED THAT THE NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN SO FAR HAD COST THE GERMANS "AT LEAST 32 TRANSPORTS," WITH "A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF MEN, AND THAT 500 GERMAN PLANES AND OTHER EQUIPMENT USED IN NORWAY HAD CONSUMED VAST QUANTITIES OF GASOLINE, A WAR COMMODITY WHICH THE SPOKESMAN SAID GERMANY MUST USE SPARINGLY.

British Joined By 'Blue Devils' In Narvik Siege

Paris Says English Troops From South of Trondheim Went North After Retreat

PARIS, May 3 (AP).—The War Ministry announced today that a detachment of "Blue Devils"—Alpine Chasseurs—had arrived at Norway's far northern port of Narvik to reinforce the siege of the German garrison there.

British troops withdrawn from the Norwegian area south of Trondheim were reported here to have been taken north to the Narvik sector. The reports were unofficial, but a War Office spokesman said additional "strategic shifting" of troops was possible. The Allies had found, he added, that such shifts were more practical by boat than over Norway's poor roads.

The spokesman also described the action at Narvik as "clean up" operations, and said the Nazis in the ore port, on the defensive, were being hunted out of hiding by Allied forces.

The spokesman said French ski troops seized eighteen German prisoners yesterday and termed British withdrawal from the Aandalsnes area "a strategic incident." The effect of British operations around Trondheim, he said, had been to delay liaison of German troops at Oslo and Trondheim and safeguard Allied positions in the north. In the Steinkjer-Namsos sector, he said, operations were progressing "very favorably."

The spokesman added that at least thirty-two German transports had been sunk by the Allied fleets in the Scandinavian campaign and that the Germans thus lost "a considerable number of men."

He estimated that there were 500 German planes in Norway and that these planes, with hundreds of others, engaged in bombing and in transporting troops, had consumed 500,000 tons of gasoline—a war commodity which, he added, Germany must use sparingly.

British Fleet Order Viewed As Move to Force Duce's Hand

Italy Appears Unperturbed by Allied Mediterranean Orders

Seen as Pressure on Italy.

ROME, May 3 (A. P.).—The re-enforcement of the Allied naval power in the Mediterranean was viewed here today as a move toward applying pressure on Italy for a clarification of her "non-belligerent" status.

The Allied action, announced yesterday by Prime Minister Chamberlain, left the Italians outwardly calm, and while Fascists spokesmen insisted that Italy is fully prepared to act the moment Premier Mussolini should give the order, observers saw some evidence that that day is not looked for immediately.

With the liner Rex en route to New York and other crack Italian liners on the high seas, they considered a sudden move unlikely at the present juncture.

Anxiety in some quarters, however, was heightened last night when it was reported in shipping circles in Genoa that British vessels in that port had received orders to leave the Mediterranean at once, returning to England by way of the Suez Canal. Today the British Consul said he knew of no such orders.

British Ship Reports.

The British on Tuesday announced that "pronouncements by Italians in responsible positions and the attitude of the press . . . make it necessary for his Majesty's Government to take precautions as regards British shipping which would normally pass through the Mediterranean."

Shippers said that the British collier Alex, which arrived in Genoa with 6,000 tons of coal, had been ordered by her owners to return empty to England. Two other British vessels, the Llandovery Castle and the Switzerland, were reported to have sailed from Genoa and still another, the Baltara, was ready to leave.

Vessels of the Italian lines continued on schedule, the Vulcania leaving Genoa for South America and the Roma making preparations to sail tomorrow for New York.

Called Mere Demonstration.

While the motive behind the re-enforcement of the Allied fleet in the Mediterranean was being weighed, some Fascists compared the move to the ineffective dispatch of the British Home Fleet there during the Ethiopian war. They said they believed the new action is only a demonstration intended to influence Italian policy.

Mr. Chamberlain said that Great Britain must be prepared for a possible breaking out of the war on new fronts in new German lightning strokes.

But the Italians attributed greater importance to the German victories in Norway than to symptoms that the war may be drawing near Italian shores.

Authoritative Italian spokesmen displayed an apparently complete indifference. "Let's wait and see what they're going to do," one of them said, adding: "We don't care anyway."

No Special War Moves.

The Italian fleet was reported concentrated last month for "naval maneuvers," but there has been no official news of its activities.

In Italy there is no external evidence of final preparations for war. The construction of anti-aircraft shelters and preparations for blackouts, which took place in all Italian cities last fall, have not been resumed.

On the other hand, basic war preparations have been going on steadily for several months. There are some 1,200,000 men under arms, and although there have been many rumors of the calling up of additional contingents these have not been confirmed.

The arms industry has been working at top speed, and the demolition of iron fences to provide additional raw material has already begun.

Emphasize Norwegian Disaster.

Laws have been enacted to provide for immediate civilian mobilization upon Italy's entrance into war.

Today's newspaper dispatches from London reported Mr. Chamberlain's announcement of the arrival of the Allied fleets in the eastern Mediterranean, but headlines ignored it. Instead they gave maximum prominence to what they described as "the Allies' cruel defeat in Norway."

Il Popolo di Roma said that in Norway "British dilettantism has given another poor exhibition." This paper said that the British withdrawal from Andalsnes would remain more memorable than the British defeat at Gallipoli in the world war.

Il Popolo said that it marveled that "in a democratic country like England a government forced to confess so openly a failure of its own political and military actions can still remain in power."

Mediterranean Moves Find Italians Cautious

Rome, May 3 (AP)—Italy, as though anxious to avoid war, displayed official caution tonight amidst tension over the Mediterranean which extended from Athens across the Atlantic to Washington.

The Italian tendency was to treat as unnecessary the maneuverings of Allied war fleets in the Mediterranean, now at Alexandria, as well as diplomatic attempts to keep the war from being spread by Italian action.

War Fears Caused In Greece By New Allied-Italian Moves

Anxiety Expressed As Fleets Gather And Fascists Push Air, Sea And Land Activity

[By the Associated Press]

KA1020PED

Athens, May 3—Arrival of a British-French battle fleet in Alexandria and reports of large-scale Italian naval, air and army concentrations in the Dodecanese Islands switched southeastern Europe's anxiety over possible spread of the war sharply to Greece today.

In Turkey, the Allied fleet's arrival at its Egyptian base was greeted as new evidence that Britain and France are determined to fulfill their obligations in the Near East, which include a mutual-assistance treaty with Turkey and guarantees of the independence of both Greece and Rumania.

There was no outward show of belief either in Greece or Turkey that war is imminent, but both countries pursued their defense preparations.

Reports received in diplomatic quarters of Italian reinforcements in the Dodecanese remained without official confirmation, but generally was given credence.

Opinions varied as to whether the Italian move had been taken to counter the Allied naval operations and the emergency measures put into effect in Egypt yesterday, or whether it was planned first and precipitated by the British-French action.

Tension in Yugoslavia, which had diminished a little with Italian diplomatic assurances of the last few days that there was no reason to fear an Italian thrust, became more acute as a result of the Mediterranean activities.

However, all of southeastern Europe was too wearied by recurrent war scares to show much emotion.

Defense Work In Greece

Defense preparations in Greece were pushed resolutely. King George II and his general staff will leave shortly for an inspection tour of frontier fortifications.

These include the "Metaxas Line," constructed along the Albanian frontier in the north after Italy's occupation of Albania in April last year.

The fortifications were built under the direction of Premier Jan Metaxas.

But even if Greece can rely on the line to the north, there is no such line of defense between her and the Dodecanese Islands.

Owned By Italy

Italian owned since Italy took them from the Ottoman Empire in the Balkan War of 1912, they lie along the Turkish side of the Ægean Sea, 400 miles air line northwest of Alexandria.

Key point in the new Italian military and naval concentrations is said to be the Island of Rhodes, largest of the group and only 375 miles from Alexandria. Here, according to the reports reaching diplomatic circles in Athens, Italy has stationed fifteen submarines.

The reports also said that the normal Italian garrisons in the islands have been reinforced by 50,000 to 55,000 fresh troops and that fighting planes are based on the Island of Leors, only forty-six minutes by air from Athens.

From its Dodecanese stronghold, rated one of the most formidable in the eastern Mediterranean, Italy can strike effectively in several directions.

Can Bid For Ægean

She is in position to make a strong bid for control of the entrance to the Ægean, through which ships must pass to reach the Dardanelles. Her planes, submarines and surface craft also would be a pronounced threat to Turkey, guardian of the Dardanelles and non-belligerent ally of Britain and France, and to sea communications between Turkey and the Allies in case of war.

On the Turkish side, officials long have been outspoken in asserting they would like to see Italy out of the Dodecanese, where they regard her military establishment and her naval and air bases as a pistol held at Turkey's side.

Rhodes is less than thirty miles from the Turkish mainland, and some of the other islands are nearer.

Turks still regard Italy as the power most likely to attack them, even while fearful of a German sweep into the Balkans and suspicious of Russian designs on the Dardanelles. Officials say Turkey has not forgotten Italy's designs on sparsely populated Anatolia and its great, undeveloped resources, and feels she still is desirous of more territory in that direction.

Today. in Istanbul, five more Germans were arrested on suspicion of spying and propaganda-spreading. In Ankara, it was reported that Hitler had sent for his Ambassador, Franz von Papen.

Isles Off Turkey Reinforced With 55,000 Men

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Greece, May 3.—Information reaching diplomatic quarters in Athens today said that Italian troops, warships and fighting planes were being concentrated in large numbers in the Dodecanese Islands in the Eastern Mediterranean.

The Dodecanese Islands are an Italian-owned group in the Aegean between Greece and Turkey, approximately 400 miles airline northwest of Alexandria, where a British and French battle fleet concentrated today.

Many Massed at Rhodes.

The Italian concentrations were reported especially heavy at the Island of Rhodes, 375 miles from Alexandria.

Diplomatic observers said the information, if confirmed, would explain the action of the allies in moving naval strength into the Eastern Mediterranean as well as extraordinary defense measures recently taken in Egypt.

Under emergency measures taken throughout Egypt, army and police leaves were canceled yesterday and all strategic points were placed under armed guard. Premier Aly Maher Pasha conferred with British Ambassador Sir Miles Lampson and defense chiefs and then stated that while the situation was serious there "is no occasion for immediate alarm."

55,000 Troops Reported.

Diplomatic reports said there were between 50,000 and 55,000 Italian troop reinforcements already in the Dodecanese to strengthen the regular garrisons.

Fifteen submarines were said to be lying off Rhodes, and many fighting planes were reported based at the Island of Leros, which is 46 minutes by bombing plane from Athens.

The Dodecanese are formidable strongholds in the Eastern Mediterranean.

From these islands Italy's planes, submarines and surface craft could make a strong bid for control of the entrance to the Aegean, through which vessels must pass to reach the Dardanelles, guarded by Turkey, non-belligerent ally of Britain and France.

Italian forces in the Dodecanese would also form a distinct threat to Turkey and to sea communications between Turkey and the allies, in case of war.

Allied Fleet Off Egypt.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May [illegible] (A. P.).—British and French naval forces arrived here today.

This concentration of "a British and French battle fleet, with cruisers and auxiliary craft" in the eastern end of the Mediterranean near the Suez Canal was announced yesterday in London by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The Allied naval move was disclosed only two days after Great Britain announced the diversion of merchant shipping from the Mediterranean in a sudden action which a British statement laid to "pronouncements by Italians in responsible positions and the attitude of the Italian press."

There was no mention of Italy whose leaders regard the Mediterranean as "our sea," in Mr. Chamberlain's statement, but Fascist interpreted it as a move toward applying pressure on Italy for clarification of her status as a "non-belligerent" ally of Germany

Fleet at Alexandria

ALEXANDRIA, May 3 (AP). — A British and French war fleet arrived this afternoon at this strategic east Mediterranean port at the mouth of the Nile and near the entrance to the Suez Canal. The naval force is expected to be augmented heavily soon.

Superseding the mid-Mediterranean British island of Malta in importance, Alexandria was put in readiness for any eventuality as the Allies, their major forces withdrawn from Norway, prepared for possible extension of the war to the Near East.

Coastal and anti-aircraft batteries were manned, military flying was reduced to conserve engines and personnel, and the "desert air watch" of lonely Egyptian sentinels linked by telephone was strung out across the sands from the Nile delta to the western frontier with Italian Libya.

French Resent Nazi Boasts on Loud Speaker, Retort in Kind, Then Bullets Fly

BASLE, Switzerland, May 3 (AP).—French and German soldiers got so worked up over an exchange of loud-speaker insults from one line to the other that the nearest thing to a battle yet stages on the Rhine front continued for an hour tonight.

It started when the broadcaster on a German musical program which entertains the French through a loud speaker departed from the usual insults to the British and compliments to the French to brag about the German victory in Norway.

MAY 4 1940

At this the excited French broadcaster that he made uncomplimentary references to Adolph Hitler.

A German sharpshooter took a pot shot at the French loud speaker with his rifle.

For an hour thereafter the whole sector north of Basel resounded with rifle, machine-gun and heavy artillery fire.

Military observers estimated that at least $50,000 worth of ammunition was used up by both sides—and they doubted whether any one in Germany's Westwall or France's Maginot Line had been wounded.

Nazi Envoy Called Home.

ANKARA, Turkey, May 3 (A. P.)—Franz von Papen, the German Ambassador to Turkey, was authoritatively reported today to have been called home urgently to Berlin for a conference with Adolf Hitler and to have arranged to leave by train tonight.

Authorities in Istanbul today arrested Prof. Hans von Osten, well-known archeologist, and four other Germans on suspicion of espionage and the spreading of German propaganda.

Prof. von Osten once took part in a University of Chicago expedition to Anatolia and at another time was on the staff of the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

[Dr. von Osten was a temporary assistant at the Metropolitan "a number of years ago," it was said at the museum today. At that time he was studying for the museum a collection of Oriental seal stones. Attaches there remember Dr. von Osten as an ardent archæologist.]

His wife, a Venezuelan, was reported to be in the United States.

Another of the arrested was an employee of the German consulate.

Nazi Activity In Balkans

Berlin, May 3 (AP)—A fresh indication of German activity in southeastern Europe came today with a report from Bucharest that Herbert Goering, a cousin of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, is in the Rumanian capital seeking conferences with King Carol.

Nazis Reported Massing On Hungarian Border

Budapest, Saturday, May 4 (AP)—Czech refugees arriving here today declared German mechanized troops in large numbers are concentrated in Slovakia along the Hungarian border at points from which they could make a quick dash into the Balkans.

It was reported also that more than 100,000 "lightning troops" were concentrated at Bruck on the Vienna-Budapest railway line; that three army corps were at Krakow, German-occupied Poland, and large forces were massed at Klakenfurt, Austria, near the Yugoslav border.

Nazi Ring Reported Smashed.

BUCHAREST, May 3 (A. P.).—Southeastern Europe's fluctuating fear of involvement in the European conflict centered today on Allied fleet movements in the Mediterranean and the reported smashing of a German "espionage center" in this Rumanian capital.

The police disclosed that they raided the basement of a building near the Royal Palace, in the heart of Bucharest, where a number of Germans and Polish refugees were arrested and a wireless sending and receiving set confiscated.

Concurrently it was reported from Sibiu, Transylvania, that the Rumanian counter-espionage forces had arrested and expelled a large number of German Army officers. In addition, many householders of German descent, accused of sheltering the officers, were said to have been deported.

British Experts Report U-Boat Peril 'Mastered'

Call Air Raids on Warships Complete Failure Except Where Craft Stand Still

LONDON, May 3 (AP).—British naval experts, surveying the first eight months of war, asserted today that Germany's submarines had been "mastered" and that air attacks on warships had proved a "complete failure" except where the ships were stationary.

In view of the new tension in the Mediterranean, additional interest was aroused by the further assertion that Italy, with 106 submarines completed and 33 building, had the world's strongest undersea fleet, save for "the reputed exception of Russia."

Writing in the authoritative "Brassy's Naval Annual," the experts asserted that the German submarine menace had been "mastered" far more quickly than in the last war and contended that British airplanes had proved their "technical superiority" over Germany's.

The annual, published today, asserted that the activities of the German "pocket battleships" Deutschland (now the Luetzow) and Admiral Graf Spee had proved the "inadequacy" of surface attacks on shipping. At the same time, it was said that the airplane had proved to be of value against submarines.

The publication recorded completion of the two 35,000-ton Italian battleships Littorio and Vittorio Veneto, armed with nine 15-inch guns, as compared with ten 14-inch guns of the five British battleships of the same tonnage now being put into commission.

The annual added that "rapid progress" was being made on Italy's third and fourth ships of this same class and that old battleships were being reconstructed and modernized. Italy's twenty-three submarines under construction include one class armed with fourteen 18-inch torpedo tubes, the annual said.

Dr. Herbert Rosinski, a former lecturer at the German Military Academy, wrote that wholesale attacks on Allied shipping convoys had been planned as "the centerpiece" of Germany's entire strategy.

He said the strategy had "completely failed to materialize," though it had promised, by combining surface attacks with submarine activity, better success than Germany's World War strategy, which ultimately failed because of inadequate support.

By concentrating the full strength of submarine, surface and air strength on merchantmen, Germany planned to strike "not against superior strength but weakness, and not for illusory military advantage but for the real aim of naval warfare—control of communications," Dr. Rosinski said.

Cabinet Sharing Blame

London, May 3 (AP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told a London meeting today that the British Cabinet was united in its responsibility for the Norwegian campaign and that there was no possibility of blaming any individual Minister. Sir John said that any members of the House of Commons trying to "fasten criticism on this Minister or that" in the war debate scheduled for Tuesday would be disappointed.

British Trade Ships Lost By Nazi Action Replaced

Pre-War Value Paid in Cash; Credit Given to Rebuild

LONDON, May 3 (AP).—E. H. Watts, chairman of the British Steamship Company, told the annual meeting of stockholders today that a "fairly satisfactory" arrangement had been made with the government for replacement of ships lost "in the country's service."

If a ship is lost by enemy action, Mr. Watts said, the ship owner "recovers in cash its pre-war value and a further sum is placed to his credit in a fund available only for replacing vessels."

M. P. Warns That War Won't Take a Holiday

OXFORD, England, May 3 (AP).—Clement Davies, a Liberal National (government) member of Parliament, charged today that it was "almost criminal" for the House of Commons to contemplate the traditional ten-day Whitsun recess (beginning next week) "in a time of crisis—the biggest this country has ever had to face."

Whitsun, the seventh Sunday after Easter, commemorating the Pentecost, is one of the principal holidays in the English calendar. Whitmonday, the following day, is a legal "bank holiday," when every place of business in England is closed.

SWISS CALL 30,000 MORE TO COLORS

New Move Stated to Follow Nazi Troop Advances.

BERNE, May 3 (A. P.).—The Swiss Government today ordered more than 30,000 additional reserve troops to report for active service between May 14 and 18.

MAY 4 1940

Informed spokesmen said that the reported concentration of German troops in Baden and Wurttemburg, near the Swiss frontier, led the Army Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Henri Guisan, to recommend this further step in Swiss mobilization.

Between 500,000 and 600,000 men are expected to be under arms by June.

The men called up today include many units of the Landstrum (reserve militia) who are between 36 and 60 years old. Most of Switzerland's men between 20 and 36 years old are already under arms.

PARIS, May 3 (A. P.).—The fighting on the Western front was marked by "quite lively" artillery fire in the Vosges Mountains sector and occasional patrol and aerial activity, according to military dispatches, received here today.

The French High Command in its regular communique said only: "Some artillery fire in the early part of the night."

Former Deputies and Mayors To Be Interned Off Coast

LA ROCHE SUR YON, France, May 3 (AP).—More than 200 Communists, former leaders of the party which has been outlawed in France, were sent to the Atlantic islands off the French west coast for internment today.

One group of 125 former Deputies and Mayors embarked at Fromentine for the Ile D'Yeu, to be held in the Pierre Levee Fort. Another group of eighty was deported to the Chateau of the Ile de Noirmoutier. They included former Deputies Jean Duclos and Robert Philippot, convicted of disseminating propaganda of the Third International.

Montreal, May 3 (Canadian Press). The deputy speaker of the British House of Lords, Lord Marley, believes that "when this war really enters its serious stage" Great Britain will set up a stricter form of government.

In Montreal for a lecture, Lord Marley said that this form of government would be one of strict control, dictatorial in a sense, to stop all profiteering and bring the entire nation under its domination.

"The English people will choose this form of government," he declared. "There will be no need for an election."

U. S. STRIVES TO HEAD OFF SPREAD OF WAR

Roosevelt Reveals Talks Between Ambassador Phillips And Il Duce

Mussolini Reported Cautioned Against Antagonizing America

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 3—An effort by the United States to prevent the spread of the European war to the Mediterranean was revealed today by President Roosevelt.

Explaining the conferences that have been held in the last few days between Premier Mussolini and the American Ambassador to Rome and between the President himself and the Italian Ambassador to Washington, Mr. Roosevelt said this country was striving, as it had all along, to prevent the extension of the European war to new areas.

Effect Feared

Informed sources said Ambassador Phillips might have told Mussolini that if Italy became a belligerent it would have an unfortunate effect on American public opinion.

Some speculation was aroused over a White House luncheon today at which President Roosevelt played host to Henry L. Stimson, Republican former Secretary of State, and Felix Frankfurter, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Stimson has frequently come out in open letters in support of foreign policies of President Roosevelt. He has advocated what he termed an "affirmative" policy against "militarized aggression."

Both Frankfurter and Stimson insisted, however, that the call had no significance.

"We are just two old friends visiting the President," Frankfurter said.

He recalled that Stimson was Secretary of War under President Taft and that he, Frankfurter, was Stimson's legal adviser at that time.

"That's the connection," he explained.

NEW PROBLEMS IF ITALY FIGHTS

U.S. Foreign Policy Officials Watching Anxiously.

WHOLE SEA WOULD BE SHUT

Return of Americans From Area a Formidable Undertaking.

ANDRUE BERDING

WASHINGTON, May 3 (A. P.).—Apprehensive that Italy's entrance into the European war would confront the United States with the most problems that have arisen since the outbreak of the conflict, American foreign policy officials today watched every move in the Mediterranean with anxious concern.

The decision of the British Government to divert its shipping from the Mediterranean, coming after the visits of inquiry made by American Ambassador William Phillips to Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Ciano, focused official eyes on the historic middle sea.

Some officials think that a call to arms is a matter of touch-and-go in Italy, much depending on the further outcome of the fighting in Norway. A few believe that midsummer will find Italy still neutral—or, to use Mussolini's words, nonbelligerent.

Officials are agreed that, if Italy goes to war beside Germany, the whole Mediterranean will have to be proclaimed a combat area, forbidden to American shipping. Of all the great nations outside the Western Hemisphere, only Japan would be left with ports fully open to American maritime commerce.

But a new combat zone represents only one of a series of difficulties. An Italy at war would raise these points for the United States:

1. More Americans by far are living there than in any other country in Europe. The State Department figure, as of January 1, was 19,561. Most would have to be brought out, a formidable undertaking.

2. Italy is the outlet for the removal of Americans from other portions of the embattled continent, particularly Scandinavia.

3. Italy is the principal country of call for American ships going to Europe.

4. If the Mediterranean becomes a combat zone, it will involve the continents of Europe, Asia and Africa. It will embrace more countries than the total of the two combat areas previously proclaimed for northern Europe.

5. Italy and the other countries embraced by this area contain a total of 38,100 Americans. The region exported $107,710,000 worth of goods to the United States in 1939 and in return spent $126,327,000 here on imports.

6. American ships now carrying strategic materials like rubber from the Far East would have to use the longer sea route which passes the Cape of Good Hope, South Africa. Some 17,000 tons of rubber, obtained from Britain in a barter deal for surplus American cotton, are now en route from British Malaya, mostly through the Mediterranean.

War in the Mediterranean would have the effect of shutting off American ships from more than a dozen more countries—Albania, Bulgaria, Egypt, Turkey, Palestine, Greece, Italy, Rumania, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Morocco, Yugoslavia, Iraq, Algeria and Soviet Russia. It would block cargoes to Russia's Black Sea ports. Trade with Hungary would be difficult. Shipping from eastern American ports to Iran (Persia), India and some to the Far East would have to be rerouted.

Italy is the biggest customer and source of supplies of the United States in the Mediterranean. She bought $58,864,000 worth of goods here last year and sold $38,807,000. Egypt is the next best, buying $13,967,000, and Turkey the third, taking $8,313,000.

BLOOM LAUDS NEUTRAL ACT AS PEACE KEY

Washington, D. C., May 3 (AP).—Chairman Bloom (Dem., N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, reviewing the first six months operation of the Neutrality Act, said in a statement today that it had attained the following objectives:

"1 We have made it less likely than ever that the United States will become involved in war.

"2. We have averted loss of American life and property and yet have maintained commerce.

"3. We have kept American national defense modernized without the necessity of spending huge sums for equipment and expansion of manufacturing capacity."

The Neutrality Act authorizes the President to order American ships out of combat zones and places American arms sales to belligerents on a "cash and carry" basis.

'Trick' Weapon Helps German Mountain Troops in Norway

Nazi Machine Gun Weighs Less, Fires Faster Than U. S. Browning

By EDWARD E. BOMAR.
By the Associated Press.

Lightweight weapons especially adapted for use in rugged country were credited by military men today with a share in the German Army's smashing advances in Norway.

An easily transported machine-gun, described by ordnance experts as a "trick" weapon, was reported to figure prominently in the equipment of Bavarian and Austrian mountain troops who formed the spearhead of the speedy thrust northward from Oslo.

Bristling with arms, the invaders likewise used late-model small tanks and light artillery. Many of the weapons have counterparts in the United States, but not the machine-gun.

Gun Is Air-Cooled.

Designated in the German Army as machine-gun No. 34, it is air-cooled and may be fired by one man from a bipod stand, or by two men from a tripod. One is allotted to each squad of infantrymen. As a light gun it fires clips of cartridges, but as a deadlier two-man weapon, bullets are fed continuously by belts.

The Nazis' "No. 34" is believed to weigh even less than the American Army's 22-pound Browning light machine gun, which dates from the World War, and fires at a faster rate. Its performance may have been reflected in the recent War Department announcement that American inventors had been asked to submit designs for a new light machine-gun.

The German Army has no counterpart for the new American Garand semi-automatic rifle. Anti-tank, anti-aircraft and other such army are similar, however. Just what style tanks the Germans used in Norway apparently has not been definitely established. They are known to have been experimenting with 11 different models.

Large Force in Norway.

Military observers estimated tentatively that the Germans had been able to put between 130,000 and 150,000 troops in Norway, a larger and better equipped force than the allied expedition which landed under harassing air attacks.

Weapons, training and air forces all play vital roles in the modern German-style "blitzkrieg," or lightning war. However, the success of the attack on Norway was due primarily to the careful advance preparations and to aerial supremacy rather than to arms, in the estimate of qualified experts.

U. S. to Test "Lightning" Tactics.

Modern "lightning" warfare is to have a large-scale field test for the first time in the United States in Louisiana and Texas this month as a part of the Regular Army's war games.

The "Reds" must rely on strategy and tactics such as the Germans employed in Poland and Norway in combatting a more powerful but slower-moving "enemy" 4th Army Corps of about 45,000 under Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short

FRIEND OR FOE? AIRMEN KNOW

By Warplanes' Silhouettes Pilots Identify Them.

'SIGNATURES' ON SURFACES

Wing Markings Are Outlined Even Against Camouflage.

SEVEN BROWERS
NEW YORK MAY 4-(AP)-

Because pilots on Europe's fighting fronts are taught to recaognize the silhouettes of friendly and enemy warplanes, only one instance of mistaken identity attack has been reported in eight months of combat aloft.

That occurred on March 3 when, the British Admiralty announced, a British plane was shot down by British fighters near Gravesend.

Under conditions of good visibility tail and wing markings are clearly outlined even against camouflage, but the tell-tale outlines built into a plane by the designer instantly are recognizable to pilots in heavy weather.

It is a common saying among airmen that a designer writes his "signature" on the tail surfaces of a plane.

The comma-shaped rudder of the planes designed by the late Anthony Fokker in world war days marked them as German. In fact, Allied airmen at one period in the war, attempting to use captured Fokker pursuits because they were faster than their own, had to give it up because they drew the fire of Allied pilots and Allied anti-aircraft batteries.

The shallow vertical stabilizer in the tail group of the American Curtiss Hawk, being used by the French, is easily recognizable.

Other features of warplanes in silhouette are unmistakable. The British Blenheim bomber has its two-wing engines closer inboard than the bi-motored German Heinkel "111." The German Messerschmidt "109" fighter has stubby wing tips, a wire-braced tail, a bell-shaped rudder and a big scoop under the engine to deliver air to the radiator.

Both the British Hawker Hurricane and Supermarine Spitfire fighters have a greater wing chord (or width) and smaller span than the German Heinkel "112." Moreover, the Heinkel has first a down-sweep and then an upsweep of the wing as it leaves the fuselage, known to engineers as cathedral and dihedral angles.

Among French planes the Potez "63" fighter-bomber-reconnaissance plane, like the American Curtiss attack-bomber, has a slim, knife-like fuselage, and the Morane fighter's stubby, fat lines and nose-heavy appearance due to its high, liquid-cooled engine could be mistaken for nothing else.

TREASURY HEAD SEES OUR GOLD VITAL TO WORLD

Morgenthau Would Use It to Help Restore Europe When Peace Comes.

TALKS TO WOMEN IN CAPITAL

Says Only Threat to Metal as Standard Would Be Domination by Dictatorships.

WASHINGTON, May 3 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said today that America's $18,600,000,000 gold stock ought to be used to help repair the world-wide economic ravages of the European war after peace is restored.

Making his first formal address in two years, he upheld the administration's huge gold purchases in a speech before the Institute of Government being conducted for Democratic women.

As long as the United States sells more goods and securities abroad than it buys, Mr. Morgenthau argued, the country has no alternative but to accept gold in payment unless it is willing to take foreign promissory notes. He explained that gold was the international metal for settling trade balance differences.

"We can feel entirely comfortable in the possession of a supply of gold with which we can meet future demands on our monetary system without any shock to our economy," he said.

"We can be prepared also to play the part we ought to play in the reconstruction of the world that must follow the senseless destruction of war."

Calls U. S. Dollar Soundest.

Hinting that the $14,000,000,000 world war debts were not collectible, Mr. Morgenthau said: "It is doubtful that Americans would want to repeat that experience. . . . I prefer the gold to pieces of foreign paper."

Because of its huge gold backing, Mr. Morgenthau asserted that the American dollar is the soundest unit of currency in the world.

"Its value is unquestioned here at home and it is not questioned anywhere else in the world," he said. "It is a solid rock of strength and stability amid all the monetary confusion created by aggression and war. It is more than a domestic currency; it has become in the last few years more and more an international currency."

Much gold would go abroad automatically, the Secretary explained, when peace makes foreign investors feel safe to take home the huge sums they sent here for safekeeping before the war.

Another portion of gold might be spent abroad to buy larger quantities of foreign goods which Americans could afford after the war without upsetting domestic business, he suggested.

A third method he pointed out was the making of new foreign investments by Americans when they feel it safe to do so.

Ends of Governmental Policy.

"We must concentrate," he continued, "on the promotion of further recovery here and peace and security abroad not in order to correct the gold situation but because prosperity, peace and security are in themselves the supreme ends of governmental policy. That their attainment will also solve the world's gold problem is only a by-product, but an important one."

Mr. Morgenthau mentioned doubts in some quarters that gold would retain its historic international value when the United States share gets too lopsided (The United States now owns 65 per cent of all the monetary gold in the world). But he added:

"Let me reassure you once and for all. As long as there are independent nations, and as long as there is international trade in goods and services, so long will it be necessary to settle international balances. Gold is the international medium of exchange par excellence. . . .

"It is used and needed just as much by the freest democracies as by the most rigid dictatorships—as much by capitalist economies as by Socialist economies. . . ."

One Possible Threat to Gold.

He described German and other attempts to substitute barter trade for gold-regulated free exchange as "admittedly worse alternatives" chosen only for lack of gold and not because of distrust of it.

He pictured the only possible threat to the future value of gold as the emergency of one or two dictatorships ruling most of the world.

He said he had no fear that this would ever happen, but that if it did "circumstances of life would be so different that the possible loss in the value of gold would, I am sure, be the least of our troubles."

GERMAN AUTOMAKER FREED

Released By British After Seizure At Gibraltar

New York, May 3 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation reported tonight that British authorities today released Fritz von Opel, German motor maker, who was removed from the Italian liner Conte di Savoia at Gibraltar April 19.

Von Opel, the report picked up by NBC said, was sailing to New York on the Italian liner Rex. The manufacturer, inventor of the rocket-propelled automobile, was taken in custody for questioning and examination of his personal documents, British naval authorities previously announced.

Norse Ship at Boston After Release by British

BOSTON, May 3 (A. P.).—The Norwegian freighter Ogna, under charter to the Sprague Steamship Line of Boston, arrived today after having been released by a British prize crew at Bermuda.

The prize crew of six was put aboard by the cruiser Cornwall when the freighter was off the Brazilian coast while en route to Boston from South American ports.

2 U. S. Ships Raked by Bullets In Bergen Battle, Seamen Say

Flying Fish Back From Norway, Skipper And Crew Differ on Blame for Attack

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The bullet-scarred American freighter Flying Fish returned from the Norwegian war zone today with an exciting story of how she and another American vessel were caught in a furious battle between German land and sea forces and allied warplanes at Bergen last month.

Even before the ship docked there was a sharp conflict between the captain and some members of the crew as to whether they were raked by allied or German bullets.

Capt. W. W. Wollaston, veteran of the United States Navy during the World War, declared his ship was struck accidentally by bullets from a Norwegian land battery which had been taken over by the Germans and which was firing on British warplanes.

"I was on the bridge and I saw everything that happened," he said. "The shore battery fired on our ship by accident."

Sixteen of the 48 members of the crew, however, were equally emphatic in a signed statement that their ship was raked—accidentally, they agreed—by one of the allied planes.

The ship's log described the incident as follows:

"April 12 * * * 5 p.m. During an air raid a plane circled between the Flying Fish and the line of fire of shore batteries, and a spray of machine gun bullets struck the Flying Fish, hitting the foredeck and several drums of oil on deck. No member of the crew was injured."

The log also reported that on April 16 the American freighter Charles R. McCormick was caught in a spray of machine gun bullets that cut its mast stays and wire rigging. No injuries were reported.

Baltimorean Blames Plane.

Chester Shimp of Baltimore, chief engineer, supported the contention that the ship was hit by machine gun fire from a plane.

"My impression was that this plane had been damaged by an anti-aircraft gun and the pilot had to make a forced landing," Shimp said. "I saw the plane land. I think he may have fired as he was landing and didn't know what he was shooting at. He may have been wounded or his gun may have jammed. He kept on firing, and some of the bullets hit the ship."

The State Department recently instituted inquiries to determine the whereabouts of the Charles R. McCormick when the vessel's operators expressed concern over its failure to answer a cable ordering it home. The ship presumably sought shelter in a Norwegian fjord.

George Gilbert, a crew member, said there could be no doubt that it was a British plane that fired on the ship, flying an American flag at the time. He thought that it was due to nervousness of the pilot.

"I attribute it to the plane pilot's nervousness," he said. "He raked our decks. Fortunately he wasn't using incendiary bullets. He had been flying over the land dropping bombs and was evidently going home when he spotted us.

"He swerved, came over us and let loose with the bullets."

Capt. Wollaston also described the destruction of a German cruiser and German supply ship by British bombers during the battle.

Gilbert said the trip "was a bit out of the ordinary."

"We were lying at a dock in Bergen. The Germans had a cruiser and a supply ship on the other side. They were attacked from the air by the British. That's how we got the bullet marks."

Gilbert said the ship was then moved 4 miles out.

The Germans were extremely courteous, Gilbert said, when it came time to depart, and furnished a pilot. Once outside the harbor, he said, they saw no British ships.

Attack News to British But They Are 'Sorry'

London, May 3 (AP).—A British source said today that no report had been received of a British plane machine-gunning the American freighter Flying Fish during an attack on the Norwegian port of Bergen, and that "it is to be deeply regretted if it did occur."

"That area is a very bad place to be at the time of a Royal Air Force attack," this source said, adding that a burst of fire could have been turned on the Flying Fish by mistake in the heat of battle.

LOG OF THE FLYING FISH - - Bullets Sweep American Ships At Bergen

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 3—Here is the log of the S. S. Flying Fish which returned today from Norway:

MARCH 23—Arrived at Narvik harbor and anchored awaiting berth. In Narvik harbor were twenty merchantmen of various nationalities—about twelve were English freight ships and were armed with guns on the stern. Four were German freight ships awaiting berth at the iron ore pier. None of the German ships appeared to be armed.

MARCH 24—Easter Sunday: At 12.15 A. M. we left anchorage and passed through lanes of anchored ships. These ships were lying in all directions, some showing anchor light and others in complete darkness. Making our way through these ships, weaving in and out during a heavy snowfall, we docked at 1.23 A. M. and began to discharge our cargo.

MARCH 25—Left dock at 11.01 P. M. in heavy snowfall and proceeded to weave our way at close quarters through ships lying at anchor, hailing in all directions, some without lights. Harbor master left ship at 11.49 P. M. and vessel proceeded to sea with a Norwegian coastal pilot taking the ship through the fjord.

MARCH 26—Passed Vestfjord at 4.30 P. M. and proceeded toward Bergen. Weather fine.

MARCH 27—At 7.24 A. M. sighted what appeared to be a contact mine about seven miles off the Norwegian coast. At 8.40 A. M. sighted a convoy of about forty merchantmen guided by six English destroyers leaving the Norwegian coast on a westerly heading.

Hailed By Destroyer

We were hailed by one destroyer and reduced speed while communications were exchanged by international code flash as to our identity, where we were from and where bound. We then proceeded on our course to Bergen. At 3.03 P. M. we arrived at Bergen harbor and had difficulty finding a suitable anchorage.

Harbor congested with freight ships awaiting convoys to England and France. 4.42 P. M. we anchored in seventy fathoms of water with 135 fathoms of chain out. Engines ready for use at all times, vessel awaiting berth at dock.

Dented In Collision

MARCH 28—Finnish steamer Kimi dragged her anchor and collided with Flying Fish, striking our starboard side at No. 3 hatch with her stern, slightly denting our sideswipe. With two anchors down and engine working, the Kimi again struck our starboard quarter.

After the Kimi was clear, we shifted anchorage with 135 fathoms of chain out on port anchor and 120 fathoms of chain out on starboard anchor in seventy fathoms of water.

MARCH 29—Left anchorage and docked at Bergen and commenced to discharge cargo. . . .

APRIL 9—At 2 A. M. received orders from harbormaster to black-out the ship. 2.30 A. M., vessel and city of Bergen completely blacked out. At 4 A. M., heavy gunfire heard outside the harbor. 4.30 A. M., German warship entered Bergen harbor flying signal "no vessel allowed to leave harbor."

At 5 A. M.—A second (German) warship and a destroyer entered the harbor.

Germans Disembark

5.30 A. M.—A landing party of German soldiers numbering about thirty disembarked at head of Skoltegrund Mole, fully equipped with hand grenades, gas masks, helmets, rifles and extra ammunition. They scattered into a battle formation and headed at double-time toward the heart of the city.

6 A. M.—Two torpedo boats painted white landed armed soldiers fully equipped.

6.05 A. M.—Six or eight German aircraft flew over harbor and city dropping leaflets.

Heavy fire (still April 9) from Fort Hellen, one mile north of Skoltegrund, at the cruisers who returned the fire and bombarded fort for about five minutes. The German bombers circled over the fort, dropped several bombs, and then all firing ceased.

German Flag Hoisted

7 A. M.—German flag hoisted on the fort.

7.45 A. M.—German naval party boarded ship, posted guard at radio room and examined ship papers, departing at 8.15 A. M. One destroyer docked on the other side of Skoltegrund Mole and commenced repairing shell hole in bow, where shell had struck her on starboard side to the water line and passed completely through her forecastle.

Several wounded men were landed and removed in ambulances and four men who had been killed were landed and removed in hearses. The destroyer discharged ammunition, anti-aircraft guns, machine guns and supplies. Mobile bicycle forces and infantrymen continued to land from four men-o-war lying in the harbor. Anti-aircraft guns were stationed on roof-tops of warehouses on the dock and on the ends of the dock.

The Flying Fish made ready to sail, line singled up, pilot aboard waiting orders.

Orders To Evacuate

3 P. M.—Orders were given to evacuate city by busses, cars, motor boats, or any other means of transportation available.

5.15 P. M.—Received orders from German admiral to leave our berth as an air raid was expected.

6.25 P. M.—Eight Allied warplanes raided the harbor, attacked the warship, circled overhead, bomb-diving and dropping bombs. No ship was seen to be hit. Shore batteries and anti-aircraft guns returned a steady fire. No plane was hit, although they circled and machine-gunned the destroyer on the other side of the dock from us.

6.35 P. M.—(Still April 9) All firing ceased as planes flew over hills to the west. Pilot left the ship without consulting the [illegible].

6.46 P. M.—Left our dock and proceeded to anchor at 3½ miles to the north of Bergen near Eidal, on the island of Aske.

7.55 P. M.—Heavy firing heard from shore anti-aircraft batteries as one Allied plane flew over the city. It completely out of sight while columns of black smoke rose high in the air. Two German freighters maneuvered around our anchorage. Their names were the Barenfels and Leonaheart.

APRIL 11—About 8.30 A. M. the city of Bergen was completley blacked out except for the Barenfels, which was at the Skoltegrund Mole, all lighted up and discharging cargo and ammunition. An air-raid alarm was sounded as a loud explosion was heard from the warehouse on the dock. All lights were extinguished at once, and the blackout was complete. . . .

APRIL 12, 4.45 A. M.—A squadron of Allied warplanes circled the city. No bombs were dropped or land batteries were heard to fire. After circling the city a second time, the planes attacked, dropping bombs all around the Barenfels and the warehouses on Skoltegrund Mole. Shore batteries began firing, but the planes escaped undamaged. . . .

5 P. M.—During an air raid a plane circled between the Flying Fish and the line of fire of shore batteries and a spray of machine-gun bullets struck the Flying Fish, hitting the foredeck and several drums of oil on deck. No member of the crew was injured.

Later it was found that two houses on the shore in the line of fire were slightly damaged.

APRIL 13—All quiet. No air raids or other activities visible.

Another Air Raid

APRIL 10—7.30 A. M. air raid by Allied warplanes. One German cruiser, name unknown, was hit amidships between its two funnels by bombs dropped by an Allied plane. Bombs were also seen to drop on or near Skoltegrund Mole, where the cruiser was lying. . . .

9 A. M.—Clouds of smoke and flames were seen to rise from the cruiser and an explosion was heard. The cruiser began listing to forward and sinking by the head as flames rose to a height of about 100 feet. The cruiser's head sank deeper and deeper, making a 45-degree starboard list, her stern projecting into the air, showing her propellers.

9.50 A. M.—Cruiser capsized and sank completely out of sight while columns of black smoke rose high in the air. Two German freighters maneuvered around our anchorage. Their names were the Barenfels and Leonaheart.

APRIL 14, 8.25 A. M.—Air raid. Three Allied planes circled the city and dove over toward the Barenfels at Skoltegrund Mole. A cloud of smoke was seen to rise from the Mole and an explosion was heard. An Allied plane, flying at about 200 feet over the water, burst into flames and dove into the harbor, only the tail remaining visible above the surface. Within twenty minutes the plane sank.

Blackout Advised

At 12 noon a launch containing German naval officers approached the ship and advised us to put out all lights and blackout at night.

APRIL 15—A tug came alongside and the pilot came aboard with orders to proceed to dock and discharge a cargo of fish oil.

2.36 P. M.—All secure at Johann C. Martens oil dock at Sanveviken, Bergen.

7 P. M.—Rceived notice from Maurice P. Dunlap, American consul at Bergen, for all officers and members of the crew to leave the vessel. All hands, except all five engineers, two water tenders and one oiler, abandoned the ship and were quartered at the Hotel Bristol in Bergen.

In Dangerous Position

The vessel was lying in a dangerous position in a flying harbor. On the following day, acting under further orders from the consul, the ship was completely abandoned by the skeleton crew who had remained to keep up steam, and the engine plant was allowed to die out. During each day of the following week various officers and crew members made daily trips of inspection to see that everything on board was all right.

The cargo oil was pumped out by shore pumps and the shore gang, the vessel being shut down and completely cold. Headquarters for the ship's company was the American consulate in Bergen. The American consul issued heavy underwear, socks, scarfs, and other warm clothing to various members of the crew. Barber shop, laundry and medical attention was also furnished to the crew by the American consulate.

Ship's Master Buried

APRIL 16—The master of the American ship Charles R. McCormick who died at sea was buried. A wreath was sent to the funeral by the master and crew of the Flying Fish. On April 10 the American ship Charles R. McCormick was tied up alongside Doksjaier wharf. A German destroyer was tied up alongside her. When the air raid started the planes machine-gunned the destroyer, some of the machine gun bullets striking the Charles R. McCormick, cutting her mast stays and wire rigging in two.

No members of the crew were injured. Immediately after conclusion of the air raid the Charles R. McCormick proceeded up the fjord to a safe anchorage.

APRIL 21—All five ship engineers, one guarantee engineer, two oilers and one water tender returned aboard the ship and raised steam. During all the time the ship was abandoned, the American flag flew night and day.

Crew Returns To Ship

APRIL 22—The American consul ordered the crew to return to the ship and secure for sea. About 5 P. M. German naval authorities removed transmitting apparatus from the vessel's radio set. The master was advised that they would be returned the next morning when the vessel was ready for sea, and that a pilot and a naval escort would be provided to guide the vessel through the mine fields.

The American consul attended the funeral of an English aviator (Capt. Eric McIvor) who was killed when his plane crashed somewhere near Bergen on April 14. The American consul handled the affairs of over forty British prisoners interned in Bergen.

APRIL 23—German naval authorities returned the ship's radio equipment and gave the master permission to sail. A military launch led the way out through the mine field, the vessel following closely with a Norwegian pilot on the bridge. At 11.47 A. M. the German launch signaled "all clear," and the vessel proceeded out of the fjord, clear of the German mine field. About 2 P. M. the pilot was dropped and we proceeded with caution toward New York. Extra lookouts were posted about the vessel, and officers stood by their watch.

"Rest Of Voyage Uneventful"

At 7.25 P. M.—We sighted the contact mine about one half-mile off our port and reduced speed and proceeded to steam ahead dead slow during the night, crew ready for any danger that might occur.

April 24—At daylight increased speed to half speed and proceeded on course. Extra lookouts posted. Hailed by an English naval vessel at 7.30 A. M. and exchanged communications. An English convoy of three troopships was sighted, heading for Norway in the afternoon, escorted by a large plane and three destroyers. The plane circled the vessel and one of the destroyers hailed us.

The usual communications were exchanged and the destroyer returned to the convoy. We proceeded with caution homeward bound.

April 25—At about daybreak we were hailed by an English naval patrol, exchanged usual signals and proceeded on our way to New York. The rest of the voyage was uneventful.

Conflict On Who Did It

Even before the Flying Fish docked there was a sharp conflict between the captain and some members of the cre was to whether they were raked by Allied or German bullets.

Capt. W. W. Wollaston, veteran of the United States Navy during the World War, declared his ship was struck accidentally by bullets from a Norwegian land battery which had been taken over by the Germans and which was firing on British warplanes.

"I was on the bridge and I saw everything that happened," he said. "The shore battery fired on our ship by accident."

16 Sign Statement

Sixteen of the forty-eight members of the crew, however, said in a signed statement that their ship was raked —accidentally, they agreed—by one of the Allied planes.

Chester Shimp, of Baltimore, chief engineer, supported the contention that the ship was hit by machine-gun fire from a plane.

"My impression was that this plane had been damaged by an anti-aircraft gun and the pilot had to make a forced landing," Shimp said. "I saw the plane land. I think he may have fired as he was landing and didn't know what he was shooting at. He may have been wounded or his gun may have jammed. He kept on firing and some of the bullets hit the ship."

One member of the crew, George Gilbert, said he was positive that the Flying Fish was struck by a British machine gunner.

"Any man who has been under fire wouldn't mistake the ship that fired on him," he said in an NBC broadcast.

He attributed the error to the "pilot's nervousness."

Captain Wollaston declared that "33 1-3 per cent. of the capture of Bergen was an inside job."

"Treason Was Obvious"

"Only a few hundred Germans took the city," he said. "Treason was obvious."

A statement issued by members of the crew who belong to the National Maritime Union (CIO) took cognizance of the possible seriousness of identifying as Allied the plane that fired on the American vessel.

The statement said:

"There has been some question aboard as to who fired upon us—the plane in question or the nearest German anti-aircraft battery, located two miles away. We wish to settle this question once and for all. With all due respect to our captain (who, we understand, was below decks when the incident occurred), we, the members of the crew who were on the forecastle head and the foredeck wish to emphatically state that the fire came from the plane, and no mistake about it. . . .

"We can sympathize with the captain's wish to avoid, if possible, an international incident—but we feel that an incident can be as international and dangerous on one side as the other."

Bid to Italy To Join Nazis In War Seen

Allies Willing to Take Duce on at Any Time, Indication

May 3/41

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Expert

Developments in the strained relations between the Anglo-French Allies and Italy during the past 48 hours strike me as constituting all but a direct invitation to Signor Mussolini to join Nazidom in the war if he wants to.

I refer, of course, to Britain's clearing of its mercantile marine from the Mediterranean, and British Premier Chamberlain's startling announcement yesterday that the Anglo-French battle fleet was already in those waters, headed for Alexandria bay.

One wouldn't go so far as to say that the Allies are trying to push Mussolini into the war — though stranger things have happened. They may even hope that he will reconsider his position and perhaps ultimately cast his lot with them. In any event it is a call for a showdown.

Indications are, however, that they are quite willing to take him on at any time. It should be said here that I have no official backing for this suggestion. It's just the way these latest moves look to me when viewed as part of the pattern which has been woven in the exchanges between Il Duce and the Allies since Munich.

Ever since the beginning of the war the Fascist official attitude (and consequently that of the press) has been strongly pro-Nazi and often bitterly anti-Ally. This attitude has been perhaps more apparent than real, and has represented Mussolini's strategy for maintaining a middle-of-the-road course until such time as he had decided how Italy's interests best could be served.

It is my personal view, from study on the ground, that Mussolini has little affection for either the Allies or for Hitler. Italy has been suspicious of the Allies ever since the World war, charging that they didn't fulfill the territorial promises which brought the Italians into the war, after Mussolini himself had made a successful campaign to persuade his country to join the Allies. So far as regards Hitler, Il Duce probably admires his successes but never has liked the Nazi chieftain.

Stream of Intimations.

During recent weeks there has been a steady stream of intimations from Rome that Italy would get into the war on Germany's side when Mussolini thought the time was right. This was blared through thousands of radios in Germany after the theatrical "love feast" between Hitler and Mussolini in the secrecy of the gloomy Brenner Pass.

Things got so bad that the other day London protested to Rome about the pro-Nazi, anti-Ally treatment of war news. British Foreign Minister Lord Halifax inquired about Italy's attitude. And British Minister of Economic Warfare Cross warned Italy to behave like a neutral if she wanted to be treated as one.

We now come to an even more important phase of the quarrel between Mussolini and the Allies —the Fascist territorial and political demands against England and France. These have been thrust forward persistently and belligerently.

Among other things, Italy has clung to her claims to "living space", for colonization rights in French Tunisia, for a share in the Suez canal, for a free port at Djibouti (gateway to Italian Ethiopia) and for the railway running from Djibouti into Ethiopia.

There have been indications at one time and another that the Allies were prepared to adjust some of these claims. However, there has remained one great and unsolvable issue between the disputants—control of the Mediterranean.

As late as two weeks ago authoritative Italians insisted on freedom from British and French control over the Mediterranean as Italy's chief aim.

Action For Trouble.

Now you might talk John Bull into giving up his purse, but when you try to intrude on the tradition that Britannia rules the waves, and especially the Mediterranean waves, you are asking for trouble. The last thing England would be willing to concede would be domination of this strategic sea which controls so many of her vital interests.

Along with this the Allies have had to consider the relations between Italy and Spain. Ever since Mussolini backed Spanish Generalissimo Franco in the civil war observers have speculated as to the possibility that Il Duce might get his reward in naval and air bases close to the gateway to the Mediterranean — a potential menace to both Britain and France. Denials by Spain and Italy that such a move was intended may have failed to remove anxiety.

If Italy should come into the war now these grievous arguments could be settled once and for all. Actually the Allies believe they could ham-string Italy by a blockade while the French army attacked from the north. That being the case, Germany would be deprived of valuable aid for Italy undoubtedly is of more use to Napoleon as a non-belligerent than as a combatant.

Greece and Turkey presumably would join the Allies immediately. They fear Mussolini and his ambitions much more than they do any other man or state, as I learned during my tour of the Balkans a little over a year ago. Their entrance into the war might open up that Balkan battle front we have been hearing so much about, giving the Allies a chance to attack Germany from the rear.

When you consider all aspects of the position it is easy to see why the Allies may not be reluctant to take Italy on for a fight.

OSLO, MAY 3 (AP).-THE NEWSPAPERS OF THE NORWEGIAN CAPITAL, UNDER GERMAN OCCUPATION AND CONTROL, WERE BITTER TODAY IN THEIR COMMENTS ON PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH ANNOUNCING THE WITHDRAWAL OF ALLIED TROOPS FROM SOUTHERN NORWAY.

SAID THE MORGENPOSTEN:

"NORWAY IS A NEW GALLIPOLI. THE BRITISH CAME TOO LATE AND WERE TOOK WEAK."

"CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH PLACES BRITISH PROMISES IN A PECULIAR LIGHT," SAID THE TIDENS TIGN, WHILE THE AFTENPOSTEN COMMENTED THAT "THE INCONTESTABLE TRUTH IS THAT ENGLAND LACKED THE FORCE TO HELP NORWAY IN THE WAY ENGLAND WANTED, AND NOW HAS OTHER PARTS TO DEFEND WHICH ARE MORE IMPORTANT THAN NORWAY."

"WE FEEL NO DISAPPOINTMENT OVER THE STATEMENT WHICH CHAMBERLAIN GAVE WITH WELL-BALANCED CYNICISM," SAID THE NATIONEN. "WHAT WE WITNESSED IS THE MILITARY AND POLITICAL WORLD SCANDAL WHICH WE EXPECTED."

THE SAME PAPER ADDED:

"IT SHOULD BE TIME FOR THE BRITISH AIR FORCE TO END ITS WAR OF NERVES AGAINST THE POPULATION OF OSLO BY ITS CONSTANT ATTACKS ON FORNEBU AIRFIELD.

"MANY PRIVATE HOUSES HAVE BEEN BURNED AND OSLO'S POPULATION, TAKING REFUGE IN COLD CELLARS, IS SPECULATING ON THE BRITISH HELP WHILE THE AIRFIELD ITSELF, LAID ON SOLID ROCK, THEREFORE CANNOT BE DAMAGED." #

STOCKHOLM, MAY 3-(AP)-THE STEINKJER FRONT CORRESPONDENT FOR THE SWEDISH NEWSPAPER SOCIAL DEMOKRATEN REPORTED TODAY THAT AN AMERICAN FIELD HOSPITAL ORIGINALLY INTENDED FOR FINLAND HAD REACHED GRONG, NORWAY, 25 MILES EAST OF NAMSOS.

THE CORRESPONDENT REPORTED THAT THE HOSPITAL HAD "AN EXCELLENT LOCATION" IN THIS REGION, WHICH IS IN THE HEART OF THE ONLY IMPORTANT AREA WHERE GERMAN AND ALLIED FORCES NOW ARE DRAWN UP AGAINST EACH OTHER IN NORWAY.

ON WEDNESDAY, THE CORRESPONDENT REPORTED, THE HOSPITAL WAS GREETED BY THE EXPLOSION OF BOMBS ONLY 100 YARDS AWAY. GRONG WAS ATTACKED AGAIN THURSDAY, HE SAID, ADDING THAT HE COULD NOT IMMEDIATELY REPORT THE NUMBER OF CASUALTIES.

LONDON, MAY 3 (AP).-REAR ADMIRAL B.A. FRASER, THIRD SEA LORD AND CONTROLLER OF THE ROYAL NAVY, SAID TODAY THAT THE BRITISH SLOOP BITTERN, WHOSE LOSS WAS ANNOUNCED BY THE ADMIRALTY YESTERDAY, WAS SUNK ONLY AFTER SHE HAD DODGED GERMAN BOMBS AND VIRTUALLY EXHAUSTED HER AMMUNITION IN AN ALL-DAY BATTLE.

THE BITTERN, OF 1,109 TONS, WAS ARMED CHIEFLY WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND USED AS AN ESCORT SHIP FOR CONVOYS.

30-24-2055

THE ADMIRALTY COMMUNIQUE YESTERDAY HAD SAID THE HMS BITTERN WAS SET ON FIRE AFTER BEING "REPEATEDLY ATTCKED" BY ENEMY PLANES AND THAT, AFTER THE CREW HAD BEEN TAKEN OFF ONTO ANOTHER WARSHIP, THE BITTERN "WAS SUNK BY OUR FORCES IN ORDER TO AVOID HER BECOMING A DANGER TO NAVIGATION."

SPEAKING AT AN IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE LUNCHEON, ADMIRAL BLAIR DESCRIBED HOW ANOTHER BRITISH WARSHIP WAS DAMAGED BY A BOMB WHICH DROVE THROUGH HER FORECASTLE. HE SAID HER CREW "PUT THE DAMAGE RIGHT AND GOT THE SHIP HOME." #

WASHINGTON, MAY 3-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT REPORTED TODAY THAT THE EUROPEAN AIR AND SEA WAR HAD DICTATED CHANGES IN AMERICAN DEFENSE WEAPONS BUT THAT THE CHANGES DID NOT NECESSITATE ANY DELAY IN CARRYING OUT THE CURRENT PROGRAM FOR A STRONGER ARMY AND NAVY.

NEW YORK, MAY 3--GAMBLING ON THE EFFICACY OF AIR POWER IN THE PRESENCE OF VASTLY SUPERIOR ENEMY NAVAL STRENGTH, GERMANY TO ALL INTENTS AND PURPOSES HAS ACHIEVED IN NORWAY A MILITARY ADVANTAGE STRIKINGLY SIMILAR TO THE ONE THE NAZIS POSTED IN POLAND LAST FALL.

SEIZURE OF ALL THE GOOD NORWEGIAN AIRPORTS AT THE START OF THE INVASION, AND INTENSIVE BOMBING OF AIR BASES THE ALLIES TRIED TO ESTABLISH AS WELL AS THE SEAPORTS THEY SEIZED, PROVIDED THE KEY TO LOCAL GERMAN AIR SUPERIORITY.

MAY 4 1940

EVALUATING THE GERMAN CLAIMS OF SUCCESS, WHICH ARE BUTTRESSED BY PRIME MINISTER NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S TACIT ADMISSIONS YESTERDAY, MEANS FIGHTING OFF THE TEMPTATION TO GIVE THE GERMAN AIR FORCE TOO MUCH CREDIT FOR THE JOB DONE.

YET IT CANNOT BE DENIED THAT THE GERMANS HAVE USED THEIR WARPLANES AS EFFECTIVELY AS THE BEST OF THE TACTICAL BOOKS WOULD DICTATE.

THE BRITISH PRIME MINISTER DESCRIBED AS A "FOREMOST" DIFFICULTY THE ALLIES FACED THE FACT THAT AVAILABLE AIRDROMES WERE IN GERMAN HANDS.

"IT BECAME EVIDENT TO US," HE SAID, "SOME DAYS AGO THAT IT WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE, OWING TO GERMAN LOCAL AIR SUPERIORITY, TO LAND THE ARTILLERY AND TANKS WHICH WOULD BE NECESSARY TO ENABLE OUR TROOPS TO WITHSTAND THE ENEMY DRIVE FROM THE SOUTH."

MOREOVER, IN TOKEN OF THE LESSONS LEARNED ABOUT THE USE OF AIR POWER TO DATE, SECRETARY EDISON OF THE NAVY DISCLOSES THAT THIS COUNTRY IS CONSIDERING ALTERATION OF ITS WARSHIPS TO WITHSTAND AIR ATTACKS SUCH AS BRITISH SEA POWER HAS SUFFERED.

NEUTRAL MILITARY OPINION STRESSES TWO POINTS: THAT THE AIR POWER OF THE ALLIES AND OF GERMANY HAS NOT YET MET A TEST OF STRENGTH; AND THAT LITTLE HAS BEEN DECIDED ABOUT THE VULNERABILITY OF NAVIES TO WARPLANE FLEETS.

HERE APPARENTLY IS WHAT HAS HAPPENED IN NORWAY TO DATE:

GERMANY SEIZED KEY AIRDROMES. THE ALLIES, WITHOUT NORWEGIAN AIR BASES, WERE FORCED TO RESORT TO LONG-DISTANCE BOMBING. SOME ALLIED PURSUITS PROBABLY WERE FLOWN IN MODEST NUMBERS OFF AIRCRAFT CARRIERS.

AGAINST SUCH LIGHT OPPOSITION THE GERMAN AIR FORCE HAS HAD A FIELD DAY, BOMBING BRITISH VESSELS AND BRITISH-HELD PORTS, "REDUCING" STRATEGIC TOWNS ON NORWAY'S SERRATED LANDSCAPE, AND HARRASSING TROOPS WITH STRAFING TACTICS.

THE ALLIES HAVE BEEN DENIED THE USE OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS IN QUANTITY. GERMAN PLANES BROKE UP THE LANDING OPERATIONS.

MAY 4 1940

THE QUESTION OF THE MOMENT WOULD APPEAR TO BE, NOT CAN AIRPLANES WIN A WAR, BUT: WHAT CAN GERMAN AIRPLANES ACCOMPLISH IN THE LARGER THEATER OF THE WAR IN THE FACE OF THE BRITISH BLOCKADE AND OF THE HEAVY LOSSES IN GERMAN NAVAL STRENGTH AS LISTED BY MR.CHAMBERLAIN? #

UNDATED NAVAL (PMS BUDGET-NEW)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE QUESTION OF SEA POWER OF FOUR NATIONS--GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE, GERMANY AND ITALY--HAS BEEN THROWN INTO RELIEF BY ALLIED MOVEMENTS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AND BLOWS ALREADY STRUCK IN THE STRUGGLE OVER NORWAY.

IT APPEARS THAT IF ITALY SHOULD JOIN GERMANY IN THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT SHE WOULD FACE A SUPERIOR BRITISH-FRENCH FORCE ON THE MEDITERRANEAN WHICH ITALIANS CALL "OUR SEA."

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN INSISTS THAT SUCCESSES AGAINST GERMANY'S FLEET IN THE NORTHERN FIGHTING HAVE ALTERED "THE ENTIRE BALANCE OF NAVAL POWER" IN THE ALLIES' FAVOR.

GERMANY, WHOSE CHIEF RELIANCE IN NAVAL WARFARE IS ON SUBMARINES AND THE AVIATION ARM, HAS DISPUTED THIS, PILING CLAIM UPON CLAIM OF DAMAGE AND DESTRUCTION TO THE BRITISH FLEET.

COMPARISONS ARE EXTREMELY UNCERTAIN, DUE TO DISPUTED LOSSES AMONG THE BELLIGERENTS AND VAST NEW CONSTRUCTION, MUCH OF IT SECRET, BY BRITAIN, FRANCE, GERMANY AND ITALY.

GENERALLY SPEAKING, HOWEVER, FRANCE AND ITALY HAVE FLEETS OF ABOUT THE SAME TONNAGE--WITH FRANCE HAVING AN EDGE IN A TOTAL OF ABOUT 575,000 TONS, COMPARED TO ITALY'S 550,000 TONS, BUT WITH ITALY REGARDED AS HAVING AN EDGE OVER FRANCE IN MODERNITY OF UNITS, SPEED AND ADAPTABILITY.

BRITAIN, WITH THE LARGEST FLEET OF ALL, HAS AT THE SAME TIME THE MOST EXTENSIVE TERRITORY TO GUARD, LIMITING THE STRENGTH THAT MIGHT BE WITHDRAWN FROM ONE PLACE TO REINFORCE THAT IN ANOTHER.

HER MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, HOWEVER, ADDED TO FRANCE'S SEA POWER, WHILE HER HOME FLEET KEPT ON GUARD FOR GERMAN NAVAL OPERATIONS, IS CONSIDERED TO FACE ITALY WITH A SUPERIOR FORCE, SHOULD ITALY ENTER THE WAR ON THE SIDE OF GERMANY.

ITALY'S CHIEF NAVAL IMPORTANCE LIES IN HER SWIFT FLOTILLAS OF LIGHT CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS, BUILT OR NEARING COMPLETION, THAT ARE AMONG THE BEST OF THEIR CLASSIFICATIONS.

HERE ARE HOW THE FLEETS LINE UP, ACCORDING TO LATEST AUTHORITATIVE NAVAL INFORMATION:

-ITALIAN-

SIX CAPITAL SHIPS, INCLUDING TWO NEW 35,000-TON, 15-INCH GUN BATTLESHIPS; NO AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, SEVEN MODERN HEAVY CRUISERS, 12 MODERN LIGHT CRUISERS, 106 OCEAN-GOING AND COASTAL SUBMARINES AND 75 HIGHSPEED MOTOR TORPEDO BOATS. NEW CONSTRUCTION INCLUDES TWO 35,000-TON BATTLESHIPS, 14 LIGHT CRUISERS AND 23 SUBMARINES.

SEVEN CAPITAL SHIPS, ONE AIRCRAFT CARRIER, SEVEN HEAVY CRUISERS, 12 OTHER CRUISERS, 59 DESTROYERS, 78 SUBMARINES, AND MISCELLANEOUS CRAFT.

THESE WERE THE FIGURES ON THE OUTBREAK OF WAR. ONE MINELAYING CRUISER AND ONE PATROL BOAT HAVE BEEN LOST & A DESTROYER SERIOUSLY DAMAGED BUT NEW FRENCH CONSTRUCTION, SOME OF WHICH MAY BE PRESUMED TO BE COMPLETED, INCLUDES FOUR BATTLESHIPS, TWO AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, THREE HEAVY CRUISERS AND AT LEAST 16 DESTROYERS.

-GERMAN-

GERMANY STARTED THE WAR WITH TWO BATTLE SHIPS AND THREE POCKET BATTLESHIPS, OF WHICH ONE, THE POCKET BATTLESHIP ADMIRAL GRAF SPEE, WAS SCUTTLED IN MONTEVIDEO HARBOR. CHAMBERLAIN YESTERDAY SAID TWO AND POSSIBLY THREE OTHERS WERE DAMAGED IN THE NORWEGIAN CAMPAIGN.

GERMANY HAD EIGHT CRUISERS, 22 DESTROYERS AND 65 SUBMARINES AT THE OUTBREAK OF WAR. CHAMBERLAIN SAID FOUR CRUISERS, 11 DESTROYERS AND FIVE SUBMARINES HAD BEEN LOST THROUGH THE NORWEGIAN CONFLICT. THE ALLIES' CLAIMS OF SUBMARINE SINKINGS RUN AS HIGH AS 50.

NEW GERMAN CONSTRUCTION, SOME OF WHICH NOW MAY BE IN SERVICE, INCLUDES FOUR BATTLESHIPS, TWO AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, THREE HEAVY CRUISERS, FOUR CRUISERS, AND DESTROYERS AND SUBMARINES.

-BRITISH-

BRITAIN ENTERED THE WAR WITH 15 CAPITAL SHIPS, 17 HEAVY CRUISERS, 42 LIGHT CRUISERS, SEVEN AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, 179 DESTROYERS, 57 SUBMARINES AND MISCELLANEOUS CRAFT TOTALLING MORE THAN 1,390,000 TONS.

ADMITTED LOSSES INCLUDE A BATTLESHIP, AN AIRCRAFT CARRIER, TEN DESTROYERS, AND SEVEN SUBMARINES, AS WELL AS MISCELLANEOUS CRAFT. CAPITAL SHIPS, CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS ALSO HAVE BEEN DAMAGED, THE BRITISH ADMIT, WHILE THE GERMANS HAVE CLAIMED SINKINGS AND DAMAGE WHICH THE BRITISH EITHER HAVE DENIED OR IGNORED.

GERMANY ADDED TO THE LIST OF CLAIMS YESTERDAY WITH A STATEMENT THAT TWO AIRCRAFT CARRIERS AND ONE DESTROYER HAD BEEN HIT.

NEW BRITISH CONSTRUCTION, SOME OF WHICH MAY BE PRESUMED TO HAVE JOINED THE FLEET OR TO BE READY FOR SERVICE SOON, INCLUDES NINE BATTLESHIPS, SIX AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, 13 HEAVY CRUISERS, AT LEAST 16 DESTROYERS AND A NUMBER OF LESSER VESSELS.

UNDATED WARPLANE LOSSES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE LOSS OF AIRPLANES IN COMBAT BY GERMANY AND THE ALLIES IN EIGHT MONTHS OF FIGHTING HAS BEEN SURPRISINGLY LOW, A RECAPITULATION SHOWS, EVEN IF THE HIGHEST FIGURES CONTAINED IN OFFICIAL AND UNOFFICIAL STATEMENTS ARE TAKEN AT THEIR FACE VALUE.

ALLIED PLANE LOSSES TO MARCH 30 TOTALED 357 MACHINES, DNB, OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY, ANNOUNCED, SAYING AT THE SAME TIME THAT GERMANY HAD LOST ONLY 85.

THE HIGHEST GERMAN PLANE LOSSES ANNOUNCED BY BRITISH SOURCES WERE 235 MACHINES AS AGAINST LESS THAN 232 LOST BY THE ALLIES AS OF YESTERDAY.

THAT COMPARES WITH 521 PLANES LOST BY RUSSIA IN THE FINNISH WAR--ACCORDING TO FINNISH SOURCES--AND 47 BY THE FINNS, ACCORDING TO RUSSIAN SOURCES.

SOME MILITARY AUTHORITIES PRIOR TO THE START OF THE WAR ESTIMATED THAT A 100 PERCENT REPLACEMENT OF COMBAT PLANES WOULD BE NECESSARY WITHIN THREE MONTHS AFTER THE OPENING OF HOSTILITIES OR, AT THE OUTSIDE, SIX MONTHS.

THIS IS THE SEQUENCE IN WHICH FIGURES HAVE APPEARED:

ON MARCH 28 REUTERS, BRITISH NEWS AGENCY, SAID 128 GERMAN PLANES HAD BEEN SHOT DOWN SINCE THE START OF THE WAR.

ON MARCH 30 DNB SAID 357 BRITISH AND FRENCH PLANES HAD BEEN BAGGED SINCE SEPTEMBER 3 AS AGAINST GERMANY'S LOSS OF 85. A BRITISH TABULATION THE SAME DAY LISTED 133 GERMAN PLANES SHOT DOWN.

ON APRIL 2 AN ALLIED STATEMENT DENIED THE GERMAN ASSERTION THAT ALLIED LOSSES AMOUNTED TO 357 PLANES. THE ACTUAL LOSSES, SAID THE ALLIES, ACTUALLY WERE LESS THAN HALF THAT NUMBER.

MAY 4 1940

SINCE THE APRIL 2 STATEMENT A TOTAL OF 102 GERMAN PLANE LOSSES, CLAIMED OR ADMITTED, HAVE BEEN CHRONICLED AS AGAINST 54 ALLIED LOSSES, CLAIMED OR ADMITTED.

Heavy Cruiser and Big Troopship Also Listed as Destroyed---Nazis Boast Air Force Can Break Fleet.

BERLIN, May 4 (A. P.).—Germany officially reported tonight that her warplanes had sunk or badly damaged nine British warships and transports, including a battleship of the 30,000-ton Queen Elizabeth class and a heavy cruiser sunk, in concentrated attacks yesterday off the Norwegian ports of Namsos and Narvik.

[Well-informed quarters in London tonight described German claims to the sinking of a British battleship and other war vessels by air bombers as "of the fantastic character to which the public is fast becoming accustomed."]

DNB, the official German news agency, said that the announced successes "show conclusively that supremacy of a fleet—no matter how strong—can be broken in the age of air warfare wherever the far-reaching arm of this new weapon strikes forcefully like lightning."

Text of German Announcement.

The announcement issued tonight, after the High Command early in the day had reported a battleship sunk by German dive bombers, said:

"In addition to the already announced sinking of a British battleship, the British Navy which yesterday had picked up the Allied troops retreating from Namsos has suffered severe losses through incessant attacks of German warplanes.

"One heavy cruiser of the York class was hit by two bombs and set afire. The ship sank within thirty minutes, following many explosions.

"Another cruiser was also hit by a bomb and parts of the ship were thrown into the air.

"One destroyer got a hit from a bomb of medium caliber and stopped fire immediately and listed. The ship is presumably sunk.

MAY 5 1940

"Another destroyer got several hits and was badly damaged.

"A loaded transport ship of 12,000 tons was hit by a bomb and sunk.

Merchantman Forced Into Trondheim.

"A merchantman was forced by the air force to enter the Trondheim port.

"The enemy naval units at Narvik were also attacked by German planes.

"One battle cruiser got two hits and its guns were made inactive. One cruiser was set afire and a transport ship got a direct hit of a medium caliber bomb."

Official Germany already had been jubilant over the announcement of a major stroke in the sinking of a battleship when the new claims were advanced.

class includes the Queen Elizabeth, the Warspite and the Valiant, each totaling 30,600 tons, and the Barham and Malaya, each of 31,000 tons. NAZIS SAY BOMB SANK BATTLESHIP

GERMANS HAIL AERIAL SINKING OF BATTLESHIP

Goering, Elated, Carries News Of Achievement Direct To Hitler

Feat "Destroys Myth Of British Mastery Of Seas," Nazis Say

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 4—DNB, the official German news agency, expressed its belief tonight that all hands were lost in what is officially described as the sinking of a 30,000-ton British battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class off Namsos.

This report said other ships of the attacked fleet hastened to the spot where the battleship sank, guided by great clouds of smoke, but "were too late to be of any help."

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 4—Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, bemedaled man of the hour of the Norwegian Blitzkrieg, proudly announced today the feat which he and Adolf Hitler had charged the German air force in Norway to achieve at any cost—the sinking of a British battleship by air bombardment.

In all, formal Nazi statements said, nine British warships or transports were sunk or badly damaged during a day of attacks by bombers and battle planes off Namsos and Narvik, western Norway, yesterday, while the British fleet was transferring Allied troops who have abandoned central Norway.

Other Sinkings Claimed

Besides the battleship, these were stated to include a heavy cruiser of the class of the 8,250-ton York, "sunk in thirty minutes" by heavy bombs; a second cruiser and two destroyers bombed and damaged, and a 14,000-ton transport sunk, all off Namsos, plus a battle cruiser, a cruiser and a transport bombed (but not sunk) at Narvik.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—In London unofficial military sources described the German claims as of "the fantastic character to which the public is fast becoming accustomed."]

An official announcement said the battleship, one of the 30,000-ton Queen Elizabeth class, was sunk in three minutes off Namsos, Norway, yesterday, without the loss of a single German plane.

The communique announcing the sinking drew no official confirmation or denial from London.

There are five battleships of the Queen Elizabeth class: the Warspite, flagship of Vice-Admiral William Jock Whitworth, which on April 13 led the British fleet which smashed into Narvik fjord and sank seven destroyers; the Queen Elizabeth, Valiant, Barham and Malaya, all of approximately 30,000 tons and carrying complements of more than 1,100 men.

2 Sinkings Conceded

Up to now Britain has admitted the loss of no capital ships to air action; it has, however, conceded the sinking of the sloop Bittern and the destroyer Gurkha by air bombs since the start of the Norwegian campaign, and damage to various other vessels.

Today's brief announcement of the battleship's destruction said it was proceeding on a westerly course off Namsos yesterday afternoon when the German dive bombers swooped down on it, dropping heavy bombs.

"It was hit . . . between the forward turrets," said the communique. "Half a minute after the bombs hit, shooting flames flared 500 meters high amidst great clouds of smoke. After the clouds disappeared, there was nothing more of the ship to be seen except debris."

"British Myth Destroyed"

It marked a new high in Goering's career. Men who know him say he has waited for weeks for just this test as conclusive proof that the German air force can accomplish any task set for it and that it has, in German eyes, "once and for all destroyed the myth of British mastery of the seas."

Magazine Believed Hit

A single bomb, German experts said, must have hit a powder magazine on the warship, although others were dropped.

The impression was that the battleship was shielding the departure of British troops from Namsos. They embarked Thursday night.

German accounts of the British-French abandonment of Namsos and central Norway said the retreat was disastrous: that the British troops showed no fighting spirit, the Allies left behind great stores of valuable equipment, used Norwegian troops to cover their retreat and then left them without giving them a chance to board a British boat.

of the British Admiralty) a chance to say it first."

When Mr. Churchill maintained silence the High Command felt the information should be delayed no longer, it was said. The German authorities said that numerous hits were scored on the battleship during the attack, which the communique said was carried out by dive bombers, but it was thought that one bomb must have struck the magazine.

That alone, it was said, could have caused the flames which were reported to have shot up over 1,500 feet into the air.

"After the clouds of smoke disappeared," said the High Command communique, "there was nothing more of the ship to be seen except debris."

Authorized quarters speculated as to whether the commander of the British Expeditionary Force to Norway was aboard the warship, and were anxious for an announcement from Mr. Churchill.

The importance of the occasion was emphasized by the fact that Gen. Erhardt Milch, next in command of the Air Ministry after Marshal Goering, was sent to Norway to direct the operations personally.

More Sensations Hinted.

Jubilant because no German planes or lives were lost in the action, they intimated that yesterday's success was but the beginning and that similar startling news might come today. There also were intimations that German attention now was centering particularly upon the Netherlands and Belgium.

Marshal Goering, bemedaled man of the hour of the Norwegian blitzkrieg, personally announced the sinking of a British battleship. The feat marked a new high in his meteoric career. Men who know him say he has waited for weeks for just this test as conclusive proof that the German Air Force can accomplish any task set for it and that it has, in German eyes, "once and for all destroyed the myth of British mastery of the seas."

"For some time we have been waiting for an opportunity to prove to the world that even a battleship can be sunk by air raiders," said one informant.

"Gen. Erhardt Milch, Secretary of State in the Air Ministry, went personally to Norway with orders from the Fuehrer and Goering that, if and when the hour for the test came, a battleship must be sunk, come what may.

"We are simply amazed, ourselves, that the experiment succeeded without so much as a single loss for us. Our air force was determined to send wave after wave of power divers into action and to continue the assault, even if at first, every attacking plane was shot down.

"In our fondest dreams we didn't think it possible that the job could be completed in less than three minutes without the loss of a single plane."

For Marshal Goering, today's announcement is regarded here as full justification of a firm belief long held.

When Hitler decided, first secretly, then publicly, to rearm Germany, various theories prevailed as to the efficacy of various types of weapons.

Men of the older school insisted on a powerful navy. Goering with characteristic forcefulness, argued that the future lay with the air force. His counsel prevailed and Germany, although not neglecting her navy, put the greatest effort of modern times into the establishment of German air supremacy.

Throughout the Reich airports sprang up like mushrooms. Men like Lieut.-Gen. Ernst Udet toured America and other countries, studying types of motors and planes. The gigantic new Air Ministry Building, largest of its kind, was built.

Tested in War 'Laboratory.'

When Italy embarked on the Ethiopian war, experts in Germany watched the performance of Premier Mussolini's air force with the greatest interest.

Then came the Spanish civil war—just the kind of laboratory Marshal Goering was looking for to test his theories.

Each man who came back from Spain was assigned to a different airport or barracks, there to give the benefit of his practical experience.

It now is frankly admitted that the Spanish war gave the German air force that edge which it seems to have held since the beginning of the present European conflict. The lessons learned in Spain were applied in a terrific manner during the Polish campaign.

One answer, however, which the Polish campaign could not give was this: Can an air force successfully attack a crack fleet of a major power?

Hence this is Goering's proudest day.

Summing up tonight, the Berlin Nachtausgabe said:

"The military decision which all the experts in the world have been waiting for has now been made: A German plane sank a British battleship. Many experts will now have to change their military opinion. In the United States, a start (at revision) has been made—other countries will follow."

In the midst of the day's jubilation Hitler awarded the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross to Gen. Milch, Lieut.-Gen. Hans Geisler and Major Harlinghausen for distinguished service in German air operations in Norway.

The official announcement said that Gen. Milch, Goering's right-hand man, "directed the entire operations of the air force in Norway and, with his excellent leadership, brought them to a successful conclusion."

Gen. Milch ordered the dive-bombing attacks which, Germany claims, sank a British battleship.

Gen. Geisler was in direct charge of operations in Norway. His citation said that he, "through powerful wielding of flying units under him in Norway, has inflicted losses in the sea power of enemy war and commercial ships which are of outstanding significance for the future course of the war."

Major Harlinghausen was cited for damaging the "sea forces of the enemy through daringly executed attacks."

No sooner had the power-diver unit reported the feat to Goering than he hurried to the Reich's Chancellery to tell Adolf Hitler about it.

The two decided, then, to withhold the news until Saturday noon "to see whether Churchill (British First Lord of the Admiralty) will have the courage to admit this terrific loss."

Churchill, however, said nothing.

"For some time we have been waiting for an opportunity to prove to the world that even a battleship can be sunk by air raiders," said one man in the know today.

Took Orders To Norway

"Gen. Erhardt Milch, Secretary of State in the Air Ministry, went personally to Norway with orders from the Führer and Goering that, if and when the hour for the test came, a battleship must be sunk, come what may.

"We are simply amazed ourselves that the experiment succeeded without so much as a single loss for us. Our air force was determined to send wave after wave of power divers into action and to continue the assault, even if at first, every attacking plane was shot down.

"In our fondest dreams we didn't think it possible that the job could be completed in less than three minutes without the loss of a single plane."

Predicts Change Of Opinion

An Army communique said German forces holding Arctic Narvik had repulsed attacks from the Allies and that the situation was unchanged.

At Andalsnes, south of Trondheim, also abandoned by the British, one Norwegian general, 127 officers and 2,500 men were said to have surrendered, and "pacification is proceeding throughout Norway."

The Norwegian central commander, after the British and French left Namsos, asked for an armistice in the whole central area.

"An enemy freighter" was reported damaged by bombers in Solberg fjord, north of Narvik, and "an enemy submarine" was announced as sunk by a German U-boat after it had been bombed by a German plane, at an undisclosed location.

British Naval Loss Put At 98 Ships Since War

Berlin Includes 2 Battleships, 11 Cruisers and 17 Destroyers

BERLIN, May 4 (AP).—Germany has asserted that at least ninety-eight British naval ships have been "sunk, destroyed or set afire" by Nazi air and naval action and mines in the eight-month period from Sept. 3, 1939, to May 3, 1940, an unofficial compilation showed tonight.

The list, drawn up from army communiques and D. N. B., official German news agency, summaries, and including developments which were reported today, follows:

Two battleships, including the Royal Oak;
The airplane carrier Courageous;
Eleven cruisers, including the auxiliary ship Rawalpindi;
At least seventeen destroyers;
Twenty-four troop transports;
Twenty-two submarines;
Twenty-one vessels in the mine-sweeping patrol service.

[So far as capital ships are concerner, the British have acknowledged the loss of the Royal Oak, the Courageous and the Rawalpindi, but have admitted to the loss of only the one capital ship and no cruisers.]

The summary does not include warships said by the Germans to have been put out of action by damages.

The authoritative "Jane's Fighting Ships" gives Great Britain's Naval strength as of September, 1939, (completed ships only) as fifteen capital ships (battleships and battle cruisers), six aircraft carriers, fifteen heavy cruisers, forty-three other cruisers, six antiaircraft ships, 179 destroyers, fifty-seven submarines and twenty-six motor torpedo boats.

Bluecher Sank Near Oslo While Crew Shouted 'Heil'

Berlin Gives Details of German Cruiser's Destruction

BERLIN, May 4 (AP).—The 10,000-ton German Cruiser Bluecher went down in the narrows of Oslo Fjord with flags flying and to the echo of "Sieg Heils" to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Germany from the crew, D. N. B., the German official news agency, reported tonight in giving first details of the ship's destruction by Norwegian shore batteries April 9.

The Bluecher, D. N. B. said, was in the lead of a group of several cruisers, torpedo boats and smaller craft under command of Rear Admiral Kummetz in the surprise dash into Oslo Fjord.

At 5:30 a. m., it reported, guns of the Norwegian fort of Oscarsborg suddenly fired from a distance of 1,500 feet. The Bluecher received most of the hits but managed to silence the Norwegians.

Despite a leaping fire amidships and damage to part of the machinery and boiler room, the Bluecher continued up the narrows, where several shore torpedo batteries scored new hits.

With the fire raging out of control and water pouring into the hull, Capt. Woldag, the commander, ordered his men to abandon ship with Heils for Hitler and the Fatherland.

Reich Reports Foe Beaten Off North of Narvik

Situation in Port Is Called Unchanged, With Local Clashes Near Trondheim

BERLIN, May 4 (AP).—Continued fighting north of the Arctic Norwegian port of Narvik was reported today by the German high command, but the situation was described as unchanged and the Nazi vanguard was said to be repulsing all attacks. Norwegian troops north of Trondheim also were putting up localized resistance, the high command said.

The text of the communique follows:

"The German vanguards north of Narvik repulsed attacking enemy forces. In Narvik itself the situation is unchanged.

"German detachments advancing northward from Trondheim are meeting resistance of Norwegian troops only, since the forces of the Western powers precipitately left the Namsos region.

"The commander of the Norwegian troops in the Trondheim sector issued an order of the day in which he noted with bitterness that the Western powers withdrew their troops from Namsos without informing or warning him. The Norwegian commander asked for an armistice, as the Norwegian troops, through the conduct of the English commanders, were endangered from the flank and rear. Pacification is proceeding throughout Norway.

Reports Rjukan Taken Over

"Rjukan (halfway between Oslo and Stavanger) was handed over to German troops this forenoon without a fight. In the Aandalsnes sector, one general, 127 officers and 2,500 men surrendered. The German booty can not yet be estimated.

"The air force continued reconnaissance over Norway and the entire North Sea. In Solberg Fjord, north of Narvik, one enemy freighter was severely damaged by a medium-caliber bomb.

"As reported by special announcement, one British battleship on a western course in the sea region west of Namsos on the afternoon of May 3 was raided and hit by German dive bombers. The ship sank after a tremendous explosion.

"Five British fighting planes attacked a German patrol boat in the North Sea without success during the night of May 3-4. During the course of the action two enemy planes were shot down.

"No special developments on the west front."

Say Freighters Were Seized

German sources also reported that two English freighters loaded with ore had been confiscated by the Germans in Sande Fjord.

According to German versions the British-French flight from Namsos was disastrous. Allied troops were said to have left behind valuable supplies and to have forgotten to take along one British journalist.

The British troops in Norway showed no fighting spirit whatever, the Germans declared. Authorized sources spoke with the utmost derision of the manner in which, they said, the British and French used Norwegian troops to cover their retreat and then abandoned them without giving them a chance to board a British boat. The same sources said the British made no effort to turn their food supplies over to the Norwegians as they themselves withdrew.

"That's how Britain helps those who fight for her," they said caustically.

Hitler Gives Iron Cross To 3 for Air Victory

BERLIN, May 4 (P).—Adolf Hitler today awarded the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross to Col.-Gen. Erhardt Milch, Lieut.-Gen. Hans Geisler and Major Harlinghausen for distinguished service in German air operations in Norway.

The official announcement said Gen Milch, who is 48 and Field Marshal Goering's right-hand man, "directed the entire operations of the air force in Norway and, with his excellent leadership, brought them to a successful conclusion."

Gen. Geisler, who is forty-nine, has been in direct charge of German air operations in Norway. His citation said that he, "through powerful wielding of flying units under him in Norway, has inflicted losses in the sea power of enemy war and commercial ships which are of outstanding significance for the future course of the war."

Major Harlinghausen was cited for damaging the "sea forces of the enemy."

SWEDEN NEUTRALIZED

Berlin Hails Moscow Stand on Baltic Peace.

BERLIN, May 4 (A. P.).—Berlin welcomed today as especially timely an assertion by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, that Germany and Russia are equally "interested in the preservation of Sweden's neutrality."

The Tass statement, coming at a time when Nazi officialdom is accusing the Allies anew of seeking to extend the war area, tends to put both Germany and Russia in the ranks of the peacefully inclined nations, according to the German view.

Authorized spokesmen commenting on the situation, said that Germany and Russia had been in accord from the beginning of the conflict in Norway and the seizure of military suzerainty in Denmark by Germany.

The Tass statement said that agreement of the German and Soviet views toward Sweden was noted two weeks ago in an exchange of information in Moscow and denied that Russia had warned Berlin that it would consider any German move against Sweden an unfriendly act.

Even "Key" Can Openers Being Made Into Bullets By The Germans

Berlin, May 4—All keys used here to open cans of fish are going to be turned into bullets, and Germans will have to use can openers instead. In this way 2000 tons of steel will be saved annually, Der Deutsche Volkswirt, a leading economic weekly, estimates.

Americans have suggested that Germany should also melt down all of its apartment-house keys, which weigh about five times as much as those used in the United States.

BRITAIN WILL FIGHT.

LONDON, May 4 (AP).—Britain will continue fighting for Norway "with the greatest vigor," an authoritative source declared today.

"The distance from the German air bases of the operational area around Narvik will undoubtedly prove to be in our favor," said the British source.

London, May 4 (AP)—Well-informed British sources tonight described German claims to the sinking of a British battleship and other war vessels by air bombers as "of the fantastic character to which the public is fast becoming accustomed."

Uproar In Britain

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 4—Collapse of the British campaign in central Norway brought Prime Minister Chamberlain's Cabinet its sternest test of the war today, as members of his own Conservative party, hungry for military successes, showed signs of rebellion.

Parliamentary sources indicated that unless British arms achieved a signal success before next Tuesday, when the House of Commons begins an inquiry into the Norwegian reverse, the Government would face a bitter fight for its life.

Optimism Remains

However, an authoritative source declared Britain would continue to fight for Norway "with the greatest vigor."

This source spoke optimistically of the Allied chances in the fight for Narvik, far-north Norwegian ore port, saying that the distance of Narvik from the German air bases "will undoubtedly prove to be in our favor."

This source also revealed that after the French troops landed at Namsos, now abandoned by the Allies, part of their supplies and munitions were blown up.

Growing restiveness within the Prime Minister's party was evidenced last night, when Richard K. Law, member of Parliament for strongly Conservative Hull, declared that the Government's "attitude toward the problem must be changed before the country is in sight of victory."

Clement Davies, an Independent Welsh Liberal National, and thus normally a supporter of the Government, announced that he had met with a group of colleagues who had decided to oppose any vote of confidence during "the biggest crisis we ever had to face.

"Capacity For Self-Delusion"

The Manchester Guardian raised its powerful voice to declare that Chamberlain's "capacity for self-delusion is a national danger," in commenting upon the withdrawal of troops from Norway.

Calls For Resignations

Herbert Morrison, one of the Labor party's most powerful spokesmen in Parliament, suggested the resignations of Prime Minister Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon and Air Minister Sir Samuel Hoare.

Labor Party Leader Clement R. Attlee told an Ipswich audience today that the Government would be called upon to "satisfy the people of this country that everything possible was done" in the Norwegian campaign.

Another "Delusion" Warning

Law, whose father, Bonar Law, led the Conservative party under Asquith, warned against "widespread and highly dangerous delusions that the war is going to win itself without loss or sacrifice, that time is on our side and that Hitler has missed the bus."

His reference to Hitler "missing the bus" was a direct slap at Chamberlain, who used that phrase in a speech April 4, five days before Germany invaded Norway and Denmark.

Chamberlain's Defenders

The Government critics were put at a disadvantage, however, by the declaration of Chancellor of the Exchequer Simon that the Cabinet would put up a united front against "political scalp hunters."

The campaign to stamp out subversive activities on the home front was intensified. Scotland Yard was reported to have completed a list of Italian "fifth-column" suspects in England, and police were understood to be keeping a close watch on the Italian colony for persons spreading anti-Allied propaganda.

The Manchester Guardian, traditional mouthpiece of British liberalism, is the harshest of all the Government's critics.

"Chamberlain complains," it says, "that the poor victims of aggression 'gave us no warning of an attack which, indeed, they never suspected.' Did they not? Anyone who takes the trouble to go through the files of the newspapers in the fortnight before the German invasion will find that from Winston Churchill's wireless speech on March 30 onwards, there was discussion in Berlin, in Stockholm and in Copenhagen, which foreshadowed everything that has happened.

"British interference with the Narvik route was confidently forecast, and also the certainty of Germany's retaliation. And all this before Chamberlain told his Tory audience that Hitler had 'missed the bus' and before General Ironside (Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside Chief of the Imperial Staff) announced that 'we've now actually turned the corner.

"Follows So Much Boasting"

"What Chamberlain forgets is that British action in Norwegian waters had been widely canvassed for more than a week before it took place; the British Government should have known—as it would have known had it even read the English papers—that Germany would counter and, if possible, anticipate the move.

"Perhaps we shall get more enlightment when the full story is told next week, but on the face of it, Chamberlain's excuses do not speak well for the Government's prescience. What makes the taste of the whole episode so much more bitter is that it follows so much shallow optimism, not to say boasting, from some Ministers.

"The complacency of the Prime Minister's speech to the Tory conference just before the German invasion was on the same level as his complacency about the pact of friendship with Mussolini and his innocence about his dealings with Hitler. His capacity for self-delusion is a national danger, for it damps the country's awareness of its peril and it almost certainly reflects the complacent handling of our conduct of the war.

"If Parliament does its duty next week, perhaps even Chamberlain may be brought to understand that we cannot and will not go on in this way."

London Sanguine About Narvik

LONDON, May 4 (AP).—Military circles here were optimistic today about the situation in Narvik, where Allied troops are besieging a German garrison. They cheerfully pointed out that Narvik was "a good long distance" from the German air bases in southern Norway.

One unofficial military source, however, reported that the Germans had been able to establish strong battle positions around the port as a result of having materials dropped down to them from low-flying bombers.

Newspaper men who asked why, if the Germans were able to supply Narvik with food and other materials, they wouldn't be able to bomb British troops there, were received with polite military laughter.

Morrison Request Tops Criticism Of Government 'Complacency'

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 4—Heavy anti-aircraft fire was heard tonight in the Thames estuary. Fighter planes sped out to sea.

No air-raid warnings were sounded either in this area east of London or in the Shetland Islands, off Scotland, where a high-flying enemy airplane was seen earlier in the evening.

The firing in the estuary lasted for twenty minutes.

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, May 4—Acutely aware that military disaster has unseated more than one government, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tonight threw his waning political strength into the task of guiding his regime through the wreckage of the Norwegian campaign.

Biting criticism by Laborites, Liberals and insurgent Conservatives forced the aging Prime Minister to get ready for a real battle in the House of Commons Tuesday. He faces an outcry of "resign" as penalty for the failure in Norway.

Resignations Demanded

The demand for the resignations of Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Minister, as voiced by Herbert Morrison, powerful Labor party spokesman, was piled on top of bitter criticism of "complacency" and "over-satisfaction" on the part of the Government. Combined, these attacks are expected to take the form of a drive to overthrow the present Government.

While the details of the abandoned Allied attempt to take Trondheim from the Germans filtered into the newspapers through unofficial military sources, Englishmen, bitter as only they can be when an enemy mocks Britain, told the Government: "Get on with the war or get out."

Laborites Strike Hard

Morrison, Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor party opposition in the House of Commons, and Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite M. P., each struck at the Government in speeches today.

But even more significant in the eyes of political observers was the obvious unrest in Chamberlain's own Conservative party and its affiliates. Many of its Parliament members went back to their constituencies over the week end to hear the grumbling of restless and vaguely suspicious voters.

Morrison, in an address before the labor regional conference, declared that Chamberlain, Simon and Hoare were "primarily responsible for the relative weakness of our war effort."

To Seek Norway Facts

While urging them "to consider whether their best service would not be by way of resignation," he prophesied that Commons would demand it be told "a lot about Norway."

Attlee asserted that the Government would be forced to "satisfy the country that everything possible was done" in the Norwegian campaign.

Shinwell declared that if the Government cannot undertake the war task, "we shall have no alternative but to expose them and call for a Government which can show more firmness and courage."

Unrest among the younger Conservatives, such as Richard K. Law, member of Parliament for strongly Conservative Hull and son of Bonar Law, forced the party's famed "Council of 15" to hold an emergency meeting in London last night to plot its strategy for the debate in Commons on Tuesday.

Regarded Significant

Law's attack on the Government, which included the statement that the Government's "attitude toward the problem must be changed before the country is in sight of victory," is regarded as particularly significant because it may indicate a defection of part of the Conservative majority, which in turn may give opposition Liberals and Labor enough strength to overthrow the Government.

The independent Sunday Pictorial today prominently displayed an article by David Lloyd George, Britain's World War Prime Minister, denouncing the direction of the current war as "faulty, feeble and foolish."

"Muddled Their Case"

"Leaders of democracy have utterly muddled their case and it will certainly be lost if there is not an immediate change in direction," Lloyd George asserted in the article, which-occupied the entire front page of the Pictorial.

While the War Office remained silent and official quarters declined comment on Germany's claim of having sunk a battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class in a bombing attack off Norway yesterday, unofficial military sources described the German claims as "of the fantastic character to which the public is fast becoming accustomed."

WELL-INFORMED QUARTERS DESCRIBED THE GERMAN CLAIMS AS "OF A FANTASTIC CHARACTER TO WHICH THE PUBLIC FAST IS BECOMING ACCUSTOMED."

THESE SOURCES ALSO REVEALED DETAILS OF THE UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPTS TO CAPTURE TRONDHEIM.

THEY ADMITTED THAT "THE ALLIES FAILED TO ANTICIPATE" GERMANY'S LIGHTNING MOVE INTO DENMARK AND NORWAY AND THUS WERE LEFT WITH A FORCE "WHICH NEVER HAD BEEN DESIGNED OR INTENDED TO LAND AGAINST OPPOSITION FORCES."

THESE SOURCES REPORTED THAT TERRITORIAL TROOPS, SIMILAR IN TRAINING AND EQUIPMENT TO THE UNITED STATES NATIONAL GUARD, WERE THE "SPEARHEAD OF OUR TROOPS IN THE FIRST LANDINGS" IN NORWAY AND "FORMED THE BRIDGE HEADS THROUGH WHICH MORE TRAINED AND EXPERIENCED TROOPS WOULD PASS."

MILITARY CIRCLES NEVERTHELESS WERE OPTIMISTIC ABOUT THE SITUATION IN NARVIK, THE ORE PORT NORTH OF THE ARCTIC CIRCLE WHERE ALLIED TROOPS ARE BELEAGUERING A GERMAN GARRISON.

THEY CHEERFULLY POINTED OUT THAT NARVIK IS "A GOOD LONG DISTANCE" FROM THE GERMAN AIR BASES IN SOUTHERN NORWAY.

ONE UNOFFICIAL MILITARY SOURCE, HOWEVER, REPORTED THAT THE GERMAN HAD BEEN ABLE TO ESTABLISH STRONG BATTLE POSITIONS AROUND THE PORT AS A RESULT OF HAVING MATERIALS DROPPED DOWN TO THEM FROM LOW-FLYING BOMBERS.

LONDON, May 4 (A. P.).—Clement R. Attlee, Labor party leader, told an Ipswich audience today that the Chamberlain Government would be called upon to "satisfy the people of this country that everything possible was done" in the Norwegian campaign. The leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons said that "the fact that the Government must render an account of their actions to representatives of the people marks the difference between democracy and dictatorship."

Major Attlee said that "Hitler has lost the greater part of the German fleet and very many German lives in his unprovoked attack on a peaceful neutral country, but there is no one in Germany who can call him to account."

Morrison Assails Leaders.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, May 4 (A. P.).—Herbert Morrison, one of the Labor party's most powerful spokesmen in Parliament, today suggested the resignations of Prime Minister Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon and Air Minister Sir Samuel Hoare.

"I have a suspicion," said Mr. Morrison in an address prepared for delivery before the Labor Regional Conference, "that those three men are primarily responsible for the relative weakness of our war effort.

"I urge them to consider whether their best service to the country would not be by way of resignation."

German warplanes again nosed over England's southeast coast last night and early today.

Crowds on the clifftops along the shore watched British fighter planes and anti-aircraft batteries fight the invaders for three hours, finally driving them out to sea.

An unidentified plane, believed to be German, was heard off the northeast coast last night, but there was no anti-aircraft firing.

There were unconfirmed reports that some of the troops removed from Namsos were enroute to Narvik, and that King Haakon of Norway was accompanying them aboard a British war vessel.

Lloyd George Denounces 'Feeble, Foolish' Leaders

Drastic Changes Vital or War Will Be Lost, He Warns

LONDON, May 4 (AP).—The independent newspaper "The Sunday Pictorial" displayed prominently today and article by David Lloyd George, Great Britain's World War Prime Minister, renouncing the direction of the current war as "faulty, feeble and foolish."

"Leaders of democracy have utterly muddled their case and it will certainly be lost if there is not an immediate change in direction," Lloyd George asserted in the article, which occupied the entire front page of "The Pictorial."

"The British Parliament must take the situation in hand immediately. If they fail to do so without delay they will be guilty of high treason to the nation.

"The war direction must be drastically reconstructed in organization and in personnel. Otherwise disaster is inevitable."

LONDON, May 4 (AP)—Heavy anti-aircraft fire was heard tonight in the Thames Estuary. Fighter planes sped out to sea.

The firing in the estuary lasted for twenty minutes.

Bomber Not Supreme [illegible], British Air Magazine Says

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, May 4—The magazine Aeroplane, surveying sea and air fighting, asserted today that the results may not have been decisive thus far in the war, but "the fundamental point remains—ships can be hit by bombs."

It said German fliers altogether had bombed and damaged eight British warships and sunk one, while British airmen had damaged five German warships and sunk a cruiser and torpedoed a destroyer as well as sinking or damaging "many German submarines."

The magazine declared:

"More than ever is command of the air necessary to the Allies.

"Already the whole progress of the Norwegian campaign is conditioned by air power. This war started with the air force held back in second place. It may finish with air power as the only factor which matters."

Trawler Crew Gunned By Nazis For 3 Days

British Survivors Report Bomber Finally Sank Ship Off Andalsnes

London, May 4 (AP)—Twenty-seven men from an unidentified British trawler reported tonight upon being landed by rescuers at a Scottish port that German planes machine-gunned them for three days before finally sinking their vessel.

The survivors said a Nazi bomber came to the aid of the machine-gunning planes to get in the blow which sank their craft. The trawler had been working in the vicinity of Andalsnes, Norwegian port abandoned Thursday by the British.

Nazi Bombers Carry Armor Underneath

STOCKHOLM, May 4 (A. P.).—The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported today that the Norwegians had found it almost impossible to shoot down German Heinkel planes, because they carried armor on the undersides.

One plane which was forced down, it said, because the pilot had been struck, had sustained 287 hits.

Nazi Advance On Narvik Is Believed Imminent

Stockholm, May 4 (AP)—A German push northward toward Narvik along hazardous mountain trails and fjords exposed to the guns of the Allied fleet, was predicted by military experts in Stockholm tonight.

This forecast was made while the massive German army machine, already numbering around 100,000 and being strengthened daily, overran central Norway, after it had been precipitously abandoned to the invaders by Britain and France.

LONDON, MAY 4—(AP)—BRITISH PURSUIT PLANES TOOK TO THE AIR OVER THE SHETLAND ISLANDS TONIGHT AS AN UNIDENTIFIED PLANE WAS SEEN FLYING AT A HIGH ALTITUDE OVER THE REGION.

Narvik Bombarded

Unconfirmed reports said British naval units were bombarding Arctic Narvik, but informed Swedish observers believed the German army would take advantage of the offensive momentum developed in central Norway to drive to the rescue of several thousand Nazis trapped between Allied land and sea forces at Narvik.

Refugees arriving in Sweden from Narvik said a Nazi force greatly weakened by three weeks of fighting and a lack of supplies was clinging tenaciously to positions in the hills above Narvik, while Allied land units were slowly closing in around the Arctic ore port.

Germans Cut Off

The Germans in central Norway are separated from their beleaguered comrades and the Allied besiegers at Narvik by a long and narrow stretch of mountains flanking a fjord-indented coastal strip.

Experts said the Germans could push with little difficulty one hundred miles northward of Namsos to Mosjoen. But from Mosjoen to Narvik, the experts believe, the German advance would be extremely hazardous, as it would involve traversing difficult country, expose the Germans to Allied attacks from sea and necessitate ferrying across a network of fjords and lagoons.

These Swedish experts thought it would be easy for the Allies, if they complete occupation of the Narvik area, to block any German attempts to drive to the Arctic port, provided the Allies maintain a sufficient and active naval force off the coast north of Mosjoen.

Norwegian resistance in central Norway came to a virtual standstill today after Col. Ole R. Getz, acting commander of Norwegian forces in this area, issued an order saying that the fight against the Germans was finished. Disorganized and dis-pirited Norwegian units continued to offer scattered resistance, but Swedish reports said the Norwegians lacked arms.

A dispatch from the Swedish-Norwegian border said 130 Norwegians fought off a Nazi force for hours near Roeros yesterday, but were eventually forced to retreat under a powerful German onslaught.

"Aftonbladet" publishes a report that the Norwegians had found it almost impossible to shoot down German Heinkel bombers because they carried armor on the underside. One plane forced down, it said, because the pilot has been wounded, had sustained 287 hits.

The collapse of Allied resistance in central and southern Norway caused thousands of Norwegian civilians to flee to Sweden, particularly along the northern border. "Aftonbladet" published dispatches today describing the return to the Swedish frontier of only fifteen cars and twenty-five staffmen out of a twenty-six-car, fifty-six-man ambulance unit sent into Norway by the English Quakers. The reports said that the fate of the missing cars and men was unknown, but that they might have left Namsos with the British Army.

More Germans flooded into Norway. Reports from Gothenburg, Swedish port on the Kattegat opposite the northern tip of Denmark, said six or seven German transports, convoyed by eight destroyers, were steaming northward into Norwegian waters.

The arrivals from Narvik, the objective of the only Allied forces remaining in Norway, said that after British naval guns drove the Nazis out of the town itself they dragged mountain artillery and machine guns to lofty positions commanding the railroad from Narvik to the Swedish frontier.

It was said that the rumored naval bombardment was intended to cover the landing of some expert French alpine light artillery units charged with the task of eliminating the machine-gun nests constructed in the hills by the Germans.

The refugees from Narvik said they believed the Allies' caution in besieging the town was prompted by their fear that the trapped Nazis would destroy Narvik's railroad communications with Sweden, including a long tunnel through the mountains.

The refugees pictured the general scene at Narvik as one of extreme desolation. Blocking the harbor are wrecks of German destroyers and half-submerged ore ships. The long ore-loading pier which stretches far Germans Entering Namsos.

STOCKHOLM, May 4 (A. P.).—German forces, sweeping northward, were reported today to have entered Namsos, port of Allied withdrawal, 100 miles north of Trondheim.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet said that Nazi troops were occupying the destroyed city and seizing other points in the region deserted precipitately by the Allies.

Col. O. B. Getz, acting commander of Norwegian forces in the central area, who yesterday asked Germany for an armistice in the district, issued a new order of the day this morning in which he said that, effective today, the fight against the Germans was finished.

Norse Government Fleeing.

The fugitive Norwegian Government, which alone has authority to sue for peace, formally was reported fleeing into the mountainous north country where British, French and Norwegian forces still are trying to dislodge a German contingent around Narvik.

There were unsubstantiated reports that British fleet units were now engaged in a heavy bombardment of Narvik. It was reported also that the bombardment was to cover the landing of some expert French Alpine light artillery units who were charged with the task of eliminating high-perched machine-gun nests built by the Germans on the hills around Narvik.

It was indicated the Allies were now making an intensified drive to gain complete control of Narvik in the interests of establishing a base there.

Well-informed British quarters indicated that Allied efforts in Norway now would be concentrated, on a long-term basis, in building up a powerful naval base in the Narvik region to patrol the Norwegian coast and thwart any Nazi attempt to use Norwegian ports for getting around the British blockade.

These quarters said the British probably would establish a series of outposts as far south as 100 miles below Narvik, in the wild region of lakes, mountains and fjords which offer tremendous obstacles to a northward Nazi thrust.

The Allies, however, yet have to subdue German resistance in the arctic zone where they have repeatedly bombarded Narvik from the sea, attempting to gain control of the ore railway to the Swedish frontier. The British expected the Germans would destroy the railway if they are forced to retreat, and thus a long rebuilding process would be necessary.

In addition, Narvik harbor, if captured, must be cleared of a great mass of wrecked ships.

The French War Office bore out indications of Allied plans to send re-enforcements north by announcing that the famous French Blue Devils, who first reached Namsos April 19, had been landed near Narvik after withdrawing from the south.

Picture of Capitulation.

Swedish newspaper dispatches drew a tragic picture of how the Norwegian decision to capitulate was reached after the Allied withdrawal.

A council of war was organized hastily and "surrender was decided upon by a majority of the officers who expressed the belief that further fighting was useless."

The officers instructed their superior, Col. Getz, to sue for peace and "the commander thereupon advised all troops stationed in the sector to cease firing immediately and to capitulate."

The Swedish news agency described Namsos as "shot to pieces," largely as the result of thundering German air raids carried out while the Allied troops were embarking from Namsos harbor.

Behind them the Allies left huge quantities of anti-aircraft guns, artillery, ammunition and other valuable war supplies because there was no way of loading them aboard their ships. German bombs had blasted the loading cranes out of commission.

The whereabouts of the British expeditionary force which sailed away from Namsos Thursday was unknown. Some credence was given by military observers to reports that at least part of the troops were to be landed farther north and the Norwegian Telegraph Agency seemed to bear this out with a terse statement that "evacuated Allied troops have landed safely at other ports."

Reported Homeward Bound.

One British officer, just before the embarkation at Namsos, said the British were bound for England.

Though the main Norwegian resistance had collapsed, there was evidence of some continuing guerrilla fighting against the invaders.

Reports reaching Stockholm said on Norwegian volunteer force of 140 men had ambushed a German detachment of 400 about 100 miles south of Roros, killing 115, wounding sixty and taking many others prisoner.

Roros is in Eastern Norway near the Swedsh frontier. The Germans were reported to have been trapped in a mountain valley Thursday and to have been cut down by withering rifle fire from wooded positions. One hundred automatic rifles and thirty automobiles were seized.

A number of Norwegian troops under Lieut. Dahl, described as "a fanatical patriot, but nevertheless a good soldier," declined to capitulate with the rest of the central armed forces and fled into the mountains, where they promised a determined stand despite thinning ranks.

Fear Held for Tunnels.

The refugees said they believed that the Allies' caution was prompted by fear that the trapped Nazis would destroy Narvik's railroad communications, including a long tunnel through the mountains and prevent their use for many months by the Allies.

The arrivals from Narvik pictured the general scene there as one of extreme desolation. Blocking the harbor are the wrecks of German destroyers and half-submerged ore ships. The long ore-loading pier which stretches far out into the fjord is badly damaged, and every part of the city, they said, shows the effect of the British bombardment.

The 123 British merchant seamen prisoners, released by the Germans at Narvik when there was no food to feed them, are recovering at a Salvation Army post at Jorn, north Sweden, after a gruelling four-day trek through Arctic snows from Narvik to the Swedish border.

Many Died in Snow.

Many of these seamen said that they were aboard British merchantmen in Narvik harbor during the first British attack on April 10, and that after reaching shore in lifeboats, they had been taken prisoners by the Germans.

When food supplies ran out, their captors set them free and told them it was only a few hours walk to Sweden, the seamen said, so they started out already half-starved, some of their number wounded, without food or adequate clothing and without any idea where Sweden was.

They said that several of their number died in the snow and that they had dragged others, too weak to walk, on improvised sleds.

NAMSOS FOLK FEAST ON FOOD LEFT BY ALLIES

Starving Civilians Eat Fill, Then Cart Rest To Their Homes

General De Wiart's Letter Of Regret To Norwegians Is Disclosed

By GUNNAR KNUTSSON
Associated Press Correspondent

In the Steinker Region, Norway, Sunday, May 5—Thousands of starving war refugees descended upon the hilly regions around Namsos Friday and Saturday and helped themselves to large stores of food left by the British and French before the hasty Allied withdrawal.

Upon learning that the Allies were gone, these civilian victims of the war made a Roman holiday of it, eating and drinking as much as they could and then carting away as big a load as they could carry to their homes. It was a strange procession of vehicles of every description imaginable, stacked high with everything from bully beef to the equivalent of hard tack.

Poignant Scenes

Throughout the region from Overhalla west to Namsos—where the Allies kept their plentiful storesthere were poignant scenes as the hungry civilians clawed ravenously at the boxes of foodstuffs.

They broke open casks of wine and cases of English whisky; they used wheelbarrows and baby buggies to haul away cases of bottled and tinned goods.

Men, women and children, released from days of living in terror or airplane attacks, appeared to care for nothing except that peace had come—and that here was real food after days of hunger.

Getz Shows Letter

Friday I was permitted by Col. O. B. Getz, acting Norwegian commander in the Trondelag Province area, to read letters he received at 11 P. M. Thursday night from Maj. Gen. Carton De Wiart, director of British forces in central Norway, and General Audet, in charge of French troops.

At this time Colonel Getz explained to me the last of the Allied forces already were embarking at Namsos.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The British War Office has denied that its troops withdrew without notifying the Norwegian army's commander-in-chief.]

General De Wiart's letter read:

"Dear Colonel Getz:

"It is with great regret that I must let you know that we must withdraw from this area and everyone feels it deeply.

"We are leaving a quantity of material here—which I hope you will come and take—and we know it will be of value to you and your gallant force.

"Our own hope is that we may return to help you to bring your campaign to a successful conclusion."

Politely Phrased

General Audet's letter likewise was politely phrased and at great length expressed disappointment over the necessity of leaving Norway. However, he explained that he had received orders and had to obey them, even though he wished to stay.

News of the Allied withdrawal and the cessation of fighting spread like magic through the countryside.

Everywhere gaunt, fear-stricken people appeared from nowhere and headed back to their deserted homes. From all directions they converged on Namsos—by automobile, bicycle, cart and horseback.

The enormous boxes of food—bigger than dry-goods boxes—disappeared almost as quickly as the people had appeared out of hiding.

After some had their fill they returned to what had been their homes and poked around the bomb-blackened ruins. But precious few of them found anything whole.

Saw But Few Tears

Despite all this I saw but few tears among these brave-faced people. They were only too happy that peace had come.

When I asked if they were not alarmed that the Allies had left, they replied:

"That mokes no difference. What we want is peace!"

I was told that early Friday morning as the last of the British transports were pulling out the ship bringing up the rear passed a large number of abandoned army cabs and trucks in one place on the fjord shore.

The vessel as a parting salute fired salvoes which destroyed most of the rolling stock.

I did not know the exact whereabouts of the German troops as I arrived at the Swedish border late last night to telephone this dispatch to Stockholm after an hour's-long ride over the bumpy mountain roads from Namsos.

In one instance what was believed to be a German advance patrol turned out to be a group of escaped French prisoners trying to make their way to the Swedish border.

HAAKON IS URGED TO EFFECT PEACE

German-held Capital Calls Fighting Nonsensical.

BJORN BUNKHOLDT

OSLO, May 4 (A. P.).—The belief that King Haakon VII and his government, now in exile, must open negotiations with Germany in an attempt to get the best possible peace terms was expressed today by Norwegians who said they voiced the general feeling of their countrymen in this German-occupied capital. Their view was that further fighting was nonsensical after the Allied withdrawals.

The Norwegian Government's authority now is limited to the three northernmost counties — Nordland, Troms and Finmark—which Norwegians said under ordinary conditions could not exist without support from southern Norway and are far less able to conduct a war. Even these three counties fail to constitute a unified district with the Germans occupying the ore port of Narvik.

The only remaining Norwegian army force is one division scattered over all three counties.

The Oslo newspaper Tidens Tegn (published under German supervision) said that continued fighting would not be a defense of neutrality, but would make Norway a participant in the European war.

"In view of the present conditions in Norway, King Haakon has the duty to make a personal decision for peace or war," the paper said. "This is today his historic mission for the Norwegian people."

The newspaper Nationen (also under German suspension) said that the Government should try to understand the present real situation in Norway.

Reynaud Regime Faces Norwegian War Probe

Paris, May 4 (AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud's Government tonight appeared to be facing a secret airing in the Chamber of Deputies of the reasons for the Allied withdrawal from central and southern Norway.

Despite increased demand for an immediate session, it appeared unlikely that the Chamber would meet before its scheduled date, May 16.

SURPRISE NAZI ATTACK FAILS ON WEST FRONT

Germans Repulsed In Disorder After "Important" Assault

French Artillery Fire Catches Foe In Barbed-Wire Entanglements

TAYLOR HENRY

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 4—The French high command tonight reported that a German surprise attack against the vital center of the one hundred-mile active section of the Western front had been thrown back "in disorder."

The Germans, attacking on what was described officially as a "wide front," were caught in strong French barbed-wire entanglements by heavy artillery fire.

Machine guns and automatic rifles placed strategically to sweep the fields of wire were said by military observers to have thrown the Nazis into confusion, forcing their retreat.

Difficult For Operations

This section of the front, where the valleys of the Blies and Saar rivers join, is one of the most difficult countrysides on the Western front for ground operations. Far in the advance of the Maginot Line the French have erected strong advance post positions, taking advantage of the thickly wooded slopes and rock-strewn valleys.

The German attack, launched before dawn this morning is understood to have covered the whole valley area situated almost in the exact center of the northern hinge of the Western front, where it bends west from the Rhine and runs to the Luxembourg frontier.

Attack "Important"

The sparsely worded high command communique referred to the action as a "quite important surprise attack," indicating it was considerably larger than the recent local skirmishes between advance posts and patrols in this sector.

Since yesterday artillery fire has been increasing along the entire sector between the Rhine and Moselle rivers.

However, military observers warned against attaching undue importance either to the cannonading or to the surprise Nazi foray.

The artillery fire, apparently heaviest in the Blies Valley just east of the sector where the Germans attacked, covered the area farther to the east between th Blies and Vosges Mountains as well as the Moselle Valley, some fifty miles to the west.

The communique said:

"Fairly brisk artillery activity on both sides in the region of the Moselle and on the Blies.

"Last night the enemy attempted a quite important surprise attack in the region of the Saar on a wide front.

"This attempt having failed under the fire of our artillery and automatic weapons, the enemy retired in disorder."

OTTO ~~IN PARIS AFTER TRIP~~

Says He ~~Got Ideas~~ in U. S. for Use 'After the Allied Victory'

PARIS, May 4 (AP)—The young Archduke Otto, heir to the Habsburg throne of Austria, arrived in Paris today on his way back to his retreat in Belgium after a six weeks' "study tour" in the United States.

Otto told reporters that he had picked up several ideas that would prove useful "during the reconstitution of Central Europe after the Allied victory."

What surprised him most about the Americans, Otto said, was that they were "marvelously informed" on the European situation.

He said he was impressed by "the high plane" on which the United States Presidential campaign was developing.

"No petty wrangling," he said, "and no personal rivalries. The national interest dominates all."

Italy Ready to Oppose Attack

Concentration of British-French Battle Fleet in Mediterranean Brings Warning.

MASSOCK

ROME, May 4 (A. P.).—A warning that Italy would fight off any attempted attack from Allied naval forces massing in the Mediterranean was sounded today in authoritative circles.

This warning followed publication of British and French naval movements.

The authoritative Virginio Gayda wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia: "The Italian nation does not yet really understand exactly what particular design inspired the joint decision of England and France to re-enforce their war fleet in the Mediterranean."

An Allied battle fleet yesterday reached Alexandria, Egypt, in the eastern Mediterranean near the Suez Canal.

It was said in official quarters that five British and two French battleships were among the vessels either in the Mediterranean or en route there. Three battleships were reported among the British vessels which, accompanied by a French squadron, are off Alexandria.

Two other British battleships, the Warspite and the Ramillies, are approaching the Mediterranean, it was reported.

Signor Gayda said that it is certain that the Mediterranean is keeping "completely quiet."

...the first time that Italy ...centrated in the Mediterranean with openly anti-Italian aims, fleets of England and France operating in accordance with joint political plan," he added; "nevertheless she never was impressed and has continued the free carrying out of her policy toward protection of her legitimate national interests or defense of her views of the highest European interests."

"If this unusual and mysterious deployment of French and British naval forces in the Mediterranean, coinciding with the serious upset suffered by the Allies on the coasts of Norway and on the North Sea, signifies any attempt at an offensive undertaking with the purpose of giving them new diversion or rehabilitating their political and military prestige, this would find the Italian reaction prompt and strong.

"Italy is resolved to face and repulse any threat from whatever point it comes."

GERMAN INVASION OF BRITAIN IS SEEN

Count Ciano's Newspaper Makes Prediction.

ROME, May 4 (A. P.).—Giovanni Ansaldo, newspaper writer who often speaks for Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, predicted today that Germany eventually would invade British territory.

Writing in Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, Ansaldo spoke of British fear of a German offensive into British territory and said that what Italians knew of the German forces and of their "will to win" made them "believe ever more firmly that there will be one."

Other newspapers also speculated on the possibility. They accused the British of trying to spread the war to the Balkans and the Mediterranean.

"The Mediterranean," said the newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma, "touches many countries which are determined not to let themselves be drawn into the conflict to the gain of the British Empire, which does not know how to defend itself by its own means."

Premier Broadcasts News To Nation And Dutch East Indies

The Hague, May 4—The Netherlands Government today took long-expected action against suspected "fifth column" elements within Holland, arresting twenty-one persons, one of them a National Socialist member of Parliament.

The arrests were announced by Premier Derek Jan de Geer, who considered them so important he broadcast the news by radio to the Dutch East and West Indies, as well as the homeland.

The Hague, May 4—Premier Derel Jan de Geer told the nation in a broad cast today that twenty-one person "who endangered the security" of th Netherlands were arrested and in terned during the night.

All those interned, he declared, wer arrested on the basis of personal ac and not because of their political view

"These measures have been taken i accordance with martial law, under which the military authorities have the right to take into detention people whose presence is considered danger- ous to the order and general security of the country," De Geer said.

One of those placed under arrest was M. M. Rost Van Tonningen, a Nazi member of Parliament and edi- tor of the National-Socialist news- paper Nationale Dagblad.

No foreigners were arrested.

"The Government deeply regret being obliged to take measures agains countrymen whose acts and thought are not in accord with our neutralit and who are a danger to our coun- try," said De Geer.

"They undermine confidence in our firm will to resist every violation of our territory. They break down the security which is involved in the readiness of our defenses against all belligerents.

"They are not to be compared with the Dutchmen of 1914-18, but rather with those who, at the end of the eighteenth century and the time of the French Revolution, brought about our country's darkest hours.

"This lesson of history forbids us to let them go," the Premier concluded.

Brussels today reported that two Flemish nationalists were arrested at Hasselt under a new Government de- cree against persons propagating "in- discipline or demoralization" in the army. A military spokesman said it was designed to prevent subversive activity in the army.

Troops Sent to Dodecanese.

ALEXANDRIA, May 4 (A. P.).—Europe's warring Powers, sparring for a new opening after a brief joust in Norway, focused their attention on the eastern Mediterranean today as the ominous sounds of military preparations echoed from the Suez Canal to the Dardanelles.

Concentration of a combined British-French battle fleet in this strategic harbor coincided with apparently well authenticated reports that Italy was massing armed forces in the Dodecanese Islands, some 400 miles to the northwest.

The Allied naval squadron at Alexandria, near the entrance to the Suez Canal, was described as the strongest ever assembled in the Mediterranean and was said to be only the forerunner of an even larger force which the British and French plan to base here to preserve the status quo in this area.

Both Turkey and Greece, alert to the implications of these maneuvers, stepped up their defense preparations, while Yugoslavia, long fearful lest the war spread to the southeast, showed signs of increasing anxiety.

It was not clear here whether the Allied naval concentration was precipitated by the reported Italian operations or whether the shoe was on the other foot.

Although Rome maintained official silence, diplomatic quarters gave general credence to reports from Rome that Italian warships, soldiers and planes were pouring into the Dodecanese.

The reports said that the normal Italian garrisons in this stronghold had been strenghtened by the arrival of some 50,000 fresh troops and that war planes were being concentrated on the Island of Leors, only forty-five minutes from Athens by air. Fifteen Italian submarines were reported at Rhodes, largest of the island group.

The islands, which Italy obtained from the Ottoman Empire in the Balkan war of 1912, are stategically important because they virtually control the entrance to the Aegean Sea, through which ships must pass to reach the Dardanelles.

They also would offer a base from which Italian planes and submarines could operate against Turkey, non-belligerent ally of France and Britain, in the event of war in the southeast.

Control of the Mediterranean is vitally important to Britain, to whom it is a direct lifeline to India, Australia and New Zealand. It is equally important to France as the gateway to her African empire.

Egypt remained in a state of preparedness for any eventuality, all army leaves have been cancelled, coastal and anti-aircraft defenses are fully manned and military flying was reduced to a minimum to conserve gasoline supplies.

In Greece, King George 2d and his General Staff were reported preparing for a tour of frontier fortifications, most important of which is the so-called Metaxas Line which was constructed along the Albanian border, in the north, after Italy occupied Albania in April, 1939.

Turkey, fearful of a German advance into the Balkans and suspicious of Russian designs of the Dardanelles, was obviously even more anxious over the possibility of an attack by Italy. Diplomatic observers said that Turkey had not forgotten Italy's imperial aspirations and that she feels Italy has designs on Anatolia, a section of Turkey, and its vast, undeveloped resources.

Warships In Aegean

[By the Associated Press]

Salonika, Greece, May 4—Strong units of the British fleet have been sighted in the Aegean Sea off the eastern coast of Greece, crews of merchant ships arriving here reported today. They said British naval forces, here since the war, started had been strengthened.

Salonika residents nervously awaited developments. In the event of a swing of the war to the Mediterranean, this port would be a strategic prize for either side, it was pointed out.

It was learned here that a large portion of the ten classes of reserve officers called up for month's training will be assigned to the Albanian frontier zone, from which an Italian drive for Salonika long has been regarded as a possibility if the European war spreads.

More British Warships Off Saloniki Stir Greece

Athens, May 4 (AP)—The reported arrival of British naval reinforcements in the Ægean Sea, off Saloniki, kept tension high in Greece tonight as all of southeastern Europe watched anxiously for developments.

The arrival of more British ships, coming on top of Italian concentration of forces in the Dodecanese Islands brought home the fact that Salonika would be a strategically valuable base for either side if war should break out here.

While watching the British vessels, Greece took steps to protect Salonika from the north. A major portion of the ten clases of reserve officers called up for training will be sent to the Albanian frontier, whence Italy conceivably might launch a drive if she enters the war.

At the same time, German sources reported that Greek police had raided a secret British radio station in Athens which had been sending meteorological reports to British warships. This could not be confirmed officially in Athens.

Tension in Dalmata, across the Adriatic Sea from Italy, diminished somewhat as the Fascist newspaper, Il Gazetta di Fiume, which has a wide Yugoslav circulation, said:

"Italy has no aspirations toward Yugoslavia. Italy's preparations are directed only against events in the Mediterranean."

At Ankara, the Turkish capital, German Ambassador Franz von Papen postponed indefinitely his trip to Berlin. In Istanbul, Turkish police announced the release of Prof. Hans von Osten, one of five Germans arrested on suspicion of espionage and spreading German propaganda, because of failure to prove charges against him.

Rumania took steps against possible sabotage by forbidding all Danube River craft to pass under the Cernavoda bridge at night. This span is considered the chief military route to southern Dobruja province, which Bulgaria claims.

The headquarters of a British purchasing corporation, organized recently to buy up supplies in the Balkans, was moved from Belgrade to Istanbul. The newspaper Vreme said the British wanted to keep their money in a seaport from which it could be moved more easily.

Hungarian Leaders' Duel Is Called Off

BUDAPEST, May 4 (A. P.).—The "affair of honor" between Hungary's Minister of the Interior, Ferenc Keresztes-Fischer, and Kalman Hubay, Fuehrer of the Hungarian Nazi party, was reported settled today without a duel.

Intermediaries were said to have cleared up the dispute arising from a debate in Parliament on May 2 over the arrest and prosecution of a Nazi Deputy.

Spain, Seeking Credits, Woos U. S. With Praise

Reported Asking 86 Million in Cash and Produce

MADRID, May 4 (AP)—The European war has caused Spain to look westward instead of northward for commerce, and as a result improved relations with the United States are believed here to be in prospect.

The Spanish press published articles today praising the United States and especially the American Ambassador, Alexander W. Weddell, who sailed from Naples on Wednesday for a vacation trip to the United States.

Washington is expected here to be receptive to Spanish requests for economic aid. One authoritative quarter said the Spanish nationalist government was expecting to get financial help to the amount of $86,000,000, part of it in cash, part in cotton and part in wheat.

Comment On Statement Of Norwegian Novelist

Norway's Envoy To U. S. Calls It German Propaganda Or Black Despair Of "Old Man"

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Norwegian Minister, said today that a statement attributed to Knut Hamsun, Norwegian novelist, urging Norwegians to lay down their arms was either German propaganda or the black despair of a "very old man."

In a statement, the Minister said that "if this report, comping from the German-controlled press of Oslo, really represents the sincere opinion of the great Norwegian writer, I am inclined to credit it to a very old man's tirredness and anguish."

He recalled that Hamsu was 81 years old.

"To my mind," he added, "the most probable explanation is that it is not Knute Hamsun, but his master's voice which we have heard."

U. S. And War

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 4—The bombers of Europe's warring nations, photographic evidence indicated today, have failed by a wide margin to approach the accuracy of the United States Army Air Corps.

Major General H. H. Arnold, air corps chief, exhibited comparative pictures at a closed session of a Senate Appropriations sub-committee, whose members said they appeared to show a definite edge in marksmanship for American pilots.

Rated In "Precision" Bombing

The photographic evidence, committee members asserted, gave the army a much higher accuracy rating in "precision bombing—or aimed hits—than European aviators have attained by "pattern" bombing—or sowing bombs over the immediate area of a target on the theory that one may hit the objective.

The apparent American margin of superiority was generally credited to the country's closely-guarded secret bomb sight.

General Arnold, it was reported, also told the committee that American military planes had proved speedier under actual combat conditions, more maneuverable, safer and more economical of fuel. With the improvements the war has suggested, he expects them to be the best in the world, it was declared.

The Senate committee, however, was reported to have prodded the Army to seek full restoration of the $20,000,000 for aircraft which the House cut from the $785,000,000 War Department bill when it approved that measure.

Chairman Elmer Thomas (Dem., Okla.) said plans for construction of twenty-seven new bombing planes costing about $10,000,000 probably would be laid before the committee Monday as a result of member's inquiries as to why the army had not sought the full amount of appropriations recommended by President Roosevelt in his budget message last January.

The budget originally proposed $186,000,000 for the air corps by the House cut off $20,000,000 by voting to construct only fifty-seven of the 496 replacement planes the army sought.

Matching Europe's Best

Thomas said it was suggested in committee that it might be well for the army to ask for the remaining $10,000,000, bringing requests up to the original budget total. He said this suggestion appeared to be prompted by the desire on the part of some members for speedy construction of planes which could compete on an equal basis in combat with Europe's best.

General Arnold testified previously that German improvements in armament, self-sealing gasoline tanks and other devices had caused the army to make drastic changes in plane equipment. He was quoted as saying yesterday that by July 1, 1941, 1,900 first-line fighting planes incorporating all of these improvements would be delivered to the army.

PANIC HELD OBJECTIVE OF AIR RAIDS ON CITIES

Former Prague Instructor on Precautions Predicts Gas Use

NEWARK, N. J., May 4 (AP)—The chief objective of the war-time air raider is panic, not annihilation, Dr. O. J. Pollak of Boston, former instructor in air-raid precautions at the University of Prague, told the New Jersey Osteopathic Society today.

Bombs alone could not produce the havoc of civilian hysteria, Dr. Pollak said, as he explained it would take about 2,000 tons of bombs containing one of the deadliest of gases to affect an area of sixty square miles.

A strong military air force, anti-aircraft units, strong air raid precaution and complete equipment and education of every citizen were described by Dr. Pollak as the means by which catastrophe could be averted.

The World War showed the effectiveness of precautionary work, Dr. Pollak said, adding the early use of gas caused losses of 35 per cent, but "at the war's end, when protection methods were understood, the losses were only 2 per cent despite the use of far more dangerous chemicals."

Dr. Pollak predicted chemical warfare would be employed more frequently against civilians in the present war.

"Only the fear of retaliation deterred its wider use in the last World War," he said. "Today nations having well-organized air raid precautions in their own communities will not hesitate to rain deadly gases and explosives on the populations of unprotected nations."

LEEDS ALTERS VOYAGE

Drops Call at Pitcairn Island as Belligerent's Possession

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, May 4 (AP)—Owing to apparent reluctance of the United States Department of State to authorize calls at ports of belligerent nations, William B. Leeds, Jr., tonight gave up his proposed voyage in his yacht Moana to Pitcairn Island, British possession halfway around the world from the focal point of the European war.

Instead, Mr. Leeds and a party of friends aboard his 279-foot vessel are sailing tonight for Rio de Janeiro via Curacao. He arranged that the medical supplies and radio equipment which he had intended to take to the island be sent by the first available ship.

Mr. Leeds, who sailed from New York on March 14, had intended to collect rare flora and fauna in various South Sea Islands for the American Museum of Natural History.

British Steamer Graig Sends Another S O S

First, On April 15, Said "Sub Coming Close"—Craft Now Aground Off Halifax Harbor

New York, May 4 (AP)—The British steamer Graig, which less than a month ago sent a mysterious SOS that she was being attacked by a submarine, tonight sent another SOS saying she had run aground at Egg Island, near the entrance to Halifax harbor. The distress signal was picked up by Mackay Radio.

The Graig in an SOS sent April 15, when it was approximately 800 miles northeast of New York, said a "sub coming close." A Canadian radio station announced cryptically an hour later: "Distress all cleared up." No explanation was given.

The 3,863-ton freighter is registered from Cardiff, Wales, and is owned by the Graig Shipping Company, of London.

A FLAT TIRE IS NO FUN ANYWHERE

BUT IT'S A DISASTER IN WARTIME GERMANY (900)

BY LOUIS P.LOCHNER

MAY 5 1940

(ADVANCE),,BERLIN--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--A FLAT TIRE IS A SERIOUS MATTER IN WAR-WAGING GERMANY.

SUPPOSE YOU ARE AMONG THE LUCKY FIFTEEN PER CENT OF AUTO OWNERS IN GERMANY WHO ARE STILL PERMITTED TO USE THEIR CARS FOR IMPORTANT BUSINESS PURPOSES ONLY.

(DURING THE EASTER HOLIDAYS, FOR INSTANCE, EVERY PRIVATE CAR WAS STOPPED BY THE POLICE AND THE DRIVER HAD TO GIVE A MIGHTY GOOD REASON FOR VENTURING ON THE STREETS, OR LOSE HIS DRIVING PRIVILEGE FOR THE REMAINDER OF THE WAR).

SUPPOSE, FURTHER, THAT YOU HAVE PROVEN TO THE SATISFACTION OF TRAFFIC COPS STATIONED ON THE PRINCIPAL HIGHWAYS THAT IT IS TO THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE NATION FOR YOU TO DRIVE, SAY, FROM BERLIN TO 95 MILES DISTANT MAGDEBURG.

SUPPOSE THAT, AS LUCK WOULD HAVE IT, YOU, A BERLIN CAR OWNER, HAVE A BLOWOUT IN MAGBEBUGG.

TO ADD TO YOUR PECK OF TROUBLES, YOU HAVE ACCIDENTALLY LEFT YOUR SPARE TIRE AT HOME.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER YOU HAVE SURRENDERED YOURSELF AND YOUR CAR TO THE MERCY OF THE NEAREST GARAGE?

THE REPAIR MAN'S FIRST DEMAND IS, "PLEASE LET ME HAVE YOUR 'REIFENKARTE' -- "YOUR TIRE CARD."

GOSH -- YOU FORGOT THAT IMPORTANT DOCUMENT.

"SORRY," SAYS THE REPAIR MAN," BUT UNTIL YOU PRODUCE THE 'REFEN-KARTE' I CAN'T TOUCH YOUR TIRE." SO YOU WIRE YOUR WIFE TO MAIL THE TIRE CARD PRONTO. YOU CANNOT NOW HOPE TO RETURN TO BERLIN THE SAME DAY --- NOT WITH YOUR CAR.

THE "REIFENKARTE" IS A FORMIDABLE CARD BOARD DOCUMENT ISSUED TO ALL PERSONS STILL ALLOWED TO USE CARS. IT CONTAINS A CASE HISTORY OF YOUR FOUR REGULAR AND ONE OR TWO SPARE TIRES, A CERTIFIED STATEMENT AS TO WHY YOU ARE PERMITTED TO USE YOUR CAR, A PAGE OF DIREC-TIONS HOW TO PROCEED ABOUT REPAIRS AND SUBSTITUTE TIRE ACQUISITIONS, AND A SET OF COUPONS FOR APPLYING FOR REPAIRS OR "ERSATZ."

EVERY QUALIFIED CAR OWNER HAD TO BRING HIS CAR WITH SPARE TIRES LAST FEBRUARY TO A DESIGNATED SUB-OFFICE OF THE FEDERAL OFFICE FOR RUBBER AND ASBESTOS. HERE AN INSPECTOR PLACED A VALUATION ON EVERY ONE OF THE FOUR, FIVE, OR SIX TIRES. NEW OR PRACTICALLY NEW TIRES WERE GRADED AT 100 PERCENT, SLIGHTLY USED AT 75 PERCENT, USED BUT STILL IN GOOD CONDITION AT 50 PERCENT, MUCH-USED BUT STILL CAPABLE OF REVULCANIZING AT 35 PERCENT, AND FIT-FOR-SCRAP-HEAP AT 0 PER CENT.

THE "CASE HISTORY" OF EACH TIRE --- MAKE, NUMBER, SIZE, AND CONDITION (PERCENTAGE OF USE AS DETERMINED BY THE INSPECTOR -- WAS ENTERED ON YOUR "REIFENKARTE."

30.24-2075

YOU WERE DISMISSED WITH THE SOLEMN ADMONITION TO USE YOUR CAR SPARINGLY, DRIVE SLOWLY SO AS NOT TO WAR DOWN THE TIRES TOO QUICKLY, STOP USING A TIRE THE MINUTE THE RUBBER IS SO WORN THROUGH THAT THE LINEN BACKING BECOMES VISIBLE, AND BRING SUCH A TIRE TO A VULCANIZING SHOP FOR RENEWAL OF THE RUBBER OUTSIDE.

THE ADMONITION TO USE THE CAR SPARINGLY WAS HARDLY NECESSARY.

EVERY DRIVER IS AUTOMATICALLY RESTRICTED TO BUSINESS DRIVING BECAUSE OF THE LIMITATIONS UPON THE MOUNT OF GASOLINE HE CAN BUY.

EVEN IN THE MOST FAVORABLE CASE ---THAT OF THE FOREIGN DIPLOMAT---300 LITERS (79 1/4 GALLONS) PER MONTH CONSTITUTES THE MAXIMUM RATION.

SUCH GERMAN NEWSMEN AS ARE STILL PERMITTED TO USE THEIR CARS ARE USUALLY LIMITED TO 80 LITERS (ABOUT 21 GALLONS) PER MONTH. WE FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS ARE ALLOWED FROM 100 TO 180 LITERS (26 1/2 TO 47 1/2 GALLONS), DEPENDING UPON THE SIZE AND MAKE OF OUR CARS.

MY 180 LITERS GAVE ME AN AVERAGE OF SIX LITERS PER DAY.

EXPERIENCE HAS SHOWN THAT THE MERE DAILY DRIVE FROM MY HOME TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS OFFICE, AND FROM THERE TO THE DAILY PRESS CONFERENCES IN THE WILHELMSTRASSE AS WELL AS TO THE ESSENTIAL APPOINTMENTS FOR INTERVIEWS AND INFORMATION-GATHERING CONSUME MORE THAN SIX LITERS PER DAY.

IF THE RUN OF NEWS IS SUCH THAT I MUST GIVE MY CAR UNUSUAL USE, I PAY FOR IT BY HAVING TO KEEP THE VEHICLE LOCKED UP IN THE GARAGE FOR SEVERAL DAYS UNTIL I'VE CAUGHT UP WITH MY BLUE GASOLINE RATION CARD WITH ITS FIVE-LITER COUPONS.

IN ORDINARY TIMES THE SUNDAYS DURING WHICH THE CAR REMAINS IN THE GARAGE, AS WELL AS THOSE DAYS DURING WHICH I AM ON ASSIGNMENT OUT OF THE CITY, ENABLE ME TO SAVE ENOUGH ON GASOLINE TO CARRY ME THROUGH THE ORDINARY MONTH.

BUT BACK TO THE BLOWOUT IN MAGDEBURG!

THE "REIFENKARTE" IS NOW AT HAND AND THE FIRST OF THE COUPONS APPLYING FOR REMEDY IS READY TO BE FILLED OUT. THE EXACT NATURE OF THE REPAIR MUST BE SPECIFIED, TOGETHER WITH THE REASON WHY IT HAS BECOME NECESSARY. THE OWNER MUST SIGN NAME, PLACE AND DATE, AND THE TIRE DEALER OR REPAIR MAN DITTO. FULL DESCRIPTION OF THE MAKE, NUMBER, AND SIZE OF THE DAMAGED TIRE MUST BE ADDED.

THE APPLICATION THEN GOES ON TO THE NEAREST SUB-STATION OF THE FEDERAL OFFICE FOR RUBBER AND ASBESTOS. THIS SUB-OFFICE DECIDES WHETHER TO APPROVE OF THE APPLICATION OR TO REJECT IT.

SMOULD AN "ERSATZ" TIRE BE APPLIED FOR AND THE ACQUISITION BE APPROVED, THIS SUB OFFICE SO NOTIFIES THE TIRE STORAGE DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY' DISTRICT HEADQUARTERS, FOR THE ARMY IS SUPREME IN MATTER OF VEHICLES CONCEDED TO CIVILIANS. THE DISTRICT HEADQUARTERS THERE HANDS OUT A SECOND-HAND TIRE OF APPROXIMATELY THE SAME QUALITY AS THE ONE THAT HAD THE BLOW-OUT. BRAND NEW TIRES SIMPLY AREN'T AVAILABLE TO THE CIVILIAN CAR OWNER.

THE STORE ROOM SUPERINTENDENT CERTIFIES ON THE APPLICATION CARD THAT SUCH-AND-SUCH ALMOST-NEW, OR RATHER-OLD, OR QUITE-WORN-OUT, TIRE HAS BEEN RELEASED FROM HIS STOCK AS "ERSATZ" FOR THE DAMAGED ONE.

WHEREUPON THE REPAIRMAN AGAIN RECEIVES THE APPLICATION CARD. HE MUST NEXT ENTER THAT HE HAS CARRIED OUT THE REPAIR OR TURNED IN THE OLD TIRE (AS THE CASE MAY BE) AND TURN THE CARD IN FOR ITS FINAL RESTING PLACE WITH THE FEDERAL OFFICE FOR RUBBER AND ASBESTOS.

SUCH IS THE TEDIOUS PROCESS, AT TIMES LASTING DAYS AND EVEN WEEKS, THROUGH WHICH THE HAPLESS INDIVIDUAL MUST GO WHEN HIS TIRE IS FLAT.

SWEDEN IS READY (850)

BY ELMER W.PETERSON

(ADVANCE)...STOCKHOLM -(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)- SWEDEN, LARGEST AND LAST NEUTRAL OF SCANDANAVIA, IS BRACING HERSELF DETERMINEDLY FOR WHATEVER MAY COME AS A RESULT OF GERMANY'S INVASION OF DENMARK AND NORWAY.

WITH WAR RAGING ALONG HER WESTERN BORDER, SHE IS REALISTICALLY READY TO DEFEND HER NEUTRALITY IF NEED BE.

THE SWEDISH NAVY, SMALL BUT EFFECTIVE, IS PREPARED.

TO BOLSTER HER AIR ARM, PILOTS ARE BEING TRAINED AND AIRPLANES PURCHASED.

A LAW MAKING STATE SERVICE COMPULSORY FOR ALL CITIZENS FROM 16 TO 60 IS PARTLY IN EFFECT. A RECRUITING OFFICE HAS BEEN OPENED FOR HOME DEFENSE GUARDS.

THE GOVERNMENT IS ALERT FOR ANY "TROJAN HORSE" SUCH AS ENABLED INVASION OF NORWAY AND DENMARK. AREAS BORDERING ON NORWAY HAVE BEEN CLOSED TO ALL BUT SCANDANAVIANS. A BILL WITH NEW DEFINITIONS OF ESPIONAGE AND TREASON HAS BEEN PUT BEFORE PARLIAMENT.

MERCHANTS IN STOCKHOLM ARE BEGINNING TO BOARD UP THEIR DISPLAY WINDOWS AGAINST AIR RAIDS. BUILDINGS ARE BEING SANDBAGGED.

UNDER GREAT PRESSURE FROM ALL SIDES, SWEDEN STILL SEEKS TO KEEP UP HER TRADE.

WITH FIGHTING RAGING IN THE SKAGERRAK AND KATTEGAT, HER OUTLETS TO THENORTH SEA, SHE IS DISCUSSING POSSIBLE NEW SEA ROUTES VIA PETSAMO AND MURMANSK, FINNISH AND RUSSIAN ARCTIC PORTS.

A GERMAN TRADE DELEGATION IS CONFERRING HERE, AND THERE IS CONCERN WHETHER GERMANY HOPES TO USE HER POSITION IN NORWAY TO WRING ECONOMIC CONCESSIONS.

GERMANY HAS DECLARED IT IS UP TO SWEDEN TO MAKE HER CHOICE. NAZIS HAVE SAID GERMANY HAS NO DESIGNS ON SWEDEN BUT, FEARING BRITISH AND FRENCH PRESSURE THERE, GERMANY "MUST BE PREPARED FOR ALL EVENTUALITIES."

BRITAIN HAS GIVEN SWEDEN UNOFFICIAL NOTIFICATION THAT THE ALLIES WILL COME TO HER AID IF SHE IS INVADED, "BUT OF COURSE, SHE MUST HELP HERSELF, TOO."

THE FRENCH, HEARING REPORTS OF NAZI TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AND EMBARKATIONS AT BALTIC PORTS, FEAR THAT BODES NO GOOD FOR SWEDEN.

THE WORRY THAT CONFRONTS SWEDEN IS NO DIFFERENT FROM THAT WHICH TORTURES MANY ANOTHER NATION THESE DAYS. THE SOUND OF PNEUMATIC DRILLS HAMMERING OUT EXCAVATIONS FOR STOCKHOLM AIR RAID SHELTERS CAN BE HEARD IN OTHER, STILL NON-BELLIGERENT CAPITALS. THE INCREASING EXPENDITURES FOR ARMAMENTS IS ONLY TYPICAL OF THE TIMES.

WHAT IS DIFFERENT IS THAT ALL THIS SHOULD HAPPEN TO SWEDEN, WITH ITS RECORD OF OVER 130 YEARS WITHOUT WAR, OF DEVOTION TO BUTTER INSTEAD OF GUNS, AND ITS DEEPLY INGRAINED DESIRE TO LIVE AND LET LIVE.

THIS WAR WORRY BREAKS IN HARSHLY ON A MANNER OF LIVING WHICH HAS BROUGHT SWEDEN TO THE FOREFRONT IN SUCH MATTERS AS SOCIAL LEGISLATION, COOPERATIVE HOUSING, AND A GENERAL POLICY OF MAXIMUM GOOD FOR THE MAXIMUM NUMBER OF PEOPLE. HAVING BUILT A PADDED NEST FOR THEMSELVES THE SWEDES ARE NOW COMING TO GRIPS WITH REALITY--NAMELY, THE POSSIBLE NECESSITY OF HAVING TO DEFEND AND PROTECT WHAT THEY HAVE ACHIEVED.

TODAY, WITH THE FINNISH WAR OVER, THE POLITICAL TURMOIL IN SWEDEN OVER THAT WAR HAS NOT ABATED ENTIRELY. THE PEACE IN FINLAND HAS DONE MORE TO UNIFY PUBLIC OPINION IN SWEDEN AS REGARDS SWEDISH DEFENSE MEASURES THAN THE WAR DID.

SWEDISH DEFENSE MEASURES IN THE PAST HAVE FACED, FIGURATIVELY, AS WELL AS LITERALLY, TOWARDS THE EAST. THE "SOVIET THREAT" WAS CONSIDERED. THAT GERMANY AND THE SOVIETS WOULD BECOME PARTNERS WAS NEVER DREAMED OF.

THE UNSPOKEN THOUGHT IN THE SWEDISH MIND WAS THAT SWEDEN, IF EVER FORCED TO WAR AGAINST THE SOVIETS, WOULD HAVE AT LEAST A NEUTRAL GERMANY OR, BETTER YET, A GERMANY FIGHTING SIDE BY SIDE AGAINST THE RED ARMY.

IT FOLLOWED THAT BOTH MILITARY AND POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS WERE INVOLVED IN THE QUESTION OF WHETHER SWEDEN SHOULD ACTIVELY INTERFERE IN THE FINNISH WAR. TIME WAS NEEDED TO READJUST SWEDEN IN A MILITARY SENSE TO ENTIRELY NEW FACTORS.

THE FINNISH PEACE HAS NOT ONLY GIVEN SWEDEN AN EXTENSION OF SWEDISH NEUTRALITY--IT HAS GIVEN THIS COUNTRY TIME TO REORIENTATE ITSELF TO NEW CIRCUMSTANCE.

TODAY, YOU CAN SEE THE FIRST SIGNS OF THE CHANGE. THE POLITICAL GROUPS WHICH FOUGHT AGAINST ARMAMENTS IN THIS COUNTRY IN THE PAST ARE NOW ADMITTING THEY WERE MISTAKEN--THAT THEY MISJUDGED THE EUROPEAN FAMILY OF NATIONS.

TODAY, SWEDISH PURCHASING COMMISSIONS ARE BUSY IN AMERICA. EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL SENT TO FINLAND DURING THE WAR THERE IS BEING REPLACED.

MILITARY REORGANIZATION IS UNDER WAY.

SWEDEN, AS A POTENTIAL MILITARY FACTOR, MUST NOT BE UNDERESTIMATED. THE ORGANIZED SWEDISH ARMED FORCES ARE PLACED AT SIX DIVISIONS, BUT FULLY 20 DIVISIONS OF TRAINED MEN COULD BE MUSTERED--SAY, ROUGHLY, HALF A MILLION MEN.

THE SWEDISH NAVY IS SMALL BUT EFFICIENT AND AN EXTENSIVE NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM IS UNDER WAY.

IN THE BOFORS MUNITIONS INDUSTRY SWEDEN HAS HER OWN SOURCE OF SUPPLY. SHE IS WELL EQUIPPED WITH NECESSARY RAW MATERIALS FOR MUNITIONS MANUFACTURE.

IN WAR WITH A MAJOR POWER, SWEDEN WOULD BE EXPOSED WAS FINLAND WAS TO AIR ATTACK. AS REGARDS INVASION OF SWEDEN, HOWEVER, FOREIGN MILITARY OBSERVERS ARE AGREED THAT AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE OF WELL OVER HALF A MILLION MEN WOULD BE NECESSARY.

SIGNIFICANT FOR THE MOMENT IS THE FACT THAT SWEDEN IS NOW FULLY ALIVE TO THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THIS WAR AND THE WORLD WAR. THE PROFITABLE SPECTATOR ROLE WHICH SWEDEN PLAYED IN THE WORLD WAR HAS BECOME MEMORY. THE BELIEF THAT SWEDEN COULD PLAY THIS ROLE AGAIN HAS BEEN RUDELY REBUFFED.

THE SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA

YELLOWED WAR FILES OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
PIECE TOGETHER TERRIFYING TALE OF THE TRAGEDY WHICH CARRIED AMERICAN INTO THE LAST WAR (1900)

BY GEORGE TURNER

(ADVANCE)...NEW YORK, MAY 4-(AP)-A STARTLING MESSAGE FROM THE SEA BROKE THE HUM-DRUM ROUTINE OF THE WIRELESS STATION AT LAND'S END, ENGLAND, ON THE AFTERNOON OF MAY 7, 1915.

"COME AT ONCE," CRACKLED THE DOTS AND DASHES. "BIG LIST. POSITION TEN MILES SOUTH OF KINSDALE."

THE LUSITANIA WAS CALLING --- BRITISH QUEEN OF THE SEAS, FILLED WITH PASSENGERS.

THERE HAD BEEN FOREBODING, BUT THAT TERSE, TERRIFYING MESSAGE WAS THE FIRST INTIMATION OF A DISASTER WHICH SHOCKED THE CIVILIZED WORLD A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO AND HELPED MOULD AMERICAN OPINION INTO ENTERING THE WORLD WAR.

STRUCK WITHOUT WARNING BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE THE GREAT BOAT DROWNED 1,198 PERSONS, INCLUDING 124 AMERICANS.

SHE SANK LESS THAN EIGHTEEN MINUTES AFTER TWO TORPEDOES DRILLED HER SIDES OFF THE HEAD OF KINSALE ON THE IRISH COAST, NEAR ST. GEORGE'S CHANNEL.

NO ONE ACT OF THE WORLD WAR, EXCEPT THE VIOLATION OF BELGIUM'S NEUTRALITY, DID SO MUCH TO ALIENATE FROM GERMANY THE SYMPATHY OF A NEUTRAL WORLD.

THE WORN, YELLOWING WAR FILES OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS REVEAL THE HORROR AND INDIGNATION OF EVERY NATION ON THE GLOBE, EXCEPT GERMANY.

THE EFFECT IN AMERICA WAS TREMENDOUS. IT COULD BE READ IN THE HEADLINES OF THE LEADING NEWSPAPERS:

"A DIABOLICAL OUTRAGE"

"SLAUGHTER OF THE NEUTRALS"

"UNQUALIFIED PIRACY"

"PREMEDITATED AND DASTARDY"

"GERMANY MUST HAVE GONE MAD."

COL.HENRY WATTERSON WROTE IN THE EDITORIAL COLUMN OF THE LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL: "THE NATION OF THE BLACK HAND AND THE BLOODY HEART HAS GOT IN ITS WORK."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT CALLED IT "THE GREATEST ACT OF PIRACY IN HISTORY."

BUT IN GERMANY THERE WAS EXULTATION, TO BE TEMPERED LATER BY THE COURSE OF EVENTS. GRAND ADMIRAL ALFRED VON TIRPITZ RECEIVED HUNDREDS OF TELEGRAMS OF CONGRATULATIONS. CHILDREN DECORATED SCHOOL HOUSES AND WERE GIVEN A HALF HOLIDAY. THE FRANKFURTER ZEITUNG CALLED THE SINKING AN "EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESS."

COMMEMORATIVE POEMS WERE WRITTEN. "THE HYMN OF THE LUSITANIA," SUNG IN MUSIC HALLS THROUGHOUT GERMANY, BROUGHT FEELINGS OF REVULSION IN THIS COUNTRY. THE LAST LINES OF IT READ:

"LET ENGLAND PONDER THE CRIMSON TEXT--

"TORPEDO, STRIKE! HURRAH FOR THE NEXT!"

IN NEW YORK, AT THE FASHIONABLE GERMAN CLUB, AT GERMAN CAFES AND RESTAURANTS "DEUTSCHLAND UEBER ALLES" WAS SUNG AND THE "VICTORY" WAS TOASTED OVER STEINS OF BEER WITH RESOUNDING "HOCHS."

30.24-2079

IN EMOTIONALLY MOVED LONDON, REGISTERING WHO SYMPATHIES AS NEVER HAD BEEN BEFORE. SOON THERE WERE ALARMING RIOTS IN MANY PARTS OF ENGLAND, CANADA, SOUTH AFRICA AND OTHER COUNTRIES. GERMAN SHOPS, RESTAURANTS AND HOTELS WERE WRECKED. THE GERMAN FLAG WAS TRAMPLED UPON. THERE WERE DEMONSTRATIONS, TOO, IN AMERICAN CITIES.

IN ALL NEUTRAL COUNTRIES THE PRESS QUERIED "WHAT WILL AMERICA DO?"

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON WAS STUNNED. PRESIDENT WILSON CANCELLED ENGAGEMENTS AND WALKED ALONE, PONDERING THE GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION. THERE WERE PRAYERS IN THE CHURCHES ASKING FOR DIVINE GUIDANCE FOR THE PRESIDENT. THERE WERE CLAMORS FOR STERN ACTION, MIXED WITH THE PLEAS OF THE PACIFISTS AND PROPONENTS OF THE DOCTRINE OF "PEACE AT ANY PRICE."

NOTES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GERMANY WERE EXCHANGED. LONG MONTHS OF TEDIOUS DIPLOMATIC PROCEDURE FOLLOWED. THE COUNTRY BECAME IMPATIENT. WOODROW WILSON'S

THE CABINET OF THE PRESIDENT WAS SPLIT. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN RESIGNED AS SECRETARY OF STATE.

AS TIME PASSED AND GERMANY MADE NO COMPLETE APOLOGY OR OFFERED NO SATISFACTORY DISAPPROVAL OF THE SINKING, THE WAR FEELING IN MANY SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY BEGAN TO TAKE TANGIBLE FORM. THE ESTRANGEMENT BETWEEN THE TWO NATIONS BECAME PRONOUNCED. HISTORIANS AGREE THE DISASTER WAS AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN BRINGING THE UNITED STATES INTO THE WAR.

BEFORE THE LUSITANIA WAS SUNK, SHE HAD FIGURED IN AN INCIDENT THAT CREATED A FUROR HERE. WHILE ENROUTE FROM NEW YORK TO LIVERPOOL IN FEBRUARY, 1915, THE PRESENCE OF GERMAN SUBMARINES BECAME KNOWN TO HER COMMANDER AND HIS SHIP FLEW THE STARS AND STRIPES FOR 24 HOURS ACROSS THE IRISH SEA.

THE UNITED STATES, IN A NOTE, REQUESTED GREAT BRITAIN TO REFRAIN FROM USING THE AMERICAN FLAG. ENGLAND, IN A CONCILIATORY REPLY, SAID SUCH USAGE WAS A WELL-ESTABLISHED RUSE DE GUERRE; THAT IT WOULD NOT MAKE IT A GENERAL PRACTICE AND POINTED OUT THAT DURING THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAD USED THE BRITISH FLAG IN SIMILAR CIRCUMSTANCES.

ON APRIL 22, THE GERMAN EMBASSY AT WASHINGTON PRINTED ADVERTISEMENTS IN LEADING NEWSPAPERS WARNING AMERICANS THAT THEY TRAVELED ON SHIPS FLYING ENEMY FLAGS IN THE WAR ZONES AT THEIR OWN RISK.

(GERMANY, SHORTLY BEFORE, HAD ANNOUNCED HER POLICY OF UNRESTRICTED SUBMARINE WARFARE.)

SECRETARY OF STATE BRYAN TOOK NO OFFICIAL NOTICE OF THE ADVERTISEMENTS ALTHOUGH IT BECAME KNOWN, LATER, THAT HE HAD CONSULTED WITH THE PRESIDENT ABOUT IT.

THE LUSITANIA WAS SCHEDULED TO SAIL FROM NEW YORK ON MAY 1. NOT A SINGLE CANCELLATION WAS MADE IN HER PASSENGER LIST BECAUSE OF THE WARNING. SOME PASSENGERS WENT EVEN AFTER RECEIVING ANONYMOUS TELEGRAMS AND LETTERS ADVISING THEM NOT TO SAIL.

CHARLES KLEIN, THE NOTED PLAYWRIGHT, WHO WAS DROWNED, SAID BEFORE SAILING THAT HE WAS NOT CONCERNED; THAT HE EXPECTED TO SPEND HIS TIME THINKING OF HIS NEW PLAY, "POTASH AND PERLMUTTER IN SOCIETY."

ELBERT HUBBARD, FAMOUS PUBLISHER OF THE PHILISTINE (WHO WAS DROWNED WITH HIS WIFE) JOCULARLY SAID THAT IF THE SHIP WAS TORPEDOED HE WOULD BE ABLE TO DO JUSTICE TO THE KAISER IN HIS MAGAZINE.

SO THE GREAT LINER SAILED, WITH 1968 PASSENGERS AND CREW, TO THE CHEERS OF HUNDREDS AT HER DOCK.

SHE WAS A BIG, GRACEFUL SHIP -- 785-FOOT SISTER OF THE OLD MAURETANIA-- AND HELD THE BLUE RIBBON FOR FAST ATLANTIC CROSSINGS.

WITH HER CARGO, INCLUDING A SHIPMENT OF GOLD, SHE WAS WORTH NEARLY $11,000,000. THE SHIP ALONE WAS INSURED FOR $7,500,000.

HER BOTTOM WAS DOUBLE AND SHE HAD 170 WATER-TIGHT COMPARTMENTS WHICH COULD BE CLOSED AUTOMATICALLY IN A FEW SECONDS. THE PASSENGERS FELT SECURE.

THE WAR CENSORSHIP WAS ON THEN--AS NOW--AND NOTHING WAS HEARD OF HER AFTER SHE LEFT THE HARBOR UNTIL 8 O'CLOCK ON THE MORNING OF MAY 7.

THEN ONE OF THOSE UNTRACEABLE RUMORS FAMILIAR IN NEWSPAPER OFFICES--RUMORS WHICH SEEM TO SPRING UP FROM NOWHERE--BEGAN TO CIRCULATE IN NEW YORK THAT SHE HAD BEEN ATTACKED.

"UNCONFIRMED" REPORTS BEGAN TO SEEP IN. FINALLY, AFTER LONG WAITING, CAME THE OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE TORPEDOING. NO DETAILS. FIRST REPORTS FROM ENGLAND WERE REASSURING AS TO THE LOSS OF LIFE, IF ANY.

AS THE DAY WORE ON, EXCITEMENT MOUNTED AND ANXIETY INCREASED. THEN CAME THE SHOCKING NEWS OF THE HEAVY CASUALTIES. A SHUDDER RAN THROUGH THE NATION.

THERE WAS A PANIC ON THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE. BETHLEHEM STEEL WAS OFF 29 POINTS; OTHER WAR STOCKS TUMBLED. AT CHICAGO, WHEAT DROPPED A CENT A BUSHEL.

HUNDREDS OF WEEPING WOMEN AND GRAVE-FACED MEN BESIEGED THE CUNARD OFFICES IN NEW YORK AND LONDON. NEWSPAPER OFFICES WERE SWAMPED WITH QUERIES AS TO THE FATE OF PASSENGERS. THE STATE DEPARTMENT AT WASHINGTON WAS SIMILARLY DELUGED.

AT THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS IN NEW YORK AND THROUGHOUT THE SERVICE EDITORS AND REPORTERS WORKED UNDER AN EXTRA STRAIN. ALL KNEW THAT HERBERT S.STONE, MAGAZINE PUBLISHER, SON OF THEIR GENERAL MANAGER, MELVILLE E.STONE, WAS A LUSITANIA PASSENGER.

30.24-2081

HE PERISHED.

THE LUSITANIA WAS WITHIN SIGHT OF LAND WHEN DISASTER CAME.

IT WAS A BRIGHT, SUNSHINY DAY. THE PASSENGERS HAD JUST FINISHED THEIR MID-DAY MEAL AND WERE PLANNING SHORE PARTIES WHEN THE LOOKOUT SAW THE FIRST TORPEDO.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM T.TURNER, THE COMMANDER ON THE BRIDGE, WATCHED THE FOAM MADE BY THE DEADLY MISSILE AS IT APPROACHED. IT WAS TOO LATE TO DO ANYTHING. THE TORPEDO SHATTERED THE STARBOARD SIDE, FORWARD. IN A FEW SECONDS, ANOTHER TORPEDO STRUCK EXACTLY AMIDSHIPS, NEAR THE BOILERS.

THERE WAS A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION. WATER POURED INTO THE GAPING HOLES THE SHIP STAGGERED AND LISTED. SHE BEGAN TO SETTLE BY THE HEAD. IN A FEW SECONDS, IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO STAND ON THE DECKS.

THE CREW STARTED TO LOWER THE LIFE BOATS. THERE WAS A RUSH FOR THEM. SOME BOATS WERE OVERTURNED IN THE LAUNCHING, FOR THE LINER HAD BEEN TRAVELING AT A GOOD SPEED.

IN LESS THAN TWENTY MINUTES, THE PRIDE OF THE BRITISH MERCHANT MARINE HAD DISAPPEARED. THE WATER WAS DOTTED WITH MEN AND WOMEN CLINGING TO ALL SORTS OF WRECKAGE. CAPTAIN TURNER WAS THE LAST TO LEAVE. HE CALMLY WALKED DOWN THE LADDER AS THE SHIP WENT UNDER. HE CLUNG TO A FLOATING CHAIR FOR TWO HOURS UNTIL HE WAS PICKED UP BY RESCUE BOATS.

ACCOUNTS AGREE, GENERALLY, THAT THE PASSENGERS BEHAVED WELL, ALTHOUGH THERE WAS A PANIC IN THE STEERAGE. THERE WERE MANY INCIDENTS OF QUIET BRAVERY IN THAT QUICK RENDEZVOUS WITH DEATH.

ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT, THE AMERICAN MILLIONAIRE, (WHOSE BODY NEVER WAS RECOVERED) TOOK OFF HIS LIFE PRESERVER AND HANDED IT TO AN HYSTERICAL WOMAN. THE LAST THING HE WAS HEARD TO SAY WAS TO A FELLOW PASSENGER:

"LET'S GO BELOW AND SEE IF THERE ARE ANY KIDDIES LEFT."

CHARLES FROHMAN, THE NEW YORK THEATRICAL PRODUCER, LAME AND ILL, STOOD PASSIVELY BY WHILE WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE BEING THRUST INTO THE LIFE BOATS.

TO A WOMAN, WHO WAS SAVED, HE SAID, CASUALLY;"

"DEATH? WHAT IS DEATH BUT A BEAUTIFUL ADVENTURE?"

HIS BODY WAS BROUGHT BACK TO NEW YORK FOR AN IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL.

RESCUE SHIPS COMBED THE SEAS FOR LIVING AND DEAD. SURVIVORS WERE TAKEN TO QUEENSTOWN, NOW COBH. THERE WERE PATHETIC, HEART-BREAKING SCENES IN THE TEMPORARY MORGUES FOR DAYS AS FRIENDS AND RELATIVES TRIED TO IDENTIFY THE DEAD. MOST TOUCHING OF ALL WERE THE BODIES OF BABIES AND SMALL CHILDREN.

THE SURVIVORS, MANY OF THEM INJURED OR SUFFERING FROM EXPOSURE, WERE CARED FOR BY THE QUEENSTOWN PEOPLE. LATER RELIEF FUNDS WERE RAISED HERE AND ABROAD.

MAY 5 1940

THE DAYS THAT FOLLOWED WERE TAKEN UP BY DIPLOMATIC USAGE. ON MAY 10, THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT CABLED ITS SYMPATHY FOR THE LOSS OF AMERICAN LIVES BUT AT THE SAME BREATH MAINTAINED THE RESPONSIBILITY WAS GREAT BRITAIN'S.

THE LUSITANIA WAS ARMED, SAID THE KAISER'S GOVERNMENT. AMERICANS HAD BEEN WARNED NOT TO TRAVEL ON SHIPS OF BELLIGERENTS IN THE WAR ZONE. THE SHIP HAD CARRIED WAR MATERIAL. THE OWNERS KNEW OF THIS AND THEREFORE THEY MUST BEAR THE RESPONSIBILITY.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT SAID IT WAS "WHOLLY FALSE" THAT THE BOAT

WAS ARMED. DUDLEY FIELD MALONE, COLLECTOR OF THE PORT OF NEW YORK, SAID HE HAD PERSONALLY INSPECTED THE SHIP BEFORE SAILING AND THAT SHE CARRIED NO GUNS, MOUNTED OR UNMOUNTED.

IT WAS SHOWN, IN SUBSEQUENT INVESTIGATIONS, THAT THE LINER CARRIED 4,200 CASES OF CARTRIDGES FOR SMALL ARMS, NOT ENOUGH TO CAUSE THE TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS WHICH THE GERMANS CHARGED HAD CAUSED THE SINKING AFTER THE TORPEDO STRUCK.

A COURT OF INQUIRY IN LONDON PLACED THE BLAME ON GERMANY. A CORONER'S JURY CHARGED THE KAISER PERSONALLY WITH "THE CRIME OF WILFUL AND WHOLESALE MURDER."

YEARS LATER THERE WERE DAMAGE SUITS AMOUNTING TO MILLIONS OF DOLLARS. PLANS WERE MADE AT VARIOUS TIMES TO RAISE THE SHIP AND RECOVER ITS CARGO. THEY NEVER MATERIALIZED.

AFTER THE WAR, ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ, FATHER OF THE GERMAN NAVY, WHO WAS TARGET FOR MUCH CRITICISM, WROTE A PERSONAL NARRATIVE WHICH REFLECTED THE GERMAN VIEW POINT.

HE SAID, IN PART:

MAY 5 1940

"THE LUSITANIA WAS LISTED IN THE ENGLISH NAVY AS AN AUXILIARY CRUISER AND THE ENGLISH REGULATIONS PRESCRIBED THAT SHE SHOULD HAVE ON BOARD, EVEN IN PEACE TIMES, THE NECESSARY ARMS AND MUNITIONS. X X THE COMMANDER OF THE GERMAN SUBMARINE WHICH DID THE SINKING WAS NOT AWARE AT THE MOMENT, WHEN HE HAD TO MAKE HIS DECISION, THAT IT WAS THE LUSITANIA THAT LOOMED UP BEFORE HIM, STILL LESS THAT SHE HAD A LARGE NUMBER OF PASSENGERS ON BOARD.

"HE THEREFORE ACTED SIMPLY IN ACCORDANCE WITH HIS INSTRUCTIONS AND DISPATCHED HIS TORPEDO X X X

"LET US SUPPOSE THAT THE COMMANDER OF THE SUBMARINE WAS, AT THE MOMENT OF FORMING HIS RESOLUTION, ACTUALLY AWARE THAT HE HAD THE LUSITANIA BEFORE HIM; IN THAT CASE HE COULD NOT HAVE AVOIDED THE BITTER REFLECTION THAT THE UNLAWFUL CARGO, IF NOT SUNK, WOULD COST THE LIVES OF 10,000, 20,000 OR PERHAPS EVEN A GREATER NUMBER OF HIS FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.

"I CAN NOT BELIEVE THAT ANY OFFICER OF THE AMERICAN NAVY, FINDING HIMSELF IN SUCH A POSITION, WOULD HAVE REFRAINED FROM MAKING USE OF THE ONLY MEANS AT HIS COMMAND FOR PREVENTING SUCH A HOLOCAUST.

"THE AMERICAN PUBLIC WAS EXPRESSLY WARNED NOT TO TAKE PASSAGE ON THE LUSITANIA. X X X I FOR ONE, MUST CONTINUE TO REGARD THE DEPLORABLE LOSS OF MORE THAN 1,000 HUMAN LIVES AS AN ASTONISHING PROOF OF THE CARELESSNESS OF A PUBLIC X X X AND OF THE FRIVOLITY OF AN ENGLISH SHIPPING CONCERN."

THE WAR IS RE-SHUFFLING SOUTH AMERICA'S TRADE MAP (500)

BY HAROLD K.MILKS

MAY 5 1940

(ADVANCE) BUENOS AIRES-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THE END OF EUROPE'S WAR WILL CALL FOR DRASTIC RE-SHUFFLING OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE MAP, REGARDLESS OF WHICH SIDE WINS.

ALREADY STATISTICAL REPORTS SHOW SIGNS OF STRONG IMPENDING CHANGES IN ADDITION TO THOSE CAUSED BY GREAT BRITAIN'S WARSHIP BLOCKADE OF GERMANY'S BLOSSOMING BARTER TRADE WITH THIS CONTINENT.

WHO WILL TAKE GERMANY'S SHARE OF THE SALES IN MARKETS OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS REMAINS UNANSWERED. LIKE THE BELLIGERENTS ABROAD,

30.24-2083

PARTICIPANTS IN THE ECONOMIC BATTLES ON THIS SIDE OF THE ATLANTIC ARE STILL "CHOOSING UP SIDES."

THE UNITED STATES APPARENTLY HAS AN INSIDE EDGE ON ESSENTIAL IMPORTS TO LATIN AMERICAN NATIONS, INCLUDING ARGENTINA, ON THE BASIS OF STATISTICS FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE WAR PERIOD--SEPTEMBER 1939 THROUGH MARCH 1940.

JAPAN, FORCED TO SEEK NEW MARKETS AND SUPPLIES OF RAW MATERIALS WHEN IT'S AGREEMENT WITH THE UNITED STATES EXPIRED, IS STRONGLY ACTIVE IN PROMOTING TRADE WITH THE SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS. ALREADY IT HAS ACCOMPLISHED WHAT THE UNITED STATES FAILED TO DO, BY NEGOTIATING A COMMERCIAL AGREEMENT WITH THIS COUNTRY.

A SURVEY OF ARGENTINE TRADE FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE NEW WORLD WAR COMPARED WITH THE SIMILAR PERIOD OF A YEAR EARLIER SHOWS THAT GERMANY, BELGIUM, FRANCE, ITALY, THE NETHERLANDS, THE UNITED KINGDOM, SWEDEN, SWITZERLAND, AND JAPAN SOLD LESS TO THIS COUNTRY SINCE THE WAR BEGAN. DENMARK, NORWAY, AND THE UNITED STATES SOLD MORE.

ONLY GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN BOUGHT LESS--THE FORMER BECAUSE BRITISH WARSHIPS DROVE HER SHIPPING HOME OR INTO NEUTRAL PORTS; THE LATTER BECAUSE OF THE TIGHTENING OF HER ECONOMIC BELT TO FINANCE THE WAR.

MAY 5 1940

EVERY OTHER MAJOR CUSTOMER OF THE ARGENTINE BOUGHT MORE, INCLUDING NEIGHBORS OF GERMANY WHICH HAVE COMMON FRONTIERS--AND UNSTOPPABLE TRADE ROUTES--WITH THE NAZIS.

GERMANY'S IMPORTS FROM THE ARGENTINE DROPPED 89.7 PER CENT. BY CONTRAST, BELGIUM BOUGHT 22.8 PER CENT MORE, DENMARK'S PURCHASES WENT UP 138.3 PER CENT, SPAIN GAINED 219.4 PER CENT, ITALY 127.9 PER CENT, NORWAY 143.2 PER CENT, THE NETHERLANDS 44.3 PER CENT, AND SWEDEN 89.5 PER CENT.

LITTLE SWITZERLAND, BORDERING GERMANY ON ONE SIDE AND FRANCE ON THE OTHER, REGISTERED THE MOST PHENOMENAL TRADE FLUCTUATION. ITS ARGENTINE PURCHASES JUMPED 1735.6 PERCENT.

GREAT BRITAIN, DESPITE A SMALL REDUCTION, REMAINS THIS COUNTRY'S BEST CUSTOMER BY A LARGE MARGIN.

SECOND IS THE UNITED STATES, WHICH INCREASED ITS BUYING HERE OVER EIGHTY PER CENT.

GERMAN GOODS WORTH 23,808,000 PESOS (FOUR TO A DOLLAR) TRICKLED INTO ARGENTINA PAST THE BRITISH FLEET AFTER THE WAR BEGAN, MUCH OF IT ON NEUTRAL SHIPS. THOSE IMPORTS WERE 66.1 PER CENT BELOW GERMAN SALES HERE IN THE SIXMMONTH PERIOD OF THE PREVIOUS YEAR.

GREAT BRITAIN MANAGED TO SELL ONLY 115,485,000 PESOS WORTH OF GOODS, A DROP OF 5.9 PERCENT.

MAY 5 1940

THE WAR GAVE THE UNITED STATES AN OPPORTUNITY TO SUPPLANT BRITAIN AS NO.1 SUPPLIER OF THE ARGENTINE, AND AMERICAN TRADESMEN TOOK ADVANTAGE OF THAT CHANCE TO BOOST SALES TO THIS COUNTRY 42 PER CENT, FROM 100,000,000 PESOS TO 143,045,000 PESOS.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED EARLY IN THE WAR ITS INTENTION OF EXTENDING THE ANTI-NAZI CAMPAIGN TO THE SOUTH AMERICAN FRONT BY DESTROYING GERMAN INFLUENCE ON THIS CONTINENT AND DRIVING OUT NAZI-PRODUCED GOODS.

THOSE PLANS HAVE MADE LITTLE IMPRESSION HERE DESPITE IMPORT REGULATIONS HIGHLY FAVORABLE TO THE BRITISH. DELIVERY DELAYS AND A LACK OF SHIPS IN WHICH TO PUSH EXPORTS TO SOUTH AMERICA WERE GIVEN BY INFORMED SOURCES AS TWO REASONS WHY THE BRITISH ECONOMIC WARFARE REMAINS INEFFECTIVE.

A NEW SCIENCE: WAR FORECASTING

ASTRONOMER DISCOVERS MATHEMATICAL FORMULA
WHICH APPLIES TO EUROPE'S WAR

IT GIVES GERMANY A SLIGHT EDGE
IN FIGHTING IN NORWAY (1200)

MAY 5 1940

(EDITOR'S NOTE: OF ALL THE STRANGE THINGS IN EUROPE'S STRANGE WAR, NOTHING IS STRANGER THAN THE FACT THAT A FORMULA TO GOVERN THE FIGHTING SHOULD BE DISCOVERED 3,000 MILES AWAY FROM THE BATTLEFIELD. AT PRINCETON UNIVERSITY IN NEW JERSEY, AN ASTRONOMER, PROF. JOHN Q. STEWART, HAS MADE THIS DISCOVERY BY CHANCE. A GOOD SCIENTIST, HE MAKES NO GREAT CLAIMS FOR ITS ACCURACY. HE MERELY RECORDS HOW IT WORKS AND THE SURPRISING RESULTS IT HAS SHOWN. HIS OWN STORY, WRITTEN AT THE REQUEST OF ASSOCIATED PRESS SCIENCE EDITOR HOWARD BLAKESLEE, WHO DISCOVERED THE DISCOVERY, FOLLOWS)

BY PROF JOHN Q.STEWART
WRITTEN FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(ADVANCE)..PRINCETON, N.J., MAY 4--I APPLIED A MATHEMATICAL FORMULA TO WAR TODAY AND FOUND THAT GERMANY HAS A SLIGHT EDGE OVER ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN THE FIGHTING IN NORWAY.

THIS FORMULA WAS SUGGESTED BY SIR ISAAC NEWTON'S LAW OF GRAVITY AND I TRIED IT ON THE WAR BECAUSE IT HAD WORKED OUT SUCCESSFULLY ON MORE PEACEFUL TESTS OF COMPETING FORCES.

THE RESULT OF MY FIRST TEST IN RELATION TO THE FIGHTING FRONTS WAS SURPRISING.

IT SHOWED THAT GERMANY'S POWER TO STRIKE BY LAND AND AIR CONSIDERABLY OUTWEIGHED ALLIED POWER IN A DOZEN COUNTRIES.

THOSE COUNTRIES ARE (OR WERE) AUSTRIA, CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, DENMARK, ESTONIA, FINLAND, HUNGARY, LATVIA, LITHUANIA, POLAND, RUSSIA, SWEDEN AND YUGOSLAVIA.

IT SEEMED SIGNIFICANT THAT ALL BUT THREE OF THESE COUNTRIES--HUNGARY, SWEDEN AND YUGOSLAVIA--ALREADY HAD BEEN OVERRUN BY GERMANY OR GERMANY'S SUPPORTER, RUSSIA.

MAY 5 1940

IT SEEMED FURTHER SIGNIFICANT THAT THE REMAINING THREE COUNTRIES WERE ALL UNDER HEAVY PRESSURE FROM THE NAZIS AND WERE THE REPORTED OBJECTS OF HITLER'S NEXT INVASION.

APPLYING THE FORMULA FURTHER, I FOUND:

IT GAVE GERMANY A SLIGHT EDGE OVER THE ALLIES IN BULGARIA, NORWAY AND RUMANIA.

NOW NORWAY HAS BEEN ATTACKED.

WHAT ABOUT ENGLISH AND FRENCH ORBITS OF POWER?

THE NEW MATHEMATICAL FORMULA, WHICH BALANCES POPULATIONS AND DISTANCES, SAYS IT COVERS BELGIUM, EIRE, THE NETHERLANDS, PORTUGAL, SPAIN, ITALY -- IF ITALY IS REGARDED AS A NEUTRAL -- AND ALSO A SMALL ADVANTAGE IN SWITZERLAND.

30.24-2085

IN ALBANIA, GREECE, AND TURKEY, THE TWO SIDES ARE ABOUT EVEN, AS REGARDS THE IMPACT OF THEIR LAND AND AIR FORCES.

IF ALLIED SEAPOWER ALSO IS CONSIDERED, AS IT MUST BE, THE TOTAL ALLIED POWER IS POTENTIALLY THE SUPERIOR IN ALBANIA, GREECE, AND PERHAPS IN NORWAY AND ROUMANIA.

THE MATHEMATICAL PRINCIPLE ON WHICH MY FORMULA IS BASED IS THAT A COUNTRY'S POWER OF ATTACK OR DEFENSE IS PROPORTIONAL TO ITS POPULATION BUT DECREASES WITH INCREASING DISTANCE TO THE FIELD OF ACTION.

IF THE DISTANCE IN MILES FROM GERMANY IS DIVIDED INTO GERMANY'S POPULATION THE RESULTING QUOTIENT, CALLED THE "POTENTIAL," IS AN INDEX OF GERMAN POWER.

GREAT BRITAIN'S POWER OF ATTACK OR DEFENSE, SIMILARLY, IS COMPUTED BY DIVIDING THE DISTANCE IN MILES FROM LONDON INTO THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED KINGDOM. AND THAT OF FRANCE BY DIVIDING THE DISTANCE IN MILES FROM PARIS INTO THE POPULATION OF FRANCE.

WHEN THE INDICES OBTAINED FOR BRITAIN AND FRANCE ARE ADDED AND THEIR SUM COMPARED WITH THE INDEX FOR GERMANY THE RESULTS ARE THOSE OUTLINED ABOVE.

THE NEW FORMULA ADAPTS THE MATHEMATICS WHICH ASTRONOMERS HAVE SUCCESSFULLY USED IN STUDYING THE FORCES BETWEEN PLANETS AND STARS. IT WAS SIR ISAAC NEWTON WHO FOUND THAT THE EARTH'S GRAVITATIONAL ENERGY AT THE MOON LESSENS IN EXACT PROPORTION TO THE INCREASE IN THE MOON'S DISTANCE. FURTHERMORE IF THE EARTH WERE TWICE AS MASSIVE IT WOULD EXERCISE TWICE AS MUCH GRAVITATIONAL ENERGY AT A GIVEN DISTANCE.

MAY 5 1940

IN THIS SENSE THE UNITED KINGDOM AND FRANCE TOGETHER ARE MORE "MASSIVE" THAN GERMANY IN THE RATIO OF ABOUT 5 TO 4, THIS BEING THE RATIO OF THEIR POPULATIONS.

IN THE LONG RUN, IN A DISASTROUS WAR OF ATTRITION, THIS ALLIED SUPERIORITY, PLUS THE ADDITIONAL SUPERIORITY PROVIDED BY THE RESOURCES OF THE BRITISH AND FRENCH EMPIRES AND THEIR WORLD COMMUNICATIONS, ALMOST CERTAINLY WOULD PREVAIL. BUT AT THE START GERMANY'S CENTRAL GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION HAS BEEN A GREAT ADVANTAGE, INASMUCH AS IT REDUCES THE DISTANCES ACROSS WHICH GERMAN FORCES OPERATE.

IN THE COMPUTATIONS THE AVERAGE DISTANCE FROM BERLIN TO THE 27 OTHER PRINCIPAL EUROPEAN CAPITALS IS 515 MILES, WHILE FROM LONDON IT IS 635 MILES.

AS GERMANY OCCUPIES ONE COUNTRY AFTER ANOTHER AND HAS TO DETACH GUARDS OVER HOSTILE POPULATIONS GERMAN STRENGTH FOR OTHER ADVENTURES IS SERIOUSLY REDUCED.

FOR SYMPATHIZERS WITH THE ALLIES THERE IS A GRAIN OF COMFORT IN THE NEWS THAT GERMANY HAS ALMOST EXHAUSTED THE LIST OF HER EASY CONQUESTS.

MAY 5 1940

BUT IF RUSSIA AND ITALY ADD THEIR "POTENTIALS" DEFINITELY TO GERMANY'S SIDE THE SCALES IN SEVERAL ADDITIONAL COUNTRIES WILL TIP HEAVILY AGAINST THE ALLIES.

IT MAY SEEM A FAR CRY FROM ASTRONOMICAL TO MILITARY MATTERS, BUT THE IDEA THAT MILITARY POWER DECREASES IN PROPORTION TO INCREASED DISTANCE HAS FOUND INDIRECT VERIFICATION IN AN INSTANCE OF PEACEFUL RIVALRY.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY AND PRINCETON UNIVERSITY SINCE BEFORE THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR HAVE BEEN COMPETING WITH EACH OTHER AND WITH OTHER

LONG-ESTABLISHED COLLEGES FOR STUDENTS.

A STUDY, IN WHICH PHILIP WILLKIE, A PRINCETON SENIOR, SON OF WENDELL L.WILLKIE ASSISTED ME, WAS MADE OF THE GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF HARVARD ALUMNI AND PRINCETON ALUMNI.

THIS STUDY VERIFIED THE PRINCIPLE THAT IN A STABILIZED COMPETITIVE SITUATION THE EFFECTIVENESS OF A COMPETITOR IS INVERSELY PROPORTIONAL TO HIS DISTANCE FROM A PROSPECTIVE CUSTOMER.

THE NUMBER OF PRINCETON ALUMNI, RESIDENT IN A GIVEN STATE, PER MILLION OF THE GENERAL POPULATION, TURNED OUT TO BE 36500 DIVIDED BY PRINCETON'S DISTANCE IN MILES. THE NUMBER OF HARVARD ALUMNI, PER MILLION OF THE GENERAL POPULATION, WAS 144000 DIVIDED BY CAMBRIDGE'S DISTANCE IN MILES.

HARVARD LISTS 3.1 TIMES AS MANY ALUMNI AS PRINCETON IN THE WHOLE UNITED STATES, BUT IN AREAS CLOSE TO PRINCETON THERE RESIDE MORE PRINCETON ALUMNI THAN HARVARD ALUMNI. THIS IS AN ILLUSTRATION OF THE INFLUENCE OF THE "DISTANCE FACTOR," WHICH ACCORDINGLY IS OBJECTIVELY ESTABLISHED IN THIS SPECIAL CASE.

I BELIEVE FURTHER TESTS WILL SHOW THE SAME TYPE OF FORMULA APPLYING IN OTHER COMPETITIVE SITUATIONS. IT AFFORDS A SUGGESTIVE METHOD OF STUDYING THE GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF BUSINESS CUSTOMERS IN AMERICA--OR VICTIMS OF DICTATORSHIPS IN EUROPE.

MAY 5 1940

AS APPLIED TO EUROPEAN MILITARY COMPETITION IT SOMEWHAT OVERSIMPLIFIES THOSE COMPLEX ENMITIES.

THE "DISTANCE FACTOR," WITHOUT A DEFINITE MATHEMATICAL FORMULA, HAS BEEN RECOGNIZED BY MILITARY MEN, EVEN IF NOT BY DIPLOMATS, LONG BEFORE THE CONFEDERATE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL, N.B.FORREST, RECOMMENDED "GIT THAR FUSTEST WITH THE MOSTEST MEN."

IN COMPUTATIONS FOR THE FORMULA LAND DISTANCES WERE COUNTED AS EQUIVALENT TO EQUAL

KK

EQUIVALENT TO EQUAL WATER DISTANCES, AND DISTANCES OVER HOSTILE TERRITORY AS EQUIVALENT TO THE SAME DISTANCES OVER FRIENDLY TERRITORY. NEITHER PROCEDURE CAN BE EXACT. THE DEFENSIVE POWER OF THE ARMIES OF INVADED SMALL NEUTRAL COUNTRIES HAS NOWHERE BEEN TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION. RECENT EXPERIENCE HAS SHOWN THAT IT IS USUALLY, BUT NOT ALWAYS, NEGLIGIBLE. FURTHERMORE, THE EXPEDIENT OF MEASURING DISTANCES BETWEEN CAPITALS (THE METHOD USED) IS AN APPROXIMATION.

A REFINED REVISION WOULD THEREFORE RESULT IN SOME MODIFICATIONS. IN PARTICULAR, GERMANY PROBABLY IS NOT AS WEAK IN THE NETHERLANDS AND IN BELGIUM AS MY PRESENT INDEX INDICATES.

BERLIN CLAIMS HIT ON ANOTHER BATTLESHIP

Air Force Reports Attack On British Naval Unit Off Narvik

MAY 6 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Monday, May 6—The German air force yesterday attacked a British naval unit off Narvik, Norway's Arctic port, and scored a direct hit on an English battleship, reliable German sources asserted.

Heavy smoke rising from the warship showed the effect of the bomb, it was reported.

British troops at Narvik also were subjected to the force of the German airmen, Germans said, and bombs dropped on an enemy encampment in that region exploded a munitions dump.

The German high command's communique of Sunday repeated its assertion that a British battleship and a heavy cruiser were sunk by German flyers Friday off Namsos.

Nazi Stick To Claims

Authorized German sources last night stuck to that claim of success for their air force, despite flat denials by the British.

Other sinkings announced by the command included a large British transport off Namsos Friday, two enemy merchantment Saturday and a Polish destroyer off Narvik Saturday.

Detachments of British and French troops, apparently left behind in the Allied withdrawal from Namsos, are hurrying northward in what may be an attempt to launch an attack on Narvik from the south, DNB reported yesterday.

The movement of the Allied troops, the news agency said, was discovered in scouting operations while the main force of the German army of occupation pushed its hold on Norway as far as the railheads of Namsos and Grong, north of Trondheim, and continued "mopping-up" action in central and southern Norway.

Detachments Cut Off

DNB asserted the British and French detachments had been cut off from the main expeditionary force by German aerial attacks on the embarkation operations at Namsos last Wednesday and Thursday.

German military quarters speculated whether the British and French would attempt to reach Narvik, the ore port north of the Arctic Circle where a German garrison is holding out against Allied attacks supported by planes, warships and artillery.

To do so, these isolated Allied troops would have to make their way through more than 300 miles of the most mountainous, difficult terrain in Norway. A single highway runs north as far as Bodo, on the coast. But there is no road for the one hundred miles from there to Narvik, and the intervening country is dotted with mountains and rendered even more difficult to negotiate by numerous deep-running fjords, streams and lakes.

Attacks Repulsed

At Narvik itself, the high command announced, repeated attacks by "strong enemy forces supported by flyers" on German "security units" north of the town "were repulsed by cooperative action of our own land forces and airmen."

German troops moving north from Steinkjer, above Trondheim, marched into Namsos and Grong, where the Norwegian commander of the area surrendered unconditionally, its communique said.

"Mopping up" of scattered Norwegian units still offering resistance were reported chiefly in the Trysil area east of Lillehammer and around Roros, southeast of Trondheim.

At the same time the high command set the figure for Allied merchant shipping losses through mines and U-boats at close to 2,300,000 tons for the eight months of the war.

MAY 6 1940

Slackening Indicated

These figures indicated a slackening in the tempo of German attacks in the last two months. Official figures at the close of the six-month war period placed the loss in Allied shipping and neutral shipping destined for the Allies at 1,904,913 gross tons.

On the basis of these figures, the monthly average for the first six months was 317,485 tons; for the first eight months, 287,500 tons.

The army communique emphasized the activity of German submarines during April in the Norwegian campaign, implying that this might account in part for the drop.

Lesson To British Seen

Citing the importance of the eight months' total of 2,300,000 tons of shipping sunk, military experts commented that "such tonnage is a grievous loss for British shipping, especially since any new building is hampered seriously because shipyards are overburdened with repair work for the British Admiralty."

In the eyes of the well-informed Dienst aus Deutschland, the successes claimed by the German air force against the British fleet during the campaign in the North apparently have caused the British to draw the proper lesson in the Mediterranean.

This commentary said the impression prevails in Government circles that the shifting of the British fleet from Malta to Alexandria "is nothing but a preventive flight which should give the British fleet greater security against obviously feared eventualities," meaning possible Italian entry into the war.

In this connection semi-official sources made plain that Germany is ready to act against what they charge are Allied efforts to spread the war by seeking "another Norway."

"England is lurking everywhere but Germany is remaining vigilant," said the Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz.

BRITAIN DENIES AIR BOMB SANK BATTLESHIP

Admiralty Brands Nazi Claim Of Namsos Victory As "Untrue"

Dr. Koht, From London, Tells Norwegians Not To Lose Patience

MAY 6 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 5—Great Britain tonight officially denied Germany's claim that Nazi warplanes had sunk a 30,000-ton British battleship and a heavy cruiser in concentrated air attacks off the Norwegian coast.

The Admiralty broke its silence of more than a day since Germany jubilantly announced that her aircraft had sunk or badly damaged nine British warships and transports off the Norwegian ports of Namsos and Narvik last Friday.

"The German claim to have sunk a British battleship and a cruiser of the York class in the operations off Namsos is untrue," said the Admiralty communique.

Other Claims Ignored

It made no reference to the other triumphs officially reported by the Nazis, but well-informed British sources last night had described the German claims as "of the fantastic character to which the public is fast becoming accustomed."

A message to the Norwegian people not to lose "patience" and counseling them to put their trust in the Allies was broadcast from London by Dr. Halvdan Koht, Norwegian Foreign Minister, who last month defied Germany's demand that Norway submit to the Nazi occupation and then fled with his King and Government before the gray-clad Nazi warriors.

Dr. Koht arrived in London today with the Norwegian Defense Minister, Col. Birger Ljungberg. They came to a Scottish port on a British warship for conferences with Allied leaders.

Promised Full Aid

The Foreign Minister said in the broadcast after the conferences that the Allies had promised Norway "full aid" and that it was a point of honor for them to fulfill that promise.

"We must trust in them and on our side we must not lose patience," he said.

"We, on our side must not give up the struggle."

In such an event, he added, there could be no hope that Germany would restore Norway's independence after the war. He mentioned Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland in this connection.

Telling some of his own experiences, Dr. Koht said:

"I have seen German bombs rain over defenseless Norwegian homes, seen trembling women and crying children run into the forests or huddle in cold, dark cellars in order to get away fro mthe German weapon of murder."

The Germans are doing to Norway, he asserted, the things they have not dared to do to England and France.

Attacked "In Savage Way"

"That part of Norway which was not subdued in the first bout," he said, "is being attacked in a merciless, savage way. . . . The Germans have found an opponent that they think can be scared into submission."

Instead, the Norwegians' will to fight has been awakened, Dr. Koht said, "and in the end they will sweep the enemy out of the country."

Dr. Koht revealed that besides the British and French help, the "Polish Government has sent us 4,000 men."

He said the Germans were harrying the unconquered portions of Norway "with violence such as was only heard of with horror in the pagan days among the Huns and vandals," and called on his countrymen to cry: "No Norwegian shall be a slave."

Dr. Koht told the Norwegians that he would go to Paris and thence back to Norway, where King Haakon VII and his fleeing Government are in hiding from the Germans.

Briton With Them

With the two Norwegian Ministers was the British Minister to Norway, Sir Cecil Dormer, who had been with the Norwegian regime since it fled Oslo a jump ahead of the Germans at the start of the Nazi invasion April 9.

Meanwhile, strong demands for a "grand inquest" in Parliament on the Government's conduct of the Norwegian campaign were heard throughout gloomy Great Britain.

Press criticism of the British Government's handling of the Norwegian campaign which saw the Allies abandon southern and central Norway to the Nazis presaged a torrid meeting of Parliament Tuesday for a two-day debate.

But in the midst of the editorial and oratorical furore, the Admiralty and Air Ministry remained silent on the war and a War Office communique said only:

"There is nothing of importance to report from Narvik where operations are continuing. There has been slight enemy air activity in this area."

Concerned Over Reverse

The average Briton appeared more concerned over the strategic reverse in Norway and the potentialities of German domination there than any danger in the Mediterranean, where the Allies concentrated naval strength last week.

Norway is a good deal nearer Britain than the Mediterranean, and the traditional British confidence in the might of the royal navy prompted the belief of the man in the street that the British-French naval forces were capable of handling any development in the Mediterranean.

Some political circles professed to see indications of a swing to the Chamberlain Government's favor in the coming debate.

They argued that the fact that the Cabinet apparently is united on the Norwegian policy would blunt the weapons of critics hoping to score against the Prime Minister on the grounds that the Trondheim sector would have been saved if Chamberlain had not restrained Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

It was said also that the prospect of Churchill, generally the Cabinet's most popular Minister, heading a new Cabinet or even a new war policy was receding.

Neutral arguments that Britain would let down other neutrals who rely on her after trouble has started are "strongly resented" by Parliament members and might rally the House of Commons to support the Government, it was said.

That resentment, coupled with hitherto undisclosed details of the government's difficulties, probably would persuade the Commons to "let the government off with a warning," British sources asserted.

A warning that the British were "fighting with their backs to the wall for their very existence" was sounded by John Jagger, Laborite member of Parliament and president of the influential Distributive Workers Union. Addressing the annual union meeting Jagger branded pacifist talk "treason," and said any proposition for immediate peace should be defeated overwhelmingly.

"Either the military power of Fascism must be broken or we shall be broken by it," Jagger declared.

ADD LONDON..
IN HAS BROADCAST, DR. KOHT SAID THAT BESIDES THE BRITISH AND FRENCH HELP, THE "POLISH GOVERNMENT HAS SENT US 4,000 MEN."
THE FOREIGN MINISTER SAID THE GERMANS WERE HARRYING THE UNCONQUERED PORTIONS OF NORWAY "WITH VIOLENCE SUCH AS WAS ONLY HEARD OF WITH HORROR IN PAGAN DAYS AMONG THE HUNS AND VANDALS" AND CALLED ON HIS COUNTRYMEN TO CRY "NO NORWEGIAN SHALL BE A SLAVE." ---

Berlin Unmoved by Denial

BERLIN, May 5 (AP)—In the face of Britain's official denial, authoritative sources here declared tonight that a British battleship was sunk off Namsos by dive bombers Friday and that the High Command statement in that respect would not be changed.

At the same time it was learned that the Germans had planned yesterday to have one of the pilots participating in the attack on the battleship describe the event to a press conference, but that attack group was called on "another mission," the nature of which was not disclosed.

It was said there was still a possibility that one of the pilots might appear before the foreign press to describe the attack.

The Day's War Communiques

German

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 5—Following is the text of today's German High Command communiqué:

Strong enemy forces, supported by fliers, repeatedly attacked our security units north of Narvik. They were repulsed by cooperative action of our own land forces and airmen.

Our troops are advancing from Steinkjer, above Trondheim, in a northerly direction. Namsos and Grong have been taken. The command was successfully continued during April.

Figures on enemy shipping tonnage sunk, as well as those on neutral merchant ship tonnage available to the enemy, have risen above two millions (of tons), and are now running on 2,300,000 tons.

In connection with this, consideration must be given to the fact that merchant ship losses partially accreditable to mines, and only acknowledged if established from German or neutral sources, cannot be hidden any longer.

It also may be assumed that because of German naval measures enemy losses in the merchant war are higher than previously announced.

Coastal defense in occupied sections of Norway have been strengthened by the emplacement of further light, medium and heavy coastal batteries.

On the Western Front, no special events.

PARIS, May 5—French General Headquarters issued the following communiqués today:

These outposts, although surrounded, resisted vigorously until our counter-attack led by light units drove the enemy away.

ASSAULT MADE BEHIND HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE

Three Advance Posts Surrounded, But Defenders Hold Off Foe

Light Scouting Units Then Come Up And Clear Section Of Enemy

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 5—The French high command reported tonight that German troops attacking in increasing force on the Western front were driven off by a spirited counter-attack after the Nazis had succeeded momentarily in penetrating the line of French advance posts.

The German stab early this morning at French positions in the wooded valleys where the Saar river bends into France was the second Nazi attack in force within twenty-four hours at the central sector of the one hundred-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine.

The field-gray-clad Germans attacked behind what the French communique described as "heavy artillery fire."

The fact that they were able to break through the gaps between the French advance posts and surround three of them indicated the attack was considerably more concentrated than that of the morning before, when two companies of Germans were forced back by the crossed fire of French machine guns and automatic rifles.

Small sections of French troops, pinned within the advance posts by the encircling Germans, kept up a steady stream of fire until the French counter-attack could be organized from the resistance line to the rear.

This attack, led by light scouting units trained to come to close grips with the enemy, drove off the Nazis, the official communique reported.

Tonight's communique declared the Germans encircled three French outposts before they were driven off by a counter-attack.

It said:

"During last night, in the region of the Saar, the enemy, supported by heavy artillery fire, attacked three of our outposts in force.

"These outposts, although surrounded, resisted victoriously until our counter-attack led by light units drove the enemy away."

The brief morning communique merely said: "Activity of the contact units."

The first engagement, which was fought before dawn yesterday and was announced in last night's communique, was described at the War Ministry today as an important test showing the solidity of the French positions. There still is no sign of an immediate general offensive, however.

30.24-2089

Two German companies, totaling more than 600 men, were said to have suffered heavy losses in the vain effort to crack the French line along the edge of the woods on the Blies river. The outposts in that sector cover the approach to the Maginot Line in the central Saar region.

The Germans opened with heavy artillery preparation and then sent the two companies over.

French artillery and machine-gun cross fire were reported to have stopped the Germans before they could reach the French line.

French scouts later said they found abandoned arms and blood-stained uniforms, indicating the Germans fell back in disorder with many losses. The German dead and wounded had been removed under cover of darkness, however, and there was no estimate of casualties.

Biggest R. A. F. War List Names 110 Dead or Lost

Roster Brings Total of Those Believed Killed to 1,032

LONDON, May 5 (AP).—The Royal Air Force's largest casualty list of the war added today 110 names to its toll of dead and missing. It named twenty men killed in action, twenty-six killed in active service, twelve who died in active service and fifty-two missing.

The new list brought the totals since the outbreak of war to 238 killed in action, twenty-eight dead of wounds suffered in action, 118 missing and believed killed, 436 killed on active service, 212 who died on active service and seventy-one who were wounded on active service.

Other totals thus far are thirty-nine wounded in action, nine missing and believed to be prisoners, eight known captured and 208 others missing.

Fall of Hegra Reported After 2-Week Nazi Siege

Berlin Announces Surrender of 175 Norse Die-Hards

BERLIN, May 5 (AP).—Surrender today of a "die-hard" group of Norwegian soldiers in the rock-ribbed fortress of Hegra, twenty miles east of Trondheim, was announced today by D. N. B., the German official news agency.

Surrounded by German mountain troops, a force of fifteen officers and 160 men in the fortress capitulated, the news agency said.

Hegra Held Out Over Two Weeks

Hegra fortress, guarding the railroad to the Swedish border from Trondheim, had been under German pressure for more than two weeks.

As long ago as April 22 the Germans were reported attacking from two sides, but the Norwegians, favored by the difficult terrain, were able to withstand them. With the withdrawal of Allied forces from Aandalsnes and Namsos, south and north of Trondheim, the Hegra garrison lost hope of being relieved.

Germans to Let Norse Captives Stay at Home

Plan to Intern Them in Reich Dropped; Almost All of Soldiers Are Prisoners

OSLO, May 5 (AP).—German military authorities have agreed to let all Norwegian prisoners of war remain in their homeland, it was announced today. Original plans were for the captives to be interned in Germany. As a result of negotiations with the Norwegian Administrative Council, however, they will be treated as though they were serving their normal military training period in the Norwegian Army, it was said.

Negotiations are under way for the release of farmers and prisoners less than sixteen or more than sixty years old. Civilians who were imprisoned before the Nazis took control of the occupied area of Norway already have been freed.

Except for 5,000 Norwegian soldiers interned in Sweden and one division, virtually all of Norway's mobilized army has been captured. The exact number, however, has not been divulged. (The main Norwegian force still fighting apparently is in the Narvik region, in the far north.)

The Administrative Council, which controls all of the German-occupied zone, has named a committee to prepare for extended trade with Germany.

Norway's internal economic life has remained fairly stable. Inflation, which was feared when the occupation began, generally is believed by Norwegians to have been averted.

Wages have fallen an average of 25 per cent, but there has been no rise in unemployment and strict regulations have prevented an increase in the cost of living, including rents. A decree now forbids any industry to close down without the Administrative Council's consent.

British Again Raid Oslo Airport

OSLO, May 5 (AP).—British bombers raided the Oslo airport Saturday night for the sixth time within a week. There was no report on the result.

British Test 70,000 in A. R. P.

LONDON, May 5 (AP).—A reminder of the necessity of preparation for air attacks was given today in a test mobilization of 70,000 Air Raid Precautions workers in six counties of the Midland region of England, centering at Nottingham. A mock "blitzkrieg" on the industriay center was staged—and it was calculated that eighty high explosive bombs would have caused 323 deaths.

FRENCH-SOVIET SPY PLOT FOUND IN HUNGARY

200 Arrests Made On Information Supplied By German Gestapo

Disclosure Coincides With Reports Of Nazi Military Activity In Slovakia

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, May 5 — A huge spy and propaganda organization, said to have been working both for France and Russia in former Czecho-Slovak regions annexed by Hungary, was smashed by Hungarian authorities last week, it was disclosed today.

Almost 200 persons were arrested at Kassa, Ungvar and Munkacs.

The German Gestapo furnished Hungary with information leading to the arrests, it was reported, and one of those arrested proved to be a German secret police agent who wormed his way into the conspiracy to betray it.

Nazis Action In Slovakia

The spy disclosure coincided with reliable reports of unusual German military activity in Slovakia, a German protectorate established over a former part of Czecho-Slovakia, and of Russian troop reinforcements in former Poland along the frontier of Ruthenia, the Hungarian part of former Czecho-Slovakia.

According to diplomatic information from Slovakia, the Germans are stringing extra telephone lines and moving large shipments of munitions and other supplies eastward.

The Russians were reported to have moved troops from Finland to the Ruthenian frontier, and were said now to have from six to eight (from more than 100,000 to nearly 150,000 men) motorized divisions there.

The spy hunt also coincided with new expressions of ill feeling between Hungary and Slovakia. Foreign Minister Count Csaky on April 30 warned that the Hungarian minority in Slovakia was being mistreated, and that Hungarian patience was about at an end. He hinted that should Hungary see fit to act against Slovakia, German friendship for Hungary would prove stronger than her concern for Slovakia.

Slovak planes Saturday dropped pamphlets over Kassa, reading, "Slovaks! The day of liberation is near! Get ready! Hitler with us! The glorious Slovak army will deliver you from the Magyar (Hungarian) yoke."

A Hungarian broadcast today reiterated Count Csaky's warning to the Slovaks.

Some See Berlin-Moscow Split

The spy arrests were seen by some observers as a new indication of mutual distrust between Berlin and Moscow, but the situation in the entire region appeared so muddled that any precise interpretation of events seemed impossible.

Some of those arrested had plans of the Arpad defense line, which Hungary recently built along her Ruthenian frontier facing Russia in Poland. Should the Russians smash this line, they could advance through the Carpathians, the natural barrier to Russian expansion along the Danube.

Others possessed Communist pamphlets for distribution in Hungary and Ruthenia.

The Moscow radio recently has been making pan-Slav appeals to the Ruthenians. Hungarian counter-measures have included the distribution of free herrings to the Ruthenians for their Orthodox Easter last week, and wholesale arrests of merchants charged with profiteering to keep prices down.

Russians Say England Plans Near East War

See 'Purse' Policy in Lining Up Allies for 'New Base of Attack and Also for Oil'

MOSCOW, May 5 (AP).—The newspaper "Red Navy" charged today that British "imperialists in the Near East continued a dangerous game dependent on maximum expansion of the war—a game which may bring serious consequences to its initiators." The newspaper said:

"Events in Scandinavia have not removed the question of the Near East from the program of the day. Notes of alarm more and more frequently are met with in the British press. They indicate some serious worries of British imperialists in the Near East.

"Sweet speeches on defense of minor nations, in the light of recent events in Norway, can hardly deceive anybody. The direct question at present is maintaining British strategic positions in preparation for a new base of attack and also for oil.

"Having strengthened her most important economical positions and taken into her hands the oil resources of Irak and Iran, Persia, Britain would have liked to locate big garrisons of troops there for protection of British strategic positions. But England had to renounce this policy even after the first World War.

"England is strengthening her positions there by concentration of troops in territories of countries under British influence, through a 'purse' policy of granting loans not only to Turkey but also to Irak, Iran and Saudi Arabia and, finally, by bribing small feudal princes."

The authoritative newspaper "Trud" asserted that Norway was the latest victim of British imperialism. "Trud" said:

"The Norwegian government was used as a toy in the hands of the British government. English imperialists are ready to double-cross every one in order to retain maritime superiority."

The newspaper continued that the Allies had wished to drive the Germans from Scandinavia but their card was trumped by the Germans, who were aided by alleged Italian preparations to attack England.

It asserted the loss of Norway doubtless was a serious defeat for Great Britain, which, it said, probably would have to forsake Scapa Flow as her main naval base.

POPE PIUS PRAYS TO PROTECT ITALY

Throng Cheers Talk Of Pontiff Given After Mass At Church In Rome

New Plea For Peace Concludes Celebration In Honor Of St. Catherine

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 5—Cheers rang through the Church of St. Mary-Over-Minerva today as Pope Pius XII concluded a new plea for peace.

A congregation which packed the church gave the Pope a tremendous ovation lasting almost five minutes. There were repeated shouts of "Long live the Pope" and "Long live Italy."

Speaking with great earnestness and emphasis, the Pontiff declared that the time for prayer is now "while whirlwinds unleashed by human passions which overwhelm noble nations in a fearful manner threaten beyond the Alps and Italy's frontiers."

Pope Pius prayed to protect Italy, which he described as "this people and this land beloved by you, saved by the blood of your Apostles and of so many martyrs and consecrated by the work of so many of your vicars."

Speaks After Mass

The Pope's discourse was delivered after he had attended pontifical mass at the Church of St. Mary-Over-Minerva to close a series of celebrations in honor of St. Catherine of Siena.

The service in honor of St. Catherine, whom the Pope has designated along with St. Francis of Assisi, as patron saint of Italy, took place there because her relics are preserved in the church's high altar.

It was the fourth time since his election fourteen months ago that the Pontiff had left the Vatican for a ceremonial trip into Rome.

Motoring through the streets of Rome, the Pope arrived at a Domenican cloister adjoining the church. There he was received by the College of Cardinals and chapters of Domenican and Franciscan friars. They formed a procession which accompanied the Pontiff into the church.

Saint Prevailed On Pope

From a throne erected near the altar, he looked on while Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, who is titular bishop of the church, celebrated a pontifical mass.

The Pope then mounted to the pulpit where he delivered his homily, exalting the glories of the saint who helped pacify the towns of central Italy more than 500 years ago.

St. Catherine, who lived from 1347 to 1380, prevailed on Pope Gregory XI to transfer the papal throne from Avignon back to Rome in 1377.

Gifts Of Statesmanship

Not only were visionary and miraculous powers attributed to her, but she also displayed gifts of statesmanship which helped her to arrange peace between Pope Gregory and the republic of Florence as well as a reconciliation between Pope Urban VI and the Roman republic.

The church where her relics repose takes its name from having been built on the ruins of the temple of Minerva. It is the chief church in Rome of the Domenicans, of which order St. Catherine was a member.

France Bans Parades On Joan of Arc Day

PARIS, May 5 (AP).—The French government and some of the army took time out from the war today to observe a national holiday honoring Joan of Arc.

The holiday is observed annually in honor of Joan of Arc's liberation of Orleans in May, 1429, from the British. Processions of French nationalist parties which usually mark the day were banned this year because of the war.

Yugoslavia Bars Refuge To Nazi 'Convalescents'

By The Associated Press.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 5—The government has rejected a German request to send 10,000 "convalescents" into Yugoslavia, it was learned today, and has countered with an offer to take that many sick children under 10 years of age.

Political circles said officials recalled that in the World War, at a time when the Hungarians were inclined to give up the struggle in 1916, the Germans quartered there thousands of "convalescent" troops who proved to be healthy enough to cause the Hungarians to drop such ideas.

Radio Advice to Quit City Stirs Alarm in Belgrade

But It's Only Part of Lecture on Air-Raid Precautions

BELGRADE, May 5 (AP).—Belgrade verged on a panic for a short time today, following a radio announcement that removal of civilians from the capital had been recommended. The alarm proved false.

A Belgrade radio speaker, in the course of a lecture on air-raid precautions, said the safest procedure, for those who had no reason to remain in the Yugoslav capital and who had relatives in the country, would be to leave now.

This part of the lecture was rebroadcast in Serbian by a British station, and caused widespread alarm. Fears subsided when officials explained the advice was not due to fear of imminent war. The episode was regarded, however, as symptomatic of the country's general nervousness.

In London, the British Broadcasting Corporation said that the broadcast in Serbian was not by the B. B. C. and must have been from other than an English station.]

BELGIAN STAND PLEDGED

Premier Warns Any Invader of Stiff Resistance

CHARLEROI, Belgium, May 5 (AP)—Belgium will not abandon her policy of neutrality and will make it difficult for any invader to cross her territory, Premier Hubert Pierlot declared today in an address before a Christian labor organization.

"Belgium no longer is a battlefield open to all belligerents," he said. "It is a fortified camp defended by an army against all invaders."

Any attack upon this country, he said, would mean a war of position between the two belligerents that would wear out both sides. He added that the Belgian Army would lay down its arms only when peace was assured.

NAZI MINELAYERS ACTIVE

Planes Over English Channel Cause Ostend Shipping Delay

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 5 (AP)—One of two Belgian mail and passenger ships operating between Ostend, Belgium, and Folkestone, England, returned to Ostend today after delay caused by German minelaying planes active over the English Channel.

Another ship in the same service, with twenty-two passengers aboard, anchored between Calais and Gravelines.

Passengers said one of the boats had difficulties on the trip from Folkestone beginning April 30, but that two wooden fishing boats dragged a net carrying an "anti-magnetic engine" to clear a path to Dunkerque, France.

During the night of May 2, they said, German planes traversed the same locality, and French anti-aircraft guns fired for three hours.

'AMERICAN' SPY SENTENCED

Belgian Court Says Man Had No Proof of Nationality

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 5 (AP)—Arthur Kathner, who said he was born in St. Louis June 29, 1886, has been sentenced by the Brabant provincial military court to fifteen years' imprisonment on a charge of spying for Germany. Two Germans were sentenced to like terms.

Kathner, who was arrested Nov. 29, 1939, was reported to have approached a Belgian who denounced him.

Judge Daliers, who sentenced Kathner, said he had no documents to prove he was an American.

Says Nazi Brass Bands Outfought British Navy

BLACKPOOL, England, May 5 (AP).—Miss Ellen Wilkinson, a Laborite member of Parliament, inquired in an address today "why Germany could take a whole country like Norway with 1,500 men and three brass bands."

She added: "And we sent over the might of the British fleet and had to blow up stores of Rolls-Royce quality at Namsos and leave the Norwegians to fight alone."

The government will have to answer in the House of Commons, she declared, adding that Britons were "perturbedly disturbed" at the way the war was going.

Netherland Liner Reaches Boston With $7,000,000 Cargo

BOSTON, May 5 (AP)—Carrying $7,000,000 in gold from Durban, South Africa, to New York, the Netherland liner Poelau Bras arrived today with word that the British liner Queen Mary had sailed from Capetown April 12, supposedly to continue a voyage from New York to Australia.

Crew members said the liner Aquitania left Capetown before the Queen Mary after a stay of several days.

Turks, Egyptians Mass Armies

Cairo, Aided By British Fleet And Soldiers, Boasts It's Ready For Attack

[By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, Egypt, May 5—Backed by thousands of Allied troops and the largest Allied fleet yet assembled in the European war, Egypt tonight declared her readiness to fight against attack from any quarter and ordered the first country-wide blackout in the history of the land of the Pharaohs.

Egypt's highest defense council began daily sessions as reports were received that Italian warships and thousands of troops were being concentrated in the Dodecanese Islands, about 400 miles northwest of this port across the Mediterranean.

60,000 British Troops There

Allied troops—about 60,000 British soldiers are said by neutrals to be in Egypt alone—stood ready to board transports and their commanders scanned reports that Italy has landed 55,000 soldiers in the Dodecanese Islands.

The Allies are reported rushing naval reinforcements to bolster the huge fleet in Alexandria harbor.

Count Serafino Massozlini, Italian Minister to Egypt, meanwhile told Egypt's Italian colony of 60,000 not to believe that Italy intended to attack any of her neighbors.

He said they could send their children to Italy as usual this year for youth organization exercises without any fears for their safety.

Defense Called Near Perfection

The Count urged the colony, composed mainly of workers, to keep calm and to stay on their jobs.

The Egyptian National Defense Ministry issued instructions for a one-week blackout beginning Tuesday. All public buildings already are under guard.

Egypt's Minister of National Defense, Mohamed Saleh Harb Pasha, in a statement declared Egypt never would be taken by surprise.

"Military preparations for the defense of the country have reached today a maximum point of perfection," he said.

"There is no need of saying we do not want to attack anybody, but we are prepared to repulse any attack no matter from what or where it comes. We are vigilant and ready."

Situation In Near East

On land the Allied situation was reported to shape up like this:

1. Allied officers in Istanbul, Turkey, said in April that the maximum force which could be sent out of Syria, Palestine and Egypt at that time was 200,000 men. However, foreign observers in February had reported that carefully checked figures indicated the British and French troops in the Near East totaled at least 570,000 men.
2. Turkey, which has a mutual-aid pact with the Allies to fight with them in the event the war comes to the Balkans or the Near East, was estimated early in March to have 500,000 men under arms.
3. Egypt has an army of 20,000 men. Also, she is obligated under the treaty of 1936 with Britain to furnish Britain facilities and assistance on Egyptian soil in wartime.

Egypt In State Of Siege

When the European war broke out she broke off diplomatic relations with Germany and since then has been in what officially is known as a state of siege while serving as barracks and storehouse for men and supplies in the Near East.

King Farouk's Government set aside about $32,000,000 for defense in its 1940-41 budget.

Despite the increasing tension, however, Alexandria and the remainder of Egypt remained calm.

Sofia Reports 50,000 Ankara Troops Are Collected On Frontier Of Greece

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 5—Bulgarian officials said today that at least 50,000 Turkish soldiers are massed on the Turkish-Greek frontier in Europe.

The officials said they were of the opinion the concentrations were "in accordance with British desires, and are connected with England's plans in the Mediterranean."

Agreement Violated, Sofia Says

Bulgarian officials expressed concern that some Turkish troops were close to the frontier in apparent disregard of a mutual agreement not to mass soldiers there.

They said Bulgaria had given Turkey no cause for such an action. Meanwhile, a struggle for Bulgarian support was reported in progress in Sofia between the German economic expert, Dr. Karl Clodius, and the British Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen.

Britain Offers Ægean Corridor

The nature of Clodius' representations was not known, but Knatchbull-Hugessen was reported reliably to have brought a proposal embracing a big British loan and a promise of a corridor to the Ægean Sea—long wanted by Bulgaria.

The British plan was reported to involve a combination among Bulgaria Greece and Turkey. Greece, already on close terms with Turkey, apparently would receive concessions in return for ceding an Ægean corridor to Bulgaria.

Political sources in Sofia said the main object of wooing Bulgaria was to open a land route for troops to Rumania should such a necessity arise.

Greece Opens Railroad That Might Aid Allies

Athens, May 5 (AP)—A strategic new railway line, which would give British and French troops an additional route northward if they were landed at Salonika in the event of extension of the war to southeastern Europe, was opened today by King George II and members of the Greek Cabinet.

The new rail line, some thirty miles long, links Saloniki with the upper Struma Valley line running to Sofia, Bulgaria.

Opening of the line coincided with circulation throughout the Balkans of reports, apparently German in origin, that debarkation of British and French troops at Saloniki actually was imminent.

Evidence Of Landing Lacking

There was no indication either in Athens or Saloniki to indicate that the Greek Government expected such a landing. Fishermen returning to the port said they had seen no signs of preparation for such an operation.

However, they did report sighting additional British war vessels on patrol duty in the Ægean Sea, where a number of British ships have been stationed since the start of the war.

With all of the Balkan states anxiously watching developments in the eastern Mediterranean, Greece, like her neighbors, is hoping to preserve her neutrality but at the same time preparing to fight if an enemy should be thrust upon her.

Metaxas Warns Of Danger

Premier John Metaxas has warned his countrymen that the Greek position is dangerous and that they must be ready to battle for their independence. Uneasiness in Greece has increased each time another neutral country fell prey to outside force. It has been allayed with each indication that Italy was not entering the war immediately.

For here Fascist Italy rather than Nazi Germany is the chief bogey, and Greeks watch closely for signs of Premier Mussolini's intentions.

If Mussolini jumps into the war on the side of Germany, it is believed his first thrust will be in the Balkans. Whether he strikes directly at Greece or only at Yugoslavia to the north, such a move is regarded as certain to make Greece a battleground.

IF WAR COMES TO THE BALKANS, ATHENS, MAY 5— AND ITS HARBOR ON THE AEGEAN SEA OFFERS THE MOST DIRECT GATEWAY FOR ENTRANCE OF BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS. GREEKS DENY REPORTS OF A SECRET AGREEMENT TO LET BRITAIN AND FRANCE, BOTH OF WHOM HAVE GUARANTEED HER INDEPENDENCE AND INTEGRITY, USE THE PORT. BUT THERE IS LITTLE DOUBT THAT GREECE WOULD LET THEM ENTER IF THE CONFLICT SPREADS TO THE BALKANS.

SUCH A WAR ALMOST CERTAINLY WOULD MENACE GREECE AND SHE WOULD HAVE TO RELY ON SUPPORT FROM THE OUTSIDE TO DEFEND HERSELF AGAINST THE MAJOR POWERS.

FROM ITALIAN BASES IN ALBANIA, ACROSS THE NORTHERN GREEK FRONTIER, SALONIKA IS BUT 100 MILES, A HALF HOUR'S FLIGHT FOR BOMBING PLANES. ATHENS, THE CAPITAL, IS ONLY 45 MINUTES BY AIR FROM THE REINFORCED ITALIAN BASES IN THE DODECANESE ISLANDS ON THE TURKISH SIDE OF THE AEGEAN. PLANES FROM THE ITALIAN MAINLAND COULD REACH EITHER CITY IN A LITTLE OVER AN HOUR.

GREECE HAS 700 MILES OF LAND FRONTIERS TO DEFEND AND 8,000 MILES OF SEA FRONTIERS, IF ONE INCLUDES ALL OF THE GREEK ISLANDS.

TO GUARD THESE SHE HAS AN ARMY, NOW VIRTUALLY ON A WAR-TIME SCALE, OF ABOUT 100,000 MEN. THEY ARE NOT VERY WELL EQUIPPED, NOR DO MOST MILITARY OBSERVERS REGARD THE DESCENDANTS OF THE HEROES OF MARATHON AS THE BEST SOLDIERS IN MODERN WARFARE.

SHE HAS A NAVY OF 5,000 MEN. ITS BIGGEST SHIPS ARE TWO CRUISERS, BOTH OF WHICH ANTE-DATE THE LAST WAR AND ONE OF WHICH FORMERLY BELONGED TO THE CHINESE NAVY. SHE ALSO HAS 12 DESTROYERS AND SIX SUBMARINES, SOME OF THEM NEW.

GREECE HAS ABOUT 125 WARPLANES.

MAY 6 1940

SHE ALSO HAS NEW FORTIFICATIONS--THE "METAXAS LINE" ALONG THE ALBANIAN BORDER, CONSTRUCTION OF WHICH WAS STARTED AFTER THE ITALIANS MOVED INTO ALBANIA IN APRIL, 1939.

IN RECENT YEARS SHE HAS BUILT UP HER OWN ARMAMENTS INDUSTRIES AND NOW IS SUPPLYING TURKEY AND OTHER COUNTRIES WITH SOME KINDS OF MUNITIONS.

SHE IS ON EXCELLENT TERMS WITH YUGOSLAVIA ON HER NORTH AND TURKEY, NON-BELLIGERENT ALLY OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE, ON HER EAST. SHE FEELS SHE CAN TRUST THEM TO HELP HER IF TROUBLE COMES.

HER OTHER NEIGHBOR, BULGARIA, HAS CLAIMS ON MACEDONIA, THE PROVINCE LYING BETWEEN THE BULGARIAN BORDER AND THE NORTHERN SHORE OF THE AEGEAN. BUT RECENT GREEK-BULGARIAN RELATIONS HAVE NOT BEEN BAD.

GREEK FOREIGN TRADE HAS BEEN UPSET BADLY BY THE WAR, BUT HER MERCHANT MARINE OF ALMOST 2,000,000 TONS HAS MADE MORE MONEY THAN EVER. FRANCE AND BRITAIN HAVE AIDED HER BY TAKING SOME OF THE PRODUCTS SHE FORMERLY SOLD TO GERMANY.

GREECE IS FOLLOWING A STRICT REGIME TO CONSERVE HER RESOURCES FOR THE EVENTUALITY OF WAR. AMONG OTHER MEASURES, THERE ARE FOUR MEATLESS DAYS A WEEK.

ROME, MAY 5-(AP)-GIOVANNI ANSALDO, EDITOR OF FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO'S NEWSPAPER IL TELEGRAFO, REPEATED HIS FORECAST TODAY THAT GERMANY WOULD INVADE ENGLAND IN HIS WEEKLY RADIO BROADCAST TO THE ITALIAN ARMED FORCES.

MAY 6 1940

ANSALDO HAD MADE A SIMILAR PREDICTION IN IL TELEGRAFO YESTERDAY.

"EVERYTHING CAUSES ONE TO PRESUME THAT THIS WAR VERY SOON WILL SEE A GREAT EFFORT ON THE PART OF GERMANY TO INVADE ENGLAND IN FORCE," ANSALDO SAID.

"NEVER WERE CONDITIONS IN WHICH THE PRESENT WAR IS BEING CONDUCTED MORE FAVORABLE TO THE ATTACKERS, NEVER WERE TECHNICAL RESOURCES AVAILABLE TO THE ENEMY ON THE CONTINENT SO FAVORABLE.

"THE BLOW PLANNED BY NAPOLEON CERTAINLY WILL BE ATTEMPTED AGAIN."

IN HIS SPEECH ANSALDO MADE NO REFERENCE TO FUTURE ITALIAN POLICY OTHER THAN THE STATEMENT THAT "ITALY MUST EMERGE FROM THIS GREAT CRISIS WITH A SETTLEMENT OF ITS AGE-OLD PROBLEMS OF INDEPENDENCE AND GREATNESS."

THE FASCIST PRESS CONTINUED TO CHORUS A WARNING TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE AGAINST ATTEMPTING TO EXERT PRESSURE ON ITALY THROUGH THEIR NAVAL REINFORCEMENTS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

TYPICAL OF THESE STATEMENTS WAS ONE BY IL MESSAGGERO, WHICH SAID:

"THE ALLIED DECISION DOES NOT DISTURB US. BUT IF IT SHOULD MEAN THE BEGINNING OF OFFENSIVE INTENTIONS, OF WHATEVER SOURCE, THE ITALIAN REACTION WILL BE PROMPT AND EFFECTIVE SO AS TO COMPEL THE DEMOCRACIES TO REGISTER A SECOND AND BURNING DEFEAT."

WASHINGTON, MAY 5-(AP)-AN INTENSIVE WORK OF PREPARATION FOR THE PEACE THAT MUST COME SOONER OR LATER TO EUROPE IS GOING ON IN THE STATE DEPARTMENT, IN OTHER DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT, AND IN MANY CITIES THROUGHOUT THE NATION.

MAY 6

THE MISTAKES OF THE PAST ARE BEING ANALYZED ALONG WITH THE CONDITIONS OF THE PRESENT AND THE POSSIBILITIES OF THE FUTURE TO ENABLE THE UNITED STATES BOTH TO DEFEND HERSELF FROM THE EFFECTS OF THE WAR AND TO PLAY A CONSTRUCTIVE PART IN THE POST-WAR ERA.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL SET UP A SPECIAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE IN JANUARY TO STUDY THESE PROBLEMS, UNDER THE CHAIRMANSHIP OF UNDERSECRETARY SUMNER WELLES AND THE VICE CHAIRMANSHIP OF HUGH R. WILSON, FORMERLY AMBASSADOR TO GERMANY.

THREE GROUPS HAVE BEEN SET UP BY THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE. THE FIRST, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF WELLES, DEALS WITH MATTERS OF GENERAL POLICY. THE SECOND, UNDER R. WALTON MOORE, COUNSELOR OF THE DEPARTMENT, DEALS WITH THE LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS. THE THIRD, UNDER LEO PASVOLSKY, SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE, DEALS WITH ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL MATTERS. THE LIAISON OFFICIAL AMONG THE THREE GROUPS IS WILSON.

THE FIRST GROUP IS IN A RESEARCH STAGE. INFORMATION ON EUROPEAN AND WORLD POLICIES BEFORE, DURING AND LIKELY TO FOLLOW THE WAR IS BEING SOUGHT AND DRAWN UP.

THE SECOND GROUP IS REVIEWING ALL THAT HAS BEEN ACOMPLISHED IN THE FIELD OF DISARMAMENT.

THE THIRD GROUP IS STUDYING INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS OVER 20 YEARS---EVER SINCE THE WORLD WAR---AND THE SIGNIFICANCE FOR THE FUTURE OF WHAT HAPPENED DURING THOSE EVENTFUL YEARS.

IN A GENERAL WAY THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE IS CONSIDERING TWO MAIN PROBLEMS. THE FIRST IS THE STUDY OF THE PROBLEMS OF FUTURE ARRANGEMENTS AMONG NATIONS FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE PRIMARY INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE EVENTUAL PEACE.

THE SECOND IS THE MATTER OF CONSULTATIONS WITH NEUTRALS AND OTHER COUNTRIES ABOUT POST-WAR PROBLEMS, WHICH WERE INAUGURATED BY SECRETARY HULL. THE CONSULTATIONS ARE DESIGNED TO ENLIST IN ADVANCE THE SUPPORT OF AS MANY NATIONS AS POSSIBLE FOR AFTER-WAR DISARMAMENT. COMMITMENTS ARE ALSO SOUGHT THAT THE NATIONS, WHATEVER THEIR ECONOMIC POLICY BECAUSE OF THE WAR, WILL EMBRACE, AT THE END OF THE WAR, POLICIES THAT WILL CONDUCE TO A BROADER FLOW OF TRADE.

A GREAT DEAL OF RESEARCH WORK IS ALSO BEING DONE TOWARD THE SAME END IN GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS OTHER THAN THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIALS SAY THAT WHAT IS MOST NEEDED FROM THE RESEARCH IS TO ARRIVE AT THE IMPLICATIONS OF WHAT HAS HAPPENED SINCE THE WORLD WAR. WHAT WERE AND ARE THE REPERCUSSIONS OF AGREEMENTS MADE OR STEPS TAKEN IN THE PAST?

THE WORK CONSISTS FUNDAMENTALLY IN STRIVING TO REACH ANSWERS TO A LONG SERIES OF QUESTIONS. THERE IS THE QUESTION OF THE WHOLE RECONSTRUCTION POLICY. THERE IS THE QUESTION OF HOW THE WORLD IS GOING BACK TO NORMALCY UNDER PEACE. WHAT MISTAKES WERE MADE IN THE POST-WORLD WAR ERA AND WHY? HOW CAN THEIR RECURRENCE BE AVOIDED.

THE COMMITTEE BELIEVES THE UNITED STATES HAS A GREAT INTEREST IN THESE QUESTIONS BECAUSE IT WILL BE AFFECTED BY WHAT HAPPENS.

QS1252AES

IF SOME TOP AMERICAN MILITARY MEN COULD BE COMPLETELY FRANK THEY WOULD CONFESS THAT ONE OF THEIR RECURRENT NIGHTMARES IS THE IDEA THAT JAPAN SOME DAY MIGHT INVADE THE PHILIPPINES AND THAT EXCITED PUBLIC OPINION WOULD FORCE THE ARMY TO UNDERTAKE AN EXPEDITION AGAINST OVERWHELMING ODDS TO TRY TO SAVE ISLANDS 7,000 MILES DISTANT.

CHAMBERLAIN ALREADY HAS ADVANCED AN EXPLANATION AS TO WHY THE ALLIES LOST THEIR RACE IN NORWAY. THEY KNEW, HE SAID, THAT HIT-

LER WAS PREPARING A COUP BUT THEY HAD TO BE READY SIMULTANEOUSLY ON SEVERAL FAR FLUNG FRONTS. THE NAZIS' CENTRAL POSITION INEVITABLY GIVES THEM THE INITIATIVE AT THIS STAGE OF THE WAR.

THE GREATER PERIL WHICH THE ALLIED HIGH COMMAND ACTED TO FORESTALL WAS CLEARLY THE FEAR OF A MOVE BY ITALY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN. THE SUDDEN TRANSFER OF NAVAL FORCES TO ALEXANDRIA MEANS THAT THE PERIL AT LEAST APPEARED TO EXIST, UNLESS INDEED THE SHIFT OF SEA FORCES WAS A MERE FACE-SAVING FEINT TO DISTRACT ATTENTION FROM THE SETBACK CLOSER AT HOME.

MAY 6 1940

THE ALLIED HIGH COMMAND HAD TO CONSIDER THE POSSIBILITY THAT THE NORWEGIAN INVASION WAS A NAZI TRAP, A FEINT OR HOLDING ATTACK TO INVOLVE THE BRITISH AND FRENCH INTO HEAVY FIGHTING AGAINST HEAVY ODDS SO THEIR GUARD WOULD BE DOWN AGAINST A BODY BLOW IN THE BALKANS.

AS TO PROFIT FROM THE NORWEGIAN DISASTER, CHAMBERLAIN ALREADY HAS PREDICTED OPTIMISTICALLY THAT THE INVASION BY GERMANY WOULD "CONTRIBUTE TO HER ULTIMATE DEFEAT." AND WINSTON CHURCHILL TERMED IT A "STRATEGIC BLUNDER."

THOSE CONTENTIONS, ADVANCED BEFORE THE ISSUE IN CENTRAL NORWAY WAS SETTLED, MUST SOUND LESS CONVINCING TO RESENTFUL BRITONS NOW, BUT THE PRIME MINISTER NEVERTHELESS CAN ARGUE THAT SOME MAJOR COMPENSATIONS ARE PROMISED BY THE SHIFT IN THE STRATEGICAL LINE UP.

NAZI BOMBERS AND U-BOATS THREATEN NOW TO MAKE THE NORTH SEA A COMPLETE NO MAN'S AREA, A GERMAN OBJECTIVE FROM THE START. BUT OFFSETTING THIS TO A DEGREE, THE NORTH SEA NO LONGER IS SO VITAL TO ALLIED COMMERCE, WITH DENMARK AND MOST OF NORWAY LOST AND SWEDEN A VIRTUAL CAPTIVE.

MANY CONVOY AND BLOCKADE WARSHIPS ARE FREED FOR SERVICE ELSEWHERE THE ALLIES CONTROL NOW MOST OF THE DANISH AND NORSE SHIPPING. IF THE BLOCKADE SHOULD BE LESS EFFECTIVE BECAUSE MORE EXPOSED TO AIR AND UNDERSEA RAIDS, GERMANY'S BATTERED NAVAL AND MERCHANT FLEETS ARE LESS ABLE NOW TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE WEAKNESS.

Prime Minister to Review Norwegian Campaign in Fight for Political Life

Opposition Grows, Halifax Its Choice

Lloyd George for Change; Foes Say Cabinet Knew Nazi Plans March 19

By The Associated Press

LONDON, May 6.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who has guided Great Britain from Munich to Namsos, lined up his forces tonight for the fight of his political life in Parliament as a result of the Norwegian campaign, whose failure thus far has placed Chamberlain's government in jeopardy.

The seventy-one-year-old statesman will open two days of full-dress debate in the House of Commons tomorrow with a statement on the Norwegian affair. He will defend and explain Britain's military setback in an attempt to stave off a critical offensive bent on ousting him and his ministry.

To counter opposition demands for a new government, some of which included the naming of Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, in place of Chamberlain, the Prime Minister is expected to announce greater power for Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty. A month ago Churchill was named chairman of a ministerial committee on military co-ordination, but since then Chamberlain had let it be known that he himself still was in control.

Veteran political observers, weighing the case for the determined opposition against the government's voting power and debating strength, expressed belief that the Conservative government would ride out the storm, but would be faced with an aroused and fighting opposition on every future measure.

Charges by Opposition

First, the opposition charges that the government sent troops to Norway knowing that no air bases would be available. Second, it declares that, according to Chamberlain's speech of April 5, the government dispersed most of the forces assembled to help Finland, although it knew as early as March 19 that Germany was contemplating a blow at Scandinavia.

Ready to tear [illegible] the Chamberlain defense and to bid for a "government we can trust" is an assorted collection of angry Britons, their ranks swelled today by the entrance of David Lloyd George, who led the empire to victory in the World War.

The opposition's ranks also include Herbert Morrison and Clement R. Attlee, for Labor; Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary, who still is bitter over losing that post soon after the start of this year, and rebels from the ranks of Chamberlain's own Conservative party, such as Leopold S. Amery and Richard Law, son of the late former Prime Minister Andrew Bonar Law.

Against these forces are arrayed the powerful voting strength of the Conservatives. Of the nominal 615 seats in Commons, about 400 are held by Conservatives. Of these, 375 belong to members absolutely dependent on Capt. David Margesson, the government floor leader and whip, for approval of their campaign funds and for the patronage which is doled out by the central committee of the Conservative party.

Some Bolts Are Reported.

Some of these members are reported to have bolted to the opposition, but one Liberal member of Parliament admitted: "There are not more than forty of these, and unless some startling admission is made in the House, we may lose some of them."

Another prop for the government is that Churchill will deliver the government's last word Wednesday.

But the rebels took courage from the parallel between the present situation and the overthrow of the Asquith government in 1915 after the failure of the Dardanelles campaign and Lord Northcliffe's expose of the British shell shortage in France.

"That government was overthrown because men of all parties united; you may see the same thing tomorrow," opposition Parliament members declared.

As the debate neared, opposition speakers and writers pounced one theme: that the government's complacency and muddling over Norway and the war in general had shown it unfit to fight an enemy as resourceful and bold as Germany.

The opposition will demand a new Cabinet, it was believed, with Halifax as Prime Minister, heading a war group consisting of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Foreign Secretary, a Minister of Defense having charge of the Admiralty, army, air and home defense; a Minister of War Economy having charge of shipping, transport, supply, mines, labor, food, the Board of Trade and overseas trade, and a Minister of Home Affairs having charge of the Home Office and the Education and Health Departments.

Under that opposition proposal, the Prime Minister would be aided by three Ministers who would have no executive work but would be a final tribunal on major policy.

This proposal was answered in unofficial government circles by the counter-proposal calling for a new status and more power for Churchill.

BRITISH CABINET FACING NEW TEST ON WAR STRATEGY

Public Clamor Over Failure in Norway Expected to Bring Changes.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—A crescendo of demands upon the Government for a more vigorous prosecution of the war arose today in advance of Prime Minister Chamberlain's appearance in the House of Commons tomorrow to explain the Allied withdrawal from central Norway.

Press and oratory clamored for Government changes, but the well informed Yorkshire Post predicted that "so far as can be seen at present, Mr. Chamberlain will carry the day.

"He will owe much to the fact that Mr. Churchill (Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty) is standing firmly with him," the paper said, adding that no actual vote was expected in the Commons session called to discuss the Norwegian campaign, but that if one were called, "the Government would treat it as a vote of confidence."

Talks of 'Next Premier.'

In a sharply critical editorial, the London Evening News, however, said that "feeling has hardened over the week end" and that "the man-in-the-street is asking who will be the next Prime Minister."

It declared that the Government's "blind optimism" and "miscalculations of German aims, daring and efficiency cost Norway her liberty, damaged Britain's reputation throughout the world and inflicted on this country one of the worst humiliations in its history."

"Can we ever trust this Government again?" the editorial asked. "On the evidence before us at present, the answer is an emphatic 'No.'"

The London Evening Standard said it was "not after the German invasion but before that we failed."

"We can only recapture neutral opinion if we make it evident that the same shall never happen again," it declared.

The London Evening Star commented that "three or four alternative cabinets could be drawn up," adding: "The bitter experience of the last war taught us that an inner cabinet was necessary for making swift decisions, securing unity of direction and flexibility of method."

Meanwhile today the Norwegian Foreign Minister, Dr. Halvdan Koht, accompanied by the Minister of Defense, Col. Birger Ljunberg and Erik Colban, the Norwegian Minister to London, conferred with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax.

Dr. Koht and Col. Ljungberg came to London after landing at a Scottish port from a warship.

In a broadcast, addressed to Norway last night, Dr. Koht advised his invaded nation to have faith in the Allies, who were honor-bound, he said, to give Norway the "full aid" promised her.

Dr. Koht also declared that he would go to Paris for further consultations and then back to Norway where King Haakon VII and his fleeing Government are in hiding.

Organizing the Neutrals.

Great Britain's task of organizing the neutral nations to resist Germany has become increasingly difficult in face of the Nazi triumph in south Norway, in the opinion of informed diplomatic observers.

The informants declare that two doubts are growing in the minds of the neutrals, both encouraged by German propagandists. One is that Britain and France lack planes capable of overcoming the Nazi Air Force and have found imports from the United States insufficient for their immediate needs. There second is distrust of the ability of Britain's leaders to deal speedily and effectively with Nazi strokes on either military or diplomatic fronts.

That distrust also is reflected abundantly in the British press which is looking upon tomorrow's session of the House as a "grand inquest of the nation," with hope that the House will "prove equal to its responsibilities."

Cabinet Changes Expected.

Informed spokesmen reported that ministerial changes were in the offing, but doubt was expressed whether minor Cabinet alterations would satisfy the critics demanding "reconstruction, not a reshuffle."

The tenor of press comment indicated that the Chamberlain Government was facing its severest political crisis.

Even the conservatice London Times, which often does duty as a Government sounding board, said: "The conclusion everywhere has been that there is abundant room for improvement. . . . The War Cabinet is still too large and its meetings attended by too many experts and advisers."

The more important Ministers, such as Mr. Churchill, are being overworked, the Times said, adding that the brunt of the attack was falling on Mr. Chamberlain, whose "weakness has always been his devotion to colleagues who are either failures or need a rest."

Resents Unimaginative Planning.

The chorus of press criticism accused the Government of timidity, mismanagement, neglect and planning "on the level of small, unimaginative minds."

By comparison with Germany's "assiduous care" in prosecuting the war "our easy, nonchalant methods look like a nursery game of hide-and-seek." said the Manchester Guardian.

There seemed no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain would like to broaden the base of his Government by including Opposition Laborite and Liberal leaders, but thus far they have remained cold to his overtures. The Labor party at a conference next week end will probably determine it's stand concerning participation in the War Government.

Bravery Alone Called Vain.

Praising British bravery under fire, the Manchester Guardian declared:

"Unhappily, more than courage is needed in this sophisticated and mechanized world. All that courage may be wasted if the nation's policy is ill-directed, imperfectly considered, inspired by small minds and guided by day-to-day reckoning. What is needed is a Government that can organize the nation's strength, touch its imagination, command its spirit of self-sacrifice, impose burdens fearlessly on all classes, put the war ahead of everything else and look ahead with cool, deliberate courage. Nobody can pretend the Government answers to these needs."

Urges Norse to Have Faith.

Diplomatic observers and members of Parliament declared today that the Government would defend the Norwegian campaign on the basis that the speedy Nazi seizure of Norwegian airdromes left the Allies without air bases and with a marked inferiority in the air, even before a bomb was dropped.

"This may satisfy the British," said one diplomat whose nation borders on Germany, "but will it satisfy my country or Holland? If a neutral is to line up with the Allies, it must have some guaranty that the Supreme War Council can act with foresight and imagination."

Specify Help in Advance.

Observers believed that Great Britain's task in southeastern Europe would be increasingly difficult.

"A nation doesn't want help after the Germans have overrun the country—they want it before," was a common remark in legations of these countries.

The Balkans were understood to be uneasy over the slow start of "Enco," the newly organized British trading corporation. Spokesman close to the Foreign Office continued to remind these nations that "Enco" is based on a long-term policy.

It is evident, meanwhile, that Great Britain's trade with Sweden has disappeared, despite assurances from Foreign Office circles that Britain in eager and ready to continue. The realistic view is that Sweden has no free outlet, since Swedish ports are on German-controlled waters, Finland's northern port of Petsamo has been mined and Narvik, in northern Norway, is a battle zone.

As these facts have dawned slowly on politicians and people, the outcry against "complacency" in high places has beome greater.

Newspapers reminded their readers of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech declaring that Hitler had "missed the bus" when he started the Norwegian invasion on April 9. "Hitler may have missed the bus, but he took a taxi," was the popular reply today.

Conviction that the Norwegian withdrawal would have far-reaching and momentous results on the economic and diplomatic fronts gave Liberals, Laborites and insurgent Conservatives more ammunition for debate in Parliament. They indicated that they believe the Chamberlain government is as unequal to the task of organizing Europe against Hitler—a job which Britain did with notable success against Napoleon Bonaparte—as it is of pushing the war on land, sea and in the air to victory.

French War Cabinet Meets.

PARIS, May 6 (A. P.).—The War Committee of the French Cabinet met with President Albert Lebrun at the Elysee Palace today.

The five-man "inner Cabinet" includes Premier Paul Reynaud, Vice-Premier Camille Chautemps, the Minister of National Defense, Edouard Daladier; the Finance Minister, Lucien Lamoureux, and the Minister of Colonies, Georges Mandel.

Earlier M. Reynaud conferred with Paul Naggiar, the French Ambassador to Moscow, who has been in Paris, officially on "sick leave" since last September.

ALLIED TROOPS FROM NORWAY LAND IN BRITAIN

"You Were Ordered Out, Not Driven Out," Gen. Ironside Tells Them

Loss Of An English, A French And A Polish Destroyer Admitted

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Tuesday, May 7—A Norwegian broadcast early today said the Norwegian commander in chief, Otto Ruge, still was in Norway, having been taken to a northern port by a British warship.

This would indicate that some of the Allied forces withdrawn from about Trondheim must have been disembarked elsewhere in Norway instead of returning to Britain.

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Tuesday, May 7—British and French soldiers, worn from German bombing in the Trondheim sector of Norway, were disclosed early today to have returned to England just after the Allies had admitted the loss of three destroyers defending troop convoys.

Allied troops, just landed in a northern British port, were praised by General Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial British General Staff, for having "come back with your tails up."

"Don't think you were driven out of Norway," Ironside told the soldiers.

"You Were Ordered Out"

"You were ordered out of Norway, and the great thing is that your discipline brought you out.

"When you talk to your people, tell them how well you fought—that you have come back with your tails up—and that you will be ready again to show the same courage as you did then."

At the same time it was disclosed that two transports of French troops already had landed at a Scottish port Sunday.

Facing the mixed British and French forces, General Ironside advised them:

"Remember this—you beat those people when they came at you—you, with none of the implements that they had.

"I think that each one of you will have it in his heart that man for man and under proper conditions you are a match for the Germans.

"Race Went Against Us"

"You were an advance guard, and we had thought that we would be able to get to you the guns and aviation which make it possible to fight such a machine as you were opposed to.

"But, as you know, very soon the race went against us.

"You will hear afterward probably how our planes came across and landed and brought down a great many of these bombarding planes above you."

A War Office message cited the stand taken by Allied troops south of Dombas, Norway, and their withdrawal before a superior German force as operations worthy of the highest army traditions.

General Paget, who conducted the withdrawal, related:

"We were actually one hundred miles from our base when I got the order to withdraw, and we were in close touch with the enemy.

Fought Five Battles.

"That we successfully carried out that very difficult operation of withdrawing over a long distance in contact with the enemy was mainly due to the splendid endurance and fighting qualities of the units engaged. They fought five separate rear-guard actions on the way back."

A Scottish private of the Royal Engineers, a veteran of the World War, reported:

"The shell fire and machine-gunning were not quite so heavy as in the last war, but the bombing was something fearful. As many as forty planes were over us at one time and they dropped 400 bombs.

"I've never seen such bombing. We had very little defense against it—only machine guns and Bofors guns (a Swedish-make anti-aircraft gun).

30.24-2097

30.24-2097

The place was full of spies. Every move we made was known to the Germans almost as soon as we made it."

A French major said he saw no German soldiers during ten days in Norway but that the town where his men landed had suffered severely from German bombers, even though it was not an important military objective.

"We were disappointed that we had to leave Norway without having a crack at the Germans," he said, "but we had the satisfaction of seeing at least one German bomber brought down by our anti-aircraft guns.

"We saw no sign of the German fleet, not even a submarine, but there were plenty of British warships about."

The major said residents of the Norwegian town in which they landed fled to the woods daily at dawn to escape German planes which came over in bombing, machine-gunning waves of about ten throughout the day.

The French were said to have withdrawn from Norway without loss of a man, although harried by German bombers continually.

Spies "Everywhere"

Telling of spies "everywhere," a British private said the Norwegians executed a Norwegian radio operator who had been sending tips to German air raiders.

A sergeant who said he had nine years of regular army service said of the Allied retreat to the coast, "It was a marvelous piece of rear-guard fighting. I have done a great many manœuvers in my time, and this was just like another one except that it was the real thing.

"We were fighting hard with nothing in our stomachs for thirty-six hours. I am proud to have fought with these lads."

An infantry captain recounted:

"My company was machine-gunned many times but I had only one casualty from this cause.

"The effect, however, of continued attack was much felt. We were paralyzed and afraid to move. All the boys felt that if only we had had some fighters (pursuit planes) to deal with their bombers we could have smashed the Germans."

Destroyer Lost

To Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, will go the sad duty of telling the House of Commons today of the loss of the 1,870-ton destroyer Afridi, which was bombed and sunk last week while she was protecting troopships leaving Namsos, Norway. The Afridi normally carried 219 men and there was no word as to how many were saved, if any.

Coincident with this destruction the Polish naval staff in London announced the loss of the Polish destroyer Grom, by bomb off Norway, with one officer and sixty-five men believed lost.

In Paris the French Admiralty admitted the sinking of the big 2,436-ton French destroyer Bison, by a German air attack May 3 while escorting troops off Norway. Most of her crew, which normally would be 209 men, was saved.

Sunk Battling Planes

All three destroyers were sunk while fighting off German airmen trying to get at troop transports. The troopships themselves escaped unscathed, it was reported.

The sinking of the Afridi was Britain's forty-seventh acknowledged naval loss of the war. She was the eleventh destroyer sent to the bottom since the war began, and the fifth since the start of the Norwegian campaign.

The Afridi was sunk while convoying troops from Namsos, Norway. She was commanded by Capt. P. L. Vian who previously commanded the destroyer Cossack when that warship invaded Norwegian fjord February 17 and rescued British captives from the German ship Altmark. The Cossack was reported by the Germans to have been hit and set afire by shells in the second naval battle of Narvik April 13. The Afridi was a new destroyer, completed in May, 1938.

The Grom, 2,144 tons, was completed in 1937 in a British shipyard and had been cooperating with the British in the Norwegian operations. She carried a crew of about 200. The Poles announced they had accepted an offer by the British Government to replace the Grom by a destroyer now being built.

Protected Troops

Naval sources explained the heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire put up by the warships kept the bombers away from the troops. Destroyers are more vulnerable to air attack than cruisers and battleships because their decks are not as heavily protected, it was said.

The Admiralty also said three British trawlers, the Penn, Hercules and Leonara, each carrying nine men, were overdue and had been given up as lost.

Bursts of machine-gun fire and a number of explosions off the southeast coast of England during the day led to the belief that Royal Air Force fighters had driven off a German attempt to raid that sector.

There was nothing to report from the Allied encirclement of the far-north Norwegian ore port of Narvik, the War Office said in a terse communique. Allied troops are reported besieging between 3,000 and 4,000 German troops who have held Narvik since a few hours after Norway was invaded.

The Air Ministry announced that two Sunderland flying boats had been damaged by German machine-gun fire while anchored off Norway yesterday, but denied Germany's claim that two Blenheim bombers also had been shot down off the Netherlands.

French, British and Polish Authorities Concede Loss of War Vessels in Norse Convoy Service.

PARIS, May 6 (A. P.).—The French Naval Ministry announced tonight the sinking of the French destroyer Bison by German planes while escorting troopships in the North Sea.

The Bison was a vessel of 2,436 tons. Her normal complement was 209 men. She was completed in 1930.

She was the third destroyer victim of German air bombs to be announced today by the Allies, the British Admiralty earlier having announced the sinking of the British destroyer Afridi and the Polish naval staff in London the loss of the Grom.

First Important Loss.

An Admiralty communique said:

"On May 3 a convoy of troop transports was attacked in the North Sea by enemy aviation. No ship of the inter-Allied convoy was touched, but the destroyer Bison, which formed part of the escort, was sunk. A great part of the crew was saved.

"Families of the victims have been notified."

The loss of the Bison was the first of any importance the French have acknowledged in operations in Scandinavian waters where the French fleet has been co-operating with the British.

On April 25 the Paris Ministry of Marine announced that a French destroyer flotilla had sunk two German patrol ships in the Skagerrak and had returned to its base safely, despite German aerial attacks.

British Admit Loss.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—In the midst of vehement public demand for a more vigorous prosecution of the war, Great Britain today announced the loss last week of the 1,870-ton destroyer Afridi in German bombing raids upon the convoys withdrawing Allied troops from Namsos, Norway.

Meanwhile the Admiralty stood by its denial of the German claims to have sunk a battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class and a heavy cruiser in the same operations.

However, three British trawlers—the Penn, Hercules and Leonara—each carrying a crew of nine men, were given up for lost today after having been long overdue.

Polish Loss Conceded.

Later the Polish naval staff announced here that the Polish destroyer Grom had been sunk by a bomb.

The 2,144-ton destroyer was engaged in operations in Norway.

One officer and sixty-five men were believed to have been lost.

[Berlin already had reported that a Polish destroyer, which was not identified, had been sunk by her bombers.]

The destroyer was completed in 1937 in a British shipyard. She had a normal complement of 180 men which was increased to around 200 during wartime.

Text of Polish Communique.

The text of the Polish naval staff communique said:

"The Polish naval staff in London regrets to announce that the Polish destroyer Grom, which, together with other units of the Polish Navy have been actively cooperating with the British fleet since the beginning of the war, has been sunk by a bomb.

"The Grom was engaged in the operations off the coast of Norway.

"One officer and sixty-five ratings are missing and must be presumed lost.

"An offer by the British Government to replace this destroyer by one now building in a British shipyard has been gratefully accepted."

Two Bombers Are Downed.

The British admitted that the Afridi, the forty-seventh naval loss officially announced by the British, was struck by a bomb and subsequently sank during an "insistent attack" by "waves of enemy aircraft."

The Admiralty said that escort vessels' anti-aircraft fire was so effective that two German bombers were shot down and the transports came through "untouched," despite a rain of Nazi bombs.

The Afridi, fifth British destroyer lost since the start of the Norwegian campaign, was acting as flotilla leader of the escort and carried 219 men.

She was commanded by Capt. P. L. Vian, who commanded the destroyer Cossack when she invaded Norwegian territorial waters on February 17 last, to rescue the 300 British seamen from the German prison ship Altmark in Josing Fjord, in south Norway.

The Afridi, a craft of 1,870 tons, was completed in May, 1938, at a cost of £450,000 (about $1,800,000 at the then current rate of exchange). She was fitted as a squadron leader, although not classed as such.

Her armament included eight 4.7 inch guns, seven of smaller caliber and four 21-inch-torpedo tubes.

Troopships Untouched.

The text of the communique announcing the loss of the Afridi:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. S. Afridi has been sunk following upon the withdrawal of troops from Namsos. His Majesty's ships, of which the destroyer Afridi (Capt. P. L. Vian, D. S. C., R. N.) was one, provided defense for the troop convoy against aircraft and submarine attack.

"With the arrival of daylight, repeated waves of enemy aircraft kept up an insistent attack upon the convoy, but the barrage maintained by the anti-aircraft guns of the escort was so effective that the troop transports were untouched.

"It was in the course of this action that H. M. S. Afridi was struck by a bomb and subsequently sunk.

"Two enemy aircraft were shot down. The next of kin of all casualties have been informed."

The Afridi was the eleventh British destroyer sunk since the beginning of the war. One of the sixteen vessels of the Tribal class, she was a sister ship of the Gurkha, which was sunk by air bombs on April 11, and the Mohawk, which was damaged in a German air raid on the Firth of Forth on October 16 last.

Another Battleship Report.

BERLIN, May 6 (A. P.).—The German High Command reported today that another enemy battleship had been hit by a heavy bomb off the Narvik front, that a munitions dump had been blown up, and that two German airplanes had captured in the Kattegat a British submarine which had been damaged by a mine on April 15.

The report that another battleship had been hit said that heavy smoke arising from the vessel showed the effect of the bomb.

Presumably the battleship was part of the naval cordon facing Narvik, the far northern ore port, where the German garrison has been under siege for weeks.

Submarine Is Seen Sunk.

LARVIK, Norway, May 6 (A. P.).—Reports today from Nevlunghavn said that residents of the coastal village saw a German airplane bomb and sink a submarine, either British or French, in the Skagerrak last Saturday.

NARVIK-BOUND NAZIS DRIVE TO HALFWAY MARK

Reach Mo After 150-Mile Overland Push From Namsos

Hope To Relieve Comrades, Mop Up Allies, Build Air Base At Bodo

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 6—A German overland expedition driving northward through Norway was reported today at the outskirts of Mo, the halfway point along its 300-mile route from Namsos to Narvik.

The drive had the triple objective of:

1. Relieving the German garrison in the Arctic ore port of Narvik from attacking British, French and Norwegian forces.
2. Mopping up, en route, the Allied detachments which, left behind in last week's embarkation at Namsos, also are believed to be trying to reach Narvik.
3. Establishing a powerful air base at Bodo, only 110 miles airline from Narvik, for the hard-hitting "Stukas" (Sturlkampfbombers or "dive battle bombers").

Nazis Seek Air Base

Soon after it was announced that Hitler had ordered the overland drive of over 300 miles from Namsos through the wilds of northern Norway to Narvik, military experts said the most immediate of the three Nazi goals would be to establish the air base at Bodo.

From this site the Stukas would be able to make round trips to Narvik in an hour, to blast at the British and French positions and harass the Allied sea forces which now are attempting to crowd the Germans out of this vital terminus of the rail line running east to the rich Swedish ore mines.

German troops already are reported to be within six miles of Mo, northern end both of the rail line coming up from central and southern Norway and of the improved highway.

Scouts Sight Allies

Ahead of the advancing German forces, scouting planes reported they have located the French and British units which are moving north in the same direction and contact between the two was expected hourly.

Mo is approximately sixty-five miles south of Bodo, and to get to Bodo the Nazi troops must march over what is only a half-built road.

But the more optimistic military observers here said it may not be necessary for the Nazi columns to attempt the one hundred miles or more between Bodo and Narvik if establishment of the air base at Bodo makes it possible for the bombers to render full-time assistance to the Narvik garrison.

Should the land advance have to be extended beyond Bodo, however, the German troops must hack their way through a roadless, railwayless northern wilderness that is slashed by craggy canyons and fjords reaching across this bottle-neck portion of Norway almost to the Swedish border.

Center Of Timber Land

In addition to the strategic value, the region around Mo and Bodo is the center of heavy timber land with many lumber mills. From the harbor at Mo, a thirteen-mile railway line leads inland to iron mines belonging to a British company.

Around Narvik itself, meanwhile, the Allies were reported to be pouring in a constant stream of reinforcements.

French Alpine Chasseurs (Blue Devils) already have been landed at Tyss fiord, south of the ore port, and other British and French forces have been moving into lines north of the town via Harstadt and Tromso.

It is also known to the German army that the British recently brought heavy cannon there to bolster their positions, and it is reported here that, with Norwegian troops having joined the British and French, the joint Allied supremacy now is ten to twenty-fold.

Pin Hopes On Planes

But the Germans hope to neutralize all of this numerical supremacy through the operations of the Stukas.

Military experts describe the fights which are bound to develop around Narvik as likely to prove "extremely heroic." They pointed out that the Salzburg mountaineers who are entrenched in the town are among Germany's best Alpine contingents, while the French also have sent in their best.

In the remainder of Norway, it is said, Germany has less experienced troops.

Hitler's decision to order the overland march, surprising to many officials who already had conceded eventual capture of the town by the Allies, was said to stem from two principal reasons:

The fact that the German position in Narvik was made especially difficult because the ore-shipping port's air field was not in Nazi hands.

The British patrol of sea lanes leading to Narvik which, for the last two weeks, had made it appear inevitable that the German garrison either would have to surrender or retreat into Sweden and there be interned.

Claim Battleship Hit

Today's communique from the high command claimed another battleship was hit by a bomb of the heaviest type, and that the hit brought heavy smoke from the war vessel. At the same time it said the crew of a British submarine was rescued and their vessel captured by two German flying boats in the Skaggerak, where the craft was lying helpless after hitting a mine. It was towed to a German harbor by two patrol boats.

DNB also announced today that, during the last half of April, Hitler and King Gustaf V of Sweden exchanged letters on the political situation which, DNB said, ". . . once again affirmed the complete agreement over the future political attitude of the two countries toward one another."

The text of today's high command communique follows:

"No greater fighting occurred in the Narvik region yesterday, but the enemy sent additional artillery there from the north. German fighting planes supporting the German group in Narvik succeeded in hitting one enemy battleship with a heavy bomb, raiding troop concentration and exploding a munitions dump.

"Our troops started to advance northward from Grong, eastward of Namsos. Pacification action in central and southern Norway is generally concluded.

"The mountain stronghold of Hegra capitulated. German vanguards now are standing east of Roeros near the Swedish border.

"Two British Sunderland flying boats, anchored on the north Norwegian coastal region, were machine-gunned and damaged.

"One British submarine, which on April 15 was damaged by a mine, was captured by two German airplanes in the Kattegat. They determinedly descended at sea near the submarine. The commander of the submarine and one non-commissioned officer were taken prisoner and brought aboard the planes. Patrol boats of the German Navy then towed the British submarine to a German port.

"Two British Bristol Blenheims (bombers) were shot down near Terschelling (the Netherlands).

"No special events on the west front."

Nazis' Airplanes Spot Stranded Allied Units

By Louis P. Lochner

Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Berlin, May 6—German scouting planes were reported today to have spotted Allied detachments struggling through mountainous Norwegian territory to reach Allied forces besieging Narvik, and the Nazi war machine was set in motion to mop up those units before moving to the help of a German garrison at the Far North ore port.

Authorized sources said the remnants of troops left when the Allies withdrew last week from Namsos, on the western coast more than 300 miles south of Narvik, had been seen by flyers between Mo and Bodo.

Alpine Troops Sped

Mo is a small town about 150 miles north of Namsos and the spot from which Adolf Hitler ordered Alpine troops to begin a 200-mile trek through almost impassable mountains in an attempt to aid the Nazis hemmed in by the Allies at Narvik. Bodo is on the west coast about sixty-five miles north of Mo.

Narvik is becoming known in Germany as the Nazi "Alcazar."

It was said that the immediate objective of the advancing Nazi troops would be to take care of the Allied detachments and then build an airport at Bodo from which the dreaded Stukas (German power-diving planes) could attack the Allied forces near Narvik.

French Reported There

Some experts expressed the opinion that the Stukas could polish off the Allied besiegers at Narvik and make unnecessary a continuance of the arduous march of the Alpine troops.

Others said that Germany would need all assistance possible to hold Narvik.

It is known here that the French recently landed strong Alpine forces south of Narvik. North of that beleaguered ore port the English and French have been reported pouring reinforcements.

Meanwhile, the German high command reported that British artillery forces in the Far-North Narvik region had been strengthened but that no more intense fighting had occurred in that sector.

Reporting further blows against the British Navy, the high command said that "one enemy battleship" was hit by a heavy bomb off the Narvik front and that two German airplanes had captured a British submarine which was damaged by a mine April 15 in the Kattegat.

Surprise Move

Hitler's orders to relieve the Narvik detachments, which have been under siege since shortly after the Germans went into Norway on April 8, upset all theories thus far aired in informed circles.

(The Narvik Nazi forces have been estimated in British and French reports at between 3,000 and 4,000 men.)

For weeks the German press in dealing with Narvik wrote of it as unimportant in the Norwegian developments.

Nazis May Withdraw

Sources, usually well informed, intimated that Hitler would soon give orders to the bottled-up Germans in the ore port and its vicinity to retreat strategically to the Swedish border if necessary and let themselves be interned in Sweden.

Germany's lack of control of the airport which commands Narvik was given as one reason why the withdrawal would ensue as a strategic necessity.

Even those persons in official circles who believed the Germans could hold out at Narvik seem to have had no inkling of Hitler's plans to send reinforcements by land. They counted on the German air force to drive British ships away with the coming of better weather, thus permitting reinforcements to be sent by water.

Der Fuehrer's trusted mountain troops began their march from the neighborhood of the little Norwegian town of Mo, which lies about 150 miles north of Namsos, and which is the terminal of both railway and normal automobile highways. Between Mo and Narvik is only a narrow country road, sometimes only a mere path.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported today that Nazi warplanes raided British naval units and troop concentrations in the vicinity of Harstad, about thirty-five miles northwest of Narvik.

Spanish Siege Recalled

The feeling that Narvik is becoming the Nazi "Alcazar" was expressed by Bernhard Rust, Minister of Education, in an address to German youth.

[Spanish Nationalists withstood a seventy-one-day siege in the Alcazar fortress at Toledo during the Spanish civil war and were rescued when Nationalist troops captured the city.]

Hitler appears to have decided on solving the Narvik problem by sending troops by land in a manner mindful in its dramatic possibilities of Hannibal's crossing the Alps.

There is this difference, however: While the German troops are on this last bottle-neck of 200 most difficult miles, the Nazi air force will be counted on to protect them against possible enemy surprises.

The High Command's laconic statement in its communique that "our troops started to advance northward from Grong." eastward of the port of Namsos, which was abandoned last week by the allies, gives no idea of the magnitude of the task.

That Germany now regards Narvik again as of major importance is indicated by the fact that power divers went directly from Namsos, after they were reported to have sunk a battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class and a heavy cruiser, to Narvik to do their stuff there.

Mediterranean May Be Blind.

Germany believes that England is interested chiefly in two things—ores and oil.

Hitler apparently has decided he must make doubly sure of remaining in possession of Narvik as the western outlet port for ore from the Kiruna mines in Sweden.

Meanwhile, authorized sources said that they were wondering whether and where England next would try to widen the area of conflict. Since England desires to cut Germany off from oil as well as ores, the Mediterranean still is considered the likely scene of major impending events.

At the same time authorized sources kept warning that all talk about the Mediterranean might be a blind and that the alleged British plans really are focussed elsewhere.

No News From Narvik.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—The War Office said today that there was nothing to report from Narvik, Norwegian ore port where the British and French are besieging a German force.

Its communique read:

"There is nothing to report from the Narvik area."

The Air Ministry acknowledged that two British Sunderland flying boats had been damaged by German machine gun fire while at anchor off Norway yesterday, but denied that two Bienheim bombers had been shot down.

ALSO REPORTED PUSHING NORTHWARD FROM THE NAMSOS SECTOR TOWARD NARVIK ARE BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS WHO GERMAN ADVICES YESTERDAY SAID HAD BEEN CUT OFF FROM THE MAIN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE LAST WEEK WITH THE ALLIES WITHDREW FROM NAMSOS. THEY MUST NEGOTIATE BETWEEN 300 AND 400 MILES OF DIFFICULT MOUNTAIN TERRAIN BETWEEN NAMSOS AND NARVIK TO REACH THE ALLIED FORCES IN THE NORTH.

NAZI BOMBERS SWEPT HUNDREDS OF MILES NORTH FROM THE NOW QUIET TRONDHEIM SECTOR TO ASSAIL ALLIED POSITIONS NEAR NARVIK. IN THE BOMBING OF AN ENCAMPMENT THERE, IT WAS SAID, A STORE OF ALLIED MUNITIONS WAS BLOWN UP YESTERDAY.

(A NORWEGIAN NEWS AGENCY DISPATCH SAID THAT GERMAN BOMBERS HAD PASSED NARVIK EARLY SATURDAY TO ATTACK KIRKENES, ON THE ARCTIC COAST NEAR THE FINNISH PETSAMO DISTRICT. LITTLE DAMAGE WAS REPORTED FROM FOUR BOMBS DROPPED AT KIRKENES, BUT NEARBY COMMUNITIES ALSO WERE RAIDED.)

THE AIR FORCE SEEMED INTENT UPON BREAKING UP AN CONSOLIDATION OF ALLIED FORCES FROM THE TRONDHEIM FRONT WITH THOSE BESIEGING NARVIK. DNB, OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY, SAID THAT DETACHMENTS OF BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS, CUT OFF BY AIR ATTACK FROM THE MAIN FORCES WITHDRAWN BY SEA FROM NAMSOS, NORTH OF TRONDHEIM, WERE PUSHING NORTHWARD.

IT WAS THOUGHT THAT THESE UNITS MIGHT BE ATTEMPTING A FORCED MARCH TO JOIN THE PRESSURE ON NARVIK WITH AN ATTACK FROM THE SOUTH.

TO ACHIEVE SUCH A CONTACT THE ALLIED DETACHMENTS WOULD HAVE TO NEGOTIATE MORE THAN 300 MILES OF THE MOST DIFFICULT TERRAIN IN NORWAY, EXPOSED ALL THE WAY TO BOMBING AND STRAFING BY NAZI WARPLANES. FOR 100 MILES OF THE WAY THERE IS NOT EVEN A ROAD.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY THAT THE NARVIK GARRISON --AFTER DAYS OF PRESSURE FROM NORWEGIAN, BRITISH AND FRENCH FORCES ON LAND AND WATER---HAD, WITH THE AID OF THE AIR FORCE, REPULSED RPEATED ATTACKS OF "STRONG ENEMY FORCES SUPPORTED BY FLIERS."

THE GERMAN FORCES OF OCCUPATION IN CENTRAL NORWAY HAVE PUSHED TO THE RAILHEADS OF NAMSOS AND GRONG, NORTH OF TRONDHEIM, WHILE CONTINUING TO MOP UP NORWEGIAN DIE-HARDS AND STRAGGLERS STILL SHOWING FIGHT---CHIEFLY IN THE TRYSIL AREA EAST OF LILLE-HAMMER AND AROUND ROROS, SOUTHEAST OF TRONDHEIM.

SURRENDER OF 160 MEN AND 15 OFFICERS WHO HAD FOUGHT OFF GERMAN ATTACKS FROM THE ROCKY FASTNESS OF HEGRA FORTRESS, 20 MILES EAST OF TRONDHEIM, WAS ANNOUNCED BY DNB. THE FORTRESS, UNDER GERMAN PRESSURE FOR MORE THAN TWO WEEKS, HAD BEEN RINGED BY MOUNTAIN TROOPS.

THIS IS A SUMMARIZATION OF THE LATEST GERMAN CLAIMS IN THE ISSUE OF WARPLANES VERSUS WARSHIPS:

MAY 3--- SUNK: A BRITISH BATTLESHIP, A HEAVY CRUISER AND A LARGE TRANSPORT, OFF NAMSOS.

(THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY'S DENIAL OF THIS, YESTERDAY, AFTER MORE THAN 24 HOURS OF SILENCE, SAID MERELY, "THE GERMAN CLAIM TO HAVE SUNK A BATTLESHIP AND A CRUISER OF THE YORK CLASS IN THE OPERATIONS OFF NAMSOS IS UNTRUE." THE ADMIRALTY MADE NO MENTION OF THE TRANSPORT.)

MAY 4---SUNK: A FORMER POLISH DESTROYER, OFF NARVIK. IN ADDITION, TWO MERCHANTMEN WERE DESTROYED.

MAY 5---DAMAGED: A BRITISH BATTLESHIP, OFF NARVIK.

CONFRONTED WITH THE BRITISH DENIAL OF THE REPORT FOR FRIDAY, MAY 3, AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES SAID THAT THE HIGH COMMAND STATEMENT TO THE EFFECT THAT DIVE BOMBERS HAD SENT THE BATTLESHIP UNDER WITH ONE LIGHTNING ASSAULT WOULD NOT BE ALTERED. THE STROKE SENT FLAMES BILLOWING HIGH INTO THE SKY, ACCORDING TO THE GERMAN ACCOUNT, AND LEFT ONLY FLOATING DEBRIS WHEN THE SMOKE HAD CLEARED.

THE SUNDAY COMMUNIQUE OF THE HIGH COMMAND REPORTED ALSO THAT ALLIED MERCHANT SHIPPING LOSSES FROM MINES AND SUBMARINE TORPEDOES TOTALED CLOSE TO 2,300,000 TONS FOR THE EIGHT MONTHS OF THE WAR. (AN ASSOCIATED PRESS TABULATION OF BOTH MERCHANT AND NAVAL LOSSES FOR BOTH BELLIGERENTS AND NEUTRALS TOTALS 1,825,357 TONS.)

Effective Aerial Raids On British Fleet Laid To New German Bomb Sight

Berlin, May 6 (AP)—Expert sources revealed tonight that the German air force has developed and used in raids at Namsos and Narvik a new bomb sight comparable in accuracy to the secret device used by the United States air forces.

The device not only gives the German flyers increased sighting accuracy, these experts said, but they claimed that the release device is far beyond anything that previously had been developed.

This sighting device made possible effective bombing of the British fleet off Narvik and Namsos, they said. It was near the latter port, the Germans assert, that a bomber sank a British battleship last Friday.

Nazis' Third Saar Thrust Repelled, French Reveal

Artillery Fire In Lower Alsace Only Development Of Day, High Command Says

Paris, May 6 (AP)—On the Western front, the French high command said today advance French units for the third successive night beat off a German thrust in the Saar sector. Later the high command said nothing important developed during the day except "some artillery fire in lower Alsace."

Edmond Meillet, chairman of the Chamber of Deputies army committee, declared in a nation-wide broadcast that the Allies have achieved a "capital result" in Norway in barring the iron route through Narvik to the Germans.

NEW NAZI THRUST REPELLED IN WEST

French Report Fighting Is Sharp in Saar Sector.

PARIS, May 6 (A. P.).—A new German thrust on the western front crumpled before a sharp counter-attack by advance French units during fighting for the third successive night in the Saar sector, the French High Command announced today.

Both sides suffered losses, a spokesman for the War Ministry acknowledged. He described the French casualties as "slight," but said that details were lacking as the fighting was still going on.

French military spokesmen said that about 300 Nazis moved to the attack through the rugged no-man's land after sharp exchanges of fire between artillery. They said that the attackers did not succeed in penetrating between the French outposts east of the Maginot Line, as they had done the night before, and were forced to withdraw after suffering losses.

The fighting in the strategic Saar sector in the center of the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine began just before dawn on Saturday when two German companies launched an assault on advance French positions under cover of an artillery barrage.

Repulsed, the Germans came over in greater numbers on Sunday to encircle three French outposts only to be beaten back, however, by French reserve units summoned from the rear, French reported.

The formal communique of the French High Command said: "Marked activity of the artillery and advance units in the region of the Saar."

BERLIN, May 6 (A. P.).—In its regular communique today the German High Command said in part: "Two British Bristol Blenheims were shot down near Terschelling (the Netherlands).

"No special events on the West front."

Sweden Agrees With Hitler on Role as Neutral

Gustav Redefines Position in Letter to Berlin, Wins Pledge Against Invasion

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, May 6.—The Swedish Foreign Office announced tonight that King Gustav V had redefined Sweden's position of continued neutrality in a letter to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler late in April and that the German Fuehrer had replied with assurances that Germany respected Swedish neutrality.

The announcement confirmed in specific form a report today by D. N. B., German official news agency, that Hitler and Gustav had agreed on the mutual "future political attitude" of the two nations.

The King's message emphasized anew Sweden's firm intention of maintaining her neutrality "in all directions," the Swedish news agency said.

AIMS TO FINISH OCCUPATION OF COUNTRY

Troops Hammer Hard At Enemy's Remaining Footholds

New Allied Mines Reported Laid in Skagerrak Off Sweden

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 6—The German air force took far northern Norway as its objective today as the Nazis, apparently determined to complete their occupation of the country, hammered vigorously at the Allies' remaining footholds.

Continuation of Allied action against German ships moving to Norway across the Skagerrak was reported, however, by naval circles here, which said new Allied mines had been laid in the area west of Goteborg, Sweden.

They expressed belief that new mines caused the sinking of a Swedish fishing vessel and an unidentified German ship today, and were probably laid by submarine.

Nazis Drop In Parachutes

Reports reaching here tonight said that Nazi troops had been dropped by parachute from scores of planes to cut off and new Allied landings from the sea in the craggy, snowy wilderness into which the main Norwegian war scene is shifting.

The first necessity before Germany can stretch her hold to such extreme northern points as Hammerfest and Kirkenes is to reinforce her troops at Narvik, beleaguered by Allied forces in the surrounding country.

Campaign Already Begun

The flow northward of heavy transport planes, reported with both men and supplies, indicates this already has begun although on land at least one German column was said still to be obstructed below Trondheim. At least 100 German transport planes were seen winging northward.

The newspaper Aftonbladet said die-hard Norwegians, trying to hold the Germans from the narrow Norwegian "handle" along the northern Atlantic coast, had reported a victory today over a Nazi force of 3,000 men east of Storen, and south of Trondheim.

A German parachute patrol landed at Mo, about 150 miles north of Namsos and midway between there and Narvik, reports here said.

Mo is the town on the inlet north of Mosjoen where the British who withdrew from their debarkation point at Namsos were expected in some quarters to attempt a new landing to halt the Germans' northward progress.

Could Block Allies

With Mo in its possession, military observers said, the Nazi army—even with few men—would be in a good position to block the Allies and facilitate a German land offensive toward Narvik despite exceedingly rough, snow-choked trails.

Beyond Mo, terminus of a well-constructed road, the unusually difficult country can be penetrated only along a deep valley road which is blocked by exposure to sea back below Narvik and curves eastward into remote mountains, fjords and forests above Narvik.

Rumors persisted that some of these withdrawn Allied forces had landed again in Norway south of Narvik, but confirmation of any new Allied debarkations still was lacking tonight.

Nazis Gain Air Base

At Ostersund, Norwegian refugees who crossed the near-by border into Sweden said the German capture of the Hegra fortress (announced officially in Berlin Sunday night) had put a valuable air base in Nazi hands at Varnes, only 375 miles by air line from Narvik.

With indications that the Germans intend, if possible, to push their occupation to the very northernmost limits of Norway, the question of Scandinavian economy for the duration of the war has come into the foreground.

If such a German move should succeed, Sweden would lose whatever hopes she may now have of possible unhampered trade routes to the west by way of Petsamo, Finland and Arctic waters.

Even now all Scandinavia and Finland have been drawn into the economic orbit of Germany and Soviet Russia either by force or circumstance.

The German drive to oust the Allies from the Narvik area of Arctic Norway, besides being designed to gain complete control of Swedish iron-ore shipments, also appears aimed at forestalling any possible Allied move to hinder such shipments through the Gulf of Bothnia.

Roughly two-thirds of Sweden's annual iron ore exports normally pass through Narvik.

High Price Faced

Many informed Swedes agree that even if their country remains neutral throughout the war it will have to pay a high price. Trade with both Germany and Russia is bound to be on a barter basis or on long-term credits.

The only hope for trade with the West, they say, lies in a possible agreement with Germany. But a hurdle to top there is the Allied blockade, which would interfere with imports from Britain and the United States that might in any way be valuable to Germany.

On the development of the northern situation now hangs what seems to be the most important immediate threat to Swedish peace and neutrality, and Sweden looks northward with some anxiety.

Meanwhile, with investigations under way toward trade negotiations with Russia and with Finland already dealing toward the east, the development of commerce in that direction seems inevitable.

Swedish-German trade negotiations soon are to be resumed in Berlin and Swedish authorities already have found occasion formally to deny that Germany is taking advantage of the Scandinavian situation to demand—rather than bargain for—trade with Sweden.

Transports Flying North.

STOCKHOLM, May 6 (A. P.).—German warplanes continued today to penetrate over northernmost Norway in such numbers as to indicate plans to make victory in Norway complete to the last detail if possible.

Observers here believe now that the Germans not only will push an offensive against Narvik without delay—matching warplanes against the British fleet—but also try to force capitulation of such far northern points as Hammerfest and Kirkenes.

Conquest of the long narrow stretch of Norway still unoccupied by the Germans would help assure uninterrupted Nazi communications with Russia through arctic waters.

The continuous flow northward of heavy transport planes indicated that Germany already had started to drop troops and supplies. The chief obstacle is the difficulty of dropping heavy equipment to combat British attack.

Norwegians Still Fighting.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet, however, reported at least one German column still facing opposition south of Trondheim. It said that Norwegians, trying to hold the Germans east of Storen, had reported a victory this morning over a Nazi force of 3,000.

Two German planes which made forced landings were seized and their crews interned.

Increasing peril from mines adrift with the ice off the west coast was reported. The crew of four aboard a Swedish fishing vessel were killed when a mine sank their boat near Gothenburg. A German ship bound for that southern Swedish port also was sunk by a mine, but the crew was rescued.

Norse Refugees' Tale Of Fort Hegra's Fall

[By the Associated Press]

Ostersund, Sweden, May 6—Norwegian refugees flocking across the nearby border into Sweden said today that German capture of the Hegra fortress had given the Nazis possession of a vital air base at Varnes.

(Hegra's fall was announced by DNB, official German news agency, last night.)

This base, adaptable for German bombing planes, is only thirty miles from the Norwegian-Swedish frontier and only 375 miles air line from the northern ore port of Narvik, where a small German garrison is standing off an Allied attack.

Food And Shells Exhausted

The refugees said the big guns of the Hegra fortress kept the Germans from establishing a bombing base at Varnes through three weeks of incessant fighting, until the defenders were left "on the verge of starvation and without ammunition."

These accounts said the Germans pushed east from Trondheim deep up the Stjordalen (valley), between ice and snow-cloaked mountains, in the early days of the war.

Hurled back by big guns, the Nazis called upon their Alpine troops to encircle the fortress and the adjoining village of Hegra on the Trondheim-Storlien Railway twenty miles east of Trondheim, and launched an attack supported by light field artillery, machine guns and planes.

The refugees said that within a few days the fire from the German guns left most of the village a mass of smoking ruins and the fortress itself pock-marked. The German fire was almost continuous, the refugees declared.

They said the Hegra defenders, forced to conserve their scanty stores of food and munitions, held their fire until the Germans tried a direct assault and then inflicted heavy losses on the attackers.

"Our troops could have held out indefinitely," said one refugee proudly, "but they ran short of food and munitions."

With the food apparently completely gone and only a few rounds of ammunition left, the fifteen officers and 160 men finally capitulated.

Fleeing Into Sweden

Farther to the north, many tired and bedraggled Norwegian volunteers and civilians continue to pour into Sweden across mountain passes. The Germans now have pushed their occupation east directly to the Swedish border, after occupying Grong and Namsos.

A young British Red Cross driver, William Miall, one of the last British to escape from the Grong sector, declared:

"You couldn't tell the Norwegian soldiers from the civilians except that they carried guns, for they weren't wearing uniforms for the most part. After they had trudged a few miles through the snow, slush and mud everyone looked alike."

Miall said German bombers had reduced villages in the area from Grong to the Swedish frontier to "just little flat heaps of wreckage."

GERMANS AT OSLO FEAR FOR AIRPORT

Strict Regulations Issued to Norse Civilians.

OSLO, May 6 (A. P.).—Joseph Terboven, Adolf Hitler's commissioner for the German-occupied areas of Norway, issued an order today forbidding approach within one and a quarter miles of Fornebu Air Field between 10 P. M. and 2:30 A. M. as an air raid precaution measure. At other hours, approach to the field will be permitted only in the most urgent cases.

Fornebu Air Field, about three miles outside Oslo, has been the target of six British air raids.

At the same time Norwegians were warned against examining unexploded bombs, since these frequently explode several hours after hitting the ground.

Terboven also announced that persons found plundering deserted houses would be tried before a court martial.

Such employees as are still needed in the Norwegian Foreign Office have een transferred to offices in the Royal Palace. The Foreign Office building is now being used as headquarters for the German police.

Norwegian authorities are planning a special spring holiday in the schools so that the children can be employed in potato planting on the farms. The war has brought about a great scarcity of farm laborers.

The entire town of Lillehammer, famous tourist center in the Gudbrands valley, has been converted into a huge camp for prisoners of war. The prisoners are said to be permitted unrestricted movement within the town limits.

HITLER AND GUSTAV EXCHANGE LETTERS

Said to Be in Accord on Sweden's Future.

BERLIN, May 6 (A. P.).—DNB, official German news agency, announced today the exchange of letters between Adolf Hitler and King Gustav V of Sweden which "affirmed complete agreement over the future political attitude" of Germany and Sweden toward each other.

It said the exchange occurred during the last half of April.

"This exchange of opinions," the agency reported, "once again affirmed complete agreement over the future political attitude of the two countries toward one another in accordance with public declarations already given by the German and Swedish governments."

Swedish leaders have emphasized their desire to remain neutral in the European war while German spokesmen have acclaimed the Swedes for their neutrality and said it would be respected.

Nazis Assert Allies Plan Action in Balkans Soon

Claim Interception of Reynaud-Chamberlain Phone Call

BERLIN, May 7 (Tuesday) (AP).—The German press asserted today that plans for Allied military action in the Balkans this month had been disclosed by interception of a telephone conversation between French Premier Paul Reynaud and British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

Under large front-page headlines the Berlin "Zwoelf Uhr Blatt" carried excerpts from the alleged conversation, in which Reynaud was quoted as saying that Gen. Maxime Weygand, Allied commander in the Near East, had promised to be ready for "ordered action" by May 15.

(How the alleged telephone conversation, which was said to have occurred on April 30, was intercepted was not immediately disclosed.)

The paper said Reynaud advised Chamberlain that he should not take the May 15 date too literally. Chamberlain was quoted as replying, "in an obviously depressed tone," that preparations "down there seem to be taking more time than necessary."

Reynaud was said to have answered that there were "many difficulties to be overcome," especially with the Turks, "who are daily making higher demands."

Cruisers Added To Allied Fleet At Alexandria

Bomb-Loaded Planes Stand By; 'We're Ready to Meet Italy,' British Declare

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 6 (AP).—The guns of a newly arrived squadron of Allied cruisers, reinforcing French and British battlefleets, gleamed in Alexandria harbor tonight, and British warplanes stood with bomb racks loaded for a quick take-off.

"We are ready to meet Italy on land, sea and air should she decide to fight," said British official circles as this display of naval and air might spread itself out to defend, in any emergency, the vital Suez Canal.

"The test has already started," the sources said in answer to the question whether Italy might decide to fight, intimating the answer was expected within the next seven days.

"In fact the Allies attitude is defiant," these spokesmen continued, "because it is tantamount to a reply, not to a diplomatic note but rather, to a naval demonstration of great significance.

"The Allies are fully prepared for any emergency in the fields in which hostilities may take place with Italy, and in event of war being declared, which we still doubt, we are absolutely certain of the final issue of such a conflict."

The "naval demonstration" mentioned went unexplained. However, observers recalled reports that the Italians recently had concentrated naval forces, as well as reinforced their land and air troops, in the Dodecanese Islands, in the Aegean Sea between the Turkish and Greek coasts.

The new squadron of Allied cruisers and auxiliaries arrived today to join battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines and torpedo boats already here, as extraordinary defense precautions were being taken by the Egyptians, allies of the British by treaty.

The Egyptian coastal defense artillery was completing a practice cannonade as the last units of he war fleet moved into the harbor.

The Suez Canal, Great Britain's "lifeline" to her Far Eastern empire and the supply line to Allied Near Eastern forces should Italy block the Mediterranean, was being swept continuously lest an enemy plant mines there.

Governmental orders signed today canceled ordinary visas, and persons entering or leaving Egypt now must get special permission. All civilians were called upon to declare any firearms, explosives or poison gas in their possession. Egypt has a large Italian colony.

Bucharest Raid Exercises

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 6 (AP).—All military and civilian defense and rescue organizations here were mobilized today for the first full-dress air-raid exercises held in the Rumanian capital since soon after the outbreak of the European war.

Boris Reviews Troops

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 6 (AP).—King Boris III reviewed large units of his army today in the presence of the Bulgarian Cabinet.

Tippelskirch Leaves Belgrade

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 6 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Josef Tippelskirch, described as chief of the German Military Intelligence Service, left Belgrade today for Berlin after an air tour of the Balkan capitals. Before coming to Belgrade he conferred with German military attaches and diplomats in Bucharest and Sofia, also with Rumanian and Bulgarian military authorities.

Tippelskirch's aerial swing around southeastern Europe aroused unusual attention. He is reported to have visited Denmark and Norway soon before the Nazis invaded those countries.

Italian Envoy and Metaxas Confer

ATHENS, May 6 (AP).—The Italian Minister to Greece, Raffaele Boscarelli, returned here today by airplane from Rome and immediately engaged in a long conference with Premier Gen. John Metaxas. The subject of their discussion was not disclosed.

MORE CRAFT JOIN ALLIED WAR FLEET AT EGYPTIAN PORT

British Say They Are Ready for Italy as Balkan Tension Grows.

ALEXANDRIA, May 6 (A. P.).—A new squadron of Allied cruisers and auxiliary war craft arrived here today and British official circles said that "we are ready to meet Italy on land, sea and air should she decide to fight."

The answer to that question, they said, "will be made clear in the course of the next week, as the test has already started."

This last phrase was not elaborated, but the British said that "the Allied stand is clear."

Planes Loaded With Bombs.

The new arrivals joined the mighty group of British and French battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines and torpedo boats already in this Egyptian port.

Egyptian coastal defense artillery topped off a practice session by giving their cannon a thorough workout just as the last units of the war fleet moved into the harbor.

Allied planes, already loaded with heavy bomb cargoes, were poised for quick take-offs if required.

Duce Sees Crown Prince.

ROME, May 6 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini conferred with Crown Prince Umberto today on military problems, as heightened tension was reported between Italy and Yugoslavia. The Crown Prince is commander of half of the Italian Army.

In authoritative quarters it was said that "precautionary measures" along the Yugoslav frontier were the result of "Franco-British intrigues."

[Yugoslav military quarters, according to a dispatch from Ljubljana, estimated that Italy now has more than 300,000 men massed north of Fiume in the border region.]

Apprehension was widespread among Italians, but there was nothing to indicate any belligerent intention. In political circles it was said that Yugoslavia's alarm at reports of Italian troop concentrations was needless, but confirmation of the reports was impossible to obtain.

No Comment on Incidents.

Neither was any authoritative comment available on reports of two Yugoslav-Italian frontier incidents, in which an Italian soldier was reported killed and an Italian observation plane shot down. Both were said to have occurred last week.

Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, who usually is the mouthpiece for Premier Mussolini, accused the French particularly of creating "the specter of an Italian menace" in the Balkans.

The Italian feeling generally was summed up by Il Popolo di Roma, which said that, if the Allied naval concentration in the Mediterranean was intended as intimidation toward Italy, "the Allies have committed a psychological and political error."

Tension in Balkans Grows.

BUDAPEST, May 6 (A. P.).—The extension of the war to southeastern Europe seemed more imminent today than at any time since the first days of the conflict.

Contributing to the belief of many diplomats that a crisis may be reached this week were the following developments, officially unconfirmed in some cases but receiving general credence just the same:

1. Turkish troops were reported massing along the Greek and Bulgarian frontiers.

2. German troop concentrations were noted near the Yugoslav and Hungarian frontiers, as well as the shipment of Nazi tanks and war materials into eastern Slovakia, a protectorate of Germany.

3. Italian military activity near the Yugoslav frontier and the Dodecanese Islands.

4. The appearance of Russian reenforcements in former Poland near the borders of Ruthenia, which Hungary obtained as a result of the final dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia.

[Authoritative Soviet news sources denied today reports that Russia had massed divisions opposite Ruthenia.]

5. The publication of German reports that the Allies are about to land troops in Salonika, Greece.

6. The presence in the Ægean Sea of units of an Allied battle fleet, now based at Alexandria.

[In London, official British sources said that there is "absolutely no truth" to reports that the British intend to march troops through Greece.]

7. A new spy scare in Hungary, resulting in the arrest of 200 persons suspected of working for both France and Russia.

8. In Egypt, where the Suez Canal is being swept constantly for possible mines, Premier Aly Maher Pasha signed orders cancelling ordinary visas, requiring persons seeking to enter or leave the country to obtain special permits from the Ministry of Interior and calling on all civilians to declare any fire arms or explosives in their possession.

Two border incidents involving Italian and Yugoslav forces—both a week ago—and the heavy reinforcement of Italian troops on the Yugoslav frontier were reported in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia. Yugoslav military quarters estimated that Italy now has more than 300,000 men massed north of Fiume.

One Italian soldier was killed and three seriously wounded when a Fascist troops patrol attempted to disarm a Yugoslav sergeant on Yugoslav territory near Fiume in one border incident, Yugoslavs asserted. The Italians told a mixed commission, which placed responsibility on them, that they thought the sergeant was on Italian soil.

In the second reported incident, Yugoslav anti-aircraft batteries shot down an Italian observation plane at Bakar, near Fiume. Yugoslavs fished out the plane and charged that its pilot, who drowned, had been photographing defense works.

Diplomats Pessimistic

Uneasiness was manifest throughout the southeastern capitals, in a state of high tension for weeks past, and many diplomats, including United States officials, sent pessimistic reports to their governments.

Belgrade verged on a panic for a short time yesterday following a radio announcement that removal of civilians from the city had been recommended by the Government. Fears were allayed, however, when it was explained that the announcement was a misleading rebroadcast of a lecture on air-raid precautions.

Tug For Bulgaria's Aid

Germany and Britain, meanwhile, were reported engaged in a diplomatic struggle to obtain assurances of Bulgarian support in event of troube in the southeast.

Both Dr. Karl Clodius, German economic expert, and Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to Turkey, conferred with Government officials in Sofia. The nature of Clodius' proposals was unknown, but Sir Hughe was understood to have promised a large British loan and a corridor to the Aegean Sea, which Bulgaria long has wanted.

Britain's Purpose

The British plan was reported to include a deal involving Greece and Turkey, already on close terms, whereby Greece would cede Bulgaria the Aegean corridor in return for certain concessions.

Britain's purpose in wooing Bulgaria, Sofia sources said, was to insure a land route for troops to Rumania should the necessity arise.

The reports of Turkish troop concentrations along the Greek and Bulgarian frontiers received official cognizance in Sofia, where the opinion was expressed that the action was "in accordance with British desires and connected with England's aims in the Mediterranean."

The presence of Turkish forces near the Bulgarian border was said to be in apparent disregard of a mutual agreement between the two countries. Bulgarian officials said they had given Turkey no cause for such action.

The circulation of reports, attributed to German sources, that the Allies were planning to land troops at Salonika coincided with the official opening of a strategic new railway running northward from that Aegean port through the Struma river valley. Salonika offers the most direct gateway for the entrance of Allied troops if war comes to the Balkans, and the new railway would be a valuable aid in their movement.

Aid of Bulgars Sought.

Meanwhile today Germany and Britain were reported engaged in a diplomatic struggle to obtain assurances of Bulgarian support in the event of trouble in the southeast.

Great Britain's purpose in wooing Bulgaria, Sofia spokesmen said, was to insure a land route for troops to Rumania should the necessity arise.

Reports of the appearance of Russian reinforcements along the Ruthenian frontier were regarded as a hopeful sign by some Budapest observers, who interpreted this development as a sign of Moscow's determination to forestall any Italo-German plan to divide the Balkans.

The Russian troops massed opposite Ruthenia were said to consist of from six to eight motorized divisions—an aggregate of from 100,000 to 150,000 men, including many recently returned from the Finnish campaign.

Information furnished by the German Gestapo was said to have led to the spy roundup in Hungary, which Government spokesmen described as having smashed a huge organization engaged in espionage and propaganda activities. Most of the arrests took place at Kassa, Ungvar and Munkacs, in the former Czecho-Slovak regions annexed by Hungary. Some of those arrested were said to have possessed plans of the Arpad Defense Line, which Hungary recently built along her Ruthenian frontier facing Russian-occupied Poland.

Some observers saw the arrests as an indication of mutual distrust between Moscow and Berlin.

Rumania Imposes Censorship

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 6 (AP)—Rumania tonight imposed censorship on foreign newspaper correspondents and mobilized her entire military and civilian defense organization for complete air-raid exercises.

The censorship regulations were announced as an Italian was reported killed and an Italian airplane reported shot down in two week-old incidents.

Propaganda Minister Constantin Giurescu said that henceforth all "important or sensational news" must be submitted to the Rumanian Ministry for verification before being dispatched.

Penalties for sending news the government deems inexact will range up to a seven-year jail term, although up to the present expulsion has been the severest penalty ever imposed upon foreign correspondents in Rumania.

The Italian-Yugoslav border incidents were reported from Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, where it was said one Italian soldier was killed and three wounded when Fascist patrols tried to disarm a Yugoslav sergeant on his own territory. A mixed commission already has placed responsibility on the Italians, who said they thought they were on Italian ground.

In the other incident, at Bakar, near Fiume, Yugoslavs shot down an Italian plane. They declared the pilot, who was killed, had been photographing Yugoslav defense works.

Yugoslav military quarters were responsible for the estimate that Italy had concentrated 300,000 troops on the frontier north of Fiume.

Brig. Gen. Josef Tippelskirch, described as chief of the German military intelligence service who toured Denmark and Norway just before the Nazis launched their Scandinavian Blitzkrieg, ended a tour of the Balkans.

ADD BUDAPEST

THE GREEKS DENY REPORTS OF A SECRET AGREEMENT TO LET BRITAIN AND FRANCE, VOTH OF WHOM HAVE GUARANTEED HER INDEPENDENCE, TO USE THE PORT, BUT FOREIGN OBSERVERS DOUBT THAT GREECE WOULD OFFER ANY OBJECTIONS IF WAR COMES.

THERE WAS NO INDICATION THAT THE GREEK GOVERNMENT BELIEVED THAT AN ALLIED LANDING AT SALONIKA WAS IMMINENT, AND FISHERMEN RETURNING TO THE PORT SAID THEY HAD SEEN NO SIGNS OF ANY PREPARATIONS FOR SUCH A MOVE.

THE FISHERMEN DID, HOWEVER, REPORT THE PRESENCE OF ADDITIONAL ALLIED NAVAL UNITS IN THE AEGEAN SEA, WHERE BRITISH VESSELS HAVE BEEN ON PATROL SINCE THE START OF THE WAR.

THE SPY HUNT WAS ACCOMPANIED BY NEW EXPRESSIONS OF ILL-FEELING BETWEEN HUNGARY AND SLOVAKIA. IN A RADIOBROADCAST, HUNGARIAN FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT ISTVAN CSAKY REITERATED A WARNING THAT HIS GOVERNMENT'S PATIENCE OVER THE ALLEGED MISTREATMENT OF THE HUNGARIAN MINORITY IN SLOVAKIA WAS NEARING AN END.

HE HINTED AGAIN THAT SHOULD HUNGARY ACT AGAINST SLOVAKIA, GERMAN FRIENDSHIP FOR HUNGARY WOULD PROVE STRONGER THAN HER CONCERN FOR HER PROTECTORATE.

MEANTIME SLOVAK PLANES DROPPED PAMPHLETS OVER RUTHENIA READING: "SLOVAKS! THE DAY OF LIBERATION IS NEAR; GET READY. HITLER IS WITH US. THE GLORIOUS SLOVAK ARMY WILL DELIVER YOU FROM THE MAGYAR (HUNGARIAN) YOKE."

IN BLEGRADE, THE YUGOSLAV GOVERNMENT REJECTED A GERMAN REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO SEND 10,000 "CONVALESCENTS" INTO THE COUNTRY, BUT OFFERED TO TAKE THAT MANY SICK CHILDREN UNDER 15 YEARS OF AGE.

2D 35,000-TON SHIP JOINS ITALY'S NAVY

Mussolini's Fleet Reinforced As Gayda Denounces Allied "Intrigue"

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 6—Italy today added the second of four new 35,000-ton battleships to her fleet and editorial spokesmen admitted "precautionary" measures had been taken on the Yugoslav border amid reports of warship and troop movements by the Allies.

Comments in the Italian press on the British-French fleet reinforcements in the Mediterranean coincided with delivery to the Italian navy of the battleship Littorio.

Only last week Italian naval authorities announced the first of the four big battleships, the Vittorio Veneto, had been put into active service. The other two new battleships, the Roma and the Impero, are reported still under construction.

Britain's Hood Larger

Great Britain, according to the authoritative naval guide, "Jane's Fighting Ships," has only one warship bigger than the new 35,000-ton battleships—the 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood. However, five 35,000-ton British battleships are reported undergoing trials and "Jane's" says four 40,000-ton British dreadnaughts are under construction.

The French navy has no battleships at present to equal the 35,000-ton Italian ships but four new 35,000-ton battleships are due to be completed this year or in 1941.

"Jane's" says the Italians have only four other battleships of the Cavour class, displacing 23,622 tons, and two of these were slated for reconstruction last year.

Blames Allied Intrigue

The reinforcement to Italy's navy came as Virginio Gayda, Premier Mussolini's mouthpiece, blamed "French and British intrigues" in the Balkans for Italian "precautionary measures" along the Yugoslav border.

While Mussolini and Crown Prince Umberto, in his capacity as commander of half the Italian army, conferred on military problems, Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, accused the French in particular of creating "the specter of an Italian menace" in the Balkan states.

"They pretend to be unaware," said Gayda, "that the few precautionary measures taken by the Italians in the territory adjacent to the Balkans are the necessary consequence of French and British intrigues carried out for some time in these territories."

300,000 Troops Massed

Yugoslav military quarters estimated over 300,000 Italian troops were massed north of Fiume, near the border, according to a dispatch from Ljubljana.

While apprehension over relations with Yugoslavia was widespread among Italians, there was no sign that either country had any belligerent aim.

It was not possible to obtain confirmation of the reported Italian troop concentrations.

Nor would anyone in authority comment on reports that in two incidents along the Yugoslav-Italian border last week an Italian soldier was killed and an Italian observation plane shot down.

Says Allies Erred

Il Popolo di Roma expressed the general Italian feeling on the Allied fleet movements in commenting that, if the naval concentration is intended to intimidate Italy, "the Allies have committed a psychological and political error."

Italians showed resentment in talking privately of the Allied move. Some said that, while it might have been difficult to make them fight on the side of Germany when the war broke out last September, that feeling has changed and the majority now would obey any call to arms.

This was explained as at least partly a reaction to German successes so far, notably in Norway.

Other developments today in the Balkans included:

King Boris of Bulgaria reviewed large units of his army in Sofia.

Brigadier General Josef Tippelskirch, described as chief of the German Military Intelligence Service who toured Denmark and Norway just before the Nazis launched their Scandinavian Blitzkreig, ended a tour of the Balkans. In Bucharest and Sofia he conferred with German military attaches and diplomats, as well as with Rumanian and Bulgarian military authorities.

Soviet Russia denied that she has massed six or eight motorized divisions on the Hungarian frontier.

Hungarian Premier Count Pal Teleki and Foreign Minister Count Stephen Csaky returned to Budapest inspecting the Lispe oil fields in southwestern Hungary near the Yugoslav frontier, which are being exploited by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Bucharest today mobilized all military and civilian defense and rescue organizations for the first full-dress, air-raid exercises held in the Rumanian capital since shortly after the outbreak of the European war.

ENVOY OF BRITAIN ON WAY TO ROME

Loraine Flying Back to Post After Leave.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, is returning to his post from leave in England and is due to arrive in Rome tonight, it was announced today.

ROME, May 6 (A. P.).—An attempted German invasion of England in the near future is not only possible but highly probable, in the opinion of Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Il Telegrafo, the Leghorn newspaper owned by the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano.

In his weekly broadcast to Italy's armed forces, Signor Ansaldo declared yesterday:

"Everything causes one to presume that this war will very soon see a great effort on the part of Germany to invade England in force. Never were the conditions in which the present war is being conducted more favorable to the attackers, never were technical resources available to the enemy on the Continent so favorable. The blow planned by Napoleon will certainly be attempted again."

ENVOY OF FRANCE TALKS WITH POPE

Italian Crown Prince Also Received by Pontiff.

VATICAN CITY, May 6 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII received the French Ambassador to the Holy See, Francois Charles-Roux, in a private audience today.

Earlier in the day, he received Italy's Crown Prince Humbert and the Crown Princess Marie Jose.

Leaving the Vatican for his fourth ceremonial trip into Rome since his coronation, the Pope voiced anew yesterday his hope for the early return of peace and prayed that Italy might be spared the horrors of war.

Speaking in the Church of St. Mary-Over-Minerva, the Pope earnestly emphasized the need for prayer now, "while whirlwinds unleashed by human passions, which overwhelm noble nations in a fearful manner, threaten beyond the Alps and at Italy's frontiers."

He offered his own supplication to Christ for divine protection of "this people and this land beloved by You, saved by the blood of Your apostles and crowned by the work of so many martyrs, and consecrated by the work of so many of Your vicars."

The Pope spoke after attending a pontifical mass closing a series of celebrations in honor of St. Catherine of Sienna, whose relics repose in the church.

39 POLISH PRIESTS REPORTED SLAIN

Nazis Accused in Statement Quoting Cardinal Hlond.

VATICAN CITY, May 6 (A. P.).—German persecution of Polish Catholics was charged anew today by the Polish embassy to the Vatican in a purported summary of a report to Pope Pius XII by Cardinal Hlond, Primate of Poland.

The embassy's statement alleged that Germany was trying to eradicate Catholicism in the Nazi-held parts of Poland and attempting to destroy the Polish people by deportation, shooting and financial ruin, particularly the leading classes.

[Informed spokesmen in Berlin have declared that church activities in areas recently occupied by Germany, particularly in the regions of Poland under German control, continue without interruption and are little affected by political developments.]

The statement said that German-speaking families from the Italian Tyrol were being sent to Poland in a plan to Germanize it.

The embassy quoted Cardinal Hlond as reporting the death of thirty-nine priests by shooting or torture in prison. In the diocese of Chelmo, it said, he reported that the cathedral had been converted into a garage, the bishop's palace into a hotel and its chapel into a ballroom.

All but twenty of 650 priests have been deported or imprisoned while nine have been shot and two have died in prison, it added, alleging that most churches have been reported closed, "Catholic life almost entirely extinguished" and Catholic societies disbanded.

The embassy said that the Cardinal had reported half the priests of the diocese of Lodz deported or imprisoned and ten, including a bishop, tortured in a concentration camp. It also mentioned other dioceses where, it said, the Cardinal reported similar conditions. This was the second of such reports to be issued.

R. A. F. COMMANDS ARE REORGANIZED

Expert Personnel Shifted to Speed Preparedness.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today a reorganization of commands and the strengthening of expert personnel to speed up the training of pilots and manufacture of planes.

The training reorganization sets up a flying training command under Air Vice-Marshal L. A. Pattinson and a new technical training command for maintenance and ground crew personnel under Air Vice-Marshal W. L. Welsh.

It eliminates the separate reserve command formed last February to relieve pressure on the training command caused by the Royal Air Force expansion program.

The Ministry also announced the appointment of Brig.-Gen. H. A. Jones, who served on Earl Haig's staff during the world war, as "controller of light alloys" under the program to strengthen the control of materials required for the manufacture of aircraft.

REICH CLAIMS 2 VICTORIES

London Denies Machines Were Shot Down—Swedes Intern a German Seaplane

LONDON, May 6 (AP)—Reuters, British news agency, today estimated that Britain had lost forty-eight aircraft on all fronts in the last four weeks and Germany 138 "for certain" in the same period.

Reuters' estimate said that in addition ninety-seven German planes were "probably completely destroyed or put out of action for some time." The agency said that machines destroyed on the ground or at sea during British raids on German air bases in Norway had not been included in the totals.

Reuters said its figures were based on Air Ministry and Admiralty announcements, authoritative reports in the Norwegian and neutral press and British news agency and newspaper dispatches.

The Air Ministry announced that two Sunderland flying boats had been damaged by German machine-gun fire while anchored off Norway yesterday, but denied Germany's claim that two Blenheim bombers also had been shot down off the Netherlands.

DUTCH REQUIRE VISAS

Otherwise Holland Will Not Admit Belgians.

THE HAGUE, May 6 (A. P.).—The Netherlands Government announced today that, from next Friday, Belgians would be required to have visas to enter Holland.

A similar measure affecting Dutch subjects entering Belgium is scheduled to go into effect on the same day.

AMSTERDAM, May 6 (A. P.).—Military officials arrested C. Kloosterboer, a member of the municipal council of the village of St. Pancras, today on suspicion that he had given information to Germany regarding ship sailings. His son already is under arrest on a charge of espionage.

Says Nazis Are Out To Win the Peace

BERLIN, May 6 (A. P.).—The world's goods are "trophies awarded only to the strongest," the Minister of Education, Bernhard Rust, declared today in an address to German youth.

He recalled the Napoleonic conquest and the world war Treaty of Versailles and said that in the present conflict, "we not only want to win the war but also the peace."

With victory, he said, "the most fruitful period of German labor in history shall begin."

BRITISH AIR HERO MISSING

Kenneth Doran Unheard From Since Raid Week Ago

London, May 6 (AP)—Kenneth Doran, acting squadron leader, first British air hero of the war, was reported today to have been missing since a daylight raid on Stavanger, Norway, April 30.

Doran led a raid on German warships at Kiel September 4, winning the Distinguished Flying Cross and promotion to acting squadron leader.

RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF

R. A. F. Planes Battle Nazis Near England.

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—A German air raid off the southeast coast of England was believed beaten off by Royal Air Force fighters today.

Coastal residents heard the drone of engines above low-hanging clouds, with bursts of machine-gun fire and a number of explosions.

A similar incident in the same vicinity was reported earlier in the day, when a German raider off the coast of Essex drew intense anti-aircraft fire for ten minutes. Royal Air Force planes quickly took to the air to pursue the invader.

British Face Cut In Butter Ration

LONDON, May 6 (A. P.).—Because of the stoppage of Danish supplies, Britons were told today by Lord Woolton, the Food Minister, to prepare for the reduction at an early date of the butter ration from eight to four ounces each week.

Butter was first rationed at four ounces a week beginning on January 8, but the amount was increased to eight ounces a week on March 25.

Lord Woolton warned that the sugar ration of twelve ounces a week may also be reduced.

Famous Norse Skier Is Killed in Battle

OSLO, May 6 (A. P.).—The famous Norwegian skier, Einar Grottumsbraten, was killed in fighting north of Oslo, it was reported today.

He was a member of a ski patrol which was surprised by a German patrol.

All of the other members of the Norwegian patrol were said to have escaped.

TRACES NORSE GOLD

Swedish Paper Reports It Now Safe in England.

STOCKHOLM, May 6 (A. P.).—A correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen reported today that Norway's gold reserve fund of 600,000,000 krona ($122,000,000) had been sent to England for safekeeping after being transported from place to place by the fleeing Norwegian Government.

The gold funds were dispatched secretly aboard a British troopship, the newspaper said.

When the Government fled Oslo on April 9 in the face of the German invasion, one of the few things it was reported to have taken along was the nation's gold reserve.

Belgium to Restore Service

BRUSSELS, May 6 (AP).—Mail and passenger ship service across the English Channel will be resumed between Ostend, Belgium, and Folkestone, England, next Wednesday, after being suspended last week because of mine laying by German airplanes, Belgian authorities announced today.

SWISS SEIZE WOMAN

Accuse Her of Spying for German Agents.

BERNE, May 6 (A. P.).—Swiss military authorities announced today that they had arrested and were holding for trial an unnamed Swiss woman suspected of attempting to obtain information on Switzerland's defenses for German agents.

The announcement also revealed belatedly that a non-commissioned officer of the Swiss Army had been sentenced to five years' imprisonment last November for giving information to German quarters about Switzerland's northeastern fortifications.

These defenses were completed only recently to form the last link in the formidable Winkelried Line running from the French border south to Basle to the junction of the Italian, Austrian frontiers.

Last month the Swiss authorities announced that they had uncovered a Swiss organization engaged in obtaining German military information for the British.

Espionage In Soviet Officially Described

Russians Terrorized Or Tricked By Foreign Agents, War Commissariat Booklet Says

Moscow, May 6 (AP)—The War Commissariat today issued a booklet describing the activities and apprehension of spies in the U. S. S. R. who it alleged were British, Polish and Japanese agents.

The booklet charged that the alleged spies terrorized or tricked Russians into revealing information. Several foreign women agents, the booklet said, had married Russian military and political officials to facilitate their espionage activities.

The War Commissariat publication said other alleged spies regularly visited Russia in parties organized by Intourist (official tourist agency) in order to keep in contact with their accomplices.

CRAIG NEARLY UNDER WATER

Only Freighter's Bow In Sight Now, Fishermen Report

Halifax, N. S., May 6 (AP)—Fishermen reported today that only the bow of the 3,683-ton British freighter Craig remained above water after she went aground on Flint Ledge, twenty-five miles east of Halifax harbor, in a heavy fog Saturday night. The fishermen said the Craig's crew was safe on nearby Egg Island, and that one man was injured.

The Craig last month was the center of a mysterious scare. On April 15, when approximately 800 miles northeast of New York, she sent out an SOS saying "sub coming close." An hour later a Canadian radio station, without further explanation, announced: "Distress all cleared up."

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

BRITAIN HAS DENIED THE NAZI CLAIM THAT GERMAN AIRPLANES SUNK AN ENGLISH BATTLESHIP AND A HEAVY CRUISER IN MASSED ATTACKS OFF THE NORWEGIAN COAST.

WHETHER THESE WARSHIPS WERE SENT TO THE BOTTOM IS OF SMALL CONSEQUENCE COMPARED WITH THE INTIMATION WHICH SURROUNDS THE CLAIM -- THAT THE SUPERIORITY OF THE AIR OVER THE SEA HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED AND THAT THE GERMAN AIRFORCE IS THE MASTER OF THE ALLIED NAVIES.

CLAIMS AND COUNTER-CLAIMS OVER THE RELATIVE MERITS OF THESE TWO FIGHTING ARMS WILL INCREASE FOR PROPAGANDA PURPOSES, AND WE SHALL HAVE TO WATCH IT IF WE ARE TO KEEP OUR PERSPECTIVE.

IT IS NATURAL THAT THIS SITUATION SHOULD EXIST, FOR HERR HITLER'S MIGHTY AIRFORCE IS THAT MILITARY BRANCH UPON WHICH HE IS DEPENDING TO WIN THE WAR. THE ALLIES ARE PLACING CHIEF CONFIDENCE IN THEIR SURFACE FLEETS.

HOWEVER, NAVAL EXPERTS TELL US THAT THERE HAS BEEN NO DEMONSTRATION OF GENERAL AIR SUPERIORITY OVER THE SEA.

AIRPLANES HAVE TRIUMPHED OVER WARSHIPS IN INDIVIDUAL INSTANCES, AND VICE VERSA. BUT THE SINKING OF ONE WARSHIP OR TEN, DOESN'T PROVE GENERAL SUPERIORITY ANY MORE THAN THE DESTRUCTION OF FIFTY FIGHTING PLANES WOULD PROVE THE GENERAL INFERIORITY OF AN AIR FLEET.

THE QUESTION OF SUPREMACY IS SOMETHING TO BE DETERMINED, AND THE OUTCOME OF THE WAR LIKELY WILL DEPEND ON THIS. IF HITLER CAN SMASH THE ALLIED FLEET HE WILL WIN THE WAR. IF HE CAN'T, THE BLOCKADE WILL IN THE LONG RUN GIVE HIM A NIGHTMARISH TIME. AND WE MUSTN'T FORGET THAT THE INCREASINGLY STRONG ALLIED AIRFLEETS WILL BE SUPPORTING THEIR SURFACE SHIPS.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES STARTED OUT THIS WAR WITH A MIGHTY COMMAND OF THE SEAS AND A SUPERIORITY IN RESOURCES, BOTH FINANCIAL AND MATERIAL, WHICH THEY FELT WOULD WIN THEM THE WAR. THEY PROBABLY WERE JUSTIFIED IN THEIR FAITH, AND THIS DOMINATION OF THE OCEAN AND SUPERIORITY OF RESOURCES STILL EXISTS.

THE ALLIED TROUBLE THUS FAR HAS LAIN, NOT IN LACK OF RESOURCES, BUT IN LACK OF INITIATIVE IN PROSECUTION OF THE WAR, AS MANY OF THEIR OWN PEOPLE ARE NOW INSISTING. THEY HAVE ALLOWED THEMSELVES TO BE OUTSMARTED BY A MAN WHO IS EITHER ONE OF THE MASTER STRATEGISTS OF HISTORY OR ONE OF THE LUCKIEST OPPORTUNISTS WHO EVER LIVED.

AND IF THE CLAIM IS THAT HERR HITLER IS MERELY LUCKY, THEN THE ANSWER IS THAT LUCK WHICH HOLDS GOOD IN SO MANY INSTANCES AS HIS HAS, IS JUST AS GOOD AS MASTER STRATEGY.

MAY 1 1940

THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH HAVE HAD PLENTY OF TIME TO GET OVER THEIR UNDERESTIMATION OF THE NAZI DICTATOR. CLAIMS THAT HE IS UNSCRUPULOUS DON'T HELP THEM WIN THE WAR, BUT MUST BE DEALT WITH BY DEEDS RATHER THAN BY WORDS.

THE INDICATIONS ARE THAT THE ALLIES HAVE BEEN CLINGING TOO CLOSELY TO THEIR ORIGINAL STRATEGY FOR WINNING THE WAR -- STRANGULATION BY BLOCKADE WITH AS LITTLE EFFORT OUTSIDE THAT AS POSSIBLE. THE BLOCKADE UNDOUBTEDLY IS THEIR MOST POWERFUL WEAPON, BUT DEVELOPMENTS SHOW THAT IT MUST BE SUPPORTED BY OTHER ACTION.

IT IS GENERALLY AGREED THAT, HAD THE ALLIES STRUCK WITH ALL THEIR PREPARED FORCE WHEN HITLER FIRST INVADED NORWAY, THEY COULD HAVE EXPELLED THE GERMANS. A CONCERTED NAVAL AND AIR ATTACK ON TRONDHEIM MOST LIKELY WOULD HAVE TURNED THE TRICK. BUT THAT WOULD HAVE INVOLVED RISKING VALUABLE EQUIPMENT -- NAVAL AND AIR -- AND PERHAPS A HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE.

SO THE ALLIES CONTINUED THEIR CONSERVATISM AND LEFT THE GAMBLING TO THE WORLD'S SUPER-GAMBLER -- HERR HITLER.

BRITISH PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN AND HIS CABINET ARE EXPECTED TO COME UNDER FIRE IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TOMORROW TO ANSWER FOR THEIR CONDUCT OF RECENT OPERATIONS.

WHATEVER MAY BE DEVELOPED IN THE DEBATE, THE FACT REMAINS THAT UNDER THE BRITISH SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT THE PRIME MINISTER MUST ACCEPT FULL RESPONSIBILITY FOR ANY MISHAPS. THIS IS SO BECAUSE HE IS THE BIG BOSS OF THE CABINET. HIS DECISIONS ARE FINAL, SUBJECT TO CHALLENGE BY PARLIAMENT.

HE ISN'T OF COURSE A MILITARY EXPERT AND IT MIGHT BE UNFAIR TO CHARGE HIM WITH FAULTY MILITARY TACTICS. IT IS FAIR TO NOTE, HOWEVER, THAT HE IS CONSERVATIVE AND NOT ONLY A MAN OF VERY STRONG OPINIONS BUT DECIDEDLY STUBBORN WHEN ONCE HIS MIND IS MADE UP.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN PROBABLY WILL BE ADVISED TO MAKE SOME RADICAL CHANGES IN HIS OFFICIAL FAMILY, AND INITIATE A GREATER DEGREE OF FLEXIBILITY IN THE BRITISH PROGRAM OF DEPENDENCE ON ECONOMIC STRANGULATION BY BLOCKADE.

Sabotage Held Chief Peril to Panama Canal

Gen. Strong Asserts Steps Are Taken to Prevent It; Sea Defense 'Adequate'

WASHINGTON, May 6 (AP).—The Army's Assistant Chief of Staff declared today that the greatest danger to the Panama Canal—keystone of hemisphere defense——was in sabotage.

"Sabotage may take many forms," Brig. Gen. George V. Strong told the Society of American Military Engineers. "A vessel might be blown up in the locks; time bombs might be dropped in the locks; dams might be blown up; vital installations, such as control mechanisms or power sources, might be damaged or destroyed.

"But these possibilities have all been foreseen," he added, "and steps have been taken to minimize, or in some cases nullify, efforts along this line."

A new set of locks, which may be started this summer for completion in 1945 or 1946, would improve the national defense situation, he said.

At present, with double sets of locks, side by side, "it is quite possible that one lucky hit of a large bomb (from the air) or a heavy explosion in one lock chamber would be sufficient to put the Canal out of commission.

Gen. Strong described the canal's defenses against air attack as "adequate to meet and vanquish" an attacking naval force. He deemed the canal's mobile military force "adequate to meet any initial raids of a landing force.

With the canal reasonably safe, he said, the joint defense task of the Army and Navy is "to deny an aggressor the seizure and establishment of bases from which he can operate against us or against any other American republic, or against the canal."

Among other areas where an aggressor might wish to establish such a base, he named Newfoundland (from which air attacks could be made as far south as Washington) the Bahamas, Puerto Rico, Natal, Cuba, Jamaica, the western coast of Central America, and the west coast of Mexico.

Present wars in Europe and in Asia, he said, have shown that, in defending the American continent, "we must be prepared to outblitz the blitzkrieg."

PREMIER FEARS SHIFT OF ACTION TO NEW FRONTS

Warns of Possible Attacks on Britain in Defense of Norse Retreat.

IS BRANDED AS FAILURE

Opposition Demands Other Men at Helm at Start of Two-day Debate.

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain, declaring that Great Britain herself may soon face attack "in the most violent form," sought today to justify the British withdrawals from mid-Norway and announced that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, hereafter would supervise military operations from day to day.

In a turbulent House of Commons, which once forced the Prime Minister to sit down until order was restored, the Labor opposition leader, Clement R. Attlee, bitterly attacked Mr. Chamberlain's speech as merely "one of excuse and explanation," branded Mr. Chamberlain and his war Cabinet as failures and demanded "different people at the helm." He was supported in his attack by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, who assailed the Government's "ill-founded boasting."

"Time is not on our side!" declared Sir Archibald. "Hitler has seized the old gentleman by the beard! Economically, politically and to a lesser extent militarily, we have suffered a grave reverse."

Premier Bars Other Changes.

Mr. Churchill will give "guidance and direction" to the chiefs of staffs of the three fighting services, the Prime Minister announced. He will also retain his Admiralty post.

Aside from this, Mr. Chamberlain rejected any other immediate changes in the personnel of his Government, but said that changes "in the form of government" or functions of individuals" might be needed.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech in general was an anxious appeal for unity both in Parliament and among the people, in the face of dangers which, he said, the nation did not yet appreciate.

He said that the campaign was not yet finished in Norway, but he warned the country to remember: "There are other fronts which may at any moment blaze into a conflagration."

Not the Time for Quarrels.

"This is not the time for quarrels among ourselves," he said, dramatically. "In this debate we are giving hostages to fortune."

Military advisers, he added, had cautioned him against today's discussion, "but we could not accept this in a democratic country."

On the first day of a two-day debate on the Norwegian course, Major Attlee accused both Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill of "complacent and "overoptimistic" statements and opposed Mr. Churchill's new appointment as "against all good rules."

The people, Major Atlee declared, were not satisfied that the war was being waged "with sufficient energy, industry or results," and the men of leadership "showed everywhere they were too late."

"The Prime Minister talked about missing buses," shouted the Labor leader. "The country missed all the peace buses and caught the war bus."

Both 'Blind and Deaf.'

The Government, he said, must be blind and deaf" if it does not realize that there is great anxiety and dissatisfaction.

"We would win this war, but we want different people at the helm," he declared.

The Liberal leader, Sinclair, declared that there was nothing in the Norwegian campaign to shake the nation's confidence in the courage and the efficiency of the fighting forces or the availability of large resources.

However, said Sir Archibald, there is something that suggests "that more foresight and energy and stronger and more ruthless will to ... is required" of the Government.

To the Prime Minister's assertion that military chiefs had cautioned against this war debate, the Liberal firebrand shouted:

"Our debates must be absolutely free from any suggestion of military advisers.

"We must face the facts and not hide our heads in the sand.

"Casualties were not negligible. Loss of material was not negligible either. We lost warships of which our prospective supply is insufficient.

Diplomatic Position Weakened.

"We have lost all our supplies from Norway, Denmark, Sweden and all the Baltic countries.

"Diplomatically, our position is weakened in every country in the world. The complacent and ill-founded boastings of ministers contrast pitifully with the hard, swift blows of the German forces."

While an angry opposition shouted "you missed the bus," Mr. Chamberlain declared that he had tried to steer a middle course, looking ahead to the possibility of attack by vast and well equipped German armies "at a number of different points."

He said that "we shall give all the help to Norway we can," despite the Allied troop withdrawals from all but the far northern part of the country, but he said that he thought it was right to retreat from the Trondheim front when it became apparent that the plan to seize that city would not succeed.

"We want to be ready to meet the attack wherever it may come," he said.

The War as a Whole.

Speaking of the whole picture of the war ahead, he declared:

"I do not think the people of this country yet realize the extent or imminence of the threat which is impending against us."

Movement of an Allied battle fleet to Alexandria, he said, had quieted the situation in the Mediterranean and Near East.

Mr. Chamberlain insisted that the Government had been united in the recent events.

Again and again he warned of the danger of "being tempted into such dispersal of our forces as might suit the purpose of the enemy."

He sought to dismiss attacks on his remark of April 9 that "Hitler missed the bus" by saying that he made it before the Norwegian invasion. But one Opposition heckler shouted, "If Hitler missed the bus, you missed the boat!"

"Beware," cried Mr. Chamberlain, "of jitterings and divisions among ourselves. Presently we may be faced in the most violent form with attacks directed against this country."

Not a Second Gallipoli.

Mr. Chamberlain sought to justify Great Britain's failure in central Norway, which he declared was not another Gallipoli, with the declaration:

"I believe it was right to make the first attempt and equally right to withdraw the troops when it was clear that the plan would not succeed." He put the blame for the failure of the Trondheim offensive in south and central Norway on two things:

1. "Our inability to secure the airdromes from which we could operate fighters.

2. "The rapid arrival of German re-enforcements."

He confessed "we were helpless to prevent the German stroke," because Norway would not let British troops come in in advance of the German invasion.

In asserting that the Norwegian campaign could not be compared with the 1916 defeat at Gallipoli, he explained that only a single division of troops had been involved in central Norway.

He said also that British losses were "not really great in number" and declared that no considerable amount of stores were left behind.

He admitted, however, that the retreat had cost Great Britain some prestige and expressed regret at the reaction appearing in the Swedish press.

House Cheers at Opening.

Mr. Chamberlain rose in Commons amidst loud cheers at 3:48 P. M. (10:48 A. M. New York time) to begin his momentous statement on the Norwegian war before the nation's "grand court of inquest."

Mr. Churchill significantly sat at the side of his chief as the most critical debate of the war so far opened before the searchingly critical opposition.

Mr. Chamberlain paid tribute to the skill of the navy and army in effecting the Allied withdrawal from Namsos "in a single, short night without loss."

Fifty German bombers attacked the convoy the next day, Mr. Chamberlain disclosed, and he declared that the British should "count ourselves fortunate we did not lose more than one British and one French destroyer."

He said that "the convoy was out of range of our fighters and we had to depend only on the ships' anti-aircraft fire."

Southern Campaign Over.

The campaign in southern Norway is at an end, he said, adding that "whatever criticisms may be made about any one else, I am sure everybody will agree that the troops engaged in this campaign carried out their task with magnificent gallantry."

"In every respect of man for man, our forces showed themselves superior to their foe," the Prime Minister declared.

He admitted that the news of Great Britain's withdrawal from Norway "created a profound shock."

The opposition echoed:

"... And still is!"

Mr. Chamberlain declared that he did not purpose to give an account of the military operations, but to consider the criticisms of the action of the Government.

"Ministers, of course, must expect to be blamed for everything," he said amid heckling from opposition, which brought a warning from the speaker.

He contended that reports from Stockholm, "which may have been invented by the enemy," had aroused expectations which never were justified and "which were certainly never indorsed by any minister."

"I don't wish to extenuate anything," he said. "At the same time I hope we shall not exaggerate the extent of the check which we have received."

Calls Nazi Losses Heavier.

He said that German losses were far heavier "in warships, planes, transports and men" and added that "I am quite aware that the result is not to be measured merely in losses on the spot."

He told Great Britain that it must take into account the fact that "we have suffered a certain loss of prestige" and color has been added to "the false legend of German invincibility on land."

"We must accept that position for the moment, but we need not help our enemies by making it worse," he added.

KEYES ASSAILS 'INEPT' BRITISH NAVAL POLICY

Denounces Failure To Order Fleet To Attack Trondheim

Declares Storming Of Fjord Might Have Brought Victory

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, May 7—Opposition to the Chamberlain Cabinet united tonight behind the challenging leadership of a national naval hero who shook the British Conservative citadel to its foundations by blaming the Government's "shocking eneptitude" for the admitted failure of the Norwegian venture.

Sir Roger John Brownlow Keyes, admiral of the fleet and a National Conservative (Government) member of Parliament, led the assault with the declaration that the Admiralty rebuffed his plan to force Trondheim fjord with sea power—an action which he said might have brought land and sea triumphs over Germany instead of defeat and withdrawal.

Caps First Day Of Debate

His declaration tonight capped the first momentous and stormy day of a two-day House of Commons debate on the Norwegian affair.

Sir Roger, his uniform glistening with the medals he won in the World War, made his attack on the Cabinet only a few hours after Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had announced new powers for Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in an effort to save the government.

Only the stocky Churchill figure and the popular magic of the Churchill name are believed to remain between the Chamberlain Cabinet and disaster.

The First Lord, on whose shoulders the Prime Minister unequivocally placed the burden of henceforth personally directing grand strategy on land, sea and in the air, is to reply tomorrow to the government critics.

Will Need All His Powers

He will need all his powers of oratory; for when the House rose tonight after seven and one-half hours of fiery debate, the men who have ruled Britain under Chamberlain since May 28, 1937, saw their outer defense crumbling.

Chamberlain's hour-long statement, frankly admitting failure in central Norway and warning of a possible German attack on Britain herself; and War Secretary Oliver Stanley's rambling explanation of an expedition whose history the average Briton already knows too well were overshadowed by opposition attacks from many directions.

Blames Norwegian "Treachery"

Sir Archibald Southby, a Conservative, replied that it was not British incompetence but "the treachery of Norwegian officials" which brought about the defeat. He said the opposition attacks would "give great satisfaction in Berlin and would hearten the German Government."

Arthur Greenwood pressed home the Labor attack by declaring:

"Wars are not won by masterly withdrawals. . . . We have had to creep back to our lairs."

Looking straight at the Government's array of Ministers, Greenwood declared "we have lost the military initiative in this war and we have certainly not had a diplomatic offensive since the war broke out."

His reference to diplomacy was the first attack on Lord Halifax's usually sacrosant department during the debate.

"By an unfortunate series of incidents in Norway we have forfeited the confidence of neutral states in Europe," Greenwood concluded.

Bolts To Opposition

Earl Winterton, hitherto sturdy Conservative, went over to the opposition camp when he called for an inquiry into the Norwegian campaign.

"Those of us who were at Gallipoli greatly regret to this day that some ministers were not impeached and some high generals court-martialed for what occurred then," he said.

He called for a committee or commission with power to examine military and civilian officials "from the highest to the lowest to discover the cause of the setback" in Norway.

Lieut. Col. Leopold Stennett-Amery, rebel Conservative who once was First Lord of the Admiralty, added

---

He said that Great Britain had received most urgent appeals from the Norwegians for an attack on Trondheim "at all costs," for it was a "place essential for the Government and the King."

The Prime Minister lauded France for showing "remarkable steadiness" and said that in Great Britain the only effect of "the reverse has been to stiffen our determination."

Regrets Swedish Reaction.

Turkey remained "imperturbable," Egypt has strengthened her defenses and the "position has been strengthened by the reversion to normal of our fleet distribution in the Mediterranean," he said.

"Reaction has been more serious in Sweden than anywhere else," he declared, expressing regret concerning certain comments "of a polemical character" in the Swedish press because, "although they may express Swedish disappointment," they do not help Sweden or the Allies.

The Prime Minister said that he had heard no criticism against the Allies having sent a force to Narvik and he assumed that "our decision in that respect, at any rate, was generally approved."

"I am not going to pretend that in those first anxious days we foresaw everything that was going to happen," he admitted in answer to his own question, "why did we attempt the expedition to Trondheim?"

He admitted also that "we did realize the expedition, if we undertook it, would be full of risks," because air base facilities there were known to be inadequate.

Norse Pressure Revealed.

"On the other hand, we had to consider the effect on Norwegian Government forces and the people if we made no attempt to hold central Norway," he went on.

"If we refused to answer the call, we should have justified the reproach that our only object in Scandinavia was the iron ore and that we cared nothing for the freedom of the small nations.

"It had been made clear to us that, unless we were ready to assist in the only way which the Norwegians themselves felt to be effective—an attack on Trondheim—the Norwegians were not likely to have been able to continue their resistance and the whole country would have fallen at once into German hands."

He said that opinions differed on whether Great Britain should have made a direct attack on Trondheim and since the operation was not attempted, "it will never be possible to decide the question."

"I can say now that that idea was constantly before us," he revealed, adding that plans for a direct attack on Trondheim with forces at Namsos and Andalsnes "were prepared and carefully considered."

Couldn't Prevent Nazi Stroke.

For a time, he said, it seemed as if capture of Trondheim might be effected by forces "which had been landed elsewhere," but the advance of the Germans was not sufficiently held up by demolitions.

Operations of this kind were "necessarily complicated," he explained, and needed considerable time for thorough preparation, if success was to be assured.

Answering criticism that the Allied expedition gathered to help Finland should have been maintained to forestall German attack, he said "this argument is founded on a complete misconception."

"Whatever forces we had at our disposal, we could not have forestalled the Germans, unless the Norwegians had invited or allowed us to come in," he declared to the accompaniment of ringing cheers.

"Consequently we were helpless to prevent the German stroke."

Mr. Chamberlain said that when the Finnish campaign was given up, "it was decided that there was no need to keep this large force in this country and, accordingly, it was dispatched to France," whence the troops could be transported to Norway as readily as from England.

The rate of dispatch of troops to Norway was governed by the speed with which they could be landed "at those very few and inadequate ports" to which the British had access, he declared.

Ships for Finland Dispersed.

Ships which had been gathered to transport an Allied Expeditionary Force to Finland had been dispersed, Mr. Chamberlain said, when it became "unjustifiable" to keep them waiting for an expedition "which might never have come off." He said that the waiting ships were needed elsewhere.

Mr. Chamberlain said he thought that the implications of the Norwegian campaign "have been seriously exaggerated" and declared that he retained "complete confidence in our ultimate victory."

"I do not think the people of this country yet realize the extent or imminence of the threat which is impending against us," he said, cautioning the House not to form any hasty opinions.

It is obvious that the Germans have paid a heavy price for success, Mr. Chamberlain declared, but he warned that "it is too early to say on which side the balance will finally incline."

Campaign Not Yet Over.

"The campaign is not yet finished," he said. "Although we shall give all help to Norway that we can and as soon as we can, we must not forget that there are other fronts which may at any moment blaze into a conflagration."

Germany, "with her vast and well equipped armies, can at any moment attack" at a number of different points and "we want to be ready to meet that attack wherever it may come," he said.

After remarking that "any minister who shows any signs of confidence is always called complacent," he said: "I try to steer a middle course."

At this point opposition members again raised the cry of "missed the bus!"

Mr. Chamberlain said that the British had "learned many useful lessons" from Norway and declared that there was no truth to charges of disagreement in the Cabinet.

Mr. Chamberlain announced that Mr. Churchill "will have special responsibility" for the supervision of military operations day by day and answered "yes" to a question by David Lloyd George, world war Premier, as to whether the First Lord of the Admiralty would retain his post.

Mr. Churchill's appointment assured "that when policies are decided upon, they will be followed up with promptless and energy," Mr. Chamberlain said, adding that he relied on Mr. Churchill to "let me know" if the burden becomes too heavy.

Mr. Churchill had suggested that it would help him as head of the Cabinet Military Co-ordination Committee if he had close contact with chiefs of staff.

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that under Mr. Churchill will be "a small personal staff under Major-Gen. Ismay" and that other "changes in the form of government or the functions of individuals might be necessary."

Mr. Chamberlain said that Great Britain was doing "all we can to overtake the start Germany obtained during her long years of preparations." The nation, he added needs "the whole-hearted co-operation of members of all parties," as well as "the whole-hearted cooperation of employers and workers."

He appealed to the House to put "all our strength into this work, until we ourselves are able to deliver our blows where and when we will."

Attlee Opens Attack.

When Mr. Chamberlain had concluded, Major Attlee opened the Labor attack, declaring that "young boys without training had been sent to Norway" and that experienced, older men should have been sent.

He asserted that it was unbelievable that Germany's elaborate preparations should have gone on "for many months" unknown to the British intelligence service.

"It was vital for us to secure air bases," he said. "The Government could not have realized, even after the lesson of Poland and Finland, the importance of the air weapon or the vital importance of defenses against attacks from the air."

He described the withdrawal from Norway as "inevitable" and said "this does not alter the fact that the operation in southern Norway has been a failure."

Opposing wider power for Mr. Churchill, he declared no man in charge of major strategy should also be in command of a division.

'In the Hands of Failures.'

The Labor leader complained that in the Norwegian campaign the press and radio had led to belief that "everything was going wonderfully well" and that "because of great expectations there is great disappointment."

"We will win the war, but we cannot afford to leave our destinies in the hands of failures," Major Attlee shouted.

Major Attlee told the House that the people were saying that those responsible for the conduct of affairs "are men who have had an almost uninterrupted career of failure."

"Norway follows Czecho-Slovakia and Poland," he asserted. "Everywhere the story is too late."

This statement brought thunderous opposition cheers.

Major Attlee was followed by Sinclair.

Sees Destruction at Narvik.

Sir Archibald declared that criticism should be leveled not at the Norwegian withdrawal but on "why we ever got ourselves into a position in which we had to accept defeat in Norway." He warned the House that "when Narvik is taken," it will be found that the Germans have destroyed everything there.

Reminding Commons that "iron ore is the weakest point in the German armies," he said that British action should have been taken months ago and not until winter had nearly passed, when "ministers screwed themselves up to action."

The French sent their Alpine chasseurs, their best troops, Sinclair said, while Great Britain sent territorials who "did not even have snowshoes." The result, Sinclair continued, "makes one wonder whether the Finnish force really did exist on a scale of 100,000 men."

Sir Archibald said he was told of one transport which sailed with "no arms."

"Only three of her lifeboats could be swung outboard," he added.

Sinclair said he was informed that one place in Norway the British landed two anti-aircraft guns that were "utterly useless."

Many members left for tea when Sir Archibald finished.

Admiral Condemns Method.

The next speaker was Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, retired, who commanded the operations against Zeebrugge and Ostend in the last year of the world war.

He told the House, of which he is a member, that the naval hazards in an attempt to capture Trondheim by direct attack "would have been trifling compared with other operations I have organized and led."

"It is a shocking story of ineptitude, and I assure the House it ought never to have been allowed to happen," he declared.

Sir Roger asserted that the capture of Trondheim was "essential, imperative and vital."

"If the proper steps had been taken and carried out with resolution and speed, even after the first setback at Steinkjer, the situation would have been retrieved," he said.

Sir Roger, who is 68 years old, declared that he was "astounded that members of the naval staff would not realize" it was necessary to gain command of Trondheim Fjord.

"When I realized how badly things were going, I foresaw another Gallipoli," he said. "I never ceased importuning the Admiralty and the war cabinet to let me take all the responsibility to organize and lead the attack. Without naval co-operation, the whole operation was doomed to failure.

Refers to Flank Attack.

"Our General, advancing from Steinkjer to Trondheim, expected British ships to support him—not two German destroyers who fired on his flank and landed troops behind his advance to cut and captured or destroyed them.

"The Gallipoli tragedy has been followed step by step.

"If only we had used our fleet courageously, the Germans by now would have been in a very dangerous position and eventually would have been decisively defeated."

Sir Roger termed "a damned insult" a suggestion he attributed to Col. Josiah Wedgewood, Laborite, that "the British Navy had run away to the eastern Mediterranean because it was afraid of bombs."

30.24-2109

his barbs by crying out, "Somehow or other, we must get a Government of fighting men, of fighting spirit."

"I do not feel there is a sentence in the Prime Minister's spech which suggests that the Government foresaw what Germany meant to do, or came to a clear decision when it knew what Germany had done, or acted swiftly or consistently in the whole of this lamentable affair," he went on.

He demanded a "supreme war directorate" and a "really national Government."

Urges Cooperation

Clement R. Attlee, Laborite, hitherto regarded as "cooperative and safe" by the Conservatives, struck first as the leader of the Labor opposition after Chamberlain had closed with an impassioned plea for cooperation "in the hour of England's peril."

Attlee threw the cry of "failure" in the face of the aged Prime Minister from his opposite bench twenty feet away and demanded "different people at the helm" of the Government in "this life and death struggle in which we can not afford to have our defenses in hands of failures."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, long-time political enemy of Chamberlain, furiously lashed the Government's "ill-founded boastings," repeated Attlee's pointed query as to whether the Government "has learned anything from Poland" and asked if it had supplied insufficient anti-aircraft equipment to Norway.

Demands Smaller Cabinet

He demanded a smaller War Cabinet, swiftness and vigor in action and pleaded for Parliament to "speak out."

Bitterly, the sharp-tongued Scot told the House "time is not always on our side; Hitler took the old gentleman by the beard on this accasion."

"The Government is giving us a one shift war," he cried.

These and other words of accusation were shouted to a packed house in reply to Chamberlain's hour-long statement, in which he offered only one remedy for the nation's faltering war effort—Churchill.

Not To Seek Censure Vote

Despite itnvicious attack, the Labor party generalship decided not to move for a vote of censure, in the belief that it had the Government "on the run," and hinted that the real test was to come in six weeks, when "other shortcomings" are revealed.

AConservative "ginger group," opposing the Government with the suppotr of the former War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha and other men normally in sympathy with the Administration, decided likewise to defer a motion of censure, pending developments.

What finally emerged from the Houses of Parliament shortly after 11.30 P. M., was a Government now faced with an aroused and active opposition and confronting a defiant House which apparently is backed up by the nation on every measure it debates from this point on.

Speaks In Face Of Heckling

Chamberlain for the first time since the start of the war spoke in the face of persistent heckling which on one occasion got so loud that he sat down while the Speaker warned the House.

He opened his defense of the Norwegian campaign by declaring the British loss of life was "not really very great."

"The reverse," he added, had stiffened British determination.

As he spoke Halvdan Koht, Norwegian Foreign Minister, listened from the gallery.

The House's attitude became visibly uneasy as Chamberlain explained Britain was "helpless to prevent the German stroke." He said the Norwegians failed to block the advance of the German reniforcements by demolitions and Britain failed to secure air bases.

He admitted 100,000 troops gathered for the intended Finnish expedition had been sent to France, a point exploited by Sinclair, who said he doubted the Government had had that many men ready.

"I believe it was right," Chamberlain said doggedly, defending the British entry into Norway. "I thought it equally right to withdraw," he added, when it was realized that the plan would not succeed.

Fears Attack On England

For the second time within a week Chamberlain warned that Germany might attack anywhere and that Allied forces must not be dispersed.

"Presently we may be faced in the most violent form with attacks directed against this country," he said.

In words that had a metallic ring Chamberlain soberly asked the nation to increase its strength until "we, ourselves, are able to deliver our blows where and when we will."

He told again of the Allies' new strength in the Mediterranean.

Then, as he twice had done in the past—once at the outbreak of the war and again on March 4—he turned to Churchill.

Cavalryman To Help

Churchill, he announced, will have responsibility for "supervision of military operations" from day to day as well as ruling the destinies of Britain's sea power. Under him will be a small personal staff headed by Maj. Gen. Lionel Ismay, old cavalry campaigner with experience both in the field and in intelligence service.

From the looks of things tonight, if Chamberlain is going to get off with a warning at the end of the two-day debate, that warning will be emphasized and underlined.

In the lobbies of Parliament, many members were of the opinion that the Prime Minister's real testing time, however, would come in six weeks or two months, rather than today or tomorrow.

In the meantime, Chamberlain urged national unity and an end to "quarrels among ourselves."

Stanley's Defense

Oliver Stanley, War Secretary, at the end of tonight's debate danced the bogey of an attack on the Western front before the M. P.'s and declare that troops sent to Norway woul have been much more valuable i France if the offensive "which i possible and probable" had take place "in the last few weeks."

"The greatest storm the world h ever seen may burst on the Weste front at any minute," the War Sec retary asserted.

He assured the House that at "an rate we have made the Germans pa a price" and reminded the nation "i Norway the fight still goes on."

Declaring "it is ridiculous to describ what had happened in Norway as disaster," Stanley told the House h was foregoing some of "my best points to avoid aiding the enemy.

Opposition Roars

Here the Opposition members roare into action with cries "Of course i is"—meaning that, in their opinion, i was a disaster.

The War Minister disclosed that a the start of the campaign the Govern ment decided to send troops "imme diately" to Narvik, where it expecte a naval battle, and meanwhile t prepare French and British troops fo an expedition to Trondheim.

Bearing heavily on the need of re connoitering landing spots, he de scribed Namsos and Andalsnes, Allie landing points above and below Trond heim—as "small, almost fishing ports— with no real facilities for unloadin heavy material."

Assails Lack Of Scouting

Here Capt. William John Anstruther Conservative, demanded why the Gov ernment hadn't taken "some steps" t scout the country where its troop were liable to be engaged at an moment.

Prime Minister's 'Stock Has Fallen Right Through the Floor,' Labor Organ Says

LONDON, May 7 (AP)—The British press, which generally has stood stanchly behind Prime Minister Chamberlain's government, largely deserted his banner tonight with bitter expressions of dissatisfaction over his explanation of the Norwegian débâcle.

The authoritative Times of London and the rightest Evening News reiterated appeals for a national government, The Times asserting, "Assuredly we shall not win this war with less than the whole capacity for leadership possessed by all parties together."

The Evening News commented: "Before midnight tomorrow the nation's representatives will have made their choice—between keeping the Chamberlain government, despite its manifest insufficiencies and failures, or setting up a real national government."

The Liberal Manchester Guardian, noting that Mr. Chamberlain had rebuked his critics for disputing about forms of government, said, "It isn't about the forms of government that they dispute but about the means by which this people may win through the greatest danger that its history has known."

The Sussex Daily News declared, "Our people will not be fobbed off with specious appeals for loyalty."

"In war," said The Times, "it is not sufficient to follow a routine that will supply some sort of answer to any move the enemy may make.

"What is required is the intense alertness of the fencer whose riposte must be ready before the thrust is made. That has not been the temper of our conduct in Norway."

The Press Association, the most widely printed news agency in Britain, called Mr. Chamberlain's speech "not particularly effective."

The pro-government Daily Telegraph and Morning Post said that it "must be called defensive" but added that it was "convincing."

The popular tabloid Daily Mirror asked:

"How much longer will the House of Commons be able to endure such statements as that made by the Prime Minister? What is the good of closing the ranks behind leaders who are always too late?"

The Laborite Daily Herald commented:

"Chamberlain's stock—low enough before the debate began—has now fallen right through the floor."

Said the Liberal News Chronicle: "This government must go."

LONDON, MAY 7-(AP)-CONSERVATIVE L.S.AMERY, ASSAILING THE GOVERNMENT'S CONDUCT OF THE WAR IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TONIGHT, ENDED HIS SPEECH WITH THIS EXASPERATED CALL FROM ENGLAND'S PAST:

OUTGOING PHONE CALLS FORBIDDEN FOR 10 HOURS; LINES ARE USED BY ARMY

Leaves Canceled As Defense Precaution—Trains Are Jammed With Soldiers And Sailors Hurrying Back To Their Posts

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 7—The Netherlands Government, prepared to fight and carry on in case of a German invasion, has appointed the Netherlands Minister here, Dr. A. Loudon, general paymaster for all its officials abroad "in case of emergency."

Should a German onslaught overwhelm Holland, the Minister will act as a treasurer and assume charge of paying Netherlands officials who are outside their home country.

[By the Associated Press]

Amsterdam, Wednesday, May 8—The Netherlands cut off all outgoing telephone calls to all points abroad from 10 P. M. last night until 8 A. M. today.

It was officially explained that the telephone lines were reserved during those hours for the use of the Government which yesterday canceled all army, navy, air force and anti-aircraft leaves as a defense precaution.

Calls From Abroad Not Affected

Telephone calls to the Netherlands from abroad were not affected.

Telegraphic service was only nominally disturbed. Telephone calls tonight also will be stopped at the same hours as last night, it was announced.

The Government's sudden decision to clamp down on outgoing telephone communications came as trains were jammed with soldiers and sailors hurrying back to their units in response to the high command's sweeping order canceling leaves.

No Exceptions For First Time

Leaves have been withdrawn previously, but this was the first time that virtually no exceptions were made and also the first time that the men were ordered to return to their posts immediately.

Civilian train traffic, beginning tomorrow, will be restricted to facilitate troop movements. Holland has nearly 400,000 men under arms.

Officials described the leave cancellation as "due to the increasing uncertainties of the international situation."

Cite Deterioration

The general deterioration of the European situation, rather than any specific threat against the Netherlands, was said to be the reason for these prompt and extensive measures for Netherlands' safety.

In recent days the Government has extended martial law to all of Holland and has interned twenty-one persons to forestall any "fifth column" rising against internal security.

Thus the Netherlands feels she is prepared for any eventuality.

Applies To All Services

Today's order in Holland applied to air force and anti-aircraft leaves, as well as those of ground troops and the navy.

Since April 27 approximately one-tenth of the defense forces, or 40,000 men, had been absent from their posts on rotating leave.

In Belgium, the Netherlands' low-land neighbor, it was stated that cancellation of leaves was not contemplated at present.

Precaution Is Laid to Increasing Uncertainty of Situation, Not to Local Cause.

THE HAGUE, May 7 (A. P.).—The Netherlands today canceled all army and navy leaves and ordered the men to report at once for duty. The announcement came unexpectedly and surprised even some well-informed Government circles.

No reason was given in a communique for taking the new defense steps.

Most leaves which were withdrawn April 9 after Germany occupied Norway and Denmark had been restored April 27.

No Exceptions Are Made.

Belgium Not Doing Likewise.

BRUSSELS, May 7 (A. P.).—Belgium does not plan to cancel army and navy leaves as The Netherlands did, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

He added that he did not know why the Dutch Government took its action.

Nazi Columns Are Reported Near Holland

Dutch Call Up Reserves; GermanyDeniesTroops March for 2 Key Towns

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, May 8 (Wednesday).—Official German sources today emphatically denied foreign reports that two Nazi columns were advancing toward the Netherlands frontier.

Advance Reported Here

By The Associated Press

Two German columns are advancing toward the Netherlands from Bremen and Duesseldorf, an authoritative source in New York said last night, adding that they were the cause of intense military preparations and disruption of the Netherlands' international communications.

This source, kept informed from Europe despite rigid restrictions against communications in the area involved, was the same which advised The Associated Press a short time previously that Alexander Loudon, Dutch Minister in Washington, had been ordered last Saturday to take control of Holland's interests outside the mother country in event of a clash with Germany. This latter report was confirmable in Washington within a few minutes.

"Scissors" Movement Seen

The German troops were reported advancing rapidly, and this source stated flatly that they were heading "for Leeuwarden and Arnhem." This would mean that the actual German objective is believed known in Holland, since Leeuwarden is in Friesland Province, not far from the northeast coast and the Frisian Islands, which would provide jumping-off places for planes attacking England.

If this advice were correct, Germany would be preparing another scissors movement such as it used so effectively in Poland—sharp, inward thrusts toward strategic points.

[A United Press dispatch from Amsterdam, early this (Wednesday) morning said rumors of an impending invasion of the Netherlands were dismissed as "entirely unfounded" both in Amsterdam and the Hague. The United Press check of all points of entry along the German border found nothing unusual.]

Holland Ready to Fight

Holland was prepared for a last-ditch fight, the New York source said, although realizing that the present German movement might not actually reach the Dutch border. There was said to be a strong possibility that it was merely a feint, such as, the informant said, was used last week to draw the British fleet into the Mediterranean.

But Germany, this source continued, was known to desire bases on the English Channel from which to attack England, to complement those obtained in Norway.

He revealed at the same time that the possibility of bringing children of the Dutch royal family to the United States for safety had been discussed, but that the reply had been: "We do not run. The family stays with the people—stays to fight."

MORE TRAINING AND EXERCISES GIVEN AS CAUSE

Battlecraft Had Been Expected To Leave Soon For Mainland

Admiral's Announcement Of Permission Comes As Surprise

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, May 7—Admiral James O. Richardson, commander of the United States fleet, disclosed today the navy had approved his request that the fleet remain in the Hawaiian area for further tactical exercises and training.

Units not normally based at Pearl Harbor will leave next week for maneuvers off Lahaina Roads. How much longer the fleet will remain in Hawaiian waters was not disclosed. The admiral's announcement came as a surprise.

25 Were To Leave Today

A force of approximately twenty-five fighting craft and a base force, which includes tankers, supply ships and the hospital ship Relief, had been expected to leave for the California coast Wednesday.

Admiral Richardson earlier had announced the main body of the fleet, comprising approximately ninety ships, including the aircraft carriers Saratoga and Yorktown and eleven battleships, would sail Thursday morning for the mainland.

Speculation Is Aroused About Effect On Japan

Washington, May 7 (AP)—At a time when the United States is anxious about the possible fate of the Dutch East Indies, the commander of the United States fleet was given official permission tonight to keep the formidable fighting force in the Hawaiian area instead of bringing it back to the United States on schedule.

This aroused immediate speculation as to whether officials hoped the decision would have a deterring effect on the Japanese, although navy officers insisted the step was for training purposes and had no other significance.

For weeks, the world has been wondering whether Japan might move to "protect" the Indies in case the Netherlands were engulfed in war. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, recently cautioned other nations, particularly Japan, that any interference in the status of the East Indies would prejudice the peace of the entire Pacific.

The news of the decision concerning the fleet came just as Holland, apparently fearful of some immediate move in her direction, cut off outgoing telephone calls and ordered cessation of weather broadcasts.

REICH CLAIMS FOES PLAN TO SMITE BALKANS

Newspapers Report What They Call Chamberlain-Reynaud Phone Talk

Say Weygand Will Be Ready For "Ordered Action" Next Week

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 7—Germany's controlled press reported tonight an alleged British-French scheme to strike in southeastern Europe no later than May 20.

Some sources called this press activity a propaganda foundation for fixing guilt in advance in case the European war should spread in that direction.

The German newspapers splashed what purported to be an account of a telephone conversation between Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Reynaud, indicating that Allied forces in the Near East, commanded by Gen. Maxime Weygand, will be ready for "ordered action" by the middle of May.

Fantastic, Says London

London official circles called the story fantastic. A French communique said it contained "purely lying allegations."

The official Nazi version featured in the Berlin press did not disclose how Germany could have obtained a record of any Chamberlain-Reynaud conversation, but it asserted specifically that the alleged conversation lasted for just fifteen minutes, starting at 10.10 P. M. April 30.

Authorized German sources expressed belief that knowledge that the alleged talk had been "intercepted" might disconcert the Allies. The revelation is valued here as a lesson to the Allies that Germany knows more about their plans than they, perhaps imagine.

Move To Smoke Out Allies?

Observers could do little more than speculate on whether Germany would take this supposed disclosure as justification for a move into the Balkans, or whether it is a Nazi attempt to "smoke out" the Allies on their own intentions.

Authorized Nazi spokesmen repeatedly have emphasized that Germany is prepared to strike hard wherever the Allies try to develop a new war front, but that the Reich has no interest in broadening the war area.

The account in Berlin newspapers was identical except for the headlines.

According to it, Reynaud assured Chamberlain that Weygand would be ready by May 15, but cautioned him that execution of the "ordered action" might be slightly delayed. It did not say what the "ordered action" was.

"Chamberlain, in an obviously depressed tone, remarked that he was under the impression that they were requiring more time down there than necessary," the German story went on, and Reynaud replied by citing "many difficulties," especially with Turkey.

According to the Germans, Chamberlain promised "personally to talk to the Turks once more," and, when Reynaud promised the utmost cooperation, requested the French Premier "in rather imperative tones" to inform him not later than May 20 about the conclusion of "preparations."

Most of the account was presented in indirect discourse.

Nazis Call Zero Hour Near

Publish Alleged Telephone Talk on Near East Between Chamberlain and Reynaud.

BERLIN, May 7 (A. P.).—The controlled German press today published an account of a purported telephone conversation between Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Reynaud of France, indicating that the Allied Command would be ready for "ordered action" in the Near East on May 15 or thereabouts.

The account did not disclose how Germany could have obtained a record of such a conversation, but it was specific in saying that the two Allied leaders talked for just fifteen minutes, starting at 10:10 P. M., central European Time, on April 30.

[Official spokesmen at London called the story "fantastic," and in Paris, an official communique said that it was "a question of purely lying allegations" in respect to both the reported telephone conversation "which never took place" and the intentions attributed to the Allies.]

Calls Chamberlain Depressed.

The Berlin newspaper Zwolfuhrblatt displayed the story under a double streamer on the front page, interpreting the textual quotations from the purported conference as meaning that Gen. Maxime Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied froces in the Near East, would be ready for the "ordered action" by May 15.

What such "action" might be, however, was not stated.

M. Reynaud, according to the German account, assured Mr. Chamberlain that Gen. Weygand would be ready by May 15, but cautioned Mr. Chamberlain not to take the date literally—that execution of the "ordered action" might be a little later.

"Chamberlain, in an obviously depressed tone, remarked that he was under the impression that they were requiring more time down there than necessary," said the Zwolfuhrblatt.

Fixes May 20 as Last Day.

To this M. Reynaud was said to have replied by pointing to the "many difficulties" which had to be overcome, especially as regards the Turks, who were "making daily increasing demands."

Mr. Chamberlain, according to the Germans, promised "personally to talk to the Turks once more," but said that he could not guarantee anything "if they down there don't at last put an end to eternal eccentricities and autocracy."

M. Reynaud was said to have responded with a promise to do everything possible to overcome "mental difficulties."

Thereupon, it was said, Mr. Chamberlain requested M. Reynaud in "rather imperative tones" to inform him not later than May 20 about the conclusion of "preparations."

The Zwolfuhrblatt said that the conversation finished in a friendly, polite tone after Mr. Chamberlain requested M. Reynaud to see to it that there were "no indiscretions this time from the French side."

To Influence Germans.

The purpose of publishing the purported conversation appeared to be two-fold—to fix in the German people's mind any responsibility for widening of the European conflict into the Balkans-Near East area and to "smoke out" the Allies regarding their intentions.

The releases to the press were identical and the story differed only as to headlines between the various papers. The complete text of the purported conversations was not given. Much of it was in the form of indirect quotation.

The item as handed to the press did not go through the usual channel, namely, the official news agency, DNB. Later, however, DNB issued the story with the following introduction:

"The German press today brings in the most prominent form a telephone conversation between Chamberlain and Renaud, which, as the papers indicate in their headlines, reveals plans for aggression by the western powers."

The following are two of the headlines with which the story was displayed:

"Attention! Attention! To all whom it concerns—the veil has fallen—England's aggressive intentions revealed."

"Wire reveals secret of aggression—command for zero hour to Reynaud: 'At latest by May 20!'—Searchlight upon London."

This propaganda stroke was the climax of four days of German attempts to induce the Allies to reveal their intentions, following Mr. Chamberlain's reference to the Mediterranean in his House of Commons speech last Thursday.

Intense German Vigilance.

On Tuesday, last, Prime Minister Chamberlain told Parliament that the "injury" to German naval power in the Norwegian campaign had been "so substantial as to alter the entire balance of naval power and to permit an important redistribution of the main Allied fleet," adding: "A British and French battle fleet with cruisers and auxiliary craft is already in the eastern basis of the Mediterranean on its way to Alexandria."

Since last Thursday intense German vigilance has been centered on the Balkans, northern Norway, Sweden, Belgium and the Netherlands.

BRITISH SINK SWEDISH SHIP WITH NAZI CREW

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Wednesday, May 8—The Swedish steamer Monark, 1,786 tons, with a German prize crew aboard, was torpedoed by a British submarine yesterday.

The Monark was on its way from Stavanger, Norway, to a German harbor with a load of woodpulp.

Five members of the prize crew were taken aboard the submarine and two others were saved in lifeboats with Swedish crewmen.

The Monark was at Bergen, Norway, when that port was seized by the Germans at the start of the invasion.

There was no explanation of the presence of the German prize crew aboard, but it was assumed the Monark was seized as contraband.

GERMANS REPORT ANOTHER BRITISH CRUISER STRUCK

Also Say Bomb Hit Plane —London Declares Narvik Free of Nazi Ships.

BERLIN, May 7 (A. P.).—Another British cruiser in the Narvik region has been hit by a medium caliber bomb, the German High Command announced today, and one of Great Britain's big Sunderland flying boats has also been bombed.

A German garrison has been under siege there since the first days of the German invasion.

The garrison was today reported to consist of between 3,000 and 4,000 Germans. With the Germans rushing help overland and concentrating their air operations in that area, a battle for possession of the port—the Norwegian outlet for Swedish iron ore—is rapidly taking shape.

The daily communique of the High Command stated:

"German troops which started north from Namsos and Grong have reached Mosjoen."

100 Miles Already Covered.

The announcement that Mosjoen had been reached meant that Germans in their mop-up and follow-up drive into the bottleneck region of far northern Norway, had traversed about one-third of the 300 miles between Namsos and Narvik. This fast-moving column was said to be on the very heels of Allied detachments cut off from the withdrawal of the main expeditionary force last week from Namsos, north of Trondheim.

The Germans were said to be planning either to push on to Narvik in an effort to relieve the hard-pressed German garrison there or to occupy Bodo, about 120 miles from Narvik, and use it as a base of aerial operations against the Allies pressing Narvik. Should the land advance be extended beyond Bodo the Germans would have to worm their way through a roadless northern wilderness slashed by canyons and fjords.

The "pacification" of central and south Norway can be regarded as concluded, DNB, the official German news agency, announced, this evening, adding that the Nazis had taken over many Norwegian coastal batteries and that a search of the coastal regions had revealed much useful war material which was being converted to German use.

Report Nazi Ships Accounted For.

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—British naval spokesmen indicated today that there are no German warships left in Narvik Fjord or in the waters to the north.

One spokesman said that German planes attacked one British warship forty times in one day, dropping more than 150 bombs, without scoring a hit or causing a single casualty. The attackers, meanwhile, lost two planes shot down and two others crippled by anti-aircraft fire.

30.24-2113

this informant said.

British spokesmen said that the Germans had suffered heavy losses in airplanes during the Norwegian campaign.

From official bulletins and other sources they estimated that the Nazis had lost 200 planes, largely through the work of the British Air Force. In comparison, the British losses were described as comparatively light, amounting to not more than thirty-seven machines—sixteen lost in raids on German air bases, five in action against naval vessels and sixteen in other operations.

A Norwegian broadcast reported that the Norwegian Commander-in-Chief, Otto Ruge, had arrived in northern Norway aboard a British war vessel.

Haakon Proclaims Hope in North

LONDON, May 7 (AP).—King Haakon VII was reported by Reuters, British news agency, to have addressed a proclamation today to his people from "somewhere in Norway" declaring, "In northern Norway we still occupy strong positions and from here we shall succeed with help, which is now being planned, in reconquering the rest of the country."

Norse Bitterness Reported

OSLO, May 7 (AP).—Norwegian soldiers, captured by the Germans in their drive northward from Oslo to Trondheim, were represented here today as bitter over the British withdrawal from central Norway.

One officer who took part in the fighting in the Gudbrandal, was quoted as saying the British had refused to provide his men with food when they fell back on Dombaas.

100 Norwegians Rebel, Hold Pass Against Nazis

Reported in Mutiny After Plans Went Awry at Stoeren

STOCKHOLM, May 7 (AP).—A young Norwegian lieutenant who reached the Swedish border was quoted today by the Stockholm newspaper "Aftonbladet" as telling how 100 Norwegians, led by a mutinous sergeant, were holding Gauldalen Pass, thirty miles north of Roeros, against the Germans.

The lieutenant, who reached the border after a six-day ski trip, said the sergeant led a revolt when his captain's defense plans resulted in a defeat at Stoeren. The 100 rebels barricaded themselves in the narrow pass, with headquarters and an ammunition train hidden in a railway tunnel.

About three hundred other Norwegians either headed for the Swedish frontier or broke up into small parties for fighting in the mountains. The captain, exhausted by battle and mutiny, remained in a mountain hut, the lieutenant said.

2 BRITISH PLANES DOWN OVER BIGHT

Berlin Reports Air Battle Off German Coast.

BERLIN, May 7 (A. P.).—In its regular communique today the German High Command said in part:

"In an attempt by the British to fly over German (Helgoland) Bight two British planes were shot down by German chasers.

"Nothing of importance on the western front."

PARIS, May 7 (A. P.).—A patrol encounter in the east Moselle River sector of the western front "ended to our advantage," the French High Command reported today.

It was reported that the French troops engaged in the action brought back a prisoner and the body of a German left behind by the enemy.

A marked increase in aerial activity was reported, during which two German planes flew over the Paris region and French machines made deep reconnaissance flights over German territory.

Tonight's High Command communique read: "Artillery action to the west of the Vosges."

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today that one Royal Air Force plane failed to return from a reconnaissance flight over the North Sea early this morning.

FAMOUS NAZI SHIP IS REPORTED SUNK

Hitler Once Went on Cruise Aboard the Robert Ley.

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—A British naval spokesman quoted Rotterdam reports today to the effect that the 27,288-ton German ship Robert Ley had been sunk in the Skagerrak on the night of April 12.

The Robert Ley, named for the leader of the German Labor Front, is one of the prides of the Nazi merchant marine. Adolf Hitler gave her the name "of my co-worker, Robert Ley," at her launching at Hamburg on March 29, 1938. Built for vacationing wage earners by the Kraft Durch Freude (Strength-Through-Joy) organization, her features include a tile swimming pool decorated with murals and all outside cabins—for passengers and crew alike.

Hitler himself went on a holiday cruise aboard the Robert Ley last year and from her decks watched a German submarine go through diving maneuvers.

[Authorized spokesmen in Berlin said that the Rotterdam report was "an old story cropping up again." The Robert Ley was operating between German and Norwegian ports as a transport, they said, a week after she was first reported sunk on April 12, and is still intact. Her present whereabouts were kept a military secret.]

DRAFT AGES STAND

Britain Won't Call Men of 40 to 50 Yet.

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—War Secretary Oliver Stanley told the House of Commons today that he considered it undesirable to adopt conscription for men between the ages of 40 and 50 before younger men are called.

Mr. Stanley said that the War Office got the first news of the German invasion of Denmark on April 9 between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning. He said the information was communicated to Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial Defense Staff, at 3:30 A. M.

The War Secretary declared that one anti-aircraft unit in Norway was not in possession of the necessary aircraft recognition signals which, he said, "are of a very secret nature and could not be widely issued days in advance" of the British landing. One casualty resulted because of this, he disclosed.

British Baby Carriages Must Have Tail Lights

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—Failure to display tail lights on their baby carriages during the blackout cost four women four shillings (about 80 cents) each.

They were fined in Magistrate's Court at Walsall, Staffordshire, yesterday. The arrests were made after one of the carriages had been hit by an automobile.

Afridi's Commander Is Reported Alive

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—An authoritative spokesman said today that Capt. P. L. Vian, commander of the destroyer Afridi was among those who survived when the ship was sunk by bombs while escorting the Allied troops withdrawing from Norway.

British M. P. Urges Russo-American Aid

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, veteran of the Gallipoli and other campaigns of the world war and a Laborite Member of Parliament, told the House of Commons tonight that "we need all the help we can get and the sooner we get Russian and American help the better."

He demanded a Government "which can take this war seriously."

Norway Claims Nazis Bombed Passenger Ship

Six, Including Captain, Reported To Have Been Killed In Plane Attack

London, Wednesday, May 8 (AP)—A Norwegian high command communique, relayed here from somewhere in Norway by Reuters, said early today that six persons were killed when German planes bombed and machine-gunned the 316-ton Norwegian passenger steamer Tolden, which was wrecked.

The captain and two women were among those reported killed. Several passengers and crewmen were said to have been wounded.

The communique said one high explosive and one incendiary bomb were dropped, setting the lifeboats afire.

British Collier Is Sunk

London, May 7 (AP)—A Reuters (British) News Agency dispatch from Dunquerque, France, reported tonight that the British collier Brighton, 5,359 tons, was sunk off that port following an explosion.

Ten of the crew of thirty-four were injured in the blast, but all were saved.

Anzac Sets 2000-mile Scouting Flight Mark

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—A 2,000-mile flight from Scotland to Norway and back was reported today by a New Zealand pilot serving with the British Air Force. British officers expressed belief that this was the longest reconnaissance of the war.

The fourteen and a half hour trip was made in a stock model Wellington bomber, which was not equipped with an automatic pilot.

Sky Is The Limit On War Spending, Simon Says

Chancellor Adds Gladstone Would "Turn Dizzy" If He Saw Today's Budget

London, May 7 (AP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the National Savings Association today that the sky is the limit in British war expenditures.

"We must at all costs put forward our maximum possible effort for the purpose of winning the war," Sir John said, and there is "no other limit."

He remarked that if Gladstone knew today's budget "he would not merely turn in his grave—he would turn dizzy."

SAY NAZI SHIPPING PAID HEAVY TOLL

British List 300,000 Tons Sunk Since April 1.

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—The British Admiralty announced today that Germany had lost 300,000 tons of merchant shipping, including transport and supply ships, since April 1, most of it in the Norwegian campaign.

Since the start of the war, a British spokesman estimated, Germany has lost "over 600,000 gross tons" of mercantile shipping.

The Admiralty announcement said that seven British, Allied and neutral merchant ships, totaling 8,445 tons, were sunk by enemy action in the week ended April 28.

The list of sinkings was issued under the decision announced last week not to disclose names or individual tonnages. The total included four British ships aggregating 6,689 tons, another 1,458-ton vessel of Allied ownership and two neutral vessels totaling 298 tons.

The same spokesman said that reports had been received from Rotterdam that the motorship Robert Ley, a 27,288-ton German merchant vessel, had been sunk in the Skagerrak the night of April 12 and that two other German ships, one of them the 2,321-ton Sayn and the other unidentified, had also been reported sunk.

Maj. Gen. Hastings Lionel Ismay, Who Is To Aid Churchill In More Vigorous Conduct Of War

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 7—Maj. Gen. Hastings Lionel Ismay, named by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today as head of the personal staff aiding Winston Churchill in a more vigorous conduct of the war, is an old cavalry campaigner with experience both in the field and in intelligence service.

Known for his drive and tact, he has been secretary of the Committee of Imperial Defense since 1938.

General Ismay took part in the frontier campaign in India in 1908, and in the World War he served with the African Rifles in Somaliland, where he was twice mentioned in dispatches and awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

In 1931-1933, he served as military secretary to the Viceroy of India, and he was head of the intelligence section of the War Office for the Middle East, the Far East, Russia, Poland and the Balkans from 1933 to 1936.

Lord Chatfield, like all admirals of the fleet, remains on the active list.

Sir Charles reaches the highest rank in the British navy at the age of 59, forty-six years after he entered the navy as a cadet.

In the first European war he served as executive officer on the battleship Queen Elizabeth in the Dardanelles campaign, and subsequently won the Distinguished Service Order for his work as fleet gunnery officer on Admiral Jellicoe's flagship Iron Duke at the battle of Jutland.

Sir Charles Forbes Given Rank Corresponding To Field Marshal; Directed Smash Into Narvik Fjord

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 7—The promotion of Admiral Sir Charles M. Forbes to be admiral of the fleet, a rank corresponding to field marshal in the army, has been approved by King George VI, it was announced tonight.

As commander in chief of the home fleet, Sir Charles has actively directed British naval operations off Norway, including the successful smash into Narvik fjord.

Admiral Forbes, whose appointment is effective tomorrow, fills the vacancy caused by Lord Chatfield's completion of his first five years' service as admiral of the fleet.

An order in council allows but three admirals of the fleet of fewer than five years' service in that rank. A promotion to that rank comes whenever an admiral of the fleet has held the title for five years.

Cries of 'Resign' and 'Who Missed the Bus?' Hurled at Chamberlain in Commons

LONDON, May 7 (A. P.).—An angry opposition in the House of Commons heckled Prime Minister Chamberlain today as he frankly admitted the failure of Britain's central Norwegian military adventure in the most violent parliamentary debate since the war began.

There were some cheers for the Prime Minister from his adherents as he entered the House, but the opposition shouted "Who Missed the Bus?" and "Resign." The attacks on Mr. Chamberlain continued throughout his speech, and at one time he was forced to sit down until things quieted down.

Diplomatic galleries were filled. Among the spectators were Joseph P. Kennedy, the United States Ambassador, and Halvdan A. Koht, Norwegian Foreign Minister.

IL DUCE EXPECTED TO REVEAL ITALY'S STAND THURSDAY

Hungary Believed to Have Given Assurances to Germany.

ROME, May 7 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini's answer to the riddle of Italy's position in the face of Allied fleet concentrations in the Mediterranean was widely expected today to be given Thursday when he is to review troops of the Rome garrison.

Vatican authorities indicated meanwhile that Pope Pius still sees little chance of an early peace.

It was considered almost certain that Mussolini would speak briefly when he reviews the Rome troops at Thursday's celebration of Army Day, which coincides with the fourth anniversary of the Italian Empire's founding after the conquest of Ethiopia.

Renewed diplomatic activity was also forecast with the return to Rome of Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, after talks in London with his Government. Sir Percy was expected to see Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano today, but both British and Italian authorities withheld comment.

Mussolini was believed to have heard anew from Crown Prince Humbert regarding the Pope's reported hopes that Italy would be spared from entering the war. Il Duce received the Crown Prince ostensibly for a talk on military affairs shortly after Prince Humbert had visited the pontiff yesterday. The Crown Prince is commander of half the Italian Army.

[Dispatches from Alexandria indicated that both the Allies and the Egyptians hope that appeals by Pope Pius XII or President Roosevelt might stave off war in the Mediterranean. Myron C. Taylor, the President's personal representative at the Vatican, conferred with the Pontiff last week and this fact, coupled with American Ambassador Phillips's talks with Premier Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, has led to considerable speculation in the Mediterranean area as to possible moves to limit the war.]

Links Hungary to Hitler.

BUDAPEST, May 7 (A. P.).—The controlled Hungarian press gave first-page prominence today to dispatches date-lined Berlin declaring that Hungary was "definitely deciding with Germany." The publication of news concerning Hungary from Berlin and Rome has been a frequent method in the past of informing Hungarians on the stand of their own Government.

With southeastern Europe in dread of the possibility that the war might spread at any minute, great headlines quoted the German press as declaring that Hungary "will not intervene" and that Hungary "couples the maintenance of non-intervention with a definite attitude in favor of Germany."

Sources close to the Government insisted that Germany and Italy would not touch Hungary but would sweep together into Yugoslavia in case of a decision to drive into the Balkans.

Hungary was calm, but from Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Turkey and Greece came reports of intensive military precautions.

Yugoslavia took steps reportedly as a counter-measure against 300,000 Italian troops said to be on her frontier north of Trieste. Yugoslav reservists were taken by gendarmes from their places of work and rushed to concentration points in trucks requisitioned from industrial firms.

600,000 Under Arms.

Foreign military observers estimated that Yugoslavia already has more than 600,000 men under arms.

Yugoslav mine layers took on cargoes of mines at Adriatic ports and prepared to start blocking harbors at a moment's notice.

Other Balkan countries also called up men by personal summons instead of the old-fashioned system of posting mobilization orders—a method designed to keep any potential enemy guessing.

Army, navy and air corps specialists were called up in Greece and it was noted that this followed a talk yesterday between Premier John Metaxas and Italian Minister Raffaele Boscarelli, who just had returned to his Athens post by airplane from Rome.

Turkey's controlled press chorused Turkish readiness to enter the war on the side of Great Britain and France if fighting should start in the Mediterranean or Balkans.

Heavy Turkish troop re-enforcements were reported to have been sent to the Dardanelles.

Rumania concentrated additional troops in Dobruja, near her frontier with Bulgaria.

Yugoslavia Increases Army.

RAKEK, Yugoslavia, May 7 (A. P.).—Guarding her German and Italian frontiers with 300,000 veteran troops, Yugoslavia tonight called additional conscripts to the colors.

Crowded troop trains rolled into this frontier region throughout the day. The main concentration points are Ljubjana for the Italian frontier and Maribor for the German.

Along both frontiers and for many miles behind, army engineers constructed defensive positions to bolster the concrete works already built. There were miles of freshly dug trenches and numerous tank barricades of re-enforced concrete. Innocent looking woodpiles disguised artillery emplacements.

Machine guns covered every vital bridge and railway line in this frontier zone. Most of the important bridges have been mined.

Egyptians Speed Defenses.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 7 (A. P.).—Feverish preparations for defense against modern war hit a higher pace today in the land of the Pharaohs. The entire Mediterranean area was fast becoming an armed camp.

British official circles hinted broadly that any future change in Italy's status as a non-belligerent ally of Germany could be expected within seven days.

Both Allied and Egyptian sources expressed the hope that appeals by Pope Pius XII or President Roosevelt might stave off war in the Mediterranean, but there was no sign of wavering in the determination to throw all the power of the fleet and the Allied army against the enemy wherever a conflict might develop.

First Air Raid Drill.

Alexandria's first air raid alarm sounded shortly after noon today under a mock "state of war" and sent thousands of Egyptians to shelter with hands pressed against their ears to deaden the sound of the sirens.

Air wardens and policemen dashed about the streets under a burning sun, driving stragglers into shelter.

The alarm lasted ten minutes. The all clear signal brought dense crowds of natives back to the streets, clapping their hands and cheering the "defeat" of the air invader.

A twentieth century blackout was also ordered for ancient Egypt.

Countless yards of black curtains and black paper were sold by shops and provided by the Government to cover windows and doors in every home and building. Every automobile and railway coach was equipped with small blue lights.

Tense for Italians, Too.

The period of waiting was particularly tense for 70,000 Italian residents of Egypt. Among them hundreds of anti-Fascists were reported applying to the Ministry of the Interior for Egyptian citizenship.

In the midst of all the bustle, however, the Egyptians staged a general holiday today to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the accession of young King Farouk I.

The Government placed strong guards of troopers over all telephone, telegraph and radio systems and ordered the offices to operate day and night to keep open all available channels of communication for Egyptian and Allied diplomats, particularly with Rome, London, Paris and Washington. They were required to maintain constant contact with all Allied naval and military forces.

Anti-aircraft guns were manned constantly. In Alexandria Harbor rode a strongly re-enforced Allied fleet. A squadron of cruisers and auxiliaries arrived yesterday. Other cruisers, battleships, destroyers, submarines and torpedo boats already were massed here.

Large contingents of troops stood ready. British warplanes, bomb racks loaded, were set for the take-off. Allied sources said they were prepared for immediate action "in whatever field hostilities might come."

Prepared to defend the vital Suez

Canal, British official circles declared, "we are ready to meet Italy on land, sea and in the air should she decide to fight. The test already is started."

Turks Tighten Army Control.

ANKARA, May 7 (A. P.).—The National Assembly today voted absolute powers to military authorities in zones to be placed under martial law if war comes, moving Turkey a step nearer a wartime footing. The measure would place all civil and administrative officials in martial law zones under military authority.

England Seeks Lineup Of Five Countries To Halt Any Aggression

[By the Associated Press.]

Budapest, Wednesday, May 8.—The official Hungarian news agency published a report today that Germany has asked the Hungarian Government for the right to send troops through the country.

This report was circulated shortly after diplomats in the Balkans had reported a strong British drive to line up a Balkan "defensive alliance" of Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey all to stand together against any aggression.

The Hungarian news agency, in reporting the German request, reproduced a dispatch which originally was published in the Belgrade (Yugoslavia) newspaper Politika, which in turn had credited it to its Budapest correspondent.

Used This Method

Several times in the past inspired Hungarian newspapers, as well as the news agency, have taken such roundabout methods to tell Hungarians what is going on inside their own country.

Simultaneously, the newspaper Utro, in Sofia, Bulgaria, which has been called the mouthpiece of Germany in Bulgaria, printed a Berlin dispatch declaring Germany and Italy were prepared to send huge forces into southeastern Europe at the first sign of British-French action in that area.

The dispatch, which was quoted by the Hungarian agency, said that according to certain reports in Budapest the Germans had asked passage through Hungary for their troops, but that so far the report could not be verified.

Will Send Ultimatum

"In case the Allied troops violated any of the Balkan countries' frontiers, the Reich will send an ultimatum to that country demanding it choose immediately one or the other belligerent camp," Utro said.

"In the event the country in question failed to answer with appropriate speed the Reich Government would be forced to undertake any measures it thought advisable.

"Any Allied attempt to extend the war into southeast Europe might force Germany and Italy to put into action much greater forces for the immediate frustration of any such attempt."

Allies Would Not Start War

The five nations in the British-sponsored alliance would be promised that the Allies would not start war in the Balkans, but that the Allied fleet, now at Alexandria, and the Weygand army now assembled in Near East would rush in to help in case the Axis powers attacked.

The British plan is understood to be to open the whole Balkan front at once in such an emergency, rather than let Italy or Germany attack one country at a time.

Yugoslavia, however, still was looking elsewhere for backing. Authoritative Belgrade quarters said trade talks between Yugoslavia and Russia have shifted now to political subjects as a result of Yugoslav fear of an Italo-German move, and the Belgrade Government is believed moving rapidly for reestablishment of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, broken since 1917.

Moreover, the sudden departure from Zagreb for Rome of Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, highest Catholic prelate in Yugoslavia, led to the belief that Pope Pius XII had summoned him in an endeavor to stave off the danger of the war spreading.

In Hungary, the press gave evidence of the country's solidarity with the Italian-German Axis, saying that events in Norway and Denmark had proved that isolated neutrality is no longer possible.

Hungarian press dispatches, date lined Berlin, said "Hungary is definitely deciding with Germany." Great head lines quoted the German press as saying "Hungary will not intervene" if war comes to the Balkans.

Calling More Conscripts

Dispatches from Rakek, Yugoslavia, said that country, with 300,000 veteran troops already on Italian and German borders, was calling up more conscripts, constructing new defensive positions to bolster existing concrete works, digging miles of new trenches and erecting tank traps and artillery emplacements disguised as woodpiles.

Rakek is on the northwest Yugoslav frontier near the juncture of the Italian, German and Yugoslav borders.

Machine guns guarded important bridges and railway lines; most of the vital spans were mined.

Yugoslav mine layers took on cargoes of mines at Adriatic ports and prepared to start blocking harbors on quick notice.

Military camps were pitched under clumps of trees, out of sight of prying eyes, as reservists, taken from their jobs by gendarmes, were rushed to concentration points in requisitioned trucks and boxcars.

Peasants Pour Concrete

Peasants helped engineers pour concrete for the new tank barricades while troops and supply trucks rumbled by on the country roads.

The recruits wore wild flowers or pine sprays in their military caps and sang wild Slavic marching songs.

It was not, officially, general mobilization, but the army was reported still growing after reaching the 600,000 mark. Schools were ordered closed May 30, a month early, so they may be used as barracks.

Other Balkan countries called up men by the method of personal summons, instead of the old-fashioned posters.

Greece Mobilizes Specialists

Army, navy and air corps specialists were mobilized in Greece after Dictator General John Metaxas had a talk with the Italian Minister.

Heavy Turkish reinforcements were reported sent to the Dardanelles; Rumania concentrated more troops in Dobruja, near her frontier with Bulgaria.

The Turkish National Assembly gave absolute power to the military in zones which will be placed under martial law in the event of war, and the Turkish press reiterated Turkey's resolution to fulfill her alliance with Britain and France in case of aggression in the Mediterranean basin.

Bulgaria Is Key

As for the British plan to unite the Balkans defensively, Bulgaria seems to be the key. Up to now she has balked at any such alliance. But Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to Turkey, was in Sofia, reportedly making a high offer for Bulgarian adherence this time.

Bulgarian cooperation would permit overland passage of the Allied Near Eastern army under Gen. Maxime Weygand to Rumania and Yugoslavia.

But Bulgarian officials were reported cool to the idea, despite reported promises of a British loan, a corridor to the Ægean Sea and possibly southern Dobruja after the war.

The Bulgarians were reported inclined to look to Russia for support.

Dr. Karl Clodius, the German economic expert, who is reported to have been trying to frustrate Sir Hughe's moves, left Sofia unexpectedly for Berlin by plane.

Envoys Study Possibility Of War Moving To Balkans

Rome, May 7 (AP)—Diplomats in Rome today anxiously studied the possibility of the war backfiring into the Balkans. Among them was British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine, who returned from a London visit and spent the day checking reports which accumulated in his absence.

E. W. Playfair, British economic expert, also returned from London to try to find a way for resumption of British-Italian negotiations, at a standstill for weeks.

Foreign circles assumed that Sir Percy would talk with Foreign Secretary Count Galeazzo Ciano and possibly Premier Mussolini if he has not done so already to explain, among other things, the massing of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Await Word From Duce

Some indication of Italy's future position was awaited from il Duce when he reviews troops of the Rome garrison at the celebration of army day Thursday.

MAY 8 1940

Signs were lacking, however, of any imminent Italian move. In fact, Count Ciano announced that 11,000 children of Italian parents abroad would be brought to the annual Fascist summer camps despite the international situation.

Dr. Julius Dropmueller, German Minister of Communications, arrived to confer with his Italian counterpart, Giuseppe Host-Venturi, who is just back from a trip to Hungary. The nature of their conversation was not disclosed.

All Egypt Darkened For Air-Defense Test

Week-Long Drill Begun As British Soldiers Participate In Patrol Activity

Alexandria, May 7 (AP)—Allied and Egyptian military authorities tonight enforced a test of Egypt's air-raid defenses, darkening the entire nation, from desert villages to the largest cities, in the start of a week-long drill.

MAY 8 1940

Thousands of British soldiers and Egyptian police kept up a patrol.

Egyptian stock markets, showing nervousness over war threats in the Mediterranean, registered heavy losses.

Roundup Of 'Tourists'

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, May 7—Determined not to be caught napping, Rumania put the finishing touches to a far-reaching internal defense plan today as the growing threat of war in southeastern Europe kept Balkan capitals on the alert.

As the result of swift, but careful preparations, the Government was reported ready to stamp out immediately any "fifth column" activities. At instant notice, a high official indicated, police and military authorities will be able to round up the thousands of foreigners now living in the country and forestall any attack from within.

Many German "Tourists"

Among the foreigners apt to be herded into concentration camps at the first hint of trouble are about 60,000 Germans, including many "tourists" whose presence in recent months has been an increasing headache to the Government. So far, Rumania—posed shakily on the fence of neutrality—has refrained from any drastic action against "visitors" for obvious reasons.

The internal defense plan was outlined by officials as follows:

MAY 8 1940

Under a new compulsory registration law, a list of all foreigners has been compiled and is revised from day to day. The law forbids aliens to travel without special permits, and the Government thus will know their exact whereabouts at any given moment. To make sure that they do not travel without authorization, Government agents keep close tab on them.

Special military intelligence officers have been given complete instructions for rounding up all aliens within their districts and placing them in concentration camps at a moment's notice.

The Government last night imposed censorship on all newspaper correspondents, with penalties ranging up to a seven-year term for sending information which authorities deem inexact.

At the same time the nation's entire military and civilian defense organization was mobilized for air-raid exercises.

The action followed ominous reports of troop movements throughout southeastern Europe and in the eastern Mediterranean, where the Allies have concentrated a powerful fleet.

There was no confirmation of reported Italian troop concentrations along the Yugoslav border, though Virginio Gayda, editor of Mussolini's newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia, said "precautionary measures" had been taken because of "French and British intrigues" in the Balkans.

In Hungary, Premier Teleki and Foreign Minister Csaky inspected the Lispe oil fields near the Yugoslav frontier, which are being developed by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Observers linked the inspection with reports that Germany had requested more Hungarian oil.

British Ran Short of Bombs

Troops Tell of Using Depth Charges From Warships to Blow Up Bridges in Norway

MAY 8 1940

A NORTHERN PORT, England, May 7 (A. P.).—Battle-weary Allied troops disclosed today they were so short of explosives as they retreated up the Gudbrands valley in central Norway that they used depth charges from warships to blow up the bridges behind them and slow the German advance.

This sidelight on "the road back" was unfolded as the thousands of soldiers who clattered ashore here from transports yesterday settled down in temporary quarters after a proud welcome from Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial Defense Staff.

After four days' rest and good food at sea, the morale of the men appeared good and there were no outward signs of recent terror even on the downy faces of the youngest troopers, some of whom are just out of their teens.

They all were cheerful and some were even a bit cocky, but one shook his head and said that the battle at Otta, below Dombas in the Gudbrands Valley, "would have been a massacre if we had stayed there."

As the men changed into fresh uniforms in the huge dockshed their general attitude, however, seemed to be:

"If we'd had more guns, more shells and more planes we'd be there yet."

The rank and file apparently did not know the withdrawal from Norway was on until they were almost ready to pile out of trains and into homeward bound ships at Andalsnes.

"We thought we were just luring the Germans into range of the navy's guns," said one trooper.

One soldier said that he saw six German bombers shot down with rifles at Dombas. Sometimes the bombers, which did most of their work by day, swooped down to within twenty feet of the ground, he declared.

A gangling youth of 21 said that only seven or eight houses out of a total of 300 at Andalsnes had been bombed before he arrived there.

Andalsnes Heavily Bombed.

"When we came back through the town only seven or eight had not been bombed," he added.

Veterans of long army service were sprinkled among the khaki-clad men who hustled down the gangplanks without a song.

One British newspaper man, watching the hobnailed procession, remarked that "quite a lot of them seem young and undersized," but not one of the men would admit he had been frightened during the twelve days in which they were harassed by the German air force.

"They bombed anything that moved," said one veteran of the world war. "They were poor shots, but the place was full of spies. The Germans always seemed to know where we were and where our anti-aircraft guns were. If it had been man-to-man fighting the British would have wiped them out."

Gen. Ironside, who came here especially from London to greet the returning troops, congratulated them for having come back with their tails up.

"Don't think you were driven out of Norway," he said. "You were ordered out of Norway, and the great thing is that your discipline brought you out.

"You were an advance guard, and we had thought that we would be able to get to you the guns and aviation which make it possible to fight such a machine as you were opposed to. But, as you know, the race went against us."

Five Rear-guard Battles Fought.

Gen. B. C. T. Paget, who conducted the 100-mile retreat from the Lillehammer sector in south Norway to the Andalsnes base on the west coast, said that his troops had fought five separate rear-guard actions during the withdrawal. That the withdrawal was carried out successfully was "mainly due to the splendid endurance and fighting qualities of the units engaged," he said.

"We were not successful in preventing the Germans from breaking through from the south to Trondheim," he added, "but we may lay claim to having delayed them considerably and to having inflicted a lot of casualties."

No immediate explanation was given as to why the French troops which took part in the Norwegian campaign had been landed in Britain. It was disclosed that the Frenchmen—Chasseurs Alpins—had arrived on Sunday and were reviewed by Gen. Millhauser of the French army. They were believed to be awaiting transportation back to France.

A major attached to a French company said that his unit had seen no Germans during their ten-day stay in Norway, and remarked: "We were disappointed that we had to leave without having had a crack at them."

Used New Naval Depth Charges.

A London corporal, one of a crew assigned to demolition of bridges as the Allies backtracked up the Gudbrands valley toward Andalsnes said:

"We were so short of explosives we used depth charges from the ships to bomb the bridges, and they really blew them up!"

Gen. Paget, whose direction of the embarkation at Andalsnes was praised by Prime Minister Chamberlain last Thursday, credited the Norwegians with great aid in the withdrawal. He said they drove trains practically up to the front lines twice to retrieve Allied forces.

Hardly a house was left standing along the thirty miles from Kvam to Dombas, one of Paget's men related, as the German air force bombed the line of retreat.

When the navy brought down four Nazi planes, "you should have seen the heart it put into the boys," he added.

The officers and men of the returning Anglo-French expeditionary forces all said that the Allied ground troops were virtually defenseless against aerial attack.

A Scottish private of the Royal Engineers, who fought in the world war, said:

"The shell fire and machine gunning were not quite so heavy as in the last war, but the bombing was something fearful. As many as forty planes were over us at one time and they dropped 400 bombs.

"I've never seen such bombing. We had very little defense against it—only machine guns and Bofors guns (an anti-aircraft gun of Swedish make)."

Bombed Incessantly.

An infantry captain said that the Germans had bombed his troops incessantly from 10 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock at night. When the planes had dropped all their bombs they continued to attack with machine-guns.

"My company was machine-gunned many times," he said, "but I had only one casualty from this cause.

"The effect, however, of continued attack was much felt. We were paralyzed and afraid to move. All the boys felt that if we had only had some fighters (pursuit planes) to deal with their bombers we could have smashed the Germans."

The men said they had been handicapped by the work of spies, and one British private said a Norwegian radio operator had guided German planes until he was caught and executed.

"The place was full of spies," another soldier said. "Every move we made was known to the Germans almost as soon as we made it."

The Allied retreat to the coast was described by a veteran sergeant as "a marvelous piece of rearguard fighting."

"I have done a great many maneuvers in my time," he declared, "and this was just like any other except it was the real thing. We were fighting hard with nothing in our stomachs for thirty-six hours. I am proud to have fought with these lads."

LODGE TELLS OF ATTACK ON ALLIED CONVOY

American Gives Eyewitness Narrative Of Retreat From Norway

Sinking Of 3 Destroyers By German Bombers Is Pictured

MAY 8 1940

J. Norman Lodge arrived in Britain yesterday aboard a British warship after a series of adventures in Norway, during which he witnessed and reported on the action around Narvik and on the Namsos front. He is a native of Methuen, Mass., and is a veteran of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War.

By J. NORMAN LODGE
Associated Press Correspondent

A Northern British Port, May 7—An Allied expeditionary force from Namsos, Norway, landed intact today despite an attack by thirty-nine German bombers which sank three destroyers—the British Afridi, the French Bison and the Polish Grom.

Naval losses were comparatively small, and of the soldiers in convoy not a single man was lost.

With two other Americans, Bonny Powell, Fox Movietone cameraman, and Arthur Menken, Paramount Newsreel photographer, who were taken aboard at Namsos Thursday night at the urgent suggestion of British headquarters, I witnessed the entire battle last Friday when Nazi planes dived at the convoy.

One German plane was shot down. The convoy flagship, which was headquarters of British and French officers, narrowly escaped when a bomb hit the water but fifty yards to port. A series of incendiary bombs also narrowly missed.

The Bison was struck and the wounded and survivors were taken aboard another ship.

Shortly thereafter the bombers reassembled and dived on the Afridi. They hit her. She listed badly and the survivors were transferred.

After the rescues were made the power divers reappeared.

Sinking Of The Afridi

One, in a perfect spot to be concealed by the glare of the sun, dived nearly to the funnel tips and loosed a fatal bomb on the Afridi. She went down.

Six German planes appeared again, but excellent defense fire drove them off before they could drop a single explosive.

The troops were taken aboard the transports at Namsos under very difficult conditions and by the light of a fire started by a German bomb earlier in the day.

They were forced to sleep in passageways in ships much too cramped for half the number taken aboard.

The officers fared no better than the privates, several sleeping on iron decks for the entire five-day voyage.

A Bad Submarine Scare

On Saturday, May 4, there was no sign of German aircraft, but a bad submarine scare was experienced and a hasty search was made. During the scare a British patrol plane appeared, greatly raising the soldiers' morale (which never lagged much) to a new pitch.

MAY 8 1940

Men and officers jumped on the decks, shouting, "Hurrah, here's our aircraft."

Later the same day a series of Bristol Blenheim bombers (British) appeared.

Forgotten For 24 Hours

By this time some system had been devised aboard ship. When one company received corned-beef hash, another got marmalade and bread. With considerable swapping the men made out a meal.

The officers received exactly the same rations and bore exactly the same sufferings as the men.

Upon arriving at this northern British port, we (Lodge, Powell and Menken) were taken from British custody by French marines and placed below deck, where we were entirely forgotten—without food, water or fresh air—for twenty-four hours.

The only thing that saved the situation was the good-natured banter of our guards who spoke as bad English as we did French.

I went to Namsos on May 1 after receiving a tip from a trustworthy friend with whom I served in the World War that an Allied offensive was about to begin in that sector north of Trondheim.

"Arrested" By The British

Arriving at Namsos at 10.30 P. M. last Wednesday night, I was "arrested" promptly by the British, who held me incommunicado at a hotel.

On Thursday French troops streamed back from the front and embarked, as I later learned, the same night.

British officials, however, assured me the British had no intention of leaving the area. This was despite a radio broadcast from London at 6.30 P. M. that they already had left.

I was advised to get some sleep.

But before I had a chance to get a wink, I was ordered—and I mean ordered—to pack what kit I had and stand by.

In a great hustle-bustle, I was driven to the docks, where I was held while the troops were placed aboard.

I finally went aboard on Friday, May 3.

Mopping Up At Embarkation

During the embarkation, mopping-up squads of French and British blew up the Bangsund bridge, another bridge at Namalseid, barricaded a tunnel leading from Steinkjer to Namsos, blew up roads, and smashed the motorheads on every piece of transport in the Namsos area.

Later it was explained to met that it would have been impossible for me to return to Formofos, toward the Swedish border, where I was quartered. The roads were blown up and impassable, I was told.

My entire kit consisted of the clothing worn and a British overall suit—promptly stolen from me.

Cameramen's Mental Anguish

The American cameraman suffered terribly, when, after risking their lives throughout the entire Namsos campaign to photograph bombings, fires and exploding shells, they had to send their film to the London War Office aboard the sloop H. M. S. Bittern and from a hill watch a German dive-bombing attack sink the ship.

Powell, who is going through his eighth war as a cemeraman, said, "I should have been killed several times. I never have taken better pictures. I cried as I saw the Bittern go down."

SOVIET WAR CHIEF IS GIVEN NEW POST

Commissar Vorisholoff Is Named Assistant Chairman Of Moscow Council

Gives Way To Marshal Who Led Part Of Troops In Occupation Of Poland

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, May 7—The transfer of War Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff to a post as assistant chairman of the Council of Commissars and chairman of a Committee of Defense under the council, was announced tonight.

MAY 8 1940

Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, commander of the Kiev military district in southwestern Russia, who led part of the troops in the ocupation of Poland, was named Commissar of Defense in Voroshiloff's place.

Named Marshal

At the same time the military title of Marshal of the Soviet Union was conferred upon Timoshenko.

Others upon whom the honor was bestowed included Commander Boris M. Shaposhnikoff, army chief of staff and former commander of the Leningrad garrison who was decorated with the Order of Lenin during the Finnish campaign, and Commander Grigory Kulik.

The shakeup came as the Government announced that Russia's higher army officers designated heretofore only as commanders will be given titles ranging from Marshal of the Soviet Union to major general.

Change In Naval Titles

Likewise, naval officers of the higher brackets who also have had the same title will be designated in ranks from fleet admiral to rear admiral, said the announcement distributed by Tass.

Under the old system the military officers were designated as commanders of the first, second or third grade or as battalion, division and corps commanders.

Earlier in the day Moscow diplomatic quarters showed great interest in allegations by the Communist party newspaper Pravda that Finland "impudently wrecked" industrial properties in areas ceded to Russia by the treaty of March 13.

Refuse Comment

The Soviet Foreign Office and other Government sources, however, would not comment on the Pravda assertions that Finland had violated the peace treaty by sabotaging a huge paper plant which Pravda called the "pearl of the Karelian Isthmus" and other manufacturing enterprises in Keksholm, Kharlu, Ljaskela and Enso.

Neither Pravda nor any other Russian source mentioned any possible Soviet action as a sequel to the charges.

Pravda contrasted what it said was a scrupulous Russian observance of the spirit and letter of the treaty in leaving Petsamo and other relinquished places with the alleged Finnish action in wrecking or removing irreplaceable parts of machinery in several factories and power stations.

Replaced Windows

The paper said the Russians even replaced broken windows and swept the streets before they returned Petsamo to the Finns after the war, and cited a document allegedly signed by the Finns which said the northern region had been relinquished by the Russians with the port and all industrial plants in good working order.

Pravda published photographs of wreckage, saying they showed damage done to the Keksholm celluloid plant, and asserted that the Finns had failed to remove land mines from ceded areas, necessitating the removal of 1,100 pounds of dynamite by the incoming Russians.

"Why," Pravda asked, "did the Finnish command permit this impudent wrecking on territory ceded to the U. S. S. R.?"

territory should be handed over undamaged, Pravda cited a document allegedly signed by the Finns stating that the Petsamo district had been relinquished by the Russians with the port and all industrial plants in good working order.

The paper said that the Russians, who had occupied that Arctic district early in the conflict, had even swept the streets and replaced broken windows.

On the other hand, Pravda asserted, the Finns had destroyed the machinery in the plants they turned over to the Russians, wrecking or removing irreplaceable parts. Instances of this kind occurred in the towns of Kharlu, Ljaskela and Enso as well as Keksholm, the article said.

In addition, Pravda declared, the Finns had failed to remove their land mines from the ceded areas. The Russians occupying Keksholm were said to have removed 1,100 pounds of dynamite which the Finns had left unexploded.

"Why, we ask," the paper added, "did the Finnish Command permit impudent wrecking on territory ceded to the U. S. S. R.?"

Reds Accuse Them of Blowing Up Power Plants.

MOSCOW, May 7 (A. P.).—The newspaper Pravda, organ of the Communist party, today accused the Finns of blowing up power stations and industrial plants in the territory ceded to Soviet Russia after the peace treaty between the two countries had gone into effect.

The paper did not indicate what official steps might be taken.

Pravda published photographs of wreckage showing the damage which was done, it said, to the Keksholm cellulose plant as part of a deliberate plan of sabotage. The article said emphatically that the damage had not been caused by bombs during the fighting.

The Russo-Finnish peace treaty was signed at Moscow on March 13, after 105 days of war.

Pointing out that the treaty provided that all property in the ceded

KIRK QUITS BERLIN FOR U. S. VISIT SOON

MAY 8 1940

Charge d'Affaires Will Leave This Week End.

BERLIN, May 7 (A. P.).—Alexander Kirk, American charge d'affaires at Berlin, will leave for Rome over the coming week end en route to the United States for what he described as a strictly routine visit.

Mr. Kirk will probably make the trans-Atlantic crossing by air clipper and spend a week in Washington, during which he will confer with Secretary of State Hull. He is expected to return to Berlin in about three weeks.

While in the United States he plans to see his sister, Mrs. Albert B. Ruddock of Pasadena, Cal., who now is visiting in Virginia.

Mr. Kirk has been the American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin since the departure from the German capital of former Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson in November, 1938. Mr. Wilson, summoned home for report and consultation, subsequently resigned in order to take over a post in the State Department. Since then no Ambassador to Germany has been appointed, the whole work of the embassy falling in the hands of Mr. Kirk.

New Belgian Taxes Drafted

Three Proposed Levies Designed to Raise $30,000,000

BRUSSELS, May 7 (AP).—Three tax proposals designed to raise more than 900,000,000 Belgian francs $(30,000,000) for national defense were presented to the Chamber today by Finance Minister Camille Gut.

The proposals, which were referred to a special committee, included an additional income tax rising from 1 per cent on 5,000 francs ($165) to 5 per cent on 250,000 francs and over ($8,300).

The other proposals called for a cinema ticket tax and increased taxes on beer, coffee, sugar and cigarettes.

Edison Backs the Battleship

MAY 8 1940

Says U. S. Experts Believe German Air Power Is Unable to Destroy British Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 7 (A. P.).—United States naval experts were said by Secretary Edison today to believe that Germany will not be able to destroy or even seriously damage the British fleet by aerial bombardment, despite her superiority in the air.

The Secretary of the Navy also told the Senate Naval Committee that co-operation between aircraft and surface vessels of the American fleet was much closer than had been displayed by British aircraft and ships in the Scandinavian campaign.

If th e British fleet had received more support from aircraft, he asserted, it would have been able to cover Allied landing operations in Norway much more effectively. But it appeared, he continued, that the British had lacked either sufficient planes or planes of the right type.

Despite the advancement made in aircraft, Mr. Edison declared, the navy expects the battleship to remain the backbone of our first line of defense for many years to come, and he predicted that improvement in battleship design and advances in defense tactics eventually would wipe out the advantage aircraft now hold over surface ships.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Committee, asked Mr. Edison whether he thought German flyers would be able to drive the British fleet from the seas.

"Frankly I don't think the British battleships will be destroyed," Mr. Edison said. "I can't conceive that the Germans will be able seriously to damage the British fleet."

Declaring that America's floating forts could give a good account of themselves in any kind of battle in which they are properly employed, Mr. Edison reported that the lessons of the European war—especially the effects of the Nazi bombardment on British ships—were being studied closely by the navy.

There ought to be a great deal of investigation, he continued, to determine whether changes can be made in existing ships to meet the new offensive threat. He added that he doubts that many improvements could be made without design changes.

Senator Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, reported that he had a letter from Admiral Harold R. Stark, saying the navy would ask Congress for immediate appropriations to start work on most of the ships which would be authorized in a pending bill providing for an 11 per cent increase in the fleet.

U.S. Defenses Inadequate, Gerard and Baruch Claim

MAY 8 1940

Men Prominent in World War Urge Rapid Steps to Remedy Situation

WASHINGTON, May 7 (AP)—Two men high in the Nation's councils during World War days, James W. Gerard and Bernard Baruch, today pictured the country's defenses as inadequate and urged quick action to remedy the condition.

Gerard, who was ambassador to Germany before the United States entered the war, lunched with President Roosevelt and later told reporters that there would be "a great danger to the United States" should Germany win the present conflict. Encroachments in Latin America probably would follow such a victory, he indicated.

Would Expand in Aircraft

Declaring that aircraft was the deciding factor in the European war, he said:

"We should expand and expand and expand in our aircraft. Our young college people should be educated as airplane pilots."

Declaring that Hitler has not "lost a trick" and this his "timing is almost supernatural," he ventured the opinion that Britain and France "know they have got to die in their tracks before they can let the Germans win." They know that if they give up they are finished, he added.

Gerard's remarks came at a time when appropriations bills for the military establishments are pending in Congress. Late in the day, Senator Thomas (D-Okla.), chairman of an appropriations subcommittee on the Army supply bill, made public a letter from Baruch saying the United States was "inadequately prepared even for defense."

Would Organize

Baruch, who was chairman of the World War industries board, urged the creation of an organization "to provide for an orderly conduct of war," including the prevention of civilian profiteering. He also advised more money for the Army, and "educational orders" to American industry to prepare it for war-time production of war-time necessities.

"If we do not learn how to do things now," he said, "we will be caught in a jam if we are forced to."

A vigorous defense of the battleship, as opposed to aircraft, was entered before the Senate Naval Committee by Secretary of the Navy Edison, together with a prediction that German planes would prove incapable of destroying the British fleet.

"Battleships," he said, "were, are and will be for some time to come the backbone of our first line of national defense."

Improvements in design undoubtedly will be needed, he said, and changes in deck armor, to give better protection against aerial bombing, but the battleship is peculiarly suited to the special problem of defending the United States.

Support Lacking

He attributed British reverses in Scandinavian waters to the fact that Allied vessels were operating in narrow fjords and channels against land-based aircraft, and did not have sufficient support from Allied planes.

Thus he thought the fighting there was not truly representative of the real value of seapower against airpower. In case it becomes necessary to defend the United States against invasion, it was his opinion that American naval vessels would be operating on the open seas, where they would not be restricted as were the British vessels.

The ships loaded cargoes at eastern United States ports.

THE VATICAN'S CONCERN OVER THE POSSIBILITY OF SOME ACTION IN YUGOSLAVIA WAS INDICATED BY THE REPORT THAT POPE PIUS HAD CALLED ARCHBISHOP ARMJKIJE STEPINAC OF ZAGREB TO VATICAN CITY FOR AN AUDIENCE.

THE THUNDER OF THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT OPPOSITION'S ARTILLERY AGAINST CHAMBERLAIN IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS WAS HEARD OVER THE LONDON NEWS BROADCAST UNTIL INTERFERENCE BLOTTED OUT THE SENDING STATION.

ITALIAN NEWSPAPERS, DESCRIBING THE PARLIAMENTARY BATTLE AS "THE ONLY BIG FIGHT IN WHICH THE ENGLISH ARE MASTERS IN EUROPE," PREDICTED BRITAIN WOULD LOSE THE WAR REGARDLESS OF WHETHER CHAMBERLAIN REMAINED OR DEPARTED.

RESTO DEL CARLINO OF BOLOGNO SAID, IN FACT, THAT ITALY PREFERS TO SEE CHAMBERLAIN REMAIN AS PRIME MINISTER SINCE THAT WILL PLEASE THE GERMANS.

"CHAMBERLAIN IN POWER IS A GUARANTEE THAT THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR ON THE FRENCH AND BRITISH SIDE WILL REMAIN WEAK, TARDY AND INCONCLUSIVE," THE NEWSPAPER SAID.

"THIS IS NOT A WAR OF VINDICTIVE UMBRELLA-TOTING OLDERS BUT OF READY, AUDACIOUS MEN, HENCE

NEW YORK, MAY 7-(AP)-REAR ADMIRAL CLARK H.WOODWARD, COMMANDANT OF THE THIRD NAVAL DISTRICT, DECLARED FLATLY TODAY THAT "NO BATTLESHIP HAS YET BEEN SUNK BY AN AIRPLANE" AND CITED U.S. NAVY TESTS TO SUPPORT HIS ASSERTION.

"THEN WE TRIED TO SINK THE OLD VIRGINIA, LYING AT ANCHOR, A STATIONARY TARGET. IT REQUIRED 16 BOMBS TO SINK HER. THEN IN THE CASE OF THE OLD NEW JERSEY, LATER, IT TOOK TWENTY 2,000-POUND BOMBS AND TWENTY 600-POUNDERS DROPPED AT HER TO GET HER DOWN. AND YOU MUST RECALL THAT THOSE WERE SHIPS THAT WERE AND WOULD BE NOW OBSOLETE, AND MODERN SHIPS ARE BUILT WITH PROTECTION AGAINST BOMBING."

ADMIRAL WOODWARD SPOKE AT A LUNCHEON AT THE HOTEL BILTMORE OF THE JUNIOR EMERGENCY RELIEF SOCIETY. AMONG THE GUESTS WERE THE BRITISH CONSUL-GENERAL AND THE FRENCH DEPUTY CONSUL.

BECAUSE OF THE SCRAPPING OF SHIPS UNDER THE WASHINGTON AND LONDON TREATIES, HE SAID IN SPEAKING OF THIS COUNTRY'S NAVAL STRENGTH, "WE SHALL HAVE ONLY 75 PERCENT AS MANY SHIPS AS IN 1922 WHEN ALL THE VESSELS ARE FINISHED THAT ARE NOW BUILDING."

LONDON,MAY 7-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS A PARTIAL TEXT OF PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY (1,500):

X X X BY THIS TIME OUR MEN FROM NAMSOS AND ANDALSNES ARE BACK AGAIN AND THE CAMPAIGN IN SOUTHERN NORWAY IS AT AN END X X X I THINK WE MAY COUNT OURSELVES FORTUNATE THAT WE DID NOT LOSE MORE THAN ONE BRITISH AND ONE FRENCH DESTROYER X X X.

WHATEVER CRITICISM MAY BE MADE ABOUT THIS, I AM SURE THAT EVERYONE WILL AGREE THAT THE TROOPS WHICH HAD BEEN ENGAGED IN THIS CAMPAIGN HAD CARRIED OUT THEIR TASK WITH MAGNIFICENT GALLANTRY X X X.

THEY DISTINGUISHED THEMSELVES IN EVERY RESPECT AND, MAN FOR MAN, THEY SHOWED THEMSELVES TO BE SUPERIOR TO THEIR FOES X X X.

THE NEWS OF OUR WITHDRAWAL FROM SOUTHERN NORWAY CAME AS A PROFOUND SHOCK X X X.

MAY 8 1940

MINISTERS, OF COURSE, MUST BE EXPECTED TO BE BLAMED FOR EVERYTHING IT WAS REPORTS EMANATING FROM STOCKHOLM WHICH MAY HAVE BEEN INVENTED BY THE ENEMY AND WHICH ROUSED EXPECTATIONS WHICH WERE NEVER JUSTIFIED AND CERTAINLY NEVER ENDORSED BY ANY MINISTER.

WE ARE DOING OUR BEST TO DAMP DOWN THESE UNFOUNDED REPORTS, BUT WE HAD TO BE VERY CAREFUL NOT TO SAY ANYTHING TO INFORM THE ENEMY OF THE TRUE SITUATION. I AM AFRAID IN THE CIRCUMSTANCES, SHOCK AND DISAPPOINTMENT WERE INEVITABLE X X X.

I DO NOT WISH TO EXTENUATE ANYTHING BUT AT THE SAME TIME I HOPE WE SHALL NOT EXAGGERATE THE EXTENT OR IMPORTANCE OF THE CHECK WHICH WE HAVE RECEIVED.

THE WITHDRAWAL FROM SOUTH NORWAY IS NOT COMPARABLE TO THE WITHDRAWAL FROM GALLIPOLI. THERE WERE NO LARGE FORCES INVOLVED. THERE WAS NOT MUCH MORE THAN A SINGLE DIVISION.

30.24-2121

30.24-2121

OUR LOSSES, THEREFORE, WERE NOT REALLY GREAT IN NUMBER NOR WAS THERE ANY CONSIDERABLE OR VALUABLE AMOUNT OF STORES LEFT BEHIND X X X THE GERMANS HAD FAR BIGGER LOSSES -- WARSHIPS, PLANES, IN TRANSPORTS AND IN MEN X X X.

WE HAVE SUFFERED A CERTAIN LOSS OF PRESTIGE X X X A CERTAIN COLOR HAS BEEN GIVEN TO THE FALSE LEGEND OF GERMAN INVINCINIBILITY ON LAND X X X SOME DISCOURAGEMENT HAS BEEN CAUSED TO OUR FRIENDS AND X X X OUR ENEMIES ARE GROWING X X X.

FRANCE HAS SHOWN REMARKABLE STEADINESS AND, AS IN THIS COUNTRY, THE ONLY EFFECT OF A REVERSE IS TO STIFFEN HER DETERMINATION.

THE REACTION HAS BEEN MORE SERIOUS IN SWEDEN THAN ANYWHERE ELSE AND I FULLY APPRECIATE THE REASON WHY X X X IF THE SWEDISH GOVERNMENT AND PEOPLE DECIDE FOR A POLICY OF NEUTRALITY IN THE FACE OF PRESSURE I TRUST THAT AT LEAST THAT NEUTRALITY WILL BE STRICTLY IMPARTIAL AS BETWEEN THE BELLIGERENTS X X X.

IT MIGHT BE ASKED WHY THE GOVERNMENT ATTEMPTED AN EXPEDITION TO TRONDHEIM WHEN THEY MUST HAVE KNOWN FROM THE BEGINNING THAT THEY WOULD BE FACED WITH A LOCAL AIR SUPERIORITY AND THE STRONG PROBABILITY THAT REINFORCEMENTS WOULD BE HURRIED UP THROUGH THE VALLEYS LEADING FROM THE DIRECTION OF OSLO X X X.

WE DID REALIZE THAT THIS EXPEDITION WOULD BE FULL OF RISK AND THAT IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT TO TAKE TRONDHEIM AND DIFFICULT TO HOLD IT X X X.

MAY 8 1940

ON THE OTHER HAND, WE HAD TO CONSIDER THE EFFECT ON THE NORWEGIAN GOVERNMENT, THE NORWEGIAN FORCES AND THE NORWEGIAN PEOPLE IF WE MADE NO ATTEMPT TO HOLD CENTRAL NORWAY. WE RECEIVED THE MOST URGENT AND REPEATED APPEALS FROM THE NORWEGIAN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF TO ATTACK TRONDHEIM AT ALL COSTS X X X.

I FEEL MYSELF THAT IF WE REFUSED TO ANSWER THE CALL X X X WE SHOULD HAVE JUSTIFIED THE REPROACH THAT OUR ONLY OBJECT IN SCANDINAVIA WAS THE IRON ORES OF SWEDEN AND THAT WE CARED NOTHING FOR THE FREEDOM OF SMALL NATIONS.

IT HAS BEEN SUGGESTED THAT THE ANGLO-FINNISH FORCE WHICH WAS DESIGNED FOR THE ASSISTANCE OF FINLAND SHOULD NEVER HAVE BEEN DISPERSED X X X IF THE ARGUMENT IS THAT BY DISPERSING THE ANGLO-FINNISH FORCE WE MISSED AN OPPORTUNITY OF SUCCESSFULLY ATTACKING AFTER THE GERMANS HAD DELIVERED THEIR BLOW, THAT ARGUMENT IS FOUNDED ON A COMPLETE MISCONCEPTION X X X THE RATE OF DISPATCH OF TROOPS TO NORWAY WAS NOT GOVERNED BY THE AVAILABILITY OF TROOPS IN THIS COUNTRY BUT BY THE SPEED AT WHICH THEY COULD BE LANDED IN THOSE VERY FEW PORTS WHICH ALONE WERE OPEN TO US TO USE X X X.

MAY 8 1940

WE HAD REASON TO BELIEVE THAT A RELATIVELY SMALL FORCE WOULD BE NECESSARY TO OCCUPY THESE PLACES UNTIL LARGER FORCES HAD BEEN LANDED, BUT AFTER THE FIRST FORCE HAD BEEN LANDED IT WAS INSUFFICIENT TO RESTORE THE POSITION X X X X

I BELIEVE THE FAILURE OF THE PLAN WAS DUE TO TWO FACTORS. FIRST OF ALL, OUR INABILITY TO SECURE AIRDROMES FROM WHICH WE COULD OPERATE OUR FIGHTERS, AND, SECONDLY, THE RAPID ARRIVAL OF GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS X X X X. ABSENCE OF FIGHTERS ENABLED THE ENEMY TO ATTACK OUR COMMUNICATIONS AND TO HINDER OUR REINFORCEMENT WHILST HIS OWN LAND COMMUNICATIONS ENABLED HIM TO BRING UP AN EVER-INCREASING SUPERIORITY OF STRENGTH.

MAY 8 1940

IT BECAME CLEAR THAT WE COULD ONLY MAINTAIN OUR FORCE IN THE TRONDHEIM REGION BY SUCH A CONCENTRATION OF MEN MATERIALS AND AIR

CRAFT AS WOULD HAVE DRAWN OFF AN ALTOGETHER UNDUE PROPORTION OF OUR TOTAL FORCES. IN THE SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES WE DECIDED TO CARRY THE CAMPAIGN IN NORWAY ELSEWHERE WITH GREATER VIGOR AND EFFECT X X X X.

I ASK THE HONORABLE MEMBERS NOT TO FORM ANY HASTY OPINIONS X X X X IT IS QUITE OBVIOUS THAT THE GERMANS HAVE MADE CERTAIN GAINS. IT IS EQUALLY CLEAR THAT THEY HAVE PAID A HEAVY PRICE FOR THEM. IT IS TOO EARLY TO SAY ON WHICH SIDE THE BALANCE IS FINALLY INCLINED BECAUSE THE CAMPAIGN IS NOT YET FINISHED X X X X.

ALTHOUGH WE WILL GIVE ALL THE HELP TO NORWAY THAT WE CAN AND AS SOON AS WE CAN, WE MUST NOT FORGET THAT THERE ARE OTHER FRONTS WHICH MIGHT AT ANY MOMENT BLAZE UP INTO A CONFLAGRATION.

GERMANY WITH HER VAST AND WELL-EQUIPPED ARMIES IS SO PLACED THAT SHE COULD AT ANY MOMENT ATTACK ANY ONE OF A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT POINTS. WE WANT TO BE READY TO MEET THAT ATTACK WHEREVER IT MAY COME.

A MINISTER WHO SHOWS ANY SIGNS OF CONFIDENCE IS ALWAYS CALLED COMPLACENT. IF HE FAILS TO DO SO, HE IS LABELLED DEFEATIST. FOR MY PART, I TRY TO STEER A MIDDLE COURSE NEITHER RAISING UNDUE EXPECTATIONS WHICH ARE UNLIKELY TO BE FULFILLED NOR MAKING THE PEOPLE'S FLESH CREEP BY PAINTING PICTURES OF UNMITIGATED GLOOM X X X X

I DO NOT THINK THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY YET REALIZE THE EXTENT OR THE IMMINENCE OF THE THREAT WHICH IS IMPENDING AGAINST US X X X X LET US BEWARE OF BICKERING AND DIVISION AMONGST OURSELVES WHEN PRESENTLY WE MAY BE FACED BY WAR IN ITS MOST VIOLENT FORM DIRECTED AGAINST THIS COUNTRY IN THE HOPE OF BREAKING UP OUR COURAGE AND WILL POWER X X X X

TO SUGGEST THAT THIS MINISTER OR THAT MINISTER IS MORE RESPONSIBLE THAN HIS COLLEAGUES FOR THIS OR THAT COURSE OF ACTION IS AS UNWORTHY AS IT IS UNFAIR. THERE IS NO DIVISION AMONG US. ALL OF US HAVE ONE THOUGHT, AND THAT IS HOW WE MAY EACH OF US MAKE OUR BEST CONTRIBUTION TO WIN THE WAR.

ON THE ELEVENTH OF LAST MONTH, I ANNOUNCED THE RETIREMENT OF LORD CHATFIELD. I ASKED THE FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY TO SUCCEED HIM AS CHAIRMAN OF MILITARY COORDINATION IN THE CABINET. MY RIGHT HONORABLE FRIEND (CHURCHILL) READILY ACCEPTED THE POSITION, BUT AFTER HE HAD HAD SOME EXPERIENCE OF IT, MR. CHURCHILL SUGGESTED TO ME THAT IN ORDER TO MAKE HIS ASSISTANCE TO THE CABINET MORE EFFECTIVE, IT WOULD BE A GOOD THING TO PUT HIM IN CLOSER CONTACT WITH THE CHIEFS OF STAFF X X X X.

ARRANGEMENTS WERE MADE UNDER WHICH MR. CHURCHILL WAS AUTHORIZED BY THE CABINET ON BEHALF OF THE MILITARY COORDINATION COMMITTEE TO GIVE GUIDANCE AND DIRECTION TO THE CHIEFS OF STAFF COMMITTEE.

X X X X FOR PURPOSES I HAVE MENTIONED, MR. CHURCHILL WILL BE PROVIDED WITH A SMALL STAFF UNDER A SENIOR STAFF OFFICER, MAJOR GENERAL ISMAY, WHO HAS BEEN APPOINTED AN ADDITIONAL MEMBER OF THE CHIEFS OF STAFF COMMITTEE. NO DOUBT OTHER CHANGES IN FORM OF GOVERNMENT OR THE FUNCTIONS OF INDIVIDUAL MINISTERS MAY FROM TIME TO TIME SUGGEST THEMSELVES.

MAY 8 1940

I THINK VERY LIKELY X X X AS FAR AS I AM CONCERNED I SHALL ENDEAVOR TO KEEP MY MIND OPEN TO ANY FRESH CONSIDERATIONS AND TO TAKE ANY STEPS WHICH MAY SEEM TO BE CALLED FOR IF THEY WILL HELP THE COUNTRY.

ONCE AGAIN I WANT TO URGE MEMBERS THAT IN THESE STRENUOUS DAYS WE SHOULD DO BETTER TO OCCUPY OURSELVES WITH INCREASING OUR WAR EFFORT -- RATHER THAN IN DISPUTING ABOUT FORMS OF GOVERNMENT -- IN THE PRODUCTION OF MATERIAL OF PLANES, TANKS, GUNS, MUNITIONS AND ALL THE COUNTLESS ARTICLES AND EQUIPMENT WHICH ARE REQUIRED TO FIT

30.24-2123

OUT OUR WEAPONS AND MAKE THEM USABLE. IT IS IN THE PRODUCTION OF THESE THINGS THAT WE WANT ORGANIZATION, ENERGY AND GOODWILL.

AS FAR AS WE ARE CONCERNED IN THE GOVERNMENT WE ARE DOING ALL WE CAN TO OVERTAKE THE START WHICH GERMANY HAS OBTAINED DURING HER LONG YEARS OF PREPARATION. WE ARE GETTING TODAY THE WHOLEHEARTED COOPERATION OF THE EMPLOYERS AND WORKERS.

I WANT ALSO TO GET THE COOPERATION OF MEMBERS OF ALL PARTIES (AN OPPOSITION SHOUT OF "NO") IN THE WORK WHICH EVERYONE RECOGNIZES TO BE THE PRIME NEED OF THE DAY.

WE DO NOT SET OURSELVES UP TO BE FAULTLESS AND AS BEING ABOVE RECEIVING HELP FROM OTHERS WHO ARE WILLING TO HELP. LET US THEN, BEFORE FRESH TRIALS COME UPON US, PUT ALL OUR STRENGTH INTO THIS WORK OF PREPARING FOR IT. WE SHALL STEADILY INCREASE OUR STRENGTH IF WE OURSELVES ARE ABLE TO DELIVER OUR BLOWS WHEN AND WHERE WE WILL.

THE WAR TODAY

MAY 8 1940

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

IF I HAD A SEAT IN THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS, IN OPPOSITION TO THE GOVERNMENT, I THINK THAT IN TODAY'S CRITICAL DEBATE ON THE CONDUCT OF THE BATTLE OF NORWAY I SHOULD ASK PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN WHETHER HE AND HIS MINISTERS HAVE BEEN UNDERESTIMATING THE CAPABILITIES OF HERR HITLER.

PROBABLY AS A MEMBER OF THE MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS I SHOULD ARGUE THAT THE LEADERS HAVE ALLOWED THEMSELVES TO BE OUTSMARTED CONSISTENTLY.

I SHOULD SHOCK THE AUGUST ASSEMBLAGE IN ITS OLD WORLD SETTING BY ASSERTING CRUDELY THAT ON MORE THAN ONE OCCASION THE NAZI CHIEFTAIN HAS SHOWN THE ALLIES THE PEA UNDER THE SHELL, AND THEN FOOLED THEM BY SHIFTING UNDER THEIR VERY EYES.

IT IS POSSIBLE THAT MY VIEW OF THE POSITION WOULD BE WRONG AND UNJUST. HOWEVER, MY IMPULSE TO INQUIRE ALONG THAT LINE WOULD BE DUE TO THE KNOWLEDGE THAT HITLER'S CALIBER HAS BEEN WIDELY MISJUDGED BOTH IN EUROPE AND AMERICA.

IF ENGLAND AND FRANCE HAD RECOGNIZED BACK IN 1933 THAT THEY WERE UP AGAINST AN UNUSUAL BRAIN THEY MIGHT HAVE FORESTALLED THE PRESENT CONFLICT.

WHETHER YOU LIKE HITLER OR WHETHER YOU DON'T, WHETHER YOU BELIEVE HIM TO BE A BENEFACTOR OR ONE OF THE MOST UNSCRUPULOUS SCOUNDRELS WHO EVER LIVED, THE FACT STILL REMAINS THAT HE HAS A MENTAL EQUIPMENT AND TALENT FOR LEADERSHIP WHICH PLACE HIM AMONG THE STRIKING PERSONALITIES OF HISTORY.

LORD BALDWIN, FORMER BRITISH PRIME MINISTER, WHEN IN NEW YORK NOT LONG AGO SUMMED UP HITLER AS HAVING A "BRILLIANT" BUT "ABNORMAL" MIND. THE TROUBLE WITH A LOT OF STATESMEN IS THAT THEY ACCEPT THE "ABNORMALITY" BUT REFUSE TO ADMIT THE BRILLIANCE, BECAUSE OF HATRED OF HITLER AND HIS DOCTRINES.

LONG BEFORE THIS WAR STARTED I MADE STATEMENTS SIMILAR TO THE ABOVE IN THE COURSE OF A TALK BEFORE AN AUDIENCE OF DISTINGUISHED MEN IN NEW YORK. I SAID ENGLAND AND FRANCE WERE RIDING FOR TROUBLE BY UNDERESTIMATING HITLER.

MAY 8 1940

WHEN I HAD FINISHED AND HAD THROWN THE MEETING OPEN FOR QUESTIONS, A WELL-KNOWN UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR GOT UP AND ASKED WITH CONSIDERABLE FIRE IN HIS EYE UPON WHAT BASIS I GAVE HITLER CREDIT FOR SUCH CAPABILITIES.

I DID SOME FAST THINKING, FOR A SPEAKER WHO ALLOWS HIMSELF TO GET INVOLVED IN AN ARGUMENT WITH ONE OF HIS AUDIENCE IS ASKING FOR TROUBLE. THEN I STARTED AND, WITHOUT ANY EXPRESSION OF PERSONAL OPINION, NAMED HITLER'S ACHIEVEMENTS.

I POINTED TO THE FACT THAT HE HAD PULLED HIMSELF UP BY HIS BOOTSTRAPS TO THE HIGHEST POSITION IN HIS GREAT COUNTRY. THEN FOLLOWED THE OUTSTANDING EVENTS INVOLVED IN HITLER'S TEARING UP OF THE TREATY OF VERSAILLES AND HIS INVASIONS, MANY OF WHICH SHOCKED THE ENTIRE WORLD. WHEN I HAD FINISHED I ASKED THE PROFESSOR IF THAT ANSWERED HIS QUESTION.

30.24-2125

"YES, IT DOES," HE REPLIED. "YOU ARE QUITE RIGHT. I NEVER HAD THOUGHT OF IT IN THOSE TERMS BEFORE."

I RAISE THIS SUBJECT NOW, NOT BECAUSE I HAVE ANY BRIEF FOR ADOLF HITLER BUT BECAUSE THE OUTCOME OF THE WAR MAY HINGE ON RECOGNITION OF HIS VAST CAPABILITIES BY HIS OPPONENTS. THE ARGUMENT THAT HE UTTERLY IGNORES ALL MORAL LAWS DOESN'T ALTER THE FACT OF HIS MENTAL ABILITY.

OF HITLER'S CAPABILITIES AS A LEADER I HAVE NO DOUBT, HAVING WORKED ABOUT HIM AND SEEN HIM IN ACTION. AS FOR HIS ABILITY TO SIZE UP SITUATIONS ACCURATELY, THAT IS SHOWN IN HIS ACCOMPLISHMENTS. HE COULDN'T WIN BY ACCIDENT OR SHEER LUCK ALL THE TIME.

HITLER IS REPORTED FROM BERLIN TO BE MAKING EVERY VITAL DECISION AND PLAN, HIMSELF, BOTH MILITARY AND POLITICAL. HIS ARMY CHIEFS ARE CARRYING OUT HIS ORDERS BLINDLY, SOMETIMES AGAINST THEIR OWN BETTER JUDGMENT, BECAUSE OF THEIR FAITH IN HIS FORESIGHT.

THE SOONER THE ALLIES RECOGNIZE THAT ADOLF HITLER IS THE BRAIN BEHIND THE GERMAN MILITARY AND POLITICAL STRATEGY, THE BETTER IT WILL BE FOR THEIR CAUSE. THEY MUST TAKE INTO ACCOUNT ALSO THE FACT THAT AS ABSOLUTE DICTATOR HE CAN STRIKE WITH EXCEEDING SPEED.

HITLER IS A DANGEROUS MAN TO UNDERESTIMATE. THE TIME HAS ARRIVED WHEN THE ALLIES WILL HAVE TO SELECT THEIR MOST TALENTED BRAINS AND USE THEIR UTMOST INITIATIVE TO MEET HIS CHALLENGE. THE INQUEST IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY IS AN EXCELLENT THING TO SPUR THE GOVERNMENT TO GREATER INITIATIVE.

Chamberlain Escapes Defeat, 281 to 200, 132 Abstaining; May Offer to Quit Today; London Press Predicts Government's Fall

CHAMBERLAIN REGIME SAVED BY NARROW MARGIN, BUT FOES STILL DEMAND RESIGNATION

Outcry Against Prime Minister Continues After He Wins Test By Only 81 Votes, With 134 Members Abstaining—40 Followers Desert Him

Enemies Hail Result As Victory And Some Predict Premier May Quit Soon—National Government, Including Labor And Liberals, Also Suggested

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, May 9—The Daily Mail in a front-page editorial today declared the Government of 71-year-old Neville Chamberlain "must resign" and advocated the selection of 79-year-old David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister, as his successor with Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in complete control of strategy.

MAY 9 1940

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, May 8—Neville Chamberlain remained the master of Britain's war Government by the narrow margin of eighty-one votes tonight after beating off for the moment the thunder of criticism which in two days of historic House of Commons debate had threatened his Ministry for its surrender in central and southern Norway.

The Government carried a vote on a question of confidence at the conclusion of Winston Churchill's calm, firm, almost deprecatory speech, by 281 Tory votes to 200 for the combined opposition.

134 Are Absent Or Fail To Vote

The Conservatives' position was clouded, however, by the 134 absentees or abstentions, who, with those voting in opposition, make a majority of the 615 members. The British Press Association said 130 of these were absentees.

Moreover, an estimated forty members who normally are Government supporters voted with the opposition.

Some political observers speculated on whether the 71-year-old Prime Minister, chastened by the unexpectedly large opposition vote, might follow the example of the former Premier of France, Edouard Daladier, and resign. There was nothing, however, to confirm any such intention.

Opponents See Vote As Victory

Men who had hammered at the Government for two days took the vote as a victory rather than as a defeat. Jubilantly they sang "Rule Brittania," and shouted "Go! Resign!" as the gaunt Chamberlain left the House.

Should the man who led Britain to Munich and then to war to destroy Hitlerism actually go to the King to resign, ... he ...

his most likely successor would be Churchill or Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, possibly at the head of a government of all parties.

But the political situation was in a great state of uncertainty.

One possibility, however, was that Chamberlain would now attempt to form a national government of all parties, inviting Labor and Liberals to take portfolios in his Cabinet.

The Labor party convention Monday may decide to reverse its decision not to participate in the Government.

Reconstruction Expected

It was evident the opposition expects Chamberlain — a picture of weariness at the end of the seven-hour tumult—at least to reconstruct his Cabinet to satisfy their scornful condemnations of "muddling."

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Minister; Oliver Stanley, Secretary for War, and Leslie Burgin, Supply Minister, were members mentioned as likely to go.

A day of drama and excitement such as ancient Westminister has not witnessed in years was capped when Churchill, a Tory rebel who fired many a barb at the Chamberlain escutcheon in the days of appeasement, rose to make the closing speech for the Government.

Accepts Responsibility

Accepting "full responsibility" for the Admiralty's decision not to attempt to force Trondheim fjord—a blow which admiral of the fleet, Sir Rogers Keyes, yesterday said would have left Adolf Hitler holding losing cards in Norway—Churchill said Britain had 12,000 troops facing 120,000 Germans and had the choice of getting them out or "leaving them to be destroyed."

His surprisingly mild statement turned into a sort of cat and dog fight when the First Lord, chin jutting out, angrily shouted at hecklers, "You dare not listen to argument," and added the most devastating rejoinder known to British politics:

"It's not British!"

The tone of his speech was of a man who has lost some of his old buoyant optimism.

Sudden Decision

Earlier the tense drama had seen the sudden decision of the Labor party to follow the debate with a motion amounting to a question of confidence which would force Chamberlain to resign if he lost.

Stung by the bitter words of Laborite Herbert Morrison, Chamberlain crumpled his notes in his pocket and sprang from his seat to cry, "I accept the challenge, I welcome it, indeed! At least we shall see who is with us and who is against us. I call on my friends to support us in the lobby tonight!"

After it was over the opposition M. P.'s said the flight of forty or more Government supporters to the other camp and the large number of absentees seriously weakened the Prime Minister's control of his own party.

The opposition was surprised by its own strength and said it portended the early fall of the Government.

The vote contrasted with the Government's 292-129 victory on the first of five wartime motions of censure. That was on the question of restricting the sale of Palestine land to Jews, however, and did not represent in any way the test of today's ballot.

"Always Worsted"

Earlier in the debate David Lloyd George, once more the Welsh lion of old, roared his demand for the overthrow of Chamberlain.

He brought his unequaled prestige in Parliament and nation to bear by declaring the greatest contribution Chamberlain could make to the war effort of Great Britain would be to "sacrifice his seals of office."

Warning that the nation stands in "greater jeopardy" than in the last war, the white-manned Premier to that other conflict cried:

"The Prime Minister (Chamberlain) has met this formidable foe—Hitler—in peace and in war. He has always been worsted!

"Everything that has been done has been half-hearted, ineffective, without drive and unintelligent."

Then, his voice quivering with anger at the thought that Britain had failed to help Norway with any result, the old Welshman declared:

"Britain's promissory notes are now rubbish in the market!"

"Shame, Shame"

Shocked Conservatives, packed in the steep Government benches behind the Cabinet, muttered, "Shame! shame!"

Churchill got up in an effort to stem the tide of Lloyd George's opposition but the old man shouted him down.

"I hope Mr. Churchill will not allow himself to be converted into an air-raid shelter to keep the splinters from hitting his colleagues!" he snapped.

Then, shaking his finger, he turned again on Chamberlain for his allusion to his "friends in the House."

"It is not a question," he said, "of who is the Prime Minister's friend. This is a far bigger issue."

Morrison, 52-year-old head of London's municipal government and the son of a London bobby, attacked the Government for hiding behind Churchill, "putting him in a shop window" whenever it was in trouble, letting him speak last tonight so there could be no counter-attack on it, "like a chief witness who refuses to go into the witness box."

Singling out Chamberlain, Sir Samuel Hoare and Sir John Simon for his especial attack, Morrison said that if this inner circle of Ministers stays in office "we run a grave risk of losing the war."

There were thunderous Opposition cheers.

MAY 9 1940

Yet Chamberlain, with his vigorous comeback, was cheered to the rafters.

"National Danger"

"This is a time of national danger," he shot back at Morrison. "We are facing a relentless enemy who must be fought by the united action of this country. . . .

"What Morrison has said . . . makes it graver still. . . .

"None of us desire to hold onto office for a moment longer than we retain the confidence of this House.

"I do not seek to evade criticism, but I say to my friends in the House—and I have friends in the House—no government can prosecute a war efficiently unless it has public and parliamentary support."

Shortly before the debate ended the opposition gained the open support of Alfred Duff Cooper, former First Lord of the Admiralty, for some time a Conservative rebel. He said he would vote against the Government because this was no time for "any man to wash his hands, like Pontius Pilate, and take neither one side nor the other."

He made strange company for Lloyd George, who once called him "a petulant little pipsqueak."

Hoare Cites Losses

Sir Samuel Hoare, the Government's No. 2 speaker, today sought to find a bright lining in the Norwegian storm clouds, but there was no evidence that his array of figures salved the opposition.

He said that thirty German planes had been shot down by eighteen British Gladiator fighters and that the German losses in the last month of operations were "three times those of Britain."

He disclosed a British fighter base on a frozen Norse lake had been bombed without quarter with no protection from anti-aircraft guns, and in the House of Lords, Lord Hankey, Minister without portfolio, revealed that one of the greatest British losses in the campaign was the sinking, in convoy, of a ship loaded with anti-aircraft guns and other valuable stores—by a submarine.

Gave Nazis Mastery

This and the lack of British fighter bases gave the Germans their air mastery and contributed to the Allied withdrawal from central Norway.

The House took in stony silence Sir Samuel's declaration that Britain still does not have enough planes and that "we have to make every effort to give the air force many more machines than they have at present."

In the House of Lords debate Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax said that the "Allied action was not deserving of much of the hard judgment which has been extended to it."

No "Apologetic Gesture"

He said he was "in no way disposed to appear before you with what I may call the apologetic gesture of a defendant."

The Foreign Minister asserted that the failure to send any troops to Norway "would certainly, I think, have exposed us—not that I greatly care about it—to still stronger criticism."

Lord Halifax said "the war is going to be won by hard facts and not by prestige. The damage of our withdrawal has been very great—great in its effect on neutral judgment and thought in many parts of the world."

"We were invited to consider all the faults of the Government and a vote of censure is to be taken quite unexpectedly with only this little notice on the adjournment tonight.

Forecasts More Danger

"Our numerical deficiency in the air—despite our superiority in both men and materials—has condemned us and will condemn us for some time to come to a great deal of difficulty and suffering and danger which we must endure with firmness until more favorable conditions can be established—as assuredly they will be."

Churchill said the reason why a big ship was not sent to Narvik in the first attack by five destroyers was because the only ship available was a battle cruiser and "we thought it would be a great damage to the fleet if we lost a battle cruiser."

The Admiralty waited until it had the Warspite there, he said and "it looked much easier the day after than it did the day before.

"It was a great relief to find that no controlled mine fields were laid."

Method Too Costly

Replying to a question by A. V. Alexander concerning surface ships in the Skagerrak, Churchill said "the immense enemy air strength which can be brought to bear on our patrolling craft has made this method far too costly to be adopted."

"Losses which would be inflicted on a steady surface patrol from the air would undoubtedly very soon constitute a naval disaster," he continued.

"We therefore adopted the submarine blockade as the only method at our disposal," he said. "There is a great deal of difference about being responsible for an order which may lose several valuable ships and expressing an opinion without such responsibility."

A German submarine which followed the Warspite was sunk by aircraft of the Warspite herself, the First Lord said proudly.

Had the Warspite been sunk, he said, critics would have screamed, "Who was the madman who sent one of our most valuable ships into waters where it could so easily fall a prey to many dangers?"

"We are asked why we did not go into Trondheim, Bergen and other

Churchill's Speech

MAY 9

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 8—Winston Churchill, trump card defender of an imperiled Chamberlain Government in the closing hours of House of Commons debate on war policy, declared frankly tonight that "one of the causes of our difficulties (in Norway) was that we had failed to achieve air parity with Germany."

Air parity is considered vital to Britain's security, he said, intimating that this was one reason why Britain did not take the initiative.

"A new issue was sprung in the House at 5 o'clock," Churchill said.

30-24-2127

ports," he said. "My view has always been fixed on Narvik."

"When the German invasion occurred," Churchill continued, "we were bound to go to the aid of the Norwegians" and Trondheim was chosen for the attack.

12,000 Men There

Scornful of suggestions that the navy withdrew from its undertakings, Churchill said, "the reembarkation of our 12,000 men—for that is all there were—less than a division—was accomplished with very great skill and I may say with very good luck."

Churchill said there were 120,000 Germans in central and southern Norway, and it was necessary to withdraw the Allied forces "or leave them to be destroyed."

"The withdrawal saved us from a most disastrous entanglement," he said, adding, "I take the fullest responsibility myself, together with the Prime Minister and other Ministers concerned, for having accepted the advice of our experts."

Churchill said he thought the experts were right at the time and he saw no reason to alter his views "on what I have learned since."

The German advance was so rapid, he said, that the Norwegians were unable to destroy roads and railways.

Bombing Barred Landings

The bombing of Namsos and Andalsnes prevented the landing of large reinforcements and even of artillery for the forces already landed, Churchill said, and "by the twenty-fifth the possibility of the arrival south of Trondheim of large German forces thoroughly equipped had to be foreseen."

Churchill said it might have been possible to send naval forces into Trondheim—which Admiral Keyes begged to do—"but the cost would have been disproportionate to the particular advantage to be gained."

British ships had scored "a ghastly success," Churchill said, adding "7,000 or 8,000 Germans have been drowned."

Easier By Land

Churchill said the navy was "perfectly ready to carry troops" into Trondheim, but the plan was abandoned "because on the seventeenth the two diversionary landings (at Namsos and Andalsnes) had made good progress and it seemed easier to capture Trondheim by this method than to incur the heavy cost of a direct attack.

"The Admiralty never withdrew their offer or considered the operation impracticable in the naval aspect. Grave doubts were entertained by the military as to the possibility of making a landing in the face of the enemy air superiority."

Churchill said he was speaking "in this plain manner" because of "the cataract of unworthy suggestions and absolute falsehoods poured out on the public in the last few days."

Had To Conserve Planes

He said Britain had to conserve her air force to guard against "grave dangers which may come upon us at any time" and reiterated that abandonment of Trondheim attack "saved us from a most disastrous debacle."

Stories of clashes between "craven politicians" and the fighting service are false, Churchill declared.

Churchill disclosed the British had captured the airfield at Narvik.

When Alexander interrupted to ask if Britain is in possession of Narvik airdrome, Churchill said: "I suppose the enemy knows we are, so there is no harm in saying that we are."

Now Fighting For Narvik

"We now fight for Narvik," he said. "I will not attempt to predict how the struggle will go, but conditions in that area are much more equal so far as ability to reinforce it are concerned."

Churchill said nothing would have been more likely to have brought "other dangers" than a long struggle around Trondheim.

Hitler lost ten lives for every one Britain lost in Norway, Churchill said.

"There is no word of truth," Churchill said, in reports he had urged more violent action on Chamberlain or the War Cabinet which they had refused to take.

Replying to Admiral Keyes, Churchill said he sympathized with his desire to lead a valiant attack and to repeat in Scandinavian waters "the immortal story of the Zeebrugge mole."

Test Rests With Us

Churchill said that despite Hitler's overrunning of a vast region of Norway "the test rests substantially with us."

MAY 9 1940

Turning to impending vote, Churchill asserted that if Commons wished to dismiss the Government it should do it on a proper motion of censure and not on the adjournment.

"At no time in the last war were we in greater peril than we are now and I urge the House most strongly to deal with these matters not on a precipitate vote ill debated and on a wide and discursive field but in a grave manner and in due time."

Answering German claims that eleven battleships had been sunk, Britain's defense chief said actually two had been slightly damaged and neither was withdrawn for a day from service.

One Carrier Damaged

He cited a German claim that three aircraft carriers had been heavily damaged and said "the facts are that one was slightly damaged by a near miss and is still in service.

"They claim to have sunk or damaged cruisers. Only one anti-aircraft cruiser was slightly damaged. We have unhappily lost eleven trawlers."

Churchill took an unruly House to task for its heckling tactics.

"All day long we have had abuse and now you won't listen. You dare not listen to the argument. It is not fair. It is not British."

Amid a tumult of ministerial cheers, Churchill resumed the debate with the declaration that "no Minister would condescend to hold office unless he had the support of the House."

Lauds Keyes Speech

Churchill prefaced his remarks about Admiral Keyes with the statement that his speech yesterday was the best "I have ever heard him make."

He continued: "When Keyes came to me with his plans for forcing the entrance to Trondheim, I could only tell him that we had had a similar plan in some ways to be preferred to his but that we had abandoned it."

"Too late," a heckler shouted.

"We did not abandon it for that reason but for reasons which I have given," Churchill said.

Laborite Arthur Greenwood asked if the War Cabinet delayed making its decision about Trondheim.

"Not for a moment," said Churchill.

Keyes Would Have Led It

Then he said had an attack been delivered Admiral Keyes would have had the privilege of leading it.

"Exception has been taken because the Prime Minister said he appealed to his friends and he thought he had some friends. I hope he has some friends," Churchill said belligerently and the House cheered.

"He certainly had a good many when things were going well. It is most unworthy of the British character and of the Conservative party to turn in a moment of difficulty without all the processes of grave debate. I am not advocating a controversy and if I have broken out it is not that I meant to seek a quarrel with the honorable members."

In concluding, Churchill said:

"Let pre-war feuds die. Let personal quarrels be forgotten. Let party interests be ignored. Let all energies be harnessed. Let all the ability and force of the nation be hurled into the struggle. At no time in the last war were we in greater peril than we are now. I urge the House most strongly to deal with these matters not on a precipitate vote ill debated and on a wide and discursive field but in a grave manner and in due time."

BULLETIN.

MAY 9

LONDON, May 8 (A.P.). —Winston Churchill, trump card defender of an imperiled Chamberlain government in closing hours of the House of Commons debate on war policy, declared frankly tonight that "one of the causes of our difficulties (in Norway) was that we had failed to achieve air parity with Germany."

MAY 9 1940

LONDON, May 8 (A. P.). —The Labor opposition, supported by David Lloyd George, demanded today that the House of Commons oust the Chamberlain government and the demand instantly was accepted by the Prime Minister as a challenge to a test of votes.

Mr. Lloyd George, who led Great Britain to victory in the world war vehemently denounced the Chamberlain administration for "unintelligent" and "half-hearted" leadership.

Alfred Duff Cooper, former First Lord of the Admiralty in the Chamberlain government and a Conservative member of the House, announced that he would bolt his party to vote against the Cabinet.

The issue "is too urgent in war," he said, for "any man to wash his hands like Pontius Pilate and take neither one side nor the other."

In one of the tensely dramatic moments of the debate on the British reversal in Norway, Mr. Lloyd George faced the present war leader across a table on the Commons floor.

Points Finger at Premier.

Pointing a finger directly at Mr. Chamberlain, he said that the Prime Minister had spoken of sacrifice, then added bitterly:

"There is nothing that would contribute more to the cause of victory in this war than that he sacrifice the seals of office."

He said that Mr. Chamberlain had been worsted by Adolf Hitler in every encounter—in war and peace—and warned:

"The greatest triumph of this extraordinary man, Hitler, is that he has succeeded in putting his country into a better strategical position than his predecessors and he has put us into greater jeopardy."

Mr. Lloyd George's heavy fire came after Herbert Morrison, vigorous Labor leader and virtual czar of London's municipal government, had announced a motion for a vote of non-confidence at the end of a bitter speech in which he declared that if Mr. Chamberlain and his principal advisers stayed in office "we run a grave risk of losing the war."

Churchill Enters the Fray.

Picking up where Mr. Chamberlain finished yesterday, the Prime Minister and his Air Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, continued pleading the Government case, with the First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, still waiting to be heard later tonight.

Rising quickly after Mr. Morrison's motion was introduced, the Prime Minister declared that he and his colleagues "will not be slow to accept their responsibility."

Mr. Churchill jumped into the debate at one point with a statement that he took full responsibility for everything done by the Admiralty.

Mr. Lloyd George snapped back: "I hope Mr. Churchill will not allow himself to be converted into an air raid shelter to keep the splinters from hitting his colleagues."

Personal Issues Raised.

Mr. Lloyd George charged that Great Britain's failure to give the Norwegians effective help had undermined other nations' reliance on Great Britain.

The world war leader said that the Government had to face its position "with the people and not as personal issues."

"The Prime Minister is not in a position to make his personality in his respect inseparable from the interests of the country," he said.

Mr. Chamberlain instantly broke in:

"What is the meaning of that observation? I have never represented . . ."

The rest of his sentence was drowned in shouting.

When the tumult subsided, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"I took pains to say that personality ought to have no place."

"British promissory notes are now rubbish on the market," he cried, his white mane shaking in rage.

The Conservative benches answered with shouts of "Shame! Shame!"

The vote will come at the end of debate tonight, probably about 11:30 P. M.

Mr. Morrison's parliamentary procedure was to ask for a division of the House on the motion for adjournment when the debate ends tonight; in effect, a vote of non-confidence.

The Government will seek to turn the vote into a motion of confidence.

"We shall see who is with us and who is against us," Mr. Chamberlain cried. "No Government can prosecute the war efficiently unless it has public and parliamentary support."

Mr. Morrison especially demanded the ouster of Mr. Chamberlain, Hoare and Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer. He charged, too, that the Prime Minister was putting Mr. Churchill "in a shop window" and using him for a "shield."

Mr. Chamberlain, also under attack today in the House of Lords for the naval strategy employed at Trondheim, shouted:

"This is a time of national danger. We are facing a relentless enemy who must be fought by united action of this country.

"Morrison began his speech by emphasizing the gravity of the situation. What Morrison has said—the challenge he has thrown out at the Government in general and the attack he has made upon them and upon me in particular—makes it graver still."

MAY 9 1940

Premier Calls for Support.

The situation, the Prime Minister went on, is "grave not because of any personal consideration," but because of the menace of Germany.

"None of us," he said, "desire to hold onto office for a moment longer than we retain the confidence of this House."

The Prime Minister's intervention was dramatic. He looked up sharply, crumbled some notes he had been scribbling, stuffed them in his pocket and, rising as if he had been propelled by a steel spring, accepted the Labor challenge in a few brusque sentences.

"It may well be that it is a duty to criticize the Government," he said of Mr. Morrison's declaration. "I do not seek to evade criticism, but I say to my friends in the House—and I have friends in the House—no Government can prosecute a war efficiently unless it has public and Parliamentary support.

"I accept the challenge. I welcome it, indeed. At least, we shall see who is with us and who is against us."

"I call on my friends to support us in the lobby tonight!"

Cheers rippled through the vault-like house as he took his seat.

Commons Debate Resumed.

There was a solemn interlude before the start of the second day's debate in Commons while Mr. Chamberlain, Major Clement R. Attlee, Labor opposition leader, an Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal o position leader, paid tribute to tw members who had died overnight- George Lansbury, 81 years old, vet eran Labor spokesman and peac crusader, and Sir Terence O'Connor, 49, Solicitor-General since 1936.

Mr. Morrison resumed the debate with the remark that "Chamberlain seems to be conscious of the shortcomings on the part of the Government."

Nor did War Secretary Oliver Stanley appear to be a "Minister confident about his business and his case," Mr. Morrison added, commenting on the Government's presentation of the situation yesterday.

He charged that Mr. Churchill was made the last Government speaker over Labor's protests and "when there can be no comment on his evidence." He compared Mr. Churchill to a chief witness who "refused to go into the witness box."

Criticizing both the British Intelligence Service and the Foreign Office, Mr. Morrison spoke of the pre-war "weakness" of British diplomacy and demanded that the House be told when the Government first was informed of the German invasion of Norway.

"I would sooner be able to boast about the success of landing operations than of the evacuation operations, brilliant though they may have been," said Mr. Morrison, with a barb at Mr. Chamberlain's praise for the orderliness of the withdrawals from central Norway.

Mr. Morrison said it appeared that Great Britain had not surveyed Norway for airdromes, gasoline dumps or means to check German sea communications.

Even now, if the Germans have an airdrome near Narvik which fighter planes can use, "why do we not capture it and use it?" he asked.

"Is the Government using Churchill as something of a shield?" Mr. Morrison demanded.

"When the Government is in trouble and open to criticism, they bring the First Lord into the shop window in the belief that that will satisfy public criticism.

Attacks Three Ministers.

He called it "unfair" to give Mr. Churchill responsibility for "a policy which he cannot possibly carry out."

Mr. Morrison referred to Mr. Churchill's appointment, announced yesterday by Mr. Chamberlain, to supervise from day to day the military operations of all the armed forces.

Saying that he referred particularly to Mr. Chamberlain, Simon and Hoare, he called "the whole spirit, temper and temperament of the ministers wrong, inadequate and unsuitable." These ministers, he said, lacked "courage, initiative, imagination, psychological understanding, liveliness and self-respect in the conduct of foreign policy."

House Defends Air Force.

Sir Samuel asserted that German air losses were "three times those of Britain" in the last month of the war in Scandinavia.

In fifteen hours thirty German planes were put out of operation, the Air Minister declared, by a British squadron of eighteen planes.

"Not one of the British machines was brought down in the air," he said, "but the greater part were afterward put out of action on the ground."

Describing the establishment of the first British fighter airdrome on a frozen Norwegian lake, Sir Samuel disclosed that eighty German bombers had attacked it "for fifteen hours."

The central question arising from the Norwegian operation, he said, was, "Did we underrate the power of the enemy?"

He disclosed that the damaged British planes were Gloster Gladiators, based on the ice of a lake a few miles behind Dombas, strategic railroad junction in central Norway, at one time held by the British.

"King George VI has conferred a number of decorations on this very gallant squadron," the Air Minister said.

Sir Samuel admitted that the British lacked anti-aircraft guns, because plans were upset by the sinking of a ship.

"As long as we had no air bases from which our fighters could operate," he declared, "there was nothing that we could have done that we did not attempt to do during the last four weeks."

He contended that investigation would show that there was no avoidable delay in British air operations in Norway and assured the House that where Great Britain had fighter planes available, "we have shown how well they can cope with German bombers."

Sir Samuel admitted that the quantity of British warplanes was not nearly sufficient, but declared that their quality was unsurpassed.

"We have to make every effort to give the Air Force many more machines than they have at present," he admitted.

He said that production, already considerable, was gathering momentum.

Mr. Lloyd George, the next speaker, shouted that "our prestige in the world" was made dependent on "this half-prepared, half-baked expeditionary force."

Great Britain, he cried, gambled on a chance of getting an air base when "we ought to have had combined action between the army and the navy, we ought to have sent the very best men available."

Amid a roar of cheers, he declared that there was no cause for panic, "but a grave cause for pulling ourselves together."

"What we want is real action," he declared, "not sham action."

He warned that the Empire would not be roused to its full strength "unless you tell the facts of the reality of the peril."

"Hitler," he declared scornfully, "does not answer to the whips of the party."

MAY 9 1940

Norway, he reminded Parliament, has become "one of the great strategic possibilities" of the war for Germany, because "we were too late in Norway, although we had the warning of ships in the Baltic."

Demanding to know whether any man in the House were satisfied with the speed and efficiency of British sea, air and land preparations, Lloyd George continued:

"For three or four years past everything done has been half-hearted, ineffective, without drive and unintelligent.

"We have to retsore our prestige in the world if ever we are to win this war."

Soon after Commons met today and R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had declared that one Allied war aim was the restoration of the independence of German-occupied Denmark, Mr. Chamberlain rose to answer a question.

He declared that the Government was keeping "fully in mind" consideration that British forces at Narvik, Norway's northern iron are port, should not be exposed to risks without air supremacy.

He made no reply, however, to a question by Hugh Dalton, a Laborite: "Have we also in mind the posibility of Narvik being evacuated in the next week or two?"

Cries of "Shame! Shame!" were roused by Mr. Dalton's question.

Strabolgi Launches Attack.

Meanwhile, Lord Strabolgi, the Labor peer, told the House of Lords that he had informed Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax that the Labor party did not "intend to wash dirty linen in public unless there were bloodstains on it." But, he declared, the "mishandling" of the Norwegian campaign indicated that there were defects "both in personnel and the methods of the Government" in its conduct of the war.

Lord Strabolgi declared that if the Chamberlain government is not capable of drawing up plans and reversing this setback in Norway, "it is their duty to make way for others."

He asserted that here was no naval obstacle whatever to have prevented the British Navy from entering Trondheim fjord and that it was two days before the 1,500 Germans who took Oslo were reenforced from the sea.

"Our first lesson is the need for long distance fighters," he asserted.

He called for a "select committee of inquiry" to study the Norwegian campaign.

Served on War Staff.

Lord Strabolgi, who was Lieut.-Commander Joseph Montague Kenworthy before he was raised to the peerage, was on the Admiralty war staff in 1916 and commanded the warships Bullfinch and Commonwealth in the world war.

He asserted that Mr. Chamberlain's "complacency" was the "besetting sin of our nation."

The British Grand Fleet could have gone immediately to Oslo Fjord and driven off the lighter German warcraft in the two days between the capture of Oslo and the arrival of Nazi reinforcements, he declared.

At the same time the House of Lords heard a sharp counter-attack from the Government on yesterday's speech by Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, who charged that the Admiralty had refused to let him direct a frontal smash by sea on Trondheim.

Lord Hankey, Minister without Portfolio, said:

"Generally speaking, Governments must depend upon their responsible naval, military and air advisers, and not on irresponsible officers on the retired list, however distinguished their services may be."

Sir Roger, Lord Hankey said, "could not have had the same knowledge of all the circumstances involved as were in possession of the Admiralty."

Lord Salisbury suggested that Churchill be given jurisdiction over supplies, concerning which he said "the most sinister rumors have reached me," but that he should not remain as First Lord of the Admiralty because of his many duties.

Lord Birdwood—who was field marshal and commanded the Anzacs in the World War—cautioned that the great thing was to avoid saying anything that might let the Germans "think we are a divided people."

Lord Halifax, taking his turn in the debate, said that the "Allied action was not deserving of much of the hard judgment which has been extended to it." The Foreign Minister said he was "in no way disposed to appear before you with what I may call the apologetic gesture of a defendant," and asserted that the failure to send any troops to Norway "would certainly I think have exposed us—not that I greatly care about it—to still stronger criticism."

"The war is going to be won by hard facts and not by prestige," he said.

The last Opposition speaker, A. V. Alexander, forme. First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House that the objective of the debate was to "put things in order" so there could be "no shadow of doubt that the victory we desire shall be assured."

He followed a parade of backbenchers, one of whom, Commander Robert T. Bower, a government member, declared "the dead hand must go" in Britain's wartime government.

Mr. Alexander said the government was "taken completely by surprise" by the German invasion of Scandinavia and assailed Ministers for making people believe "everything is going pretty well."

By The Associated Press

LONDON, May 9 (Thursday).—"The Daily Mail" in a front-page editorial today declared that the government of seventy-one-year-old Neville Chamberlain "must resign" and advocated the selection of seventy-seven-year-old David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister, as his successor, with Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in complete control of strategy.

The Laborite "Daily Herald" and the Liberal "News Chronicle" likewise demanded a new ministry.

"The Daily Express," however, felt that regaining air supremacy was the solution to Britain's dilemma. It said: "With airplanes we're safe — whether Chamberlain or Churchill are in or out of office—without planes we're sunk, no matter who sits in power at Downing Street and in Whitehall."

"The Times" of London commented: "After the disclosures of opinion in Parliament and the press during the present week, there can be no question of the strength of the demand for a ministry more broadly based and therefore differently constituted.

"The only question is how it can be achieved and how soon. If the Labor party fails to answer the clear public call it leaves the Prime Minister more free to choose his own means of showing the setback in southern Norway was not merely a failure successfully extenuated but a new starting point for British energy and valor."

Interpreting the debate as showing that the Chamberlain government no longer commanded the confidence of Parliament and country, "The News-Chronicle" said: "The need of the hour is that Mr. Chamberlain should bow to the will of the country and a new and strong government, representative of all parties, should be formed."

"The Daily Herald" said: "Parliament has dismissed the Premier. Morally and politically Mr. Chamberlain was defeated beyond hope of recovery in Commons. The nation's will is Chamberlain shall go."

Chamberlain's Other Tests

MAY 9 1940

London, May 8 (AP)—Today's vote in Commons was the fifth test vote for the Government since the war started. The others were:

October 29—283 to 115, Chamberlain's proposal to restrict introduction of bills to Government measures approved.

December 6—303 to 125, approval of the Government's conduct of the war voted, defeating a Labor motion of criticism of organization of the nation's manpower and resources for the conflict.

February 13—186 to 119, Labor motion recommending Government ownership and operation of the railroads defeated.

March 3—292 to 129, the first wartime censure motion against the Government's Palestine land policy rejected.

Military Talks With Russian Officials Are Expected Soon

War Alliance Between Five Countries Forecast As Result

New York, Thursday, May 9. The official German radio said in a broadcast intercepted by CBS early today that martial law had been declared in Turkey.

MAY 9 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Thursday, May 9—It was learned authoritatively early today that a Yugoslav military mission headed by Gen. Vojin Maximovic, inspector of the national defense, will leave Belgrade shortly for Moscow to hold military talks with Soviet Russian officials.

Authoritative sources in Belgrade made this disclosure shortly after it had been reported in diplomatic quarters that Britain and France were offering Yugoslavs the assistance of troops, air forces and naval forces and a guarantee of Yugoslav independence and territorial integrity in an effort to seal a Balkan alliance against German or Italian aggression in southeastern Europe.

An offer of military aid reportedly has been made also to Hungary and Bulgaria by the Allies.

However, these two countries were said to be reluctant to accept promises which might compromise their neutrality in German or Italian eyes.

The belief was expressed in quarters close to the Yugoslav Government that a Yugoslav-Soviet military alliance might result from the military mission's journey to Moscow.

Turn To Political Issues

Only yesterday it was reported that economic negotiations between Yugoslavia and Soviet Russia in Moscow were turning to political questions.

A military alliance between these two countries would be a complete turnabout in the policy of Yugoslavia, who has followed a strongly anti-Communist policy since the Bolshevist revolution of 1917.

The two countries have not even maintained diplomatic relations.

But the Croat Vice-Premier Vladimir Macek, said two weeks ago that resumption of trade relations, the first such treaty since the World War between the two countries, probably would be followed by resumption of diplomatic relations.

Military Tie May Follow

It was believed here that the military link might follow conclusion of political talks.

Diplomatic quarters in the Balkans, noting the parallel between the Yugoslav-Russian talks and the Allied offer of aid to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Hungary in an effort to form a Balkan defense alliance to stand together against the Rome-Berlin axis, said there was a distinct possibility of Allied-Russian cooperation in southeastern Europe.

The Allied offer to Hungary was reported to be contingent upon that country's resistance to passage of German troops for Balkan objectives.

The proffer was reported conveyed to Count Pal Teleky, Hungarian Premier, by the British Minister, Ower St. Clair O'Malley, when the envoy asked Count Teleky what he would do if Germany attempted to march through Hungary.

The diplomatic sources said Count Teleky refused a direct answer, saying the Government's attitude would depend on the circumstances when and if Germany got ready to move.

O'Malley's call on the Premier followed publication of reports that Germany has requested permission of Hungary to go through.

The reported offer of armed support by the British appeared in line with their overtures in Balkan capitals, especially at Sofia, Bulgaria, where the British Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, has been holding extended conferences with King Boris and his Cabinet Ministers.

Sir Hughe was said to have made Bulgaria a high offer for her adherence to a defensive system in the Balkans but diplomats in Sofia understood the government was adamant against passage of any foreign troops through Bulgaria. It was said Bulgaria would oppose such a move with force.

British Seek Permission

Britain has been reported sounding out the possibility of moving Turkish and Allied forces through Bulgaria to the aid of Rumania or Yugoslavia in the case of a German or Italian attack.

In Belgrade it was reported Yugoslav leaders were pleased by news that Joseph Stalin had received a Yugoslav trade delegation in Moscow.

Belgrade is looking more and more toward Russia for support. The Ljubljana newspaper Slovenski Dom said Russia and Yugoslavia desired to resume relations existing prior to the World War, when Russia was considered protector of Serbia, nucleus of the present Yugoslav state.

300,000 Troops On Borders

Yugoslavia has been a hotbed of martial activity for several days and she is reported to have massed 300,000 troops on her German and Italian frontiers. An additional 300,000 soldiers have been called up, it was reported.

The reported concentration of Italian troops on the Yugoslav frontier was believed to have been the subject of a talk today between the Macek and the Italian Minister to Belgrade.

Macek later attended a meeting of the Cabinet Finance Council, which includes the Ministers of War, Finance and Justice. It was said they debated measures to provide additional revenue for the country's new military efforts.

Naval Chief Named

Vice-Admiral Armin Pavic, of the Yugoslav navy, was named naval commander for the port of Split and given special powers.

In Bucharest the Rumanian Cabinet Economic Council announced the Government would take over control of all stocks of wood, coal, petroleum products, cotton, fodder, grain and foodstuffs in the interest of national defense.

Rumanian officials said this was the first step toward economic mobilization. It means the Government will have the power to purchase the commodities at its own price and can ration any of these products and control their sale.

BUDAPEST, MAY 9-(THURS.)-(AP)-IT WAS AUTHORITATIVELY REPORTED EARLY TODAY THAT A YUGOSLAV MILITARY MISSION WOULD LEAVE SOON FOR MOSCOW TO EXPLORE THE POSSIBILITY OF A MILITARY ALLIANCE. MAY 9 1940 BALKAN DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS WERE QUICK TO DETECT IN THIS NEW DEVELOPMENT THE POSSIBILITY OF ALLIED-SOVIET RUSSIAN COOPERATION IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WHERE THE BRITISH AND FRENCH ARE TRYING TO WELD A DEFENSIVE ALLIANCE AGAINST THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS.

IT WASX SAID RELIABLY THAT THE MISSION FROM BELGRADE, HEADED BY GENERAL VOJIN MAXIMOVIC, INSPECTOR OF THE YUGOSLAV NATIONAL DEFENSE, WOULD FOLLOW UP TRADE AND "POLITICAL" TALKS ALREADY IN PROGRESS BY DISCUSSING MILITARY MATTERS WITH RUSSIAN OFFICIALS. MAY 9 1940

British Said to Query Hungary.

BUDAPEST, May 8 (A. P.).—Great Britain was reported in diplomatic quarters tonight to have asked the Hungarian Government to state its attitude toward any German move to send troops through Hungary.

Following published reports that Germany had requested such permission, these sources said the British Minister, Owen St. Clair O'Malley, had asked the Hungarian Premier, Count Pal Teleky, to declare his country's stand. Count Teleky refused a definite answer, according to these informants, saying Hungary's attitude would depend on circumstances when and if Germany got ready to move.

Mr. O'Malley was reported to have offered support of the British Army and air force if Hungary chose to resist any German attempt to march through.

Request by Reich Rumored.

Reports of a request for a German right-of-way through Hungary and of a strong British drive to weld the Balkans into a "defensive alliance," gave new shape to the war fears of southeastern Europe.

The report of a German request on Hungary for free passage of her legions into the southeast—presumably an action to be taken when strategy dictates—was carried by the official Hungarian news agency with a note saying that thus far the report could not be verified.

It was circulated on the heels of word received in Balkan diplomatic circles of redoubled British efforts to line up Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey for a united stand against any "aggression."

The method by which the report of the German request was given currency was roundabout. It was published first in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in the newspaper Politika and credited to Politika's Budapest correspondent. The Hungarian news agency then reproduced the story.

Officials said that publication of the dispatch by the Hungarian agency was "a mistake," but the agency failed to issue an order eliminating the dispatch.

Several times in the past, inspired Hungarian newspapers, as well as the news agency, have taken such a devious course to tell Hungarians what was transpiring inside their own country.

Another straw in the wind of foreboding was the concurrent publication in Sofia, Bulgaria, in the newspaper Utro—so-called mouthpiece of Nazi Germany in Bulgaria—of a Berlin dispatch declaring that Germany and Italy were ready to send formidable forces into southeastern Europe at the first sign of Allied action in that quarter.

"In case the Allied troops violated any of the Balkan countries' frontiers, the Reich will send an ultimatum to that country demanding that it choice immediately one or the other belligerent camp," Utro said.

Peak Tension in Yugoslavia.

"In the event the country in question failed to answer with appropriate speed the Reich Government would be forced to undertake any measures it thought advisable.

"Any Allied attempt to extend the war into southeastern Europe might force Germany and Italy to put into action much greater forces for the immediate frustration of any such attempt."

The Balkan tension appeared at its peak in Yugoslavia. That nation, with, it is reported, 300,000 veteran troops already on her Italian and German frontiers, was calling 300,000 more men to the colors while improving fortifications and other defenses.

Look to Soviet for Aid.

While recruits swung along the Yugoslav roads to the wild tune of Slavic marching songs, peasants helped the army engineers to pour concrete for tank barricades and in the nation's Adriatic harbors, facing Italy, mine-layers loaded their explosive cargoes, ready to blockade the ports at a moment's notice.

The fever of precautions gripped other Balkan countries in varying degrees.

Authoritative spokesmen in Belgrade reported that the Russo-Yugoslav trade talks in Moscow had turned from commerce to "political subjects" as a result of Yugoslav fears of a possible Italo-German move.

Political spokesmen expressed the belief that Yugoslavia was seeking a quick re-establishment of full diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia. MAY 9 1940

Bulgaria the Keystones.

Bulgaria appeared to be the key to any British plan to unite the Balkans in a defensive way. Bulgaria, most of all, has balked at any such alliance. She was a German ally in the world war.

The British Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Highe Knachbull-Hugessen, was in Sofia and was said to have made a high offer for Bulgarian adherence to defensive system. Bulgarian participation, it was said, would permit the overland passage of Allied forces in the Near East to Rumania and Yugoslavia.

The Bulgarians were described as cool to the plan—even in the face of reported promises of a British loan, a corridor through Greece to the Aegean Sea, and possibly a return of southern Dobruja from Rumania after the war.

The Bulgarians were said to be inclined to look to Russia for any support. Germany was reported to have tried to throw a wrench in the British plan through her economic negotiator, Dr. Karl Clodius. However, Dr. Clodius left Sofia for Berlin by plane yesterday.

Yugoslavia?

Rakek, Yugoslavia (At the Italian Border), May 8 (AP)—Yugoslavia tightened her anti-espionage control and placed all railway stations under military command today following reports of the arrest and expulsion of three Italian army officers.

Government officials denied the report, but informed circles said the authorities at the important Dalmatian railroad center of Knin had seized three Italian officers in possession of new photographs of Yugoslav fortifications. MAY 9 1940

Catholics in Croatia and Slovenia anxiously awaited the outcome of talks at the Vatican by Bishop Luigi Stepinac, leading Yugoslav Catholic prelate, who had been called to Vatican City.

Informed Yugoslavs feared that Italy would use her base at Zara, on the Dalmatian coast, to thrust behind Yugoslavia's strongly fortified frontier with Germany and try to outflank Yugoslav forces east of Maribor, key point in the country's northern defenses.

ATHENS, May 8.—Official quarters asserted today that both Great Britain and Italy have given assurances indicating that neither country is desirous of infringing on Greece's neutrality.

As a result, official quarters said Greeks have every reason to believe their country will not be involved in war at this time.

SAY ALLIED ATTACK NEAR

New York, May 8 — (AP) —A German news broadcast intercepted today by the CBS listening station said that the German press "regards an Allied attack in southeastern Europe as imminent."

The broadcaster declared that British and French war councils would put final touches on the alleged plan of attack and then would issue final instructions to the Allied army of the Near East under French Gen. Maxime Weygand. MAY 9 1940

The broadcast, first of the day from German station DJW, said that the German press still was playing up yesterday's German account of a purported telephone conversation of April 30 between British Prime Minister Chamberlain and French Premier Reynaud in which "ordered action" was said to have been discussed.

(The story has been officially denied in London and Paris — called "fantastic" by the British and "lying allegations" by the French.)

The German broadcast concluded:

"The alarm clocks in the Mediterranean are shrieking louder and louder."

busy port the Allies battle fleet, mightiest ever assembled in the eastern Mediterranean, still lay at anchor, its guns gleaming under a scorching sun.

British and French quarters indicated belief that the issue of war or peace in the east would be decided within the next few days, and expressed confidence the Allies were more than ready to cope with an emergency.

Germans Deny Army Moving On Holland

BERLIN, May 8 (A. P.).—Official German sources today emphatically denied foreign reports that two Nazi columns were advancing toward the Netherlands frontier.

D.N.B., official German news agency, asserted today that the British information service was responsible for circulation of the reports.

MAY 9 1940

"The uncovering of British plans in southeastern Europe," DNB said, "has made such an impression on the affected nations that English war agitators are snatching at a distracting maneuver which is as stupid as it is clumsy."

The agency's comment on the "uncovering of British plans in southeastern Europe" apparently referred to a German announcement yesterday concerning the interception of an alleged telephone conversation between French Premier Paul Reynaud and British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain. The conversation was said to have dealt with Allied plans for action in the Mediterranean on or before May 20.

DUTCH ACTIONS TERMED TEST OF DEFENSES

But Amsterdam Newspaper Says Sensation Was Not Justified

All Outgoing Telephone Calls Again Suspended For Ten Hours

MAY HACKELSON

[By the Associated Press]

Amsterdam, May 8—Influential Netherlands commentators advanced the suggestion tonight that the elaborate precautionary steps taken by the army and navy within the last twenty-four hours were moves by the high command to test the nation's defenses.

These were coupled with the declaration of the widely read Amsterdam newspaper De Telegraaf that although the international situation was dangerous, the sensation caused by the Government's measures was "not justified."

Tests Held Logical

The Dutch army at present, the newspaper pointed out, is more fully mobilized than at any time in history and it is only logical that the authorities should make a test of their readiness.

"There is no reason for disquiet," De Telegraaf continued. "Foreign countries stop guessing against whom our measures are intended.

"We ourselves want the certainty that our military apparatus corresponds to the demand of the military authorities."

There were no further measures announced since last night, when a partial blackout of communications was enforced after all leaves had been canceled.

Only 4th Time During War

With the nation's armed forces swelled to 400,000 men, it was recalled that leaves were canceled approximately sixty times during the World War, whereas this is only the fourth time in eight months that such action has been taken in the present conflict.

Outgoing telephone calls were suspended again tonight as they were last night, from 10 P. M. to 8 A. M.

Other measures included an order barring ships from inland waterways and the posting of guards around all public buildings in Amsterdam and The Hague.

Foreign Planes Barred

Amsterdam's airport at Schiphol will be closed to foreign planes beginning Friday, it was announced tonight. German planes are the only foreign aircraft landing there.

Another airport will be made available for German commercial aircraft at Eelde, near Groningen in extreme northeastern Netherlands.

The Dutch line, KLM, will make the connections between there and Amsterdam. German planes thus will be permitted to fly only a few miles into Dutch territory.

Germany Calls Large Numbers of Men to Colors; Says Allies Seek to Widen War.

AMSTERDAM, May 8 (A. P.).—Intense military preparations, accompanied during the night by a partial "blackout" of communications with the outside world, kept the Netherlands in a state of suspense today.

MAY 9 1940

The nationa geared its defenses to meet an international situation officially described as "increasingly uncertain."

[Reports that two German columns are converging on the Dutch frontier were said by a highly reliable source in New York last night to be responsible for the unusual precautions.

[At Washington this afternoon Secretary Hull said that offlical advices received by the State Department indicated that the tension in Holland had increased since yesterday.]

Outgoing telephone calls to all points abroad were cut off from 10 o'clock last night until 8 A. M. today, and a Government announcement said that the same restrictions would be in effect again tonight.

Incoming telephone calls from abroad were not affected by the "blackout" order, and telegraph service was only nominally disturbed.

Reserved for Government

An official explanation said that the action had been taken to reserve telephones for Government use during the hours specified.

[Radio announcements, picked up in New York, said that the customary Dutch weather broadcasts would be omitted for the present "due to conditions which are known to you." The broadcasting of weather reports has been discontinued in belligerent countries since the start of the war.]

Meanwhile civilian railway travel throughout the Netherlands was sharply curtailed to facilitate the movements of thousands of soldiers and sailors called back to the colors by a sweeping order canceling all leaves.

Orders were also issued barring ships from inland waterways and military guards were placed around all public buildings in Amsterdam and the Hague.

Affected by the recall were members of the defense forces released on furlongh several months ago, including the greater part of the army class of 1924, which is the oldest so far mobilized; the navy classes of 1927 and 1928, and the cavalry classes of 1924, 1925 and 1926.

Fishermen Called to Colors.

Also called back to the colors were reservists on leave to work in the fishing fleets, reservists on the merchant marine not working at present, and coal miners who had been released during the winter to increase fuel production.

Leaves have been canceled on several previous occasions since the start of the European war, but the present order is more sweeping than any of those which have gone before.

The Netherlands has about 400,000 men under arms, although roughly 40,000 of that number have been absent from their posts since April 27 under a rotating system of leaves.

Because of increased work, the Ministry of Economics was divided and a new member was added to the Netherlands Cabinet. Dr. A. A. van Rhyn, Secretary-General of the Economics Department, was given the status of Minister in Charge of Agriculture and Fisheries, while trade, navigation and industry remain under the present Economics Minister, Max P. L. Steenberghe.

Information from Belgium, the Netherlands' southern neighbor, indicated that no cancellation of army leaves was yet contemplated here for the present.

her neighbor, The Netherlands, but did not order additional military precautions for her own armed forces.

A defense ministry spokesman said that some local commanders had ordered their men to remain in barracks yesterday when it was learned The Netherlands had cancelled all army and navy leaves but that the defense department had not issued special orders.

The army's two-day leaves were not halted.

A government spokesman said the situation would be watched with "extreme vigilance."

Chamberlain's Mediterranean Hints Scouted. New Call To Colors

High Command Reports Troops And Ships Bombed In Narvik Area

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 8—Official German quarters, in the face of general European anxiety, tonight assured all inquirers that Germany is prepared to strike decisively wherever and whenever her enemies aim a blow.

"We reveal no secret," authorized sources said, "when we repeat that Germany is prepared on all fronts."

Asked whether this meant the Netherlands frontier also, they replied: "Obviously."

Answer To Chamberlain's Hints

"Chamberlain twice recently has intimated England is determined to widen the area of combat," these sources added. "But he has not said where except that he broadly hinted at the Mediterranean.

"That may be a blind, however, for operations elsewhere. Spain, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland—all have been mentioned by the world's press. We won't be caught unawares anywhere."

30.24-2131

Hand in hand with these verbal assurances went wholesale summonses to the colors.

All ages seem involved. Cases of reservists over 50 years of age have been noticed in the last few days. All walks of life appear to be included so that there is a general lack of man power except in war industry, with its many ramifications.

Narvik And Western Front

In the actual fighting, the high command reported that German airmen had successfully raided marching columns of Allied troops near Narvik, far north Norwegian ore port, where the Allies are besieging a German force. One English pursuit plane was reported shot down.

The high command also said two cruisers were hit by bombs in another Nazi air attack on enemy naval vessels outside of Narvik.

On the Western front, the high command reported, an enemy attack south of Saarlautern had been repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

Nazi officials angrily rejected any suggestion that Germany might contemplate striking first in another direction.

The officially inspired commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland asserted the pressure on the British Cabinet by the opposition is such that it must do something spectacular and decisive.

"England and France have succeeded in bringing unrest not only in the southeastern European countries but within the entire neutral European zone from the Dardanelles to the English Channel," Dienst Aus Deutschland said.

That commentary, like all other German publicity organs, denied Germany harbors any plans against Holland and Belgium.

to have made "successful" raids on marching columns of Allied troops near Narvik, Norway, and to have scored new bomb hits on two British cruisers.

The reports were given out by the German High Command, whose daily communique follows in part:

"Another German air attack on enemy naval vessels outside Narvik was carried out. Two cruisers were hit.

"Enemy positions and marching columns were successfully bombarded. One English chaser (pursuit plane) was shot down in an air fight east of Narvik.

"The situation at Narvik is unchanged.

"Among large quantities of booty recently captured in the Andalsnes region were 460 English tank-guns with ammunition, forty-nine guns, among which were forty English anti-aircraft guns; sixty grenade throwers, 355 machine-guns, 5,300 rifles, 4,500,000 rounds of infantry ammunition, and a munitions train with 300 tons of ammunition."

The last vestiges of Norwegian resistance in South Central Norway have now vanished. Parts of a Norwegian infantry regiment surrendered at Vinje. A large amount of equipment, weapons and explosives was captured there.

On the West Front an attack south of Saarlautern by enemy shock troops was repulsed with heavy loss for the enemy.

Chamberlain and Ironside Evoke Jeering Comment.

BERLIN, May 8 (AP.).—The House of Commons speech by Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday and the address of Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the Imperial defense staff, to British troops returning to Britain from the Norwegian campaign evoked jeering comment today from German official quarters.

"If England suffered no losses then why did she find it necessary to withdraw?" authorized sources asked.

"If they managed to take all their material with them, how could Major-Gen. Carton De Wiart write the Norwegian Col. Getz that he was leaving plenty of ammunition for the Norwegians? And how was it we found vast stores after the Englishmen's hurried departure?"

These sources commented on what they called England's "new definition of heroism."

"Apparently a premium is put on the speed with which English troops can run away from the Germans," they commented. "Then on their arrival in their homeland they are told undying fame attaches to their achievement."

Reynaud Calls 2 Cabinet Meetings For Tomorrow

Paris, May 8 (AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud tonight called two Cabinet meetings for tomorrow—one in his office and another with President Lebrun at the Elysee Palace—as the Government kept a careful watch on developments in Holland.

Although a War Ministry spokesman asserted that renewed rumors of a possible German invasion of Holland were only a Nazi propaganda move to keep neutral nations stirred up, other French sources expressed belief that something was afoot serious enough to cause the Netherlands to take unusual precautions.

More Notice Than London

The Netherlands tension received more consideration in Paris than the debate in the House of Commons over the Chamberlain Government.

One report published here said a messenger from the German Foreign Ministry had left for The Hague but that it was still too early to determine whether he was carrying "an ultimatum or a more or less broad demand for supplies."

Official information in Paris was that the Germans had made no recent troop shifts along the Netherlands frontier, but the French high command has insisted that the Germans have enough men massed there to strike without warning.

Nazis Worrying Neutrals, Charge

Dutch Invasion Reports German Propaganda, Paris Says

MAY 9 1940

Paris, May 8—(AP)—A spokesman of the French war ministry today interpreted reports of an impending German invasion of The Netherlands as part of a Nazi propaganda campaign to worry neutral nations.

He observed that these reports were being circulated at the same time as rumors of impending action in Hungary and the Balkan countries.

As far as the Western front is concerned, he said, the number of German effective troops remains unchanged.

This spokesman added that the Allied front in Norway has been reinforced by the arrival of an undisclosed number of Polish troops. Operations in the Narvik area, however, were hindered by heavy snowfall.

Action on the Western Front was characterized by the customary activity of patrols and artillery duels.

The French reported German patrols were repulsed "without difficulty" in the region of the Nied river.

Artillery fire was reported at various points and was "particularly violent and sustained" in the Blies river sector.

The French High Command in its official communique, said only:

No. 295 (morning): Activity of the artillery of both sides continued during the night at various points of the front.

No. 296 (evening): In the region east of the Nied [River] the enemy attempted a raid that was repulsed by the fire of the outpost attacked, of the artillery and of a support party, which at once went into action.

Pope Expresses Fear Other Countries May Be Invaded

Tension Eases in Mediterranean as Italy Watches War Moves

BULLETIN.

ROME, May 8 (AP).—A Fascist Senate report describing Italy's attitude toward the war as one of "pre-belligerency" rather than "non-belligerency" gave fresh support today to the growing belief that this country is only waiting for an opportune moment to enter the war.

This new statement of Italian policy tended to reaffirm previous semi-official assertions that Italy could not remain permanently out of the fight.

The report, on the Ministry of the Interior budget, was prepared by Senator Maurizio Maraviglia, former members of the Fascist Grand Council and a leading agitator for Italian intervention on the side of the Allies in the world war, in which he fought as a volunteer.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 8.—Pope Pius XII made it known today he shared widespread fears that other countries were in danger of invasion.

Addressing an audience of 4,000 pilgrims, including 41 French children, at the Vatican, the Pope said "a world poisoned with lies and disloyalty has lost the spiritual health of peace."

"The earth should be a place of concord," the pontiff declared, "but instead the fire of war has broken out in various nations and is threatening to invade others."

Meanwhile, tension in the Mediterranean subsided somewhat as it became evident Italy still is watching the moves of other countries and particularly the fate of the Chemberlain government before taking any belligerent action.

Peace Declared Aim.

Virginio Gayda, frequently Premier Mussolini's mouthpiece, declared Italy "intends to remain in peace and friendly co-operation" with the Balkan countries.

His statement in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia was made in explaining that any British attempt to blockade Italy at Gibraltar would fail because essential supplies could be obtained from the Balkans.

Italians blamed the British for the apprehension and alarm in the Balkans and Near East which led to reported precautionary measures by Italy, the allied and other nations in this area.

One Rome newspaper, Il Messaggero, accused the allies of spreading false reports to provoke incidents and spread war.

Il Messaggero declared reports of strong Italian troop reinforcements on the Yugoslav frontier were false.

Diplomatic observers said their investigations also failed to disclose any unusual massing of Italian troops there.

(Reports from Jugoslavia said that nation had 300,000 veteran troops already on her Italian and German frontiers. Jugoslav military quarters have estimated Italy has 300,000 men on the Jugo-slav-Italian border north of Fiume.)

Not Abandoning Claim.

Gayda said Gibraltar could not change Italy's position and decision.

But, he added, this did not mean that Italy was abandoning her claim to freedom in the Mediterranean from British control.

It was widely believed in Rome that Italy would like to internationalize both Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, western and eastern entrances to the Mediterranean, in the next peace treaty.

"Gibraltar and Suez," Gayda said, "like other systems created by two imperial democracies (Britain and France) on the Mediterranean shores remain an ever obvious expression of an intolerable hegemony which, although it can be faced victoriously in case of war, means a regime which cannot justify itself in any way with the European order of justice and liberty for all nations."

Fascist newspapers published and thereby gave authority to a Moscow report that Italy would enter the war only if the allies violated Balkan neutrality.

Seen Awaiting Proper Time.

The article was reproduced from the Soviet trades union newspaper Trud and coincided with diplomatic opinion in Rome.

"Italy's prudent position of non-belligerency let it be supposed that Mussolini is awaiting the most opportune moment to set in motion his program and become the master of the Mediterranean," Trud said.

This moment, Trud continued, would be "when the belligerents exhausted their forces and the intervention of fresh Italian troops could assure the superiority of one camp over the other. It is difficult for any one in Italy to suppose such a moment has arrived."

Trud said Italy lacked raw materials for a long war and her intervention now would fail to end the war in a short time.

Therefore, it added, talk of Italy entering the war could be considered "only a threat, probably intended to prevent Anglo-French violation of Balkan neutrality, which would no doubt bring Italy's immediate intervention if it came about."

Expresses Italian Attitude

ROME, May 8 (AP)—An official Fascist report today described Italy's attitude toward the war as one of "pre-belligerency" rather than "non-belligerency."

The new statement of Italian policy was made in a report on the Interior Ministry's budget by Senator Maurizio Maraviglia, an outstanding pro-Ally influence in the last war.

He said the term non-belligerency adequately described Italy's legal status, but that the Italian state of mind might more appropriately be considered as a "position of pre-belligerency," in that Italy is "not disposed to buy the benefits of peace at the price of even the least sacrifice of its aspirations."

Publication of the Senate report coincided with the announcement that a Yugoslav delegation would come to Rome on June 4 to decide the volume of commerce between the two countries during the last half of the year.

These developments supported Rome diplomats' view that while a change in Italian policy is not necessarily imminent, it may be expected when Premier Mussolini considers the moment appropriate.

The Fascist press underlined this view by publishing the Moscow newspaper Trud's prediction that the moment will come when the warring nations have reached the exhaustion point and the "intervention of fresh Italian troops can assure the superiority of one side over the other."

THREE MORE SHIPS SUNK IN NORTH SEA

Norwegians, Germans and British Lose One Each.

LONDON, May 8 (A. P.).—Three ships were added today to the list of victims in the sea and air warfare in the North Sea.

The Norwegian High Command in a communique relayed here from "somewhere in Norway" by Reuters News Agency (British) said that six persons were killed, including the captain and two women, in the bombing and machine gunning of the 316-ton Norwegian passenger steamship Folden.

The Swedish steamship Monark, 1,786 tons, in charge of a German prize crew, was reported from Stockholm to have been torpedoed by a British submarine. Five members of the prize crew were taken aboard the submarine and two others were saved in lifeboats.

The Monark had been at Bergen, Norway, and was seized by the Germans at the start of the invasion. (Stockholm dispatches did not explain the presence of the German prize crew aboard the Monark.)

A dispatch from Dunquerque, France, said that the British collier Brighton, 5,359 tons, was sunk off that port by an explosion. All of her crew of thirty-four men were saved, though ten were injured in the blast.

LONDON, MAY 8—(AP)—THE ADMIRALTY TONIGHT ANNOUNCED THAT SIX BRITISH NAVAL TRAWLERS HAD BEEN LOST DURING THE ALLIED ARMIES' WITHDRAWAL FROM THE TRONDHEIM AREA IN NORWAY.

TWO OF THE TRAWLERS SANK AFTER AIR ATTACKS. THE OTHER FOUR WERE SO DAMAGED BY AIR RAIDERS THAT IT WAS THOUGHT NOT ADVISABLE FOR THEM TO ATTEMPT TO CROSS THE NORTH SEA AND THEY WERE SUNK BY THE BRITISH.

THE ADMIRALTY COMMUNIQUE FOLLOWS:

The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce the loss of the following naval trawlers during operations off the Norwegian coast in connection with the evacuation of the Trondheim area:

H. M. Trawler Warwickshire and H. M. Trawler Cape Chelyuskin were damaged by air attack and subsequently sank. H. M. Trawlers Jardine, St. Goran, Gaul and Astonvilla were damaged by air attack and it was not deemed advisable for them to attempt the crossing of the North Sea. They were accordingly sunk by our forces.

Casualties among the personnel were slight. The next of kin have been informed.

King Haakon Speaks.

STOCKHOLM, May 8 (A. P.).—King Haakon VII of Norway, a fugitive from the German invaders of his country, has proclaimed his Government's determination "to hold out until our country is free again."

He hinted that important new help is expected.

A statement, dated "Somewhere in Norway" and released last night through the Norwegian News Bureau, said in part:

"In northern Norway we are still holding strong positions. With the help now planned, we will succeed in retaining other parts of the country.

"The superiority of the enemy in numbers and technically on land and in the air has forced our retreat.

"We have reason to believe that this will soon be changed. Our morale unbroken, I and my Government have decided to hold out until our country is free again."

The Norwegian Legation in Stockholm announced that the legation staff in German-occupied Denmark would leave Copenhagen tomorrow, presumably returning to Norway.

The Swedish Legation in Copenhagen will take charge of Norwegian interests.

Norwegian Prisoners Of War To Be Released

Officers, However, Will Not Be Freed In Ostfold Section, Nazi Commander Says

Fredikstad, Norway, May 8 (AP)—All Norwegian prisoners of war except officers, held in the Ostfold section, Norway's southeastern tip bordering on Sweden, will be released, the German commander said today. No date was announced.

It also was announced that Nazi SS men (Elite Guards) would relieve the German military guard in the Ostfold and that the German military would exchange salutes with Norwegian police.

Reaction in Oslo

OSLO, May 8 (AP).—Oslo newspapers, published under German supervision in this Nazi-held capital, ridiculed today the praise given by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to the British troops in Norway, and said his account of their bravery conflicted with the reports of Norwegian officers.

Nazi Flyers Seized 24 Curtiss Planes, Norwegian Says

British Craft Driven Out In a Week, Asserts Air Lieutenant

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Foreign Correspondent.

OSTERSUND, Sweden, May 8.—German flyers systematically "hunted Norwegian planes like rabbits" and captured 24 new undamaged United States-built Curtiss pursuit ships at one field during the conquest of Norway, a 23-year-old flying lieutenant asserted today.

"The Nazis drove British fighting planes out of Norway in a week," he said, "destroying 20 grounded planes in a single attack."

The young Norwegian gave a graphic picture of German superiority in the air.

"I was stationed at our military airfield just outside Oslo when the war started," he said. "We had just received 24 Curtiss Hawks and 75 pursuit planes from the United States, and eight of them were ready for flight, eight others were nearly ready and the remaining eight were partly assembled.

Avoided Hitting Planes.

"All the Curtiss planes were standing on the field when we received news of the German attack. Before one could be taken aloft, the German flyers appeared, bombing the field and factory, but carefully avoiding hitting the Curtiss ships until their ground forces managed to capture all the planes undamaged."

The young lieutenant said he escaped from the field and joined a small Norwegian fighting squadron of 18 planes in the mountains north of Oslo, operating from frozen lakes about 3,000 to 4,000 feet above sea level.

"But the Germans systematically combed the mountains for our hiding places, then brought bombers to attack," he related.

"During the day we took to the air in a hopeless fight and managed to shoot down some German planes. But the bad weather, crackups and the German air force took a heavy toll," he said.

British attempts to use Norwegian flying bases for their own fighting planes lasted only a week, he declared.

"The British landed 20 of their fighters on a frozen lake west of Dombas, in the mountains, but the Germans almost immediately found their hiding place, bombed it and destroyed the planes.

"The British then tried taking off directly from aircraft carriers anchored off the coast, but, although several German ships were shot down between Dombas and Lillehammer, it did not prove effective."

The Norwegian lieutenant said he was en route to Northern Norway to continue fighting.

Sabotage Ring Alleged

STOCKHOLM, May 8 (AP).—The arrest of a Briton who had cellar contained high explosives and who had a special interest in Swedish iron mines was said today to have uncovered a sabotage ring.

The Stockholm newspaper "Aftonbladet" reported the arrest of the man and said he had published a book in London last year dealing with Swedish iron ore. The paper said police were continuing the investigation of the alleged sabotage group.

Former American Hurt In British Air Service

Whitney Straight, Who Became Naturalized Briton In 1936, Is Squadron Leader

London, May 8 (AP)—Whitney Straight, socially prominent former New York flyer and automobile racer, is in a Royal Air Force hospital with a head wound received in active service.

"I'm recovering all right," the American-born flyer, now a squadron leader in the R. A. F., said in a telegram tonight to his titled wife, Lady Daphne Straight.

Straight, who became a naturalized Briton in 1936, is a grandson of the late William C. Whitney, one-time Secretary of the United States Navy, and a nephew of the late Harry Payne Whitney. His wife is the daughter of the Earl of Winchilsea and the Countess of Winchilsea. The Countess was Miss Margaretta Drexel, only daughter of the late Anthony J. Drexel, of Philadelphia.

Copenhagen, May 8 (AP)—A Danish Government committee left for Berlin today to resume negotiations for a trade agreement, especially concerning German exports to Denmark.

Diary Lists 39 Nazi Bombings

J. Norman Lodge, veteran Associated Press newsman, reached England yesterday after seeing action on two fronts in Norway and experiencing German air attack to get a first-hand account of the war there. Early in the campaign he crossed the Swedish border and trekked through deep snow to get the first eye-witness account of the British action around Narvik. Later, he reached the Namsos front at the height of the fighting there—German planes machine-gunned his auto—and when the Allies withdrew he accepted an invitation to go along.

By J. Norman Lodge
Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

London, May 8—The censor has my diary for the time being, but I won't need it to remember the events of the past two weeks.

I landed at a northern British port yesterday with an Allied expeditionary force from Namsos, Norway, which reached home intact despite an attack by thirty-nine German planes which sank three Allied destroyers—the British Afridi, the French Bison and the Polish Grom.

A "good deed" got me into my first trouble.

On my way to Namsos from Formofoss, near the Swedish frontier, I stopped an American ambulance hospital unit at Grong to get a story of the day's bombing.

Asked To Take Letters

When I was asked to take some letters to Colonel "B," a British medical officer, I agreed readily, thinking they might be an open sesame for sleeping quarters. They were—under British "protective arrest" in Spillum.

I had gone to Namsos on a reliable tip that an Allied offensive was about to begin north of Trondheim.

The next day French troops streamed back from the front and embarked, as I later learned, the same night. The British, however, assured me that they had no intention of leaving. They told me to get some sleep. But before I could close an eye, I was ordered to pack my kit and be ready. We were set to sail May 3.

Entered During Bombing

Streaming up the road from the Steinkjer front about fifty miles south of Namsos, we entered the port as a terrific bombing was taking place.

Incendiary bombs set fire to the whole waterfront, with pursuit planes intermittently swooping down to strafe the roads.

Immediately after the French had withdrawn, the British received orders to proceed to the docks. Leaving behind equipment, personal belongings and other material, the troops began embarking.

Flopped Where They Could

Various regiments which had abandoned the Steinkjer front under forced march through knee-deep snow covered fifty-two kilometers (about thirty-two miles) in less than fourteen hours.

Dog-tired, they boarded the transports in the eerie light of burning supplies and flopped where they could.

Our heavily laden ship was improperly trimmed and we had an anxious moment when we found her nose was stuck in the mud. Hastily herding the troops aft and ordering full speed astern, the British pulled the ship out of the mud and she joined the homeward-bound convoy.

It still was light when we left. No German planes were in sight.

But peace was not for us.

Planes Start Bombing

Just after a breakfastless early morning departure, the first Heinkels appeared and the cannonading began. Bombs dropped all around the convoy ships, especially ours, which was the flagship.

One bomb, apparently a 500-pounder, fell less than fifty yards astern—so close its splash fell on the afterdeck.

Not content with that miss, three more Heinkels dropped a series of chaplet bombs—small incendiary missiles—which formed a perfect spray framing the ship.

Cameramen On Deck

I and two American cameramen—Bonny Powell and Arthur Menken—remained as much under cover as we could, but still on deck, they grinding out a pictorial history while I made notes—of which I was relieved promptly by the Admiralty when I arrived in Britain.

The bombings continued. We were paid thirty-nine visits in all with from fifteen to twenty bombs on each visit.

Our ship alone fired more than 100 three-inch shells and several thousand rounds of machine-gun bullets.

A dive bomber laid a perfect shot on the Bison. British cruisers and destroyers removed the survivors and wounded.

Afridi Singled Out

German Junkers and Heinkels finally singled out the Afridi. Disabled and lagging, she sank, too.

As night fell, the attacks ceased.

During the first day's fighting one Heinkel was struck behind the cockpit dived into the ocean, and disappeared.

The French crew, which had been away from its home port for three months, carried on almost without sleep for the entire trip of five days. They were uncomplaining fellows but the most souvenir-hunting sailors afloat. Everything mysteriously disappeared, my pukka from Finland—a hunting knife.

Isolated For 24 Hours

Nearing a secret northern military zone, a French naval officer herded us together and explained we were entering a secret area and must go below.

We did—into a small detention room, where we were kept without food or water for twenty-four hours.

Finally, Captain "K," who had been our custodian, learned of our fate and personally brought us hardtack and red wine. He tried to get us turned back to the British but without success.

However, the troops transferred to a British ship and when we sailed from the prohibited area—of which maps are readily obtainable in Fleet street—we were taken to the wardroom mess, wined, dined with provisions brought aboard that night, apologized to at every turn and treated like ranking diplomats.

Dead Buried at Sea.

While we were hove to in the "prohibited area" last Monday, services for the dead of the Bison and Afridi were held aboard the flagship.

As a slight breeze flickered the candles on the altar, Abbe Parquin, spiritual adviser of the French sailors, chanted a requiem mass and sprinkled water on the sea for those whose last resting place was beneath the waves.

Earlier, Protestant services were held aboard the British cruiser York.

The sound of the low chant of the service could be heard in our detention room, and, through a minute crack in our battened porthole we could see the flickering candles.

For the next 36 hours we had the run of the ship, hammocks for sleeping and plenty of food.

Arriving at a northern British port, however, trouble appeared again in the form ofentry officers. Landing permission readily was given. But how do you do it?

Promised a Dinner.

The French, who had refused to turn us over to the British, insisted now that the British should send a gig for us. The British insisted the French were our custodians. We fumed and waited.

Finally, after waiting offshore in sight of the first gree grass we had beheld in many months, we were taken ashore, turned loose and promised a dinner in London by the headquarters major who originally had prevented our return to Formofoss.

Throughout the entire shot-ridden trip, both in the Namsos area and at sea, the troops and officers conducted themselves according to the truest traditions of their countries.

The French first offcer who convoyed the expedition from Namsos evidently was contrite over our treatment and told the whole story of the allies' entry and withdrawal without skis or ability to run on them and their opposition by skiing Germans from the Alps who were perfectly at home on runners.

The British, sinking knee-deep in melting snow, were fortunate that their casualties during their short stay on the Steinkjer front were kept so small, he said.

Hull Reports Tension Worse.

WASHINGTON, May 8 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that official dispatches to the State Department since yesterday indicated some increase of the tension in the Netherlands over fear of a German invasion. He added that the department was still able to maintain communication with the American Minister at The Hague, George A. Gordon.

Noting that Americans in Holland have had long-standing advice to leave because of the threat of war, Mr. Hull told reporters that now nobody could have any excuse for being caught there by any outbreak of hostilities.

In response to other questions Mr. Hull said that Alexander C. Kirk, the American charge d'affaires at Berlin, was coming home on leave but that there was nothing unusual about it. Mr. Kirk, he said, has been doing strenuous work for some time and consequently is taking a needed rest.

ENVOY IS PAYMASTER

Dr. Loudon to Handle Cash if Holland Is Invaded.

WASHINGTON, May 8 (A. P.).—The Netherlands legation here understood the gravity of the war situation in Europe today by disclosing that Dr. Alexander Loudon, Minister to the United States, had been appointed to act as general paymaster for all Dutch officials in foreign countries "in case of emergency."

"This means we will fight if we are invaded," an authorized spokesman said at the legation.

Americans living in Holland already have received three warnings from the American Minister, George A. Gordon, to leave. Each suggestion was made during a period when an invasion seemed imminent—the first on the outbreak of the European war in September the second toward the end of the year and the third in February.

DUTCH MONEY PILES UP IN U. S. STRONGBOX

Netherlands' Wealth In This Country Estimated At $200,000,000

Minister To Washington Is Foreign Services "Emergency" Paymaster

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 8—The United States role as the world's safety deposit box was emphasized anew today when it was estimated that the Netherlands have at least $200,000,000 of wealth in this country—and perhaps a much larger sum.

All told, foreign governments and citizens have stored more than $11,000,000,000 in the United States for protection from war and other dangers abroad.

The Dutch Government recognized the American role of strongbox keeper by appointing its Minister to Washington, Dr. A. Loudon, paymaster for all the far-flung foreign services of the Netherlands Government "in case of emergency."

Cash In Case Of Invasion

Holland feels assured that if Germany invades her, Dr. Loudon will be aided by the United States in using Dutch money on deposit here as the Dutch Government would want it used and not as a conquering army might dictate.

If an invasion occurs and President Roosevelt follows his action in the cases of Denmark and Norway, he will issue an executive order prohibiting the withdrawal of Dutch money from the United States or shipment of wealth to Holland except upon Treasury license.

Dollars Hoarded Abroad

Besides sending wealth here, many foreigners have been secretly hoarding American currency in their native lands. The amount of American paper money filling foreign socks and flower pots is not known, but is estimated by officials in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

American officials, who boast that the dollar is the "soundest currency in the world," have welcomed openly the safety-deposit-box idea. When Denmark and Norway were invaded, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, explained that the President's order "freezing" Danish and Norwegian funds was "necessary to protect the integrity of the United States as a depository for international funds."

Would Keep It From Nazis

Privately, aides explained that he meant that the United States would resist Nazi conquerors who might try to force Danes or Norwegians to bring their money home so the Germans could confiscate it.

Germany, which has less gold and international investments than any other major power, was pictured as hungry for any international assets she could obtain to buy war supplies. Few countries will accept German money at its face value.

Chamberlain Thumb Is Now Off Churchill

Energetic Head of Fighting Services May Show Results

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

I have compiled a little biographical sketch which may (or may not) shed light on the English failure in the battle of Norway, but in any event helps explain the onslaught which is being made on the government in the House of Commons.

My story is in six chapters, and I call it "The Prime Minister's Thumb".

Not to be mysterious, it has to do with British Premier Chamberlain's thumb, which would seem to have left its imprint (but maybe didn't) on the pages of 36 days of burning history. Future finger-print experts will have to settle that point.

The biography really is comprised of extracts from my diary, and it unfolds as follows:

Chapter I.

London, April 3—Britain's aging but agile prime minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, today bowed to public insistence on more initiative in the conduct of the war and made shifts in his cabinet calculated to appease the uneasiness.

Actually the changes managed by the adroit premier are rather superficial—with one notable exception. The people have been clamoring for greater use of the genius of the great Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, and Mr. Chamberlain has granted them this boon.

Now the prime minister is the big boss of his cabinet and is mighty difficult to move once his mind is made up to a program. However, he lifted his stubborn thumb from the control of affairs and announced in Commons that Mr. Churchill was to have wider activities.

England understands the first lord is being made director of the war and there is great rejoicing which has run around the world among friends of the Allied cause. The press of many countries are hailing Churchill as man of the hour.

Chapter II.

London, April 9—This has been a day of tragedy, for in the dark hours before the dawn the Germans invaded unsuspecting Norway.

Premier Chamberlain appeared before a tense House of Commons to inform the members that "His Majesty's government have decided forthwith to extend their full aid to Norway and have intimated that they will fight the war in full association with them."

A great crisis is at hand, but everywhere the people are saying that the new British director of war operations, Winston Churchill, will see them through and free the Norwegians.

Chapter III.

London, April 11—There's something peculiar about that purported appointment of Churchill to the post of war director.

Mr. Chamberlain made it clear in the House of Commons today that he himself remains the supreme director of Britain's war effort. It looks as though the prime minister has put his thumb down again.

Chapter IV.

London, April 16—Premier Chamberlain, speaking before the nation free church council, let it be known that he wants to stick to his job until the war is finished. Said he:

"The press continually reminds you and me that I have passed three score years and 10 (he's 71). Nevertheless my eye is undimmed and my natural forces unabated. I feel encouraged to carry on the tack in which I am engaged until our purpose is achieved."

Well, I knew he didn't intend to quit unless he had to, but I wonder just why he should make this unusual announcement. It almost looks as though he feels that an effort is being made to shelve him. Churchill would be his successor, I suppose.

London, May 2—The crash has come. Premier Chamberlain disclosed to a shocked and tight-lipped Commons that British troops have been withdrawn from the Andalsnes area and that the attempt to take Germanheld Trondheim from the south has been abandoned.

There's been something very wrong somewhere. The drive and genius of Churchill haven't been in evidence at all. I can't believe that he has been directing the Norwegian show. Some more cautious individual has had the thing in hand.

Chapter VI.

London, May 7—What a day of accounting! Few prime ministers have weathered such a storm of anger as has been heaped upon the grey head of Mr. Chamberlain because of the Norwegian debacle.

The premier is a fighter and stood his ground, but he has raised his thumb again and announced that hereafter Churchill will supervise military operations from day to day. That presumably means an extension of the first lord's previous powers. He now will work directly with the chiefs of staffs for the army, the navy and the air-force.

Maybe I'm wrong but I believe if they would give Churchill leeway he would get results. They still need the sober judgment of Chamberlain as a balance wheel, but it's going to take vision and action to win this war.

This may mean a fresh start for the Allies.

Deny Sabotage Part.

HELSINKI, May 8 (A. P.).—The official Finnish press bureau today denied a Moscow assertion that intdustrial porperty in territory ceded to Soviet Russia had been sabotaged in violation of the peace treaty with Finland.

The Russian accusation, printed yesterday in the Communist organ Pravda, brought immediate speculation as to its possible significance.

Finns said that relations with Russia had been returning steadily to normal and they were at a loss to explain the Pravda article, which held Finnish military authorities responsible.

MOSCOW, MAY 8-(AP)-THE MOSCOW NEWSPAPER TRUD, TRADE UNIONS ORGAN, SAID TODAY FRANCE AND BRITAIN ARE PLANNING RADICAL CHANGES IN GERMANY'S PRESENT BORDERS AND HER FOREIGN POLITICAL COURSE BUT THAT "REALIZATION OF THESE PROBLEMS IS IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT A TRULY GREAT WAR" INVOLVING MILLIONS OF MEN.

TRUD AND THE SOVIET RUSSIAN PRESS DEVOTED MUCH SPACE TO DISCUSSIONS OF THE ALLIED REVERSE IN NORWAY AND THE POSSIBILITY OF THE WAR SPREADING TO OTHER COUNTRIES.

MAY 9 1940

"THE BRITISH-FRENCH FORCES CONCENTRATED IN THE NEAR EAST ARE PREDESTINED NOT SO MUCH FOR A DIRECT BLOW ON GERMANY AS FOR PRESSURE ON THE BALKAN AND NEAR EAST COUNTRIES FOR THE PURPOSE OF INVOLVING THEM INTO THE CONFLICT WITH GERMANY," TRUD SAID.

PARIS, MAY 8,(AP)-- CHARACTERIZING BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S EXPLANATION OF THE WITHDRAWAL OF ALLIED TROOPS FROM CENTRAL NORWAY AS "NOT VERY CONVINCING", THE NEWSPAPER L'ORDRE EXPRESSED HOPE TODAY THAT FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY WINSTON CHURCHILL WOULD BE ABLE TO OFFER "BETER ARGUMENTS."

MAY 9 1940

L'ORDRE, MOUTHPIECE OF THE RIGHTIST CENTER, AND L'OEUVRE, LEFTIST ORGAN, WERE THE MOST OUTSPOKEN CRITICS OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S RESUME OF THE NORTHERN WAR.

MOST OF THE PARIS JOURNALS CONFINED THEMSELVES TO DRAWING A LESSON IN PREPAREDNESS FROM THE SITUATION, OR WITHHELD COMMENT ALTOGETHER.

LONDON, MAY 9-(AP)--SPEARHEAD OF A FIERY ATTACK IN COMMONS ON THE CHAMBERLAIN CABINET, WHICH HE CHARGED WITH "TIMIDITY", ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET SIR ROGER JOHN BROWNLOW KEYES IS AN OLD BRITISH SEADOG WHO WON THE ACCLAIM OF HIS PEOPLE ON 1918 BY HIS DARING "BOTTLING-UP" OF GERMAN SUBMARINES SNUGLY LURKING IN THE BELGIAN ZEEBRUGGE CANAL.

THE 68-YEAR-OLD SON OF A BRITISH GENERAL, SIR ROGER BUT NORMALLY A SHY MAN, FACED ONE OF THE DIFFICULT TASKS OF HIS LIFE TODAY---FOR THE ATTACK HE UNLEASHED YESTERDAY WAS AGAINST AN OLD FRIEND, WINSTON CHURCHILL. HE AND CHURCHILL HAVE BEEN CLOSE SINCE THE DAYS OF THE FATEFUL GALLIPOLI CAMPAIGN IN THE MEDITERRANEAN OF WORLD WAR.

MAY 9 1940

GENERAL SIR IAN HAMILTON, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF LAND FORCES IN THAT CAMPAIGN, ONCE DESCRIBED AS THE "VERY SPIT AND SPROT OF NELSON."

EARLY IN 1918, THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY DECIDED TO TAKE DRASTIC STEPS TO HALT THE HARRYING MENACE OF GERMAN UNDERSEA CRAFT WHICH CREPT FROM THE CAPTURED BASE OF ZEEBRUGGE.

THE DANGEROUS PLAN WAS THIS: THREE OLD CRUISERS WOULD RACE UNDER COVER OF SMOKE SCREENS INTO THE CANAL ENTRANCE AND THERE THE CREWS WOULD SCUTTLE THEM, BLOCKING THE SUBMARINES FROM THE SEA.

30.24-2139

IN GENERAL COMMAND OF THE OPERATIONS, THE LEADERS PLACED SIR ROGER, A SAILOR SINCE HE WAS A BOY OF 13, WHO EARLIER IN THE WAR HAD BEEN CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN SQUADRON.

ON THE NIGHT OF APRIL 22 AND EARLY MORNING OF APRIL 23--ST. GEORGE'S DAY--THE ATTACKING GROUP ADVANCED UNDER HEAVY FIRE, COVER OF

AT THE HEIGHT OF THE ENGAGEMENT, SIR ROGER HOISTED THE SIGNAL WHICH BECAME FAMOUS:"ST. GEORGE FOR ENGLAND!" ONE OF THE BLOCKING SHIPS RAN ASHORE, BUT THE REMAINDER REACHED THEIR POSTS, THEIR BOTTOMS WERE BLOWN OUT AND THE CANAL WAS BLOCKED.

MAY 9 1940

SIR ROGER, A COMPARATIVE NEWCOMER TO THE PARLIAMENT FOR WHICH HE WAS CHOSEN IN 1934, RETIRED FROM ACTIVE NAVAL SERVICE IN 1935, BUT LAST MARCH 3, HE WAS RECALLED TO ACTIVE SERVICE AND GIVEN THE RANK OF ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET FOR LIFE.

SIR ROGER'S DECLARATION TO THE HOUSE YESTERDAY THAT HIS BOLD PLAN TO FORCE TRONDHEIM FJORD HAD BEEN TURNED DOWN WAS THE SECOND TIME IN HIS CAREER THAT A SEA MANEUVER HE PROPOSED MET REBUFF BY A BRITISH CABINET.

MAY 9 1940

DURING THE GALLIPOLI CAMPAIGN WHEN HE WAS CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN SQUADRON HE FORMED A DARING PLAN TO RUSH THE DARDANELLES. HE WAS GRANTED SPECIAL LEAVE TO RETURN TO ENGLAND AND PLACE IT BEFORE THE CABINET BUT THE SCHEME WAS TURNED DOWN.

WASHINGTON, MAY 8-(AP)-F.J.HORNING, ECONOMIST FOR THE BANK OF CANADA, TOLD THE SECURITIES COMMISSION TODAY THAT THE END OF THE PRESENT WAR WOULD FIND CANADA "ECONOMICALLY STRONGER THAN EVER IN HER HISTORY."

MAY 9 1940

HORNING SAID THAT THE DOMINION'S ROLE IN THIS WAR WOULD BE CHIEFLY THAT OF A "SUPPLIER OF MUNITIONS, FOODS AND OTHER NECESSARY MATERIALS." HE TESTIFIED AT A HEARING ON A PROPOSED REORGANIZATION OF INTERNATIONAL UTILITIES CORPORATION.

HORNING DECLARED THAT AT PRESENT CANADA DID NOT CONTEMPLATE EXTENSIVE MILITARY PARTICIPATION COMPARABLE TO THAT OF THE LAST WAR BECAUSE "AT THE MOMENT IS IS NOT DEEMED NECESSARY." ITS CONTRIBUTION, HE ADDED, IN ADDITION TO THAT AS A SUPPLIER, WILL INCLUDE THE EMPIRE AIR TRAINING PLAN AND "RELATIVELY SMALL CONTINGENTS OVERSEAS." CANADA ENLISTED 600,000 MEN IN THE LAST WAR, OF WHOM ABOUT 450,000 SERVED ABROAD.

HORNING SAID THAT FINANCIAL REGULATIONS HAD BEEN IMPOSED WHICH

WOULD "HAVE THE BROAD EFFECT OF BUILDING A WALL AROUND CANADA ECONOMICALLY AND BRINGING ALL EXTERNAL BUSINESS UNDER OFFICIAL PURVIEW." HE SAID THIS WAS DONE WITH A VIEW TO PRESERVING THE NATION'S "NATIONAL CREDIT UMIMPAIRED."

NOTING THAT IN THE LAST WAR THE CANADIAN FEDERAL PUBLIC DEBT HAD INCREASED SEVEN FOLD, THE ECONOMIST SAID THAT THE CANADIANS HAD "BORNE THIS HUGE BURDEN WITH EQUANIMITY" AND THAT THE EXPERIENCE SINCE THEN HAD SHOWN THE COUNTRY'S ECONOMY "SUFFICIENTLY STRONG AND WELL CONCEIVED TO WITHSTAND THIS HEAVY STRAIN, EVEN DURING THE YEARS OF SEVERE RECESSION IN BUSINESS AS IN THE 1930'S."

HE ADDED THAT CANADA WAS "IN A MUCH MORE FAVORABLE POSITION TODAY TO ABSORB WAR LOANS THAN SHE WAS IN 1914." HE SAID THAT IT WAS CLEAR THAT THE COST OF THE WAR COULD NOT BE COVERED ENTIRELY BY HIGHER TAXES BUT THAT THE PRESENT INTENTION OF THE GOVERNMENT APPARENTLY WAS TO AVOID "RECOURSE TO THE HIGH INTEREST COUPON AND TAX-FREE SECURITIES WHICH CHARACTERIZED WARTIME FINANCING IN 1914-18."

MAY 9 1940

HE SAID THAT THE PRESENT COST OF THE WAR WAS AROUND $1,000,000 A DAY AND THAT LATER COMMITTMENTS MIGHT REACH $500,000,000 A YEAR. THIS COMPARED, HE SAID, WITH A PEAK EXPENDITURE DURING THE WORLD WAR OF $446,500,000 IN 1918-19.

WASHINGTON, MAY 7-(AP)-MILITARY AUTHORITIES EXPRESSED THE CONVICTION TONIGHT THAT SECRET BOMB SIGHTS USED BY UNITED STATES ARMY AND NAVY PLANES WERE STILL THE WORLD'S BEST IN THE FACE OF BERLIN REPORTS THAT NAZI FLIERS HAD USED IN NORWAY A NEW DEVICE OF COMPARABLE ACCURACY.

MAY 9 1940

THE GERMAN BOMB SIGHT WAS UNDERSTOOD TO BE BASICALLY THE SAME AS JAPANESE FLIERS HAVE USED IN CHINA WITH RESULTS THAT HAVE FAILED TO IMPRESS AMERICAN MILITARY AIRMEN.

THE AMERICAN ARMED FORCES, BY AUTHORITATIVE INDICATIONS, HAVE TWO BOMB SIGHTS RATHER THAN THE SINGLE DEVICE ABOUT WHICH MUCH SECRECY HAS BEEN THROWN FOR YEARS, ONE A NAVAL DEVELOPMENT AND THE OTHER PERFECTED BY A MANUFACTURER OF PRECISION INSTRUMENTS.

BOTH ARE LIKELY TO REMAIN AS SECRET AS THEY CAN BE KEPT. THE DEVELOPMENT OF RIVAL DEVICES ABROAD WAS SAID AUTHORITATIVELY NOT TO HAVE ALTERED THE DECISION ANNOUNCED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT RECENTLY THAT DEVICES RATED SECRET BY THE ARMY AND NAVY WOULD NOT BE RELEASED FOR SALE.

THE BOMB SIGHTS, COMPLEX MECHANISMS WHICH AUTOMATICALLY COMPUTE DISTANCE, WIND RESISTANCE AND OTHER FACTORS, HAVE ENABLED ARMY FLIERS TO SET IMPRESSIVE RECORDS FOR ACCURACY IN PRACTICE NEAR LANGLEY FIELD, VIRGINIA, AND ELSEWHERE. HIGH SCORES HAVE BEEN SET REPEATEDLY IN DROPPING ACTUAL EXPLOSIVES UPON AREAS NO LARGER THAN A BATTLESHIP AT ALTITUDES OF 18,000 FEET AND EVEN HIGHER.

THE AIMING MECHANISMS ARE PORTABLE AND CAN BE READILY REMOVED FROM PLANES TO GUARDED STORAGE PLACES WHEN NOT IN USE.

RICHMOND,VA.,MAY 8-(AP)-THE GERMAN INVASION OF SCANDINAVIA CLOSED THE SOURCE OF 70 PER CENT OF THE MEDICINALLY VALUABLE COD LIVER OIL VITAMIN SUPPLY TO THE UNITED STATES THE AMERICAN PHARMACEUTICAL ASSOCIATION WAS TOLD TODAY.

MANAGING EDITOR ROBERT WILLIAM RODMAN OF DRUGGISTS' CIRCULAR, PHARMACY TRADE JOURNAL, SAID MOREOVER THAT HOSTILITIES STARTED AT A PARTICULARLY BAD TIME FROM THE DRUGGISTS' STANDPOINT BECAUSE THE FISH OIL STOCKS IN THIS COUNTRY WERE AT THEIR LOW POINT OF THE YEAR AFTER HEAVY WINTER SALES WHEN VITAMIN PRODUCTS WERE MUCH IN DEMAND. SPRING IS THE BIG COD FISHING SEASON OFF NORWAY.

"NORWAY'S CHIEF FISHING GROUND FOR COD IS AROUND THE LOFOTEN ISLANDS NEAR NARVIK, WHICH HAS BORNE THE BRUNT OF INTENSIVE AIR, SEA AND LAND FIGHTING," HE SAID, "AND THE TWO PRINCIPAL REFINING CENTERS ARE BERGEN AND AALESUND AND HAVE BEEN TARGETS FOR AERIAL WARFARE.

RODMAN POINTED OUT THAT THE UNITED STATES WOULD HAVE TO DEPEND UPON ICELAND AND JAPAN AS THE REMAINING SOURCES OF SUPPLY BECAUSE CANADA AND FRANCE HAD PLACED THEIR EXPORTS OF COD LIVER OIL UNDER LICENSE.

ICELAND AND JAPAN NORMALLY FURNISH 30 PER CENT OF THE U.S. SUPPLY, HE SAID.

THE SMALL FINANCIAL RETURN TO THE AMERICAN FISHERMAN FROM THE PRODUCTION OF COD LIVER OIL, HE ADDED, IS SO SMALL DURING NORMAL TIMES THAT THE INDUSTRY IN THIS COUNTRY AMOUNTS TO VERY LITTLE.

HE PREDICTED THAT THE EXPECTED SHORTAGE WOULD RESULT IN A SPEED-UP OF SYNTHETIC PRODUCTION OF VITAMINS A AND D JUST AS THE CHINESE-JAPANESE WAR RESULTED IN THE PROMPT PRODUCTION OF A SYNTHETIC EPHEDRINE.

ITALY'S ATTITUDE TODAY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR IS AS MUCH AN ENIGMA AS IT WAS 25 YEARS AGO IN THE FIRST MONTHS OF THE WORLD WAR.

WHILE CONDITIONS ARE NOT PARALLEL, THE SITUATION IS SOMEWHAT ANALOGOUS, ESPECIALLY AS TO THE UNCERTAINTY OF HER MILITARY COURSE.

BOUND TO ADOLF HITLER BY THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS, PREMIER MUSSOLINI HAS HELD ALOOF FROM THE CONFLICT MUCH AS ITALY MAINTAINED HER NEUTRALITY IN THE WORLD WAR BEFORE RENOUNCING THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY AND AUSTRIA-HUNGARY AND THROWING HER FORTUNES WITH THE ALLIES IN MAY, 1915.

THE NEXT FEW WEEKS OR PERHAPS DAYS MAY DECIDE WHETHER ITALY THIS TIME WILL FIGHT AGAINST, INSTEAD OF WITH, HER ALLIES OF WORLD WAR DAYS.

BEHIND ITALY'S PRESENT ATTITUDE TOWARD ENGLAND AND FRANCE IS A LONG SERIES OF EVENTS, GROWING OUT OF DISSATISFACTION WITH THE TERRITORIAL PROVISIONS OF THE TREATY OF VERSAILLES; OF OTHER EXPANSION ASPIRATIONS NOTABLY AGAINST FRANCE, UNSATISFIED; OF SMOULDERING IRRITATION AGAINST ENGLAND FOR HER STAND BEFORE AND DURING THE CONQUEST OF ETHIOPIA.

BUT, REGARDLESS OF MUSSOLINI'S DECISION ON ENTERING THE WAR OR REMAINING NEUTRAL A NON-BELLIGERENT PARTNER OF ADOLF HITLER, THE MONTH OF MAY A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO WAS A FATEFUL ONE IN ITALIAN HISTORY.

IT WAS ON MAY 3, 1915, THAT ITALY STARTLED THE WORLD BY DENOUNCING THE OLD TRIPLE ALLIANCE, OF WHICH SHE HAD BEEN A MEMBER FOR MORE THAN THIRTY YEARS. AN EQUALLY STARTLING DISCLOSURE WAS MADE LATER THAT SHE HAD SIGNED A SECRET PACT IN LONDON ON APRIL 26, 1915.

ON MAY 23, ITALY FORMALLY DECLARED WAR ON AUSTRIA, BUT THE DECLARATION AGAINST GERMANY DID NOT COME UNTIL AUG.28, 1916.

OUT OF 42 MONTHS OF FIGHTING, ITALY EMERGED WITH A CASUALTY LIST HIGHER, PROPORTIONATELY, THAN THE LOSSES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE; A STAGGERING WAR DEBT OF $16,000,000,000, SEVERE PRIVATION AMONG HER PEOPLE THAT LED TO INTERNAL DISORDERS, INTENSE DISAPPOINTMENT OVER HER SHARE OF "PROMISED" TERRITORY BY THE TERMS OF THE VERSAILLES TREATY, A SUCCESSION OF GOVERNMENTAL CRISES AND, FINALLY, THE MARCH ON ROME BY THE BLACKSHIRTS AND THE ASCENDANCY OF BENITO MUSSOLINI.

ITALY MOBILIZED 5,615,000 MEN. MORE THAN 650,000 WERE KILLED OR DIED FROM WOUNDS AND DISEASE; 947,000 WERE WOUNDED, OF WHOM 220,000 WERE PERMANENTLY DISABLED; 600,000 WERE TAKEN PRISONER OR REPORTED MISSING.

AT THE START OF HOSTILITIES SHE HAD 23 BATTLESHIPS, NINE LIGHT CRUISERS AND SCOUTS, 93 TORPEDO BOATS AND 21 SUBMARINES. SHE LOST FIVE BATTLESHIPS, ONE SCOUT, EIGHT DESTROYERS, SIX TORPEDO BOATS, EIGHT SUBMARINES AND AUXILIARY VESSELS. HER FLEET DESTROYED THREE AUSTRIAN BATTLESHIPS, TWO DESTROYERS, TWO TORPEDO BOATS AND EIGHT SUBMARINES.

THE ARMY WAS NOT SO WELL PREPARED THEN AS NOW. EARLY IN THE WAR THE ITALIANS SCORED INITIAL, BUT NOT DECISIVE, SUCCESSES AGAINST THE AUSTRIANS IN SPECTACULAR FIGHTING AMONG THE HIGH MOUNTAIN PASSES AND GLACIERS. WHEN THE GERMANS CAME TO THE AID OF THE AUSTRIANS, AFTER THE COLLAPSE OF RUSSIA, THE CENTER OF THE ITALIAN ARMY WAS BROKEN IN A SURPRISE ATTACK, PRECEDED BY FOUR HOURS OF GAS SHELLING, AND THE DISASTROUS ROUT OF CAPORETTO RESULTED.

30.24-2143

BUT THE ITALIANS MADE A REMARKABLE RALLY ON THE PIAVE RIVER AND STEMMED THE TIDE OF DEFEAT, TO BE FOLLOWED, IN THE CLOSING DAYS OF THE WAR BY THE DECISIVE VICTORY AT VITTORIO VENETO, WHEN THE AUSTRIAN ARMY WAS ANNIHILATED.

WHEN THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE LANDED IN FRANCE, ITALY REQUESTED AMERICAN TROOPS. SECRETARY OF WAR NEWTON D.BAKER VISITED ITALY TO SURVEY THE SITUATION. GENERAL PERSHING SENT THE 332ND REGIMENT OF THE 83RD DIVISION IN JULY, 1918, HEADED BY COL.WILLIAM WALLACE. BEFORE THAT AMERICANS OF ITALIAN EXTRACTION HAD FLOCKED TO THE ITALIAN COLORS. FIORELLO H.LA GUARDIA, NOW MAYOR OF NEW YORK, SERVED AS AN AVIATOR.

AFTER THE NAPOLEONIC WARS, AND GARIBALDI'S SUCCESSES IN THE FIELD, ITALY HAD ATTAINED HER NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE AND WAS, BY COURTESY, ADMITTED TO THE COMITY OF THE GREAT POWERS. BUT SHE WAS IN NO POSITION TO ASSERT HER RIGHTS, FROM A MILITARY STANDPOINT.

SHE JOINED THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE AS A MEASURE OF PEACE AND DEFENSE. WHILE SHE WAS FRIENDLY WITH GERMANY, AUSTRIA WAS THE HEREDITARY ENEMY AND THE ALLIANCE NEVER WAS REALLY POPULAR WITH THE ITALIAN PEOPLE.

NEVERTHELESS, IN 1912, THE ALLIANCE WAS RENEWED TO LAST UNTIL 1920. IN THE YEARS IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING THE WORLD WAR AUSTRIA WAS OPENLY HOSTILE TO ITALY AND ITALIAN LEADERS GRADUALLY DEVELOPED MORE AND MORE DISTRUST OF THE ALLIANCE.

WHEN THE WORLD WAR BROKE OUT, ITALY OPENLY COOPERATED WITH GREAT BRITAIN IN TRYING TO AVERT IT. SHE WAS INCENSED BECAUSE SHE WAS NOT CONSULTED BY GERMANY AND AUSTRIA-HUNGARY ON THE SERBIAN ULTIMATUM. SO SHE DECLARED HER NEUTRALITY.

ALSO, THE KINGDOM OF ITALY WAS NOT COMPLETE AS AUSTRIA-HUNGARY STILL CONTROLLED MANY THOUSANDS OF ITALIANS IN THE TRENTINO AND TRIESTE --"UNREDEEMED ITALY." THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT HAD ATTEMPTED TO ACQUIRE THIS TERRITORY BY NEGOTIATION. UNDER PRESSURE FROM GERMANY, AUSTRIA-HUNGARY FINALLY CONSENTED TO SURRENDER MOST OF IT.

BUT, MEANWHILE, NEGOTIATIONS HAD BEEN GOING FORWARD SECRETLY WITH ENGLAND AND FRANCE, WHO OFFERED MORE GENEROUS TERMS, INCLUDING TERRITORY IN AFRICA AND ALONG THE EASTERN SHORES OF THE ADRIATIC. SO THE TREATY OF LONDON WAS SIGNED. OPPONENTS OF INTERVENTION BROUGHT ABOUT A GOVERNMENT CRISIS, BUT PREMIER SALANDRA WEATHERED THE STORM AND ITALY JOINED THE WAR.

AS A RESULT OF THE WAR ITALY "REDEEMED" ITALIAN TERRITORY BY ADDING A REGION INHABITED BY ITALIAN-SPEAKING PEOPLE AND PUSHED THE POLITICAL BOUNDARIES TO THE MAIN DIVIDE OF THE ALPS. FIUME WAS DENIED HER BY THE VERSAILLES TREATY BUT THE POET-SOLDIER GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO SEIZED IT IN 1919 AND IT WAS ANNEXED TO ITALY IN 1924.

UNDER MUSSOLINI'S GUIDANCE, ITALY HAS ADOPTED A POLICY OF IMPERIALISTIC EXPANSION AND ABSORBED ETHIOPIA AND ALBANIA. SHE STILL HAS HER EYES ON TUNISIA, OVER WHICH FRANCE ESTABLISHED A PROTECTORATE IN 1881. TUNISIA, THE SITE OF AN ANCIENT ROMAN PROVINCE, HAS A CONSIDERABLE ITALIAN POPULATION.

OTHER UNOFFICIAL ASPIRATIONS INCLUDE CORSICA, THE BIRTHPLACE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, SAVOY AND NICE. ALL HAVE BEEN UNDER FRENCH GOVERNMENT FOR MANY YEARS.

Chamberlain Edges Closer To Resignation As Attempt To Form New Cabinet Fails

Labor And Liberal Leaders Refuse To Join Rebuilt Government Unless Prime Minister Quits---Lord Halifax, Churchill And Lloyd George May Take Post If Chamberlain Withdraws

BY DREW MIDDLETON

London, May 9—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain was reported tonight to have failed in his first attempt to form a reconstructed cabinet under his standard to mollify a nation aroused and angry at "bungling" in Norway.

Labor leaders refused to come into such a government, and thereby Chamberlain edged nearer to resignation.

Even as the prime minister held conferences at No. 10 Downing street to find a political solution to his troubles, the admiralty announced hard blows in vigorous new British submarine attacks on three German convoys and other ships at an unannounced location.

Twelve torpedo hits were reported by the admiralty, with one German ship sunk and another driven ashore and destroyed by shellfire and torpedo. One convoy attacked consisted of ten ships, and six torpedoes "found their mark," the communique said.

The air ministry, a short time later, announced two German planes were shot down over the Scottish coast today.

Sources reporting the Labor refusal, given at a 45-minute conference with the prime minister tonight, said Chamberlain indicated his willingness to resign if he thought that would lead to formation of a new national government representative of all political factions.

Clement R. Attlee, Labor party leader, and Arthur Greenwood, deputy party leader, were at the conference.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, is understood to have adopted the same attitude.

Future Course Uncertain

Whether Chamberlain will make a new attempt to bring the conflicting groups together under his leadership, or whether he will make way for a new prime minister, is a question which cannot be answered tonight.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill were also present at the conference. It is likely that if a new prime minister emerges from the political crisis it will be one of these two.

In any event it appears likely that the shaggy-haired Welshman, David Lloyd George, will not return to the office he held in the decisive years of the World war. He is reported to have declined to be considered for leadership in a second war, after 50 years of active politics.

Another thing seemed even more certain—a quickening of the war effort and greater initiative to salve Britons disturbed by the failure in Norway.

Sees Resignation Certain

The lobby correspondent of Reuters, British news agency, said in a midnight review of the government crisis that Chamberlain's departure "is almost certain."

He named Lord Halifax, Churchill and Lloyd George as the three most likely names from which a new prime minister would be chosen, and added the belief that Churchill would be the most likely selection.

This commentator said it was believed that Labor would serve under Churchill.

Before parliament recessed today until May 21 for the Whitsuntide holiday, a proclamation in the name of King George VI made an additional 2,500,000 men liable for armed service when summoned.

The proclamation gave Britain a potential fighting manhood of 4,500,000 between the ages of 19 and 37.

Death For Spies

The government also prepared to burst any "Trojan horse" within Britain. It presented a bill demanding the death penalty for grave cases of espionage and announced regulations to control aliens and propaganda.

Sir John Anderson, home secretary, told the house of commons the measures were framed carefully to halt "mischievous activities" without penalizing mere expressions of opinion.

The day's events confirmed belief that 71-year-old Chamberlain means to try one more fall with destiny and Adolf Hitler. He promised the house another debate on conduct of the war two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable."

For the moment, however, he left unanswered whether he intends to continue with the present ministers or bow to Labor's demands and discard Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister, and, possibly, War Secretary Oliver Stanley and Supply Minister Leslie Burgin.

Veteran observers, nevertheless, decided almost unanimously tonight that Chamberlain would drop them and begin reconstruction.

He could do that smoothly by resigning himself when he sees King George and then form a new government at the king's request, leaving them out.

This course was believed to have been urged on him by Conservative back-benchers with whom he conferred today just before a meeting of the war cabinet.

Filling their places would be a harder job.

The Labor party has declared it will not allow its members to serve in a government over which Chamberlain holds the whip hand.

Two Solutions

According to veteran political observers, there are two ways out of that dilemma.

First Attlee, Greenwood and Morrison might bolt their party for the new cabinet by pleading that "England needs us" and "this is no time for partisan grudges."

There was a possibility that such a change of sides might influence Lloyd George and Liberal Opposition Leader Sir Archibald Sinclair to follow the Laborites' lead.

Secondly, the labor conference may draw up terms under which it would agree to participate in the Chamberlain government.

With the conference in mind, the Labor opposition docilely accepted the 12-day parliamentary adjournment for Whitsuntide, Britain's biggest spring "bank" holiday.

An independent, Clement Davies, amended the motion for adjournment to set May 14, next Tuesday, for reassembling but withdrew his proposal on assurances that the house would be recalled early in case of an emergency. The house of lords already had adjourned to May 21.

The impression in the house this morning was that its attitude had been modified from antagonism to helpfulness for the prime minister.

Opposition to his leadership undoubtedly has been solidified and strengthened by the debate, however. The furious exchanges welded his opponents into a bloc of Laborites, Liberals and rebel Tories and supplied it with a new leader—Lloyd George.

Less cautious than either Attlee or Sir Archibald, better able to speak for England than such a conservative critic as Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, for instance, the 77-year-old Welsh lion has come storming back into the limelight.

His name was mentioned as a cabinet possibility along with those of the Labor and Liberal leaders after reports circulated that all had conferred with the ministers at the suddenly called war cabinet meeting.

Just 25 years ago, Lloyd George, then a Liberal chancellor of the exchequer, was facing with the rest of Herbert Asquith's government the first political crisis of the World war.

Out of it came a coalition government with Lloyd George as minister of munitions. Later he became war secretary, first lord of the treasury and, from December, 1916, to October, 1922, prime minister.

Today he was urged by Beverly Baxter, journalist, author and right-wing M. P., to "reform so that his genius and indomitable spirit may be used in the future conduct of the war."

Many observers considered it likely Lloyd George might accept a post as adviser on general policy in a small war cabinet.

Others were sure he never would fight under Chamberlain's banner, but speculated that he might enter a cabinet formed either by Lord Halifax, foreign secretary, or Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, if Chamberlain resigned.

Although he defended himself against Baxter's charge he had "encouraged Hitler" by his censure, Lloyd George received showers of applause today for his part in the war debate.

Some of the tumult for change came from Conservatives. About 30 government supports who voted against Chamberlain Thursday decided unanimously to demand that the "next government must be a real national (coalition) government."

Conservative Richard K. Law, son of Bonar Law, demanded on the commons floor, "new leadership—not a reshuffle."

Some parliamentary observers offered the analysis that Chamberlain's ability was not in question so much as his stubborn loyalty to old colleagues such as Sir John and Sir Samuel and that "it seems clear he will have to part with them—or go with them."

London Thinks He May Give Way to Halifax---Expected to Drop Simon, Hoare, Stanley.

LONDON, May 9 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain was reported reliably tonight to have been rebuffed by the Labor Opposition in an attempt to draw it into a reconstructed cabinet under his leadership.

The Labor decision was said to have been conveyed to Mr. Chamberlain at a conference at 10 Downing Street tonight attended by the Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and Labor leaders Clement R. Attlee and Arthur Greenwood.

Reliable reports said the Labor leaders declared it was impossible for them to serve under Mr. Chamberlain.

The form in which the Prime Minister put the question was understood to have indicated that he was willing to resign if the resignation would lead to the formation of a new national government satisfactory to all parties.

Mr. Chamberlain, clinging to the remnants of his power, was facing the task of rebuilding his Government to suit an aroused and angry nation.

Britain already has felt the first quickening of the war effort which has promised. Before Parliament recessed today until May 21 for the Whitsuntide holiday, a proclamation in the name of King George VI made an additional 2,500,000 men liable for armed service when summoned. The proclamation gave Britain a potential fighting manhood of 4,500,000 between the ages of 19 and 37. Nineteen-year-olds and men between 27 and 37 are covered by the new order, men between 20 and 27 having been summoned earlier.

Appears to Woo Lloyd George.

The Prime Minister appeared today to be wooing David Lloyd George, who emerged from the heated parliamentary debate on Britain's reverses in southern and central Norway as the most potent spokesman of the opposition. Mr. Chamberlain apparently wanted the world war Prime Minister to accept a post in the Cabinet or at least give it his blessing.

The day's events gave some impetus to the belief that 71-year-old Chamberlain means to try one more fall with destiny and Adolf Hitler. He promised the House another debate on conduct of the war two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable."

For the moment, however, he left unanswered whether he intends to continue with the present ministers or bow to Labor's demands and discard Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Minister, and, possibly, War Secretary Oliver Stanley and Supply Minister Leslie Burgin.

Veteran observers, nevertheless, decided almost unanimously tonight that Mr. Chamberlain would drop them and begin reconstruction.

Could Resign and Start Anew.

He could do that smoothly by resigning himself when he sees King George and then form a new Government at the King's request, leaving them out. This course was believed to have been urged on him by Conservative back-benchers with whom he conferred today just before a meeting of the war cabinet.

The conferences developed suddenly today.

After a whispered consultation among Government leaders on the front bench in the House of Commons, the badgered Chamberlain left with the seven men who form his War Cabinet.

Only a short time later they were followed out of the chamber by the leader and deputy leader of the official Opposition, Laborites Attlee and Greenwood; the leader of the Opposition Liberals, Sir Archibald Sinclair, and Mr. Lloyd George.

Geoffrey Mander, a Left Winger, said that the time were to decide whether "by getting rid of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Secretary for Air, the Prime Minister might be allowed to carry on with partially fresh colleagues."

Mander told the House that this, in his opinion, would be "perfectly useless."

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, and Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister, have been under attack from the opposition, along with Chamberlain.

Beverly Baxter, a Conservative M. P., journalist and author, was the man who assailed Lloyd George for "helping" Hitler. Baxter urged him to "reform so that his genius and indominable spirit may be used in the future conduct of the war."

Lloyd George replied that Britain was to blame for Hitler's rise to power and that since 1922 he (Lloyd George) had been urging the World war victors to exert their authority and carry out the pledges they made in the treaty of Versailles.

"They had the opportunity," he said. "Germany was prostrate and the creation of this terrible power in Germany and the spirit behind it which makes it so formidable is due to the fact that we did not carry out our promises."

Plea for New Leadership

Richard K. Law, son of Bonar Law, put in another plea for new leadership before the recess.

He said Chamberlain was like H. H. Asquith, part-time World War premier: Able and loyal, but not the man for war.

The new registration notice, affecting 19 year-olds and men between the ages of 27 and 36, will increase number of men liable for service or already under arms to 4,500,000.

The government also prepared to deal sternly with spying, sabotage and "fifth column" activities.

King George VI signed a proclamation at a brief session of the privy council in Buckingham Palace which made ten new age groups liable to military service.

The death penalty for grave cases of espionage and sabotage was included in a bill prepared by the government for presentation to parliament.

Home Secretary Sir John Anderson announced the government was increasing its powers to deal with "fifth column" activities—activities on the home front designed to hinder the war effort—or "any possible attempt by the enemy to undermine resistance to attack upon this country."

A new regulation will empower the government to intern non-enemy aliens who cannot be deported because of the war.

Another provides that if any person or organization is concerned in the systematic publication of matter calculated to foment opposition to the prosecution of the war and ignores warnings, the penalty may be seven years' imprisonment or fine of £500 (about $1,750) or both.

Measures Drawn Carefully

Other regulations will make it an offense to incite men of military age to evade their duties, prohibit further use of printing presses found to be used for illegal propaganda and will provide for possible detention of persons repatriated from enemy territory who, though technically British subjects, are not associated closely with British interests.

Sir John said the measures were drawn carefully to avoid penalizing a mere expression of opinion while at the same time giving full power to deal with "mischievous" activities.

Chamberlain indicated he does not intend to resign, at least immediately, when he announced he would be willing to arrange a House of Commons debate on conduct of the war two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable."

Commons is to reassemble May 21, after the Whitsuntide recess, and the prime minister, under heavy fire for the failure of Britain's military campaign in Norway, made his promise of a debate on the war then.

The statement was made to Attlee.

Replying to critics of a parliamentary holiday at this critical time, Chamberlain said the power already had been given the speaker of the House to summon parliament before May 21 if, on the advice of the government, he felt it necessary.

Speculation on what Chamberlain would do was conflicting.

Some informed politicians expected Chamberlain to tender his resignation to King George VI, who then would ask him to form a new government. This would dissolve the cabinet and enable the prime minister to start afresh, avoiding the task of personally dismissing ministers.

Needs Full Cooperation

Some saw indications that Chamberlain again would invite the Labor opposition to join a coalition government.

A broad national government, representing all major parties, would be impossible without Labor and Liberal cooperation and the opposition parties were understood to be unwilling to accept office under Chamberlain.

It was said that Conservatives like Alfred Duff Cooper, former first lord of the admiralty, and Leopold Amery, first lord of the admiralty in 1922-24, also would be unlikely to be willing to enter the cabinet under Chamberlain.

Lord Halifax, foreign secretary, called at No. 10 Downing Street shortly after 10 a. m. (4 a. m. EST) to see the prime minister, who omitted his usual morning walk in St. James's Park.

In this connection, one political source observed that in the event Lord Halifax accepted an invitation to head a new government, the constitutional problem of permitting a peer to sit in both the House of Lords and Commons likely would be overcome by an emergency resolution of both Houses.

Commenting on the governmental situation, the political correspondent of the well-informed Star said it was "generally expected" that Chamberlain would see King George VI, tell him he was unable to reconstitute his ministry and to advise the king to ask Lord Halifax or Winston Churchill to form a new government.

The Star said it was "possible" that Chamberlain would suggest that Clement R. Attlee, as head of the next largest party (Labor), might be asked to form a cabinet but added that it was "doubtful" that Attlee could succeed in the present state of the parties.

Cheered By Sympathizers

About 100 of Chamberlain's sympathizers were gathered in Downing Street this morning when he left No. 10 for Commons. They cheered the prime minister and he smiled and raised his hat in reply.

Tory backers of Chamberlain, shaken by the swing of public opinion against his war leadership and the narrowness of last night's vote of confidence, entreated him today to rebuild his cabinet quickly lest he be compelled to resign.

The vote in the House of Commons, after two days of clamorous debate, was 281 for the government against 200 for the combined opposition, a result which cut Chamberlain's normal majority of 210 to only 81.

Actually, the vota was on a motion for adjournment. Commons is scheduled to adjourn today until May 21. A group of Conservative critics of the government moved, however, to advance the date for reconvening to May 14. Chamberlain made the question one of confidence when Laborites demanded a division.

Pugnacious Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, who gave a pledge of loyalty when he entered the cabinet last fall, was credited with saving the Chamberlain Government from a worse showing by accepting "full responsibility" for the decision against attempting to force Trondheim fjord with British warships during the ill-starred allied campaign in central Norway.

Members of parliament, whipped to fever pitch by the biting attack of World War Premier David Lloyd George, who demanded that Chamberlain quit, cooled slightly when Churchill told them solemnly that Germany's numerical superiority in airplanes caused the Allied setback in Norway.

Failed to Quell Storm

Churchill's oratory failed, however, to quell a storm of boos and shouts of "resign" which came from opposition stands when the 71-year-old Chamberlain, tired and pale, stalked from Commons.

Churchill himself drew the wrath of Labor members during an angry exchange in which he called a heckler a "skulker."

The explanation made by Churchill of the decision against a frontal naval move on Trondheim, failed to satisfy Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who charged on the first day of the debate that the government, showing "shocking ineptitude" in the war failed to make proper use of warships in the Norwegian campaign.

Sir Roger voted with 43 other Conservative members of Parliament against the government.

Churchill told the House that if the Trondheim naval attack had been made Sir Roger would have been chosen to lead it.

Sir Roger, who had put on his admiral's uniform and pinned all his World war medals on his chest at his wife's suggestion so he could catch the speaker's eye to make a speech Tuesday night, explained to newspapermen that he was not "nimble" enough to tackle Churchill in the final debate.

Warning From Churchill.

The two-day debate, which brought drama and excitement such as Westminster had not seen in years, was climaxed last night by Churchill's defense of the government.

His speech had a solemn tone unexpected from the ordinarily buoyant first lord. He warned ominously that at no time in the last war was Britain in such peril as today, but he declared that the British now have the Narvik airport and "we now fight for Narvik."

Making no attempt to minimize the British defeat in Norway, his mildness and frankness disarmed the opposition.

He said Britain had 12,000 troops against Germany's 120,000 in Norway and had the choice of getting them out or "leaving them to be destroyed."

Churchill declared that Britain's numerical inferiority in warplanes "will condemn us for some time to come to a great deal of difficulty and suffering which we must endure with firmness until more favorable conditions can be established—as they assuredly will be."

British press reaction to the Government situation was varied.

The conservative Daily Mail, which joined the laborite Daily Herald and the liberal News Chronicle in a demand that Mr. Chamberlain resign, advocated calling back Mr. Lloyd George to be Prime Minister and making Mr. Churchill a Vice-Prime Minister in charge of strategy.

The Conservative Times foresaw changes in the Government. Its leading editorial said, "after the disclosures of opinion in Parliament and the press during the present week there can be no question of the strength of the demand for a ministry more broadly based and therefore differently constituted."

The Express, however, refused to join the popular cry for Mr. Chamberlain's resignation.

Afternoon Press Comment.

Among afternoon newspapers in London, the Star said:

"It is inconceivable that the present Government should continue in office unchanged."

It added that "it remains to be seen" whether Mr. Chamberlain "will cling tenaciously" to office or "with higher patriotism make way for a man who is fitted to win the war, not muddle it."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard cautioned:

"We must not jump to the conclusion that the Labor party has assumed powers to dictate the removal of Mr. Chamberlain."

The Evening News said the Government's "credit is shattered."

Questioning the Labor party's wisdom in forcing last night's vote, this morning's Manchester Guardian said the Government deserved reprobation but the Opposition party "would have done much better to have held its hand."

The inclusion of dominion ministers in the British War Cabinet was urged today by the influential "Sydney Sun," of Sydney, Australia.

"Perhaps from Chamberlain's difficulties will come a better recognition of the strength of the empire's democracies," the paper said.

The "Sidney "Bulletin" urged that the dominions be given two votes in the war cabinet.

In Calcutta, the powerful "Star of India" said: "Chamberlain is no match for Hitler. He is not conscious that he is living in a ruthless age. . . . It is no use applying New Testament precepts to a megalomaniac. The empire would feel happier if a more national government emerges as a result of the debate of the last two days."

King's Order Brings Britain's Potential Army to 4,500,000

Men Aged 27 to 36 Made Liable to Service By Proclamation

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 9.—King George today signed a proclamation making men from 27 to 36 years old liable to military service and bringing Britain's total of those subject to call to an estimated 2,500,000.

With the 2,000,000 soon to be under arms, the proclamation brings Britain's potential war strength of 4,500,000 men.

The last proclamation, issued January 1, had rendered men from 20 to 27 subject to service.

The 27-year age group is scheduled to register May 25 making the total already called to the colors approximately 2,000,000.

The King's new order affects men born between May 10, 1903, and May 9, 1921, inclusive.

The proclamation also enabled the government to call up 19-year-olds, though they will not be required to register unless they reach 20 in the next few months.

It was expected that one age group, on an ascending scale, would be called each month unless circumstances require registration of more than that number a month.

Exemptions for men in vital industries and for conscientious objectors undoubtedly will cut the total number of those actually available for service.

The number of men available decreases in the higher age groups because from the age of 30 upwards the schedule of reserved occupations, such as in textiles and construction, take an increasing toll.

The number of deliberate evasions of military service in previous call-ups was reported "comparatively small," and the ratio of conscientious objectors has fallen.

Anti-Aircraft Batteries Go Into Action As Bombers Are Sighted

London, Friday, May 10—British anti-aircraft batteries went into action early today at several points on the Thames estuary when five planes, believed to be Heinkel bombers, were seen flying in an easterly direction.

Flashes of bursting shells were plainly visible to thousands of persons in townships near the river who were awakened at 4.40 A. M. by sounds of the guns. The planes were flying at an altitude of about 10,000 feet.

LONDON, May 9 (A. P.).—The sinking by British submarines of one German ship, the destruction of another and hits on a number of others in convoy were announced by the Admiralty tonight.

In an attack on one convoy of ten enemy ships, six torpedoes found their marks, the Admiralty said.

Three hits were made on another convoy and two on a third.

"One ship sailing independently was torpedoed and sunk, another driven ashore and destroyed by gunfire and torpedo," the communique added.

NAZI SHOT DOWN OFF BRITISH COAST

R. A. F. Fighter Battles Foe Over Scotland.

LONDON, May 9 (A. P.).—An enemy aircraft was shot down off the northeast coast of Scotland by Royal Air Force fighters, the Air Ministry announced today.

British tabulations listed it as the sixty-ninth German plane destroyed over or near Britain's coast since the war began a little over eight months ago.

A machine-gun battle between a British and a German plane over a north of Scotland port was witnessed by hundreds in the streets. Whether this was the German plane reported shot down was not known, however.

A prediction that Germany would bomb Britain "and probably soon" was published by the magazine Aeroplane, which urged a campaign of "swift methodical attacks by the Royal Air Force on Germany's communications, munitions, aircraft works and flying fields.

"We must not be forestalled again. We must carry the war to Germany," the magazine article declared. "We must use our air force to hit the enemy hard and often in his tenderest spots."

French Cabinet May Be Revised

Reynaud's Early Fall Is Forecast

PARIS, May 9 (AP)—Reconstruction of Premier Paul Reynaud's cabinet is under study in Paris following the Allied failure in central Norway, it was reported tonight, while the fate of Prime Minister Chamberlain's ministry is being settled in London.

Reports in political circles were that Reynaud might revise his government before the chamber of deputies reassembles next Thursday after a two-week spring vacation.

Les Journal Des Debats, which is campaigning for a small war cabinet, said the Reynaud ministry, formed last March 21, "cannot last very long."

"That," it added, "was eviden from the first day."

FRENCH CABINET FACING SHAKE-UP

Important Shifts Expected as Sequel to Norway.

PARIS, May 9 (A. P.).—Important changes in the French as well as the British Cabinet were reported under consideration tonight as a result of the failure of the Allied campaign in central Norway.

Reports in political circles said Premier Paul Reynaud might change his ministry even before the Chamber of Deputies re-assembles next Thursday after a two-week spring vacation.

Le Journal des Debats said the Reynaud Cabinet as constituted now "cannot last very long."

The Cabinet met for three hours today to discuss the situation in Norway following the Allied withdrawal.

It was announced that the Cabinet would "continue its deliberations" on May [illegible] two days before Parliament resumes its labors after a two-week vacation over Whitsuntide.

A ministerial meeting scheduled for this afternoon with President Lebrun to hear a detailed statement from Premier Reynaud was canceled.

No reason was given for the cancellation, but observers said that M. Reynaud might have felt that the situation would be "riper" for further discussion after several days delay. The extra time, it was pointed out, would allow for developments in the British political situation and also for possible new events in the military field.

German Army Rules Railroads During Holiday

Whitsuntide Travel Curbed in Reich; Hitler to Free Norse War Prisoners

BERLIN, May 9 (AP).—All German railways were reported in reliable quarters tonight to have been placed under the command of the army for the approaching Whitsuntide holidays, with special passes required on a score of heavily traveled routes.

Civilian traffic will be controlled rigorously under the direction of Lieut. Col. Bork, transport chief of the German general staff.

The Whitsuntide (Pentecost) holidays, beginning this week end, are observed over Europe for a week or ten days, and are a favorite time for spring travel. Officially, the German holiday is Sunday and Monday, but schools are closed for a week and heavy civilian rail traffic as a rule sets in several days ahead.

For days German newspapers have been urging civilians to stay off the railroads over the holidays. Placards in stations warn travelers that regular train schedules cannot be guaranteed.

Troops On the Move

Troops are constantly on the move in Germany, shifting from one front to another, even though the fronts may be inactive. Thus a strategic balance is preserved, morale is kept high and the men receive a varied experience with terrain and fortifications. While no official reason was offered for the Whitsuntide army rail control, it is logical to suppose that it may have been decided on to prevent heavy civilian holiday travel interfering with even normal troop movements.

The special passes now required in addition to tickets do not assure civilians a place on a train or even that the train will run. The routes which may thus be traveled over Whitsuntide change daily. Two of them, however (Berlin - Vienna - Pressburg and Berlin - Hanover - Muenster), so far have been blocked at all times.

Berlin is an important troop transport junction. Trains usually pass through in the night, without stopping if that is possible. Even when soldiers change trains, they are not allowed to communicate with families or friends.

Woos Norwegians

He bid for Norwegian, and, possibly international sympathy by offering to relase Norwegian soldiers captured by the German army. This liberty is unconditional for drafted soldiers, but conditional for officers and regular members of the standing army.

He tried to place the responsibility for the bloodshed in Norway on King Haakon and his Cabinet of Johan Nygaarsvold, which he stigmatized as "the former Norwegian Government." The King and Nygaarsvold, presumably, still are in a secret place in Norway.

"Contrary to the will of the German people and its Government," said Hitler in an order to his military commander in Norway, Gen. Nicolaus von Falkenhorst, "King Haakon and his Cabinet urged war against Germany."

Demands End To War

He further tried to put Haakon and his Cabinet on the spot by naming as one condition for according freedom to Norwegian professional soldiers that the "former Norwegian Government withdraw its appeal to fight against Germany."

His alternative condition for liberty for these soldiers was that they disregard their Government's appeal and "individually obligate themselves by solemn word of honor under no circumstances to participate in further combative action against Germany."

There was no indication as to how many captives might be involved.

He based his offer on the premise that they disdained "all cowardly, unfair methods" in fighting the German invaders and that both soldiers and civilians "always looked after our wounded."

Hatred Of Poland

His old hatred of Poland burst through when he asserted that German soldiers in the Polish campaign last September were "maltreated the cruelest manner and massacred by the Poles."

In the Norwegian drive, he added, "not a single case was manifested of such shameful perversion in the conduct of the war."

Hitler's order came on a day when the high command's communique was one of the briefest in recent weeks. No major action was recorded, and even the daily elucidation by DNB said the "military position in Norway underwent no essential change."

Authorized sources evinced such derision for yesterday's performance of the British Parliament that correspondents asked whether the excitement in the German press over the Mediterranean might be considered abated.

"No," said the sources, emphatically.

BERLIN, May 9 (A. P.).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler issued an order today declaring: "I have decided to permit Norwegian soldiers who were taken prisoner to return home."

Hitler's order was issued to Gen. Nicolaus von Falkenhorst as commander of the German expeditionary force in Norway. The text follows:

"Contrary to the will of the German people and its Government, King Haakon of Norway and his Cabinet urged war against Germany.

"In this struggle, the following facts could be determined:

"During the war in the east, German soldiers who had the misfortune to fall into Polish hands wounded or unwounded were maltreated in the cruelest manner by the Poles and were massacred to death.

"In contradistinction, it must be stated concerning the Norwegian army that there was not a single case manifested of such shameful perversion in the conduct of war.

"The Norwegian soldier despised all cowardly and unfair methods such as were the order of the day with the Poles. He fought openly and honestly, and treated, respected and cared for our wounded and prisoners in the best manner possible to him.

"I have therefore decided to permit Norwegian soldiers who were taken prisoner to return home.

"Professional (Norwegian) soldiers alone must be kept under arrest until the former Norwegian Government has withdrawn its appeal to fight against Germany or until officers and soldiers individually obligate themselves by solemn word of honor under no circumstances to participate in further combative action against Germany."

Meanwhile Belgians Move to Stiffen Their Defenses at Antwerp.

BERLIN, May 9 (A. P.).—The German Army has taken command of the country's railroads over the Whitsunday, the holiday period this week end, exerting rigorous control over all civilian traffic, it was reported reliably tonight.

Lieut.-Col. Bork, transport chief of the German General Staff, is in charge of the railways during the period.

For days the press has been urging Germans not to travel over the holiday. Now, placards in stations notify travelers that regular train schedules cannot be guaranteed.

Special Passes Required.

A special type of pass, in addition to the ordinary ticket, is being given out on about twenty much-traveled routes.

But even these passes do not constitute assurance that the traveler will obtain a place on the train or even that the train will run at all.

Routes over which persons may ride with the special pass are changed daily. Two of these, however, Berlin-Vienna-Pressburg and Berlin - Hannover - Munster, have been constantly blocked so far.

Berlin is a key junction for troop transport trains. In most cases, they traverse the city at nights, and, if possible, without stopping. In cases where trains must be changed, soldiers are not permitted to communicate in any way with families, relatives or friends.

erday's scenes in the British Parliament may be summed up in the words of one authorized source: "May God give long life to Neville Chamberlain as Britain's Prime Minister!"

So long as Chamberlain is at the helm of the British government, this source added, Germany has nothing to fear.

One source said David Lloyd George's criticism of the British government read as if German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels had written it. Newspapers were admonished to print large sections of yesterday's proceedings verbatim, with a glossary.

DUCE CAUTIOUS DESPITE CRIES FOR 'DECISION'

Keeps Europe Guessing as He Tells Throng in Speech Only Facts Will Break His Silence

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

ROME, May [illegible] (AP)—Premier Mussolini kept an anxious Europe guessing tonight as to Italy's intentions in the war, telling a cheering throng that "only facts" could break his silence.

By "facts," Il Duce undoubtedly meant developments—perhaps in the Balkans, perhaps elsewhere—which might force Italy off the fence of non-belligerency and bring from him a call to arm.

Three times, the crowd massed under his Palazzo Venezia balcony in celebration of Army and Empire Day tried to draw a rallying cry from Mussolini, shouting:

"Malta!"

"Tunisia!"

"The Mediterranean for us!"

REFLECTS CAUTION

But the throng's frenzied insistence brought only words that reflected caution when Il Duce made his fourth appearance on the balcony, similingly shook his head and placed a finger on his lips.

"After my speeches, you must become accustomed also to my silence," he said. "Only facts will break it."

He had previously lauded the triumphal date of May 9, 1936, marking the declaration of the Italian empire, as "a great day in the history of our country."

While Mussolini clearly indicated Italy's attitude remains unchanged for the present, Swiss report that Great Britain and France had offered protection to Yugoslavia brought a warning in one Fascist newspaper that such a guarantee might mean war.

The Bologna newspaper Resto Del Carlino said Italy and Germany would never accept a "violation" of Yugoslavia's neutrality which would be considered treason toward the Rome-Berlin axis.

SPEED NAVAL PLANS

Genoa shipbuilders reported Italy was rushing its naval preparations, with the "super battleship" Roma ready for launching after being built in a year and a half.

Thus Italy's first-line fleet of four new 35,000-ton battleships and four old 23,500-ton dreadnaughts which have been modernized was near completion.

The air ministry advertised for 3,110 mechanics and other specialists for the army air force.

Pope Pius XII, according to Vatican circles, discussed the Yugoslav situation with Archbishop Louis Stepinac of Zagreb in a private audience. The Pontiff had called the Archbishop specially to the Vatican.

His Secret Speech Circulated

Although Mussolini was non-committal today, wide attention was given privately to circulars purporting to report his secret speech to Fascist aides April 21. He is quoted as exhorting them to prepare to face "events at which we cannot always remain only as spectators."

"We are truly prisoners between Gibraltar and Suez," il Duce is represented as saying in reference to the "caprices" of the Allied blockade.

Regarding Germany, Mussolini is supposed to have said: "We know Fascist Italy keeps its word and further our ally has never asked anything of us. . . . Others would have asked the Italians to fight for them."

The speech concluded with the reported authorization for il Duce's hearers to spread it by word of mouth; that it would be "historic because it will be repeated by me in other circumstances which may even be soon."

Il Duce Refuses to State Aims

Italy Still on Fence as Mussolini Says Only Facts Will Break His Silence.

ROME, May 9 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini told his Fascist followers celebrating Army and Empire day today that "only facts" would break his self-imposed silence on the European war.

Il Duce thus indicated clearly to his hearers, massed under his balcony at the Palazzo Venezia, that Italy's non-belligerency remained without change unless and until some new development in the European conflict plunged this country into war.

During Mussolini's very brief speech, sections of the crowd interrupted his words with shouts of "Tunis!" and "Malta!" Tunis is the capital of France's North African possession, Tunisia. Malta is Great Britain's naval base off Sicily in the Mediterranean.

The address was drawn from Il Duce by the crowd under his balcony, which kept calling, "The Mediterranean for us," and asking for a speech. Mussolini appeared three times on the balcony, smilingly shook his head and placed a finger on his lips which formed the word "

It was only at his fourth appearance that he spoke.

Mussolini referred to the declaration of the Italian empire four years ago.

"A great day in the history of our country was that of May 9, 1936," he said. "It was a day of sunny victory.

"After my speeches you must become accustomed also to my silence. Only facts will break it."

Italy celebrated meanwhile her fourth Empire Day and her second Army Day with a military review here and the opening in Naples of a vast overseas exposition.

Five thousand troops passed in review before Premier Mussolini here and the throng had expected a brief but important speech from their leader at the critical moment when the world's statesmen were watching anxiously for the slightest indication of any change in Italy's status. Interest in what he might have had to say was sharpened by yesterday's official Fascist report which described Italy's stand as "pre-belligerent" rather than non-belligerent.

While Mussolini was addressing his followers, Fascist authorities indicated that Italy is still on the fence awaiting the right moment to jump in and get what she wants in the way of prestige and more living space.

Associates of Premier Mussolini emphasized that Italian preparedness for war did not necessarily mean that Italy was entering the conflict soon.

"Our army is under arms, but nobody can or must draw arbitrary or dangerous deductions from this attitude," said the newspaper Il Messaggero. "Our arms are always ready to be shouldered at any moment interests of the country require."

Eyes on British Cabinet.

Il Popolo di Roma indicated that Italian interests would eventually require it, saying: "The idea of being able to preserve one's own peace with the most clever and Pilate-like conduct can be for the present non-belligerents a dangerous delusion."

None should delude themselves that any country which stays out of the war will be able to make its voice heard afterward as the Italians intend to do, the paper added.

With Italy's course dependent chiefly on relations with Great Britain, Italians watched the fate of Prime Minister Chamberlain's Government and expressed the belief that it was beaten in Parliament despite the fact that it won by a narrow majority.

Mr. Chamberlain, "engaged in impossible defense, thought himself justified in involving other persons and bodies, thus aggravating the general uneasiness," said Il Popolo di Roma. "Churchill (Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty) also acted similarly to save himself when he ended up by uncovering the Admiralty."

Warning for Yugoslavia.

An indication of what new developments could change Italy's attitude appeared in a warning to Yugoslavia against accepting Anglo-French guaranties of protection, which was sounded in the Bologna newspaper Resto del Carlino. This paper said that Yugoslavia was in no danger from Italy and Germany now, but that it would be impossible for Belgrade to "betray" them by taking a "new political line."

Warning that "storms in the Mediterranean are short and violent," it told Yugoslavia that her future "and perhaps very existence" would be in danger if she "tried to delay by a few weeks the inevitable defeat" of the Allies.

Meanwhile today the hotels in Naples were filled with thousands of persons who came from Italy and abroad to hear King Victor Emanuel open the exposition emphasizing Italy's aspirations to colonial power, while at Genoa the shipbuilders announced that Italy's fourth new 35,000-ton battleship, the Roma, described as the world's finest super-battleship, was ready for launching. Two old battleships, the Andrea Doria and the Duilio, which have been modernized, are also ready to resume active service, along with the previously modernized battleships, the Guilio Cesare and the Cavour.

The Roma was described as "a most perfect and powerful war machine, unequaled in any other navy," all the latest naval inventions and designs having been employed in her construction.

All Italy Flag-draped.

Two sister ships, the Littorio and the Vittorio Veneto, are already in service, while a third, the Impero, is under construction.

Four years ago this morning, Mussolini stood on the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia to proclaim the foundation of an Italian empire a few days after Marshal Pietro Badoglio, now Chief of the General Staff for All Armed Forces, had entered Addis Abeba, the capital of Ethiopia.

All Italian cities were draped with flags for today's double observance. The huge bell on Rome's Capitoline Hill tolled for half an hour this morning to announce the start of the celebrations.

The Governor of Rome headed a ceremony honoring the memory of Air Force Lieut. Alfredo De Luca, who fell in the African campaign, as the symbolic hero of the occasion. Bands played in many public squares. Free movies, games and gift packages were provided for the troops participating in the Rome review.

Fears Of War Increase Among Italians In Egypt

Alexandria, May 9 (AP)—Italy's 70,000 subjects in Egypt manifested growing fears today that their nation might be plunged into war against the Allies. Tensely they scanned dispatches from Rome for some indication of Premier Mussolini's attitude.

Italians here are worried over possible internment, as well as the danger to properties and heavy business investments running into millions of dollars.

Egyptian authorities made a thorough checkup on all Italian citizens and were prepared for a quick round-up to prevent any "fifth column" activities in Alexandria, Cairo and other cities if war should be declared.

Newspapers cited the presence of the Allied fleet off Alexandria as the nation's guarantee of security. At the same time they sought to make the natives accustomed to the air-raid tests which began this week.

As Allied planes circled the city in a "mock" raid, steel-helmeted police drove the crowds to air-raid shelters.

Sees Peril for Italy.

MOSCOW, May 9 (A. P.).—Izvestia, the Government newspaper, today emphasized the danger of the war's spreading to the Mediterranean, the Near East and the Balkans.

Its leading editorial said that if Britain and France should go to war with Italy the flames would not be restricted to those three nations.

"Turkey is tied up to Britain and France by formal agreement in case of complications in the Mediterranean," it said. "Greece, through her British guaranty and also alliance with Turkey, will not avoid being dragged into war. This would mean the penetration of England into the Balkans."

The article concluded with the warning that it would be dangerous at this stage for Britain to make a Mediterranean move and also that there might be fatal consequences for Italy which would cut her off from Ethiopia.

Tells of Preparedness.

It declared that the possibility should not be excluded that the arrival of an Allied fleet at Alexandria might be connected with the Near Eastern forces commanded by Gen. Maxime Weygand as well as with Italy. Gen. Weygand is Commander-in-Chief of the French forces in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Pravda, the Communist party organ, said that the recent change of titles of Soviet generals and admirals had improved Russia's defensive strength.

"Finding itself in capitalistic encirclement," it said, "the Soviet country indefatigably cares for the strengthening of the Red Army and Navy with the purpose of not allowing any plots of exterior enemies of our Fatherland to catch us unprepared."

Balkans See New Soviet Role

Russian Co-operation With Allies Hinted—Moscow Notes Peril to Italy in War.

BELGRADE, May 9 (A. P.).—Parallel reports of steps toward both Soviet and Allied protection of Yugoslavia were viewed in Balkan diplomatic quarters today as evidence of possible Russian-British-French co-operation against the Rome-Berlin axis in this corner of Europe.

There is this important distinction in the two reported moves affecting Yugoslavia: The Yugoslavs appear to be turning toward Russia for support while the British and French seek Yugoslavia's acceptance of their proffered guaranty of her independence and territorial integrity.

Whether Yugoslavia is looking for help from Russia as well as from the western Powers was not clear. It is possible that her greater inclination is toward the east.

At any rate, the possibility of Russia's entrance into the Balkan picture with a military link to Yugoslavia, at a time when the Allies and the axis Powers are accusing each other of preparing to invade little countries, may have the effect of staving off war in the Balkans.

But for how long, or with what other long-range results, no one could calculate.

Pan-Slav Days Recalled.

It was learned authoritatively in Belgrade that a Yugoslav military mission headed by Gen. Vojin Maximovic, Inspector of National Defense would leave shortly for Moscow and military consultations with the Russian leaders.

The belief was expressed in quarters close to the Government that a Russo-Yugoslav military alliance may result from the visit.

The prospective mission was linked with a desire expressed here and in Bulgaria that the Bulgars and Yugoslavs join with Russia—"Mother of the Slavs"—for defense of the south Slavic peoples of the Balkan peninsula, a reminder of the Pan-Slavic movement of the pre-world war days.

The disclosure of the forthcoming military talks in Moscow came while a Yukoslav trade delegation was renewing commercial relations with Russia. The Yukoslavs had a three hours' interview with the Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov, there last night.

Only two days ago the Moscow economic talks were reported to be turning from commerce to "political" questions. Vice-Premier Vladimir Macek said on April 24 that the resumption of trade relations probably would be followed by diplomatic relations. Now it appears that diplomatic relations will be followed by military talks and possibly an alliance.

Allies Assure Yugoslavs.

All this—the commercial, diplomatic and military phases—would represent a reversal of Yugoslavia's anti-communist policy to which she has adhered since since the Bolshevist revolution of 1917.

News of the military mission to Moscow has been kept a close secret in Yugoslavia, while the nation rushed troops and guns to her Italian and German frontiers. Allied envoys [illegible] reported to have assured the Yugoslavia leaders that British and French troops, planes and naval forces would be sent to their country's help in case Yugoslavia found it necessary to resist an Axis attack.

[Italy has disavowed any such intention and Germany's position has been described as merely one of readiness to counter any Allied stroke in any quarter.]

Britain Queries Hungary.

Similar Allied offers to Bulgaria and Hungary already had been reported, with their success in doubt.

Bulgaria was said to have insisted that she would preserve complete neutrality while Hungary is understood to have told the British Envoy that any decision would have to be arrived at when the necessity for a decision arises. Great Britain was said to have asked Hungary what her reaction would be to passage through her territory of Nazi troops.

A roundabout press report that Germany had requested the Hungarian right-of-way on a "when and if" basis was carried yesterday by the official Hungarian news agency.

Other countries reported involved in the Allied attempt to build a southeastern European defensive alliance based on commitments of Allied aid are Greece, Turkey and Rumania.

Reports from Athens said that the Greek Premier, Gen. John Metaxas, showed coolness to an Allied proposal that British and French forces occupy Greek Islands in the Ægean Sea to put them in position for effective aid.

Slavs, Soviet Plan Political, Military Ties

Russia Warns Powers To Refrain from Balkan Adventures

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 9 (AP)—Yugoslavia and Soviet Russia have agreed to work at top speed on plans for far-reaching political and military co-operation, it was reported authoritatively today.

The Yugoslav military mission headed by Gen. Vojin Maximovic, inspector of national defense, is expected to leave for Moscow at the end of next week.

Concrete Soviet proposals meanwhile will be brought here for Cabinet discussion by the Yugoslav trade delegation which is in the Soviet capital. This delegation is expected to leave Moscow next Monday and arrive here three days later.

"HANDS OFF BALKANS"

Simultaneously it was reported in Sofia that Russian diplomats had conveyed to Britain, France, Germany and Italy the desire of the USRR to see no Balkan adventure by any of them.

Such a "fatal collision," it was stated, would hurt Russian interests. The action, of which both Yugoslavia and Bulgaria were informed because they might become military partners with Russia, was taken after the arrival of an allied battle fleet at Alexandria and concentrations of both Italian and German troops near Yugoslav frontiers.

Officials and civilians alike in Belgrade expressed the hope that Russia's protection would quickly become a fact. They shared the opinion that Yugoslav-Russian military ties would shield this country from any trouble with Germany or Italy.

POSSIBLE GUARANTEE

In other southeastern European capitals the active entry of Russia into the Balkan picture was seen as a possible guarantee of peace, at least for the time being.

Officials in Ankara declared Turkey—ally of Britain and France—would consider favorably military and political agreements between Yugoslavia and the Soviet.

Yugoslavia, however, continued her military preparations along the Italian and German borders.

Troop reinforcements pitched temporary camps along the Adriatic coast, facing the Italian mainland and bounded on the one side by Italian-occupied Albania and on the other by Italian Fiume.

Forty thousand soldiers were reported to have taken up positions near the vital harbor town of Split, which is under special naval command.

The Yugoslav Sokol Union, patriotic organization of the nation's youth, proclaimed May 12 as the day for a test mobilization of its membership of nearly half a million.

SOVIET AGAINST ANY ADVENTURE IN THE BALKANS

Russia Sends Word to Both Belligerent Camps and to the Italians.

FEARS NEARBY TROUBLE

This Action Taken as Hitler and Mussolini Mass Troops on Yugoslavian Border.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 9 (A. P.).—Soviet diplomatic quarters said tonight that Russia has told both belligerent camps and Italy that she does not desire to see any Balkan adventure by any of them.

Soviet diplomats were reported to have conveyed the statement of Soviet position to Britain, France, Germany and Italy, while Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, possible partners in a military alliance with Russia, were informed of the step.

The action is understood to have been taken after German and Italian troops were concentrated near Yugoslavian frontiers and after the arrival of an Allied battle fleet at Alexandria.

It was described as designed to prevent a "fatal collision" in the Balkans between Axis and Allied Powers which would be a detriment to Soviet interests.

Furthermore, it was reported in reliable quarters here that in addition to a Yugoslav military mission which is preparing to go to Moscow, a Soviet mission already is en route to Belgrade.

Nazi Statement Spiked.

ANKARA, May 9 (A. P.).—The Turkish authorities denied today a German radio report last night that Turkey had proclaimed martial law.

MOSCOW DENIES ADOPTING POLICY OF PAN-SLAVISM

But Yugoslavia and Bulgaria Lean Toward Russia, as Old-Time "Protector"

MOSCOW, May 10 (Friday) (AP)—Foreign reports that Soviet Russia has adopted a policy of pan-Slavism and proceeding from this was encouraging Rumania to help Yugoslavia if the latter is attacked by Italy, were declared "ridiculous" in a statement today by Tass, Soviet official news agency.

Calls It Reactionary.

"In the opinion of responsible Soviet quarters pan-Slavism in general, and in the sphere of foreign policy in particular, is a thoroughly reactionary trend incompatible with the policy of the Soviet state," Tass said.

(The Tass statement was issued less than 24 hours after authoritative quarters in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, had let it be known that a Yugoslav military mission will leave shortly for Moscow, and had expressed the opinion that a Soviet-Yugoslav military alliance may result.

(This development was construed in diplomatic quarters in the Balkans as a trend not only by Yugoslavia but also by Bulgaria, two Slavic nations, toward old pre-World War dependence upon the big Slav nation, Russia, for protection. Yugoslavia has been making intense military preparations in recent days in apparent fear of a German or Italian thrust.)

The Tass statement also denied foreign reports that "Sweden is taking part in secret talks with Moscow which may remove the Swedish fear of German invasion," and that Sweden and Finland were negotiating mutual assistance pacts with Russia similar to those concluded by Russia last fall with the three Baltic states, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

This, said Tass, is "a fabrication from beginning to end."

Last Saturday the Soviet news agency issued a statement to the effect that Germany and Russia had consulted each other regarding Sweden's neutrality and had found it to their mutual advantage that it be maintained.

(While the Tass statement denied that czarist Russia's pan-Slav policy had been revived, it did not deny that Russia is interesting herself in the neutrality of Southeastern Europe for other reasons.

(Soviet Russian diplomatic sources in Sofia, Bulgaria, today said the Soviet had conveyed a warning to the two rival European camps, Britain and France and Italy and Germany, that she did not desire to see either of them embark on any militaristic adventures in the Balkans which would be detrimental to Russian interests.)

Protests to Rumania.

BUCHAREST, May 9 (A. P.).—Dr. Wilhelm Fabricius, German Minister to Bucharest, called on the Rumanian Minister of the Interior today to protest formally recent measures against foreigners taken by the Rumanian Government.

Dr. Fabricius complained that these measures, such as expulsion, police surveys and tax restrictions, were enforced particularly against German nationals in Rumania.

He also protested because the Rumanian authorities would not permit a German shipping company to display propaganda posters in its Bucharest show windows without first submitting them to the Rumanian censors.

RUSS DOUBT BRITISH WANT TRADE PACT

London's Attitude Declared Unsatisfactory—"Delaying Tactics" Cited

Details Of Soviet Commerce With Germany Held None Of England's Business

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 9—An authoritative source said today the Soviet Union regarded the British attitude toward trade negotiations between Britain and Russia as "unsatisfactory."

The British, in the latest exchange of views over the possibility of entering a commercial pact with Russia, were reported to have asked for exact details of Soviet trade with Germany, including what and how much war materials were being sold to her.

The British also were said to have asked whether Russia would be prepared to supply Great Britain the same amount of war materials as to Germany.

Held None Of Britain's Business

Russia holds trade with Germany as a two-party matter not for discussion with a third party any more than trade between Russia and the United States or any other country should be subjected to British "supervision."

A Russian source suggested that the Soviet Union was considering possible extension of trade with Germany if the British negotiations fell through.

He said the Russians doubted that the British Government really wanted a trade agreement with Russia in view of what he called "delaying tactics."

Further Information Asked

These, he asserted, consisted of lengthy note writing over points which could be settled more readily by practical discussion.

The Russian Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, conferred with the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, yesterday and R. A. Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, announced today that Britain had asked Russia to furnish "certain further information in order that his Majesty's Government be in a position to judge if obligations undertaken by the Soviet Government" render it impossible for the Russians to conclude a trade agreement with Britain.

British and Russian negotiations before the war looking toward a trade agreement were ended last August when Russia and Germany reached a non-aggression pact and an agreement to cultivate their trade.

Seven British Soldiers Get Home From Norway.

A NORTH SEA BRITISH PORT, May 9 (A. P.).—Seven British soldiers and two Norwegian seamen told today how they became separated from their buddies in Norway, trudged 200 miles to the coast, sometimes through waist-deep snow, took a Norwegian boat away from the Germans and sailed home.

They said about 100 British troops were fighting twice that many Germans in a battle between mountains in Norway when their band of fifteen became stranded. Guided by the stars and an occasional native, they struck out for the coast, leaving the wounded behind in a Norwegian hospital.

Reaching the sea after seven days, they said, they found a Norwegian boat in German hands.

In the laconic words of one of the men, "the nine of us decided to board the ship and, aided by some Norwegians, we took command."

GERMANS HOLD NARVIK AS FOES DRAW CLOSER

MAY 9- 1940

Nazi Planes Bomb And Strafe Enemy Patrols And Gun Positions

Experts Believe Invaders' Chances Of Holding On Are Diminishing

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 9—A small, grim force of Germans, with airplanes as its only means of supply, was reported in dispatches from the northern Swedish border tonight to be hanging to its positions about Narvik while British, French and Norwegians drew their encircling lines tighter.

German warplanes patrol the rugged mountainsides all but a few hours of the day bombing and strafing Allied patrols and gun positions and attacking Allied ships.

The planes have succeeded in alighting on one glacier-like mountain top near Narvik, according to one report, and in landing parachute troop reinforcements northeast of the port for an attack on the Allies' rear.

Norse And French Active

The Allied attack is now being furthered by the increasing effectiveness of two groups.

French Alpine chasseurs, working against terrific handicaps, are worming their way into advantageous positions up steep mountainsides, hauling their guns after them and trying to take cover when the German planes come over. Their job is to gain points from which they can shell out the German machine-gun nests.

Norwegian mountain volunteers, all expert on skiis, move in the manner of Finnish ski units to break up German patrols and harry their outposts.

Nazis Chances Diminishing

In this Arctic war scene, amidst recurring snow storms, the Germans' chances of holding on are diminishing, experienced observers say.

To the north of the snow-covered mountain, penetrated by tunnels through which Swedish ore trains once rolled down hill to Narvik port, the Germans are said to be well encircled.

South of the railway the Alpinists and Norwegians are still endeavoring to link up gaps in their lines.

Patrols, usually small, engage in frequently savage encounters.

Disperse Dynamiters

One Norwegian ski unit is reported to have dispersed a German patrol yesterday which was trying to plant explosives at the entrance to the railway tunnel at Bjornfell, a small station not far from the Swedish frontier.

But in general, the Germans control the railway and are expected to destroy it when and if they are forced to capitulate.

Meanwhile, the attempt of the Germans to reinforce their Narvik garrison of 3,000 to 4,000 men by a tremendously difficult march overland across mountains and around rocky fjords from Trondheim, 400 miles south, was reported stalled after moving 150 miles.

Norwegians are holding a strong line on the Nord Trondelag province border, prepared to make a desperate fight at Fellingfors, twenty-eight miles further north, where the only road crosses the Vefsna river.

GERMANS FLY TROOPS NORTH TO AID NARVIK

Parachute Units Landing for Attack on Rear of Allied Siege Forces.

DRIVE OVERLAND IS CHECKED

Meanwhile Nazis Claim to Have Sunk Troop Ship and Submarine Off Norway.

STOCKHOLM, May 9 (A. P.).—The German Air Force was reported today to have dropped parachute troops just northeast of Narvik for a rear attack on the Allied forces besieging the German garrison at that Norwegian ore port, far above the arctic circle.

These were said to have been reenforcements for other parachute troops dropped behind the Allied siege ring, but there was no indication whether large enough numbers had been dropped to threaten the offensive on Narvik.

The situation was reported at least temporarily stalemated by heavy snowstorms, with the Germans still clinging to their intrenched positions on a mountain which slopes steeply down to Narvik from a peak near the Swedish border.

Alpinists in Action.

The Allies apparently are now using skilled French Alpinists and specially trained Polish units in an effort to gain positions from which they can shell the Germans out of their machine-gun emplacements.

But the Allies are still unable to neutralize the advantage the Germans have through their air attacks. Constant patrol skirmishes have failed to produce any decisive result.

Meanwhile today the German attempt to advance northward from central Norway was reported checked at Majavatn, on the North Trondelag border, 150 miles northeast of Trondheim. The Norwegians were said to be holding strong positions in that region.

A future focal point of action, it was said, may be Fellingfors, twenty-eight miles north of Majavatn, where the only road crosses the River Vefsna.

Nazis Claim Two Sinkings.

BERLIN, May 9 (A. P.).—The sinking of a 7,000-ton Allied troop transport in the Narvik region of northern Norway and the destruction of an Allied submarine in the Skagerrak, were reported by the German High Command today as new victories for its air force.

The Nazi air force also participated in fights in the Norvik region where the Allies are besieging a force of between 3,000 and 4,000 Germans landed when the German invasion began on April 9, it was added.

The communique said in part:

"German fighting planes attacked an enemy naval force at Narvik. In the course of the attack one 7,000-ton transport was sunk by a medium caliber bomb.

"Air force fighting units repeatedly participated in the ground fighting. They bombed marching columns and enemy artillery positions.

"The air force destroyed one enemy submarine by bomb hits in the Skagerrak."

Koht Says Norway Lost Four of Six Divisions

One Still Intact at Narvik; Part of Other Fights Way North

PARIS, May 9 (AP).—More than four Norwegian divisions were put out of action in the campaign against Germany, Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht of Norway told newspaper men today. Dr. Koht said Norway had six divisions at the beginning of hostilities. (The strength of the Norwegian Army at the time of the German invasion April 9 was put at 75,000 men.)

He said the sixth division, intact, still was fighting around the Arctic ore port of Narvik, while what was left of the fifth division was fighting its way north from German-occupied central Norway. "The others," he said, "have been killed, wounded, taken prisoner or interned in Sweden."

The Foreign Minister said the French and British governments had expressed "the wish" of renewed help to Norway by "reinforcing the maximum to Allied troops in Scandinavia.

Dr. Koht told newspaper men that he had received such expressions during political and military conferences in both Paris and London.

"There is no reason to hide the sadness in Norwegian circles caused by the re-embarkation order which took Allied troops out of the Trondheim area," he commented, and said that his Government was determined to continue the fight against the German aggressors. He added that Norway "could not hope that Sweden would abandon her present neutrality policy."

STOCKHOLM, May 9 (AP).—A British warship helped King Haakon VII of Norway and his government to escape German capture, the newspaper "Nya Dagligt Allehanda" said today in a dispatch from Oslo.

NAZIS ATTACK ON WIDE FRONT

French report advance repulsed at Maginot Line

Paris, May 9 (AP) — Concerted German attacks along a broad area on the extreme northern flank of the Western Front have been "everywhere repulsed," the French high command reported tonight.

The fighting went on throughout last night between opposing infantry. The high command's night communique indicated it took place in the fifteen-mile area separating the Moselle and Nied River valleys.

In addition to the infantry fighting, the artillery of both sides spurted into action to the west of the Vosges Mountains and in the region of Wissembourg, along the Southern half of the front.

The attacks on the Northern flank, first referred to in the morning communiques as those of "several infantry patrols," were described in the night communique as "infantry actions on a large front."

Canadian Cruiser Aids In Capture of Nazi Ship

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, May 9.—The new Canadian flotilla leader, the destroyer Assiniboine, shared honors with a Royal Navy cruiser in the capture of the German merchantman Hannover, in the Caribbean Sea, the Royal Canadian Navy made known today.

The 5,600-ton Nazi vessel, attempting to run the allied blockade with 6,000 tons of ore and lumber from the Netherlands West Indies, was overhauled in the early morning darkness of March 8 off the Dominican coast.

Despite high seas and attempts of the German crew to burn their ship, the allied vessels towed her to Kingston, Jamaica, as a prize of war.

Both ships were on patrol, operating apart and meeting at intervals to exchange news and views when the Hannover was intercepted.

The German sailors showed no force, but in the darkness some escaped in a boat while the cruiser crew battled flames started by the fleeing seamen fore and aft on the Hannover's decks.

2 Ships Tie Up at Manila

MANILA, May 9 (AP).—European war uncertainties caused two Scandinavian freighters to unload their cargoes and announce today they woud remain in Manila harbor indefinitely.

The Swedish freighter Ningpo discharged a $250,000 cargo of coconut oil, consigned by Philippine interests to Gothenburg, Sweden. Representatives of the ship said European waters were too hazardous.

The Danish freighter Niel Maersk unloaded 1,470 cases of dessicated coconut intended for New York. The coconut will be reshipped in another vessel because the British, since Germany invaded Denmark, have said Danish ships would be subject to seizure.

American Freighter Remains At Bergen

WASHINGTON, May 9 (A. P.).—The American freighter Charles B. McCormick, the last American vessel remaining in Norwegian waters, was reported today to be at Bergen, Norway. Information to this effect has reached the State Department from the German naval commander in Norway.

Three ships were in Norwegian waters at the time of the German invasion. The Flying Fish and the Mormacsea have returned to the United States, but the State Department and the owners have reported great difficulty in communicating with the Charles R. McCormick. The information which has come through said that the vessel arrived at Bergen April 8.

ITALY HAS SET DATE FOR WAR, SAYS VON OPEL

Ex-German Industrialist Among 200 Refugees Arriving Aboard Rex

Mail Taken Off By British At Gibraltar, Italian Liner Reports

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 9—Officers of the Italian liner Rex reported on her arrival here today that the vessel was held for thirteen hours at Gibraltar and that 1,124 sacks of mail were taken off by the British.

At the same time, the British authorities returned 494 sacks of mail and parcel post which had been removed earlier from other Italian ships.

Among the Rex's 1,160 passengers, including 350 Americans and some 200 German refugees—was Adolfo Alessandrina, a special Italian envoy sent here to consult British authorities in an effort to speed clearance through Gibraltar of Italian ships bearing cargoes from this country.

Says Italy Will Join Germany

Others aboard included Fritz von Opel, the former German motor manufacturer and rocket-ship experimenter and now a citizen of the principality of Liechtenstein, who was taken off the Italian liner Conte di Savoia on April 24 while en route to this country.

He reported that he had spent sixteen days in Gibraltar—eight in military custody. He said the British had treated him "very well," and remarked that he presumed they had first suspected that he "might be a spy agent."

Von Opel declared he had certain information that Italy would enter the war on Germany's side and that he even knew—although withheld—the day when this would occur. He also asserted he had "been told" that many German-Jewish refugees coming here were "spies."

An Italian journalist aboard said on the contrary that there was no immediate prospect of Italy's entering the war on either side.

Another passenger — the Baroness Staehl von Holstein, the former Alice Dillenbeck, of Philadelphia—arrived from Sweden with the declaration that Sweden was "magnificently neutral" and thus would remain.

Seeks Aid For Finnish Children

Miss Kyllikki Pohjala, Conservative member of the Finnish Parliament, arrived to confer with Herbert Hoover about Finnish relief.

Since the German invasion of Norway, she said, the Finns had been cut off from United States relief shipments and ninety per cent. of the children in Finland "must sleep on the floors today."

She said about half the children in the entire country were ill—from lack of food, from exposure and the like and that in one hospital for twenty children there was but one pair of shoes. In one village, she added, forty-eight children died within one week.

America May Be Asked to Build 13,000 Craft in 16 Months.

By E. A. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, May 9 (A. P.).—A British official admission that the Allies were inferior to Germany in air power stirred expectations today of a speed-up in Anglo-French orders for American-made warplanes.

Aviation authorities, conversant with negotiations to date, said that they were puzzled by the strange lag in Allied purchases particularly in view of reliable reports that British and French plane production had declined from pre-war levels.

It has been six weeks since the last of the army's newest military ships was released for sale abroad, yet the Allied purchasing mission has announced contracts for only about 1,900 planes out of a projected $1,000,000 order for a fleet of possibly 8,000.

No Mass Orders Yet.

Members of the Allied mission had been stressing a desire for speed, and officials consequently believed that release of the latest American models would be followed promptly by mass orders for Allied air re-enforcements. This expectation has gone unfulfilled.

The acknowledgment of Allied air inferiority came from Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who told the House of Commons yesterday that the Allies, as a result, would be exposed to difficulty and danger for an indefinite time. This was in sharp contrast to optimistic earlier predictions that the Allies would overtake the Nazis in air power.

Reports reaching here and accepted by informed air men as accurate were that Britain had turned out only about 700 planes in March and France approximately 400, against a likely Nazi production of 3,300.

Expect to Build 13,000 Planes.

On the assumption that the Allies will place their remaining orders soon, informed airmen calculated that the American industry might be called on to turn out upward of 13,000 military planes of all types in the next sixteen months, for the army, navy and foreign governments. Further war orders would increase the estimate.

Persons close to the War Department said this calculation agreed both with testimony given Congress last week by Major-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Air Corps chief, that probably 6,000 warplanes would be produced by July 1 next year, and with an earlier prediction by Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson that by the end of this year the industry's annual capacity would be expanded to 30,000 or more.

All the estimates were based on the same official calculations, the apparent discrepancies being laid to the definition of actual production, production capacity and potential capacity.

SELF-SEALING PLANE TANKS U. S. SECRET

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

BALTIMORE, May 9—Airplane fuel tanks which seal up instantly when they are ripped open by large caliber bullets, giving warplane pilots added protection from the hazards of fire and forced landings, were demonstrated for the first time today at the research laboratories of the Glenn L. Martin Co.

Riddled with both .30 and .50 caliber ammunition, they spilled scarcely a drop of highly inflammable aviation gasoline.

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, said recently such tanks were high on the "must" list of the developments which were necessary to bring the corps' equipment up to date. Unofficially the tanks, made of a secret composition which includes an artificial rubber, were described as superior to anything of that nature manufactured in Europe.

GERMANY PIONEER

Germany has pioneered so-called self-sealing gasoline tanks built of fiber, rubber compounds and rawhide leather.

The tests at the factory, which is producing warplanes in large quantities for sale abroad, were given a spectacular finale when an ordinary aluminum alloy tank filled with 110 gallons of gasoline was fired with machine gun tracer bullets.

The self-sealing tanks probably will be fitted into warplanes sold to the Allies beginning late in the fall. The army air corps conducted extensive tests with them recently at Wright field, Dayton, O.

Under the direction of R. R. Gray, the Martin company's chief of research, several gasoline tanks were punctured by machine gun fire.

ORDINARY TANKS

Two ordinary tanks, filled with sea water, leaked like sieves. The aluminum alloy containers in which the self-sealing tanks were placed to represent the way they rest in an airplane wing were torn badly.

One hole looked big enough to accommodate a football. But the composition tanks themselves showed only slits and small holes effectively closed up, like a wound which healed over. While Gray said the process was confidential, it appeared that the gasoline itself set up a chemical reaction with the tank material to close the holes.

The material looks and feels like that in an extra heavy automobile inner tube. The basis of it is "mareng," an artificial rubber developed by Martin engineers.

Revamping of Cabinet Seems to Be Main Hope for Chamberlain in Government Crisis

May 9/1940

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Expert)

British Premier Chamberlain's intimation this morning that he doesn't intend to resign, despite the shellacking Parliament gave him during the past two days for his conduct of the war, was to be expected.

The prime minister still is one of the fightingest of a fighting family of statesmen, although he has passed the mark of three score years and 10.

He had made it quite clear that his burning ambition is to finish the war as chief of government. Indeed, as recently as April 16 he told an audience that his eye was undimmed and his natural forces unabated.

"I feel encouraged," he said, "to carry on the task in which I am engaged until our purpose is achieved."

Tenure of Office Insecure.

His tenure of office has been rendered very insecure, however, by the warning which the House of Commons, including some of his own followers, wrote on the wall last night in their vote of censure. His main hope would seem to be in the revamping of his cabinet, and an effort to create a coalition government which would include representatives of the large Labor party and the Liberals.

One thing is certain—that it will take a deal of persuasion to get the opposition to participate in the government so long as they have Chamberlain on the run. They may decide to continue their drive to force his resignation, for it shouldn't be overlooked that politics play no inconsiderable part in the crisis.

Whatever may be in store for Chamberlain—a grand old man, though terribly fixed and obstinate when once his mind is made up—there can be only one response to the public demand for action and that is action. From that viewpoint the upheaval undoubtedly is a blessing, even though some heads must roll.

Incidentally, if an interpolation is permitted, this manhandling of the government is an excellent example of the difference between the parliamentary form of government and the absolute dictatorship.

There is small doubt that Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, saved his chief from a cold knockout by accepting "full responsibility" for the failure to employ a naval fleet for the capture of Trondheim.

Churchill, once one of Chamberlain's severest critics, donned the old school tie and "played cricket." England will think more of him for this display of loyalty.

Still, Churchill's defense—which seemed to me to be more like an excuse—lacked the punch with which this great orator and debater generally endows his speeches. The first lord was talking with his head and not with his heart.

Prime Minister's Duties.

Naturally, not having sat in at cabinet meetings, I cannot fix the responsibility for the Norwegian debacle. However, the conduct of the Norwegian campaign was so utterly unlike Churchill, and so much in accordance with Chamberlain's die-hard adherance to his policies, that I cannot help feeling the responsibility really belongs to the prime minister, whose decision in all matters is final so far as concerts his cabinet.

As I have remarked before, I believe that if Churchill is given free hand in conduct of the war, Britain will get the initiative she demands. That would be a logical outcome of the present crisis, for Chamberlain surely cannot ignore the mandate of the people, and to give him rightful credit he will not wish to.

The most important point made by Churchill in his defense was that Germany's numerical superiority in airplanes caused the Norwegian setback. He added the grim thought that this "will condemn us for some time to a great deal of difficulty and suffering which we must endure with firmness until more favorable conditions can be established—as they assuredly will be."

That seems to me to be wholly unsatisfactory as an explanation of the failure in Norway, but it certainly does point to a vital Allied weakness. Churchill's statement undoubtedly will have the result of redoubling the Anglo-French efforts to reach parity with the Nazis in the air.

Rabbi Finkelstein Joins Roosevelt Peace Move

Will Succeed Dr. Adler as Spokesman for Jewry

WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP). — Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, of New York, head of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, accepted an invitation from President Roosevelt today to represent the American Jewish religion in consultations with the Administration on joint government and Church peace efforts.

Rabbi Finkelstein, forty-four years old, succeeds Dr. Cyrus Adler, who died recently, as Jewish representative.

Dr. Adler, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary, was one of the original three religious leaders requested by the President last Christmas to assist him in "parallel endeavors" for peace. The others were Pope Pius XII, head of the Catholic Church, to whom the President dispatched Myron C. Taylor as a personal envoy, and Dr. George A. Buttrick, president of the Federal Council of Churches, the Protestant spokesman.

The Jewish and Protestant churchmen were asked to come to Washington periodically for White House conferences. Rabbi Finkelstein is a native of Cincinnati.

WASHINGTON, MAY 9-(AP)-RED CROSS OFFICIALS WERE ACCUSED TODAY BY SENATOR CLARK (D-MO) OF JOINING IN "AN ATTEMPT TO INFLAME THE PUBLIC MIND WITH THE IDEA THAT WE MUST INEVITABLY BE DRAWN INTO A FOREIGN WAR."

THE CAUSE OF HIS OUTBURST WAS A SERIES OF ANNOUNCEMENTS THAT THE RED CROSS WOULD ENROLL MEDICAL TECHNOLOGISTS WILLING TO SERVE IN THE ARMY OR NAVY "IN A NATIONAL EMERGENCY."

PLACING THESE ANNOUNCEMENTS IN THE SENATE RECORD, CLARK DECLARED THEY WERE IN THE SAME CLASS AS REMARKS BY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR LOUIS JOHNSON, ADMIRAL J. K. TAUSSIG OF THE NAVY, AND " CERTAIN PROPAGANDISTS."

CLARK, A WORLD WAR VETERAN, TOLD THE SENATE THAT THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR HAD BEEN GOING ABOUT THE COUNTRY TELLING PEOPLE IT WAS "INEVITABLE THAT WE WILL BE DRAWN INTO WAR."

MAY 9 1940

ADMIRAL TAUSSIG, HE SAID, HAD FOLLOWED THE JAPANESE STYLE OF NAVAL OFFICERS "ATTEMPTING TO CONDUCT FOREIGN RELATIONS" BY PREDICTING A WAR WITH JAPAN.

THE SENATOR SAID THE RED CROSS HAD WON WORLD RESPECT FOR ITS AID IN TIMES OF DISASTER AND DISTRESS AND WAS ENTITLED TO ITS CLAIM TO "BEING THE 'GREATEST MOTHER OF ALL'."

"THIS WOULD TAKE "'THE GREATEST MOTHER OF ALL' AND PUT A PAIR OF KAHKI PANTS ON HER, PUT ON SPURS AND BOOTS, GIVE HER A GUN AND A SWORD, AND USE HER AS A RECRUITING AGENT FOR AN UNDECLARED WAR," HE ASSERTED.

DEWITT SMITH, DIRECTOR OF DOMESTIC OPERATIONS OF THE RED CROSS, SAID THE ORGANIZATION HAD BEEN ENROLLING NURSES, ANESTHETISTS AND OTHERS FOR POSSIBLE SERVICE IN THE ARMY OR NAVY SINCE 1912 AND THAT THE ANNOUNCEMENTS REFERRED TO BY SENATOR CLARK WERE ROUTINE.

SMITH SAID THAT THE FUNCTION OF THE RED CROSS IS TO SECURE PROPER CARE FOR THE SICK AND WOUNDED IN TIME OF WAR OR OF DISASTER.

CONSUL TO GREENLAND IS LEAVING ON CUTTER

Comanche, Likely to Go Today, Also Taking Red Cross Aide

NEW YORK—May 9 (Thurs.)

The 1,000-ton cutter Comanche was loading at the Coast Guard pier at Clifton, S. I., yesterday for a special voyage to Greenland with the first United States consular party ever assigned to the island. James K. Penfield, who has been serving in the Far Eastern division of the State Department, will sail on the Comanche as consul, and George L. West Jr. will accompany him as vice consul. They will establish American representation at Godthaab, a whaling station.

Another passenger on the cutter, which is expected to sail this morning, will be Maurice R. Reddy, assistant director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross. Since Greenland, a Danish possession, is now in an uncertain international position due to the occupation of Denmark by German armed forces, Mr. Reddy is expected to examine the island's need of supplies.

The Comanche, under Lieut. Comdr. Frank M. Meals, will make the trip to Godthaab in about ten days, if normal weather conditions prevail. The cutter has been stocked for a six-month voyage, with supplies for the entire crew for that length of time. At Pier 18, where loading was taking place, it was said that this was merely a precaution, since the ship was not expected to be away that long.

Included in the supplies are large quantities of canned goods, salted meats and fish. The crew of six officers and fifty men has been equipped with heavy sheepskin coats. ...ided in the cargo is a complete outfit of office furniture for the consulate. A fairly large quantity of lumber has been fastened down on the forward deck. It was supplied by the Red Cross and will be used to build sheds to shelter supplies sent later.

During the voyage north and on the return trip the Comanche will send regular reports on ice conditions to augment reports sent in to the Hydrographic Office by the International Ice Patrol.

Tip On Nations' Grabs Recalled By Dutch Envoy's Visits to Hull

WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP)—Dr. A. Loudon, The Netherlands minister, has been a frequent visitor at the state department lately, and reporters there are wondering if that is an ominous sign for Holland.

They remember March, 1938, when the Austrian minister, Edgar L. G. Prochnik, was seeing Secretary Hull or Undersecretary Sumner Welles almost every day. Suddenly his country disappeared. Now he is a professor at Georgetown university here.

In September of that year Czech Minister Vladimir Hurban began going often to the state department. When the month went out the Sudetenland went with it.

Early in 1939 Dr. Fernando De Los Rios, the Spanish ambassador made almost daily visits to the state department. But in February his government collapsed and General Franco took over. Now the ambassador is a professor in New York.

Czech Minister Hurban again began visiting the department in March. Then of a sudden all that was left of his country disappeared. Hurban continued as minister without a country.

That same month Faik Konitza, minister of Albania, was seen often at the state department. After some days Mussolini moved into Albania and Konitza is now writing history.

August came and Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish ambassador, sought repeated appointments with Hull, Welles and other officials. But as the month passed, his country began to pass with it. He is carrying on as ambassador of a government in exile.

Hjalmar Procope, minister of Finland, became a daily visitor in November. After a few weeks his country was invaded by the Soviets and eventually defeated.

Last month Wilhelm De Morgenstierne, minister of Norway, became an almost daily caller. After about a week, Germany invaded his country.

At about the same time Henrik De Kauffmann, minister of Denmark, began seeing officials frequently. After some days of calls, Germany marched into Denmark and took it over.

Holland Bans Night Phone Messages Into Belgium

Brussels, May 9 (AP)—For the first time tonight the Netherlands refused to allow night telephone communications from Belgium.

The ban began at 11.30 p. m.

For two previous nights in succession the Netherlands has cut telephone communications to all foreign countries, except Belgium. The explanation was that communication facilities were needed by the government in directing its calls of reserves to the colors as a precautionary measure.

BERLIN, May 10—(Friday)—(AP)—Attempts to reach Amsterdam by telephone failed at 1 a. m. today, the operator declaring that no connection was possible at present.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 10-(THURSDAY)-(AP)-(VIA RADIO)-J.REILLY O'SULLIVAN, CHIEF OF THE AMSTERDAM BUREAU OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, SAID IN A BROADCAST TO THE UNITED STATES TODAY THAT THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT FOR THE FIRST TIME HAD BANNED ALL INCOMING AS WELL AS OUTGOING TELEPHONIC COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE OUTSIDE WORLD.

PRESS MESSAGES FOR THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER FOREIGN COUNTRIES, HE SAID, WERE REFUSED AT CABLE AND WIRELESS OFFICES.

IN A CENSORED RADIO TALK CARRIED IN THE UNITED STATES BY THE MUTUAL BROADCASTING SYSTEM (9:20-9:30 P.M. THURSDAY EST) O'SULLIVAN INDICATED THESE STEPS WERE IN THE NORMAL PROCESS OF THE GOVERNMENT'S INCREASED PRECAUTIONARY EFFORTS.

THE GOVERNMENT TWICE PREVIOUSLY HAD CUT OFF OUTGOING INTERNATIONAL CALLS FROM 10 P.M. TO 8 A.M. BUT HAD ACCEPTED INCOMING CALLS, O'SULLIVAN SAID. THIS PROVED INEFFECTIVE, HE CONTINUED, BECAUSE INCOMING CALLS INCREASED SHARPLY.

"TONIGHT THERE SEEMS TO BE A RELAXATION OF THE TENSION CREATED TWO DAYS AGO BY UNEXPECTED CANCELLATION OF ARMY AND NAVY LEAVES," O'SULLIVAN SAID, ADDING THAT THE GOVERNMENT EXPLAINED THIS STEP WAS TAKEN BECAUSE OF "INCREASING UNCERTAINTIES OF THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION."

HE SAID THE CANCELLATIONS ALSO MIGHT HAVE BEEN MADE TO TEST THE LITTLE COUNTRY'S PREPAREDNESS. MORE MEN WERE UNDER ARMS, HE ADDED, THAN AT ANY TIME IN THE COUNTRY'S HISTORY.

"THE GOVERNMENT HAS RECOGNIZED THERE MIGHT BE DANGERS FROM WOULD-BE FIFTH COLUMNISTS AT HOME," HE WENT ON, AND HAD MADE 21 ARRESTS IN ONE DRIVE, INCLUDING A NATIONAL SOCIALIST MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT AND SEVERAL COMMUNISTS.

MANY ARRESTS WERE MADE FOR SUSPICION OF ESPIONAGE, HE SAID, AND THE GOVERNMENT PROPOSED TO PUNISH SPIES WITH LIFE IMPRISONMENT, AND IN THE CASE OF WAR, WITH DEATH.

"MUCH STRICTER CONTROL IS BEING EXERCISED OVER ALL FOREIGNERS," O'SULLIVAN CONTINUED. "YOU CAN GET A TRIP TO JAIL FOR GOING OUT INTO THE STREET WITHOUT YOUR PASSPORT."

STRESSING THE EXPANSIVENESS OF THE GOVERNMENT'S PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES, O'SULLIVAN SAID "THE PEACEFUL DUTCHMAN THESE DAYS IS KEEPING HIS POWDER DRY AND HIS LANDS POTENTIALLY VERY WET."

AMERICAN REACTIONS TO EVENTS ABROAD, O'SULLIVAN SAID, WERE BEING WATCHED CLOSELY.

"EVERY DUTCHMAN IS KEENLY INTERESTED IN WHAT THE UNITED STATES THINKS ABOUT THE WAR," AND HE ADDED, THE DUTCH PREVAILINGLY BELIEVED THAT "THE UNITED STATES IS EXTREMELY INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE NETHERLANDS AND HER OVERSEAS POSSESSIONS--THEY FEEL AN ADDED SENSE OF SECURITY IN THAT RESPECT."

THERE WAS A FEELING IN GOVERNMENT CIRCLES THAT NATIONS OF THE PACIFIC WOULD RESPECT THE NETHERLANDS' RIGHTS IN THE EAST INDIES, WHILE "THE MONROE DOCTRINE IS COUNTED ON FOR POSSESSIONS IN THE DUTCH WEST INDIES," O'SULLIVAN SAID.

NEW YORK, MAY 9-(AP)-THE NETHERLANDS SHUT OFF ALL FOREIGN TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION FOR THE FIRST TIME TONIGHT SINCE SHE BEGAN TAKING EXTRAORDINARY DEFENSE MEASURES, THREE DAYS AGO, BUT RADIO BROADCASTS FROM AMSTERDAM MADE IT APPARENT NO UNUSUAL EVENTS WERE TRANSPIRING BEHIND THE "BLACKED OUT" LINES.

J.REILLY O'SULLIVAN, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT, IN A BROADCAST FROM AMSTERDAM OVER THE MUTUAL BROADCASTING SYSTEM AT 9:20 P.M. (E.S.T.) EXPLAINED THAT THE NETHERLANDS WAS ONLY TAKING PRECAUTIONS "JUST IN CASE", AND THAT THERE WAS A RELAXATION OF THE TENSION OF THE PREVIOUS TWO DAYS.

ON TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY NIGHTS, WITHOUT WARNING, THE NETHERLANDS BANNED OUTGOING TELEPHONE CALLS BUT PERMITTED INCOMING CALLS.

TONIGHT INCOMING CALLS ALSO WERE REFUSED, AND CABLE AND WIRELESS OFFICES REFUSED PRESS MESSAGES ALSO.

THE WESTERN UNION IN NEW YORK, HOWEVER, SAID COMMUNICATIONS WERE RESTORED AFTER A SHORT INTERVAL.

FOR THE FIRST TIME CALLS FROM BRUSSELS, BELGIUM, WERE REFUSED AND BERLIN ALSO WAS UNABLE TO COMMUNICATE WITH THE DUTCH NETHERLANDS.

THE GOVERNMENT'S NEED OF THE TELEPHONES TO FACILITATE THESE MEASURES MADE THE BAN NECESSARY, IT WAS EXPLAINED.

IN THE BACKGROUND OF TONIGHT'S "BLACKOUT" OF THE TELEPHONES WAS A REPORT FROM BERLIN THAT ALL RAILWAYS THROUGHOUT GERMANY HAVE BEEN PLACED UNDER MILITARY COMMAND DURING THE APPROACHING WHITSUNTIDE TO

U.S. Asked to Pay Biddle For Art Ruined in Poland

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 9—A bill to pay United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle and his wife $243,361 for antique furniture, paintings and other personal property lost in the invasion of Poland was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, of Pennsylvania.

The residence leased by the Ambassador had been redecorated on order of Mrs. Biddle by an interior decorator brought from Paris. Valuable tapestries and old furniture adorned it. In addition the villa occupied by the Biddles at Constanza, eight miles outside Warsaw, was damaged by German bombs.

Besides the losses for which compensation is sought in the bill, Senator Guffey said, a valuable collection of silverware was lost by the Biddles when the Russians seized a part of Poland where the diplomat maintained a country home.

Germans Invade Netherlands and Belgium; Allies Plan Full Help; Luxemburg Attacked; Brussels Bombed, Battle Over Amsterdam

Belgium Is First Invaded By Planes Which Start Bombing Brussels Airport

Nazi Troops Are Reported As Already Landed In Holland—Berlin Declares Allies Were Planning Attack

BERLIN, May 10. (AP)—Germany launched military operations today against the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg to "safeguard" their "neutrality."

The official explanation for the sweeping campaign was that the British and French Allies were planning to attack Germany through the territories of the three.

"WARD OFF" ALLIES ATTACK

"In order to ward off the impending attack, German troops received orders to safeguard the neutrality "of Belgium and the Netherlands," said an announcement by DNB, official German news agency.

"Since the offensive decided upon by France and England shall also include Luxembourg, the Reich's government sees itself forced to expand the military operations under way for staving off attack also to include Luxembourg territory."

That was the way DNB concluded the announcement which had been anticipated by Dutch correspondents already listening to their homeland radio broadcasts that German parachute troops had landed and were fighting in numerous places.

BERLIN SUBMITTED MEMORANDA

At the outset of the brief announcement DNB said that Germany had submitted to the Belgian and Netherlands governments memoranda claiming evidence that the British and French were planning immediate attack on the Reich through territories of the two neutrals.

DNB said the evidence "unequivocally proved" that the Allied attack would be toward the Ruhr through Belgium and the Netherlands.

"The Reich's government therefore ordered German troops to safeguard the neutrality of these countries with all the military means of the Reich."

ALSO INFORMED LUXEMBOURG

It was announced that Germany had addressed another memorandum to the Luxembourg government.

According to the agency, Germany established in her memoranda to the Netherlands and Belgium that "she is reliably informed that England and France, in pursuance of their policy of expansion of the war, have decided to attack Germany in the near future via Dutch and Belgian terri-

'Number' Die in Attack, Houses Destroyed; Call Sent Out for Defenders

BRUSSELS, May 10 (Friday).—Belgium was invaded by German planes today about 5 a. m. (midnight Thursday New York daylight saving time).

The Belgian Foreign Ministry said the invasion was launched by bombardment of the Brussels airport. Great clouds of smoke could be seen rising from the airport, while anti-aircraft batteries kept up a continual pounding against the invaders. Several houses around the airport were destroyed.

Nine planes passing over Belgium brought an air alarm as soldiers were urgently called to join their units. There were reports of parachute troops landing in the north but officials could not be reached to explain what had happened.

Belgians stood in the streets of Brussels in their nightclothes watching blobs of anti-aircraft fire in the sky as military cars and motorcycles dashed through the streets.

The Defense Ministry immediately declared a "state of alarm" throughout the nation, which in the World War learned the tragic cost of a German invasion.

Luxemburg Reported Attacked

Unconfirmed reports said that the neighboring Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, wedged between the warring powers, also had been invaded. Parachute troops landed at Wasselt, in eastern Belgium.

The Belgian Cabinet went into emergency session as soon as the first news came through that Holland was invaded.

Reports from the Netherlands said the Dutch quartermaster general had announced German troops crossed the Dutch frontier at 3 a. m. (9 p. m. E. S. T.).

A state of alarm was declared officially as planes attacked the airdrome at Brussels at 5 a. m. (midnight) Thursday, New York time. Soldiers were called back to their units by a proclamation. The raido reported parachute troops had landed in the north. Communications were tied up by a rush of official messages.

The Cabinet met early this morning after the report was received that the Netherlands also was invaded.

The Antwerp airport was attacked with bombs, and artillery fire was reported on the German-Belgian frontier.

It was reported that after an interview with King Leopold, Premier Hubert Pierlot declared to the press that Belgium had been attacked.

100 PLANES ROAR OVER BRUSSELS

German Troops Landed by Parachute at Hasselt in East

Brussels, May 10 (AP)—Belgium and her lowland neighbors, The Netherlands and tiny Luxembourg, were invaded today by Germany.

Waves of German bombers and transport planes launched the newest Nazi blitzkrieg in the dark hours before dawn, realizing Belgium's worst fears since the European conflict started Sept. 1.

More than 100 German planes roared over Brussels, the capital. The Brussels airport was subjected to heavy bombing.

German troops were landed by parachute at Hasselt, in eastern Belgium, while reports of other troop landings could not be confirmed immediately.

PARIS, May 10. (AP)—The French news agency Havas today carried the following as the first communique of The Netherlands' army quartermaster general on the German invasion:

"German troops have crossed The Netherlands frontier starting at 3 o'clock.

"Aerial attacks have been launched on some airdromes.

"The army and anti-aircraft artillery are ready.

"The inundations are proceeding according to plans.

"At present as far as one knows at least six German airplanes have been shot down."

1-Hour 48-Minute Alarm Arouses Sleeping Paris

Air Raid Warning Is Second Longest of War

PARIS, May 10 (Friday) (AP).—The second longest air raid alarm of the war, one hour and forty-eight minutes, roused sleeping Paris early this morning. Anti-aircraft fire was heard above the sound of wailing sirens. The alarm first sounded at 4.48 a. m. (1:48 p. m. Eastern standard time) and ended at 6:36 a. m. (1:36 a. m. Eastern standard time).

It was the first alarm in Paris since Feb. 27 and the tenth of the war.

Alarms also were sounded in northern France.

London, Friday, May 10.—Widespread reports from the continent early this morning said foreign aircraft had been sighted over the Netherlands flying from east to west and been met by anti-aircraft fire.

The planes were said to have flown over Leyden and Arnhem.

The Havas (French) news agency received a report from Brussels that a radio station at Hilversum, the Netherlands, had broadcast an announcement of the incursion of foreign planes.

The announcer said two big formations of planes were reported approaching The Netherlands.

Fifteen Heinkel bombers and 23 other bombers have crossed over into The Netherlands, the announcer added.

Allies Pledge Immediate Help

London, May 10 (AP)—An Exchange Telegraph agency (British) dispatch from Brussels said that the Belgian and Netherlands governments had appealed to the British-French allies for help against the German invasion.

"Our appeal for aid sent to the Allied governments has been answered and Britain and France are going to our assistance immediately," the legation announced

LONDON, May 10 (Friday).—The British-French Allies will give Belgium and the Netherlands full help against German invasion, it was stated officially in London this morning.

Cudahy Tells Hull Of Invasion

WASHINGTON, May 10 (Friday) (AP)—John Cudahy, minister to Luxembourg, telephoned Secretary Hull shortly before 1 a. m., EST, today that Luxembourg had been invaded by land and air from Germany.

WASHINGTON, May 10 (Friday) (AP)—Ambassador John Cudahy, American Ambassador to Belgium telephoned Secretary Hull early today that land forces were concentrated on the borders of Belgium the Netherlands and Luxembourg and were expected to attack on each of the fronts at any time.

The state department, in making the announcement at 12:30 a.m. (EST) said that Cudahy had phoned President Roosevelt early Thursday evening, telling him that Belgian cabinet was in session and that high officials felt that "this was the night" that Belgium might be attacked before morning.

The state department announcement did not specify what country's "land forces" were involved.

Cudahy, in his conversation with Hull, said he was informed by high Belgian officials that one German and one Luxembourg citizen were reported to have been killed in Luxembourg, and that heavy German air forces were over Luxembourg. Cudahy said he was also told that German planes were flying over Belgium and Holland.

The announcement, made shortly before 1 A. M., EST, was given to newspapermen while Secretary Hull and his principal assistants were in conference.

The United States government has been showing especial interest in the Netherlands because of Secretary Hull's recent statement that foreign countries should keep "hands off" the Dutch East Indies in the event of an invasion of Holland.

Ambassador Cudahy reported that the entire Luxembourg government, except the foreign minister, "had left." Cudahy, in addition to his post at the Belgian court, is minister to Luxembourg.

PRESIDENT CALLS CONFERENCE TODAY

To Meet State, Justice, Naval and Army Experts

Washington, May 10, (Friday) (AP)—President Roosevelt called a conference for 10:30 a. m. EST today of state, justice, naval and army experts to fix the neutrality limits for American ships in light of the German invasion of the low countries.

The President stayed up far into the early morning hours because of the news from Europe to complete these arrangements.

At the conference of high officials, the question of Dutch and Belgian flagships now in the ports of the American republics will be considered.

Those who were called to the White House meeting were Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Welles, Attorney General Jackson, General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

British Land In Iceland To Insure Its Security Against Nazi Invasion

London, Friday, May 10 (AP)—A British force has landed in Iceland, it was announced officially today.

The announcement said the Icelandic Government was given explicit guarantees that the force had been landed to insure the security of Iceland against a German invasion.

The force will be withdrawn upon the conclusion of hostilities.

The British Government made it plain it has no intention or desife to interfere with the existing administration and that it is prepared to negotiate at once with the Icelandic Government an agreement on trade matters which will bring material advantages.

The only defense force at the disposal of the authorities of Iceland, sister kingdom of Denmark, consists of about seventy police.

Holland Reports She Is Ready: Dykes Are Being Opened According To Plan

London Hears That German Forces Are Trying To Cut Communications Between Belgium and France

Germans Land At Waalhaven

London, May 10 (Friday)—(AP)—A radio bulletin by Reuters, British news agency, from Amsterdam said today that Germans have landed at Waalhaven.

The Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, said it is learned in authoritative Dutch circles in London this morning that reports that Holland has been invaded by German trooops are confirmed.

The Netherlands legation said it had been informed of the reported German invasion but that it had no details.

The Hilversum radio announcer stated that planes also flew over the Frisian island.

The Hilversum radio broadcast a warning to the Dutch people that German parachute troops had descended, some in German and some in Dutch uniforms. The people were asked to watch for them.

DRIVE BETWEEN BELGIANS AND FRENCH

LONDON, May 10. (AP)—German forces are moving forward in an attempt to cut off communication between Belgium and France, Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, announced today.

In addition to an invasion by mechanized units German soldiers also were dropped by parachute from troop-carrying planes.

30.24-2161

The Foreign Office issued the following announcement:

"Since the German seizure of Denmark it has become necessary to reckon with the possibility of a sudden German descent upon Iceland.

"It is clear that in the face of an attack on Iceland even on a very small scale the Icelandic Government would be unable to prevent their country falling completely into German hands.

"His Majesty's Government have accordingly decided to preclude this possibility which would deprive Iceland of her independence by themselves landing a force in Iceland and this operation was carried out this morning.

"His Majesty's Government have given explicit guarantees to the Icelandic Government that this force has been landed to ensure the security of Iceland against a German invasion and that any further measures that may have to be taken will be designed for that purpose. This force will be withdrawn upon the conclusion of hostilities.

Trade Agreement Planned

"His Majesty's Government have made it plain that they have no intention or desire to interfere with the existing administration of the island, further, that they are prepared at once to negotiate with the Icelandic Government an agreement on trade matters which, it is anticipated, will bring material advantages to the inhabitants."

The only defense force at the disposal of the authorities of Iceland, sister kingdom of Denmark, consists of about seventy police.

Before the war Germany made a practice of sending frequent expeditions to Iceland, nominally for scientific purposes and in connection with projected air routes.

When the war broke out there was in Iceland a considerably larger number of Germans than was justified, the British said, for purely commercial considerations.

Since the war began this number has been augmented by the crews of several shipwrecked German vessels.

OVER 100 GERMAN PLANES SHOT DOWN NETHERLANDS HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCES

Progress In Wiping Out Nazi Invaders Claimed. Defenders Reinforced By Shiploads Of British And French Troops

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Amsterdam, Saturday, May 11—Fighting to arrest Adolf Hitler's lightning, the stalwart Dutch early today announced their forces were standing on their defenses near the eastern frontier, making progress in wiping out swarms of Nazi "men from Mars" who parachuted to strategic positions in the interior, and receiving rapid reinforcement from shiploads of British and French troops.

A Netherlands communique said more than one hundred German planes had been shot down in the first day of the Blitzkrieg, and that the Dutch had retaken all but one of the airports which the Germans seized yesterday in their pre-dawn offensive by parachute and air transport. Fourteen Nazi planes were captured when these airports were retaken.

Nazis Fighting With Backs To Wall

The one airport still in German hands was Waalhaven at Rotterdam, and there the Nazi parachutists were reported fighting with their backs to the wall.

The German troops at Rotterdam were reinforced, however, and the Dutch radio warned in broadcasts every five minutes that "increasing numbers" of parachute troops were landing under cover of night in southern Holland near the Belgian frontier.

British Mop Up German Planes

The British Air Ministry reported numerous German planes destroyed by bombing attacks when the British swooped upon newly German-occupied airports so quickly "that the enemy had no time in which to establish an anti-aircraft system." Fifty troop carriers were reported attacked at Rotterdam airport.

Soldiers in the battle dress of the British army crossed the North Sea by transport, landing at several points on the west coast.

Two British destroyers and one French vessel arrived this afternoon at Flushing and proceeded up the ship canal to Middleburg.

Motorized French Troops Arrive

Motorized French troops also reached Middleburg from the sea early tonight. German planes raided the port several times, dropping incendiary and explosive bombs in the vicinity of the docks. Several fires were started.

Four hundred British Royal Engineers were under a severe air attack, but the landing was made without a hitch.

Tonight one British detachment marched through war-darkened Amsterdam, on its way east, where the Dutch, marshaling both guns and the floodwaters they used first during the Spanish siege of Leyden in the sixteenth century, were fighting bravely and with some success.

Fighting In Rotterdam Streets

Some of the Germans, dropped by parachute, already were in western Holland, fighting in the streets of Rotterdam. But their position there was not a happy one.

The British moved swiftly. Not until this morning had Holland asked for Allied help; indeed, she openly refused to accept any advance promises of aid from anyone.

Yet, even last autumn, persons in the know in Amsterdam had it that 25,000 British troops were held on the British east coast ready to move at a moment's notice across the North Sea and into Holland to defend her from invasion. That invasion came at dawn Friday, after repeated and well-founded alarms.

Strengthening Positions

Tonight the fighting in Rotterdam, the Netherlands' opulent seaport, grew in intensity as the Germans flew in reinforcements to their hard-pressed shock units.

The Dutch also rushed to strengthen their forces, battling to wipe out this strong but small Nazi force, confined to the left (south) side of the River Nieuwe Maas.

The Germans were driven out of their control of the big bridge across the river connecting the two parts of the city. But they continued to occupy the Maas Hotel, their headquarters, after extinguishing a fire set by Dutch incendiary shells.

The Nazis tonight bombed The Hague, governmental seat of the invaded nation, one explosive falling close to United States Minister George A. Gordon. There were numerous air alarms all evening at half-hourly intervals.

The Germans succeeded in landing troops at two small landing fields near The Hague, and gained control of them. They were at Okkenburg and Ypenburg. But the Germans were small units and immediately surrounded.

Attack Declared A Failure

Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, the Dutch commander-in-chief, in the name of Queen Wilhelmina, thanked the troops tonight and declared: "The surprise attack of the enemy can be considered a failure."

"In all parts of the country our troops, as far as their orders directed, resisted grimly in the face of the enemy where necessary, undaunted and successful, demolishing the execution of his purposes.

"The firm attitude of our troops is reflected in the minds of the people who are determinedly calm."

Queen's Men Fight Stubbornly

From the narrow Eems channel on the northeast to the tip of Limburg and west across the country to the great seaport of Rotterdam, invaded by seaplanes and parachute platoons, the green-uniformed armies of the Queen contested, inch by inch, the country their forebears took out of the sea.

Long proclaimed a marvel of strict neutrality, steadfastly refusing alliances and prior promises of help, the Netherlands was assaulted in the hours after midnight along with her southern neighbors, Belgium and the tiny grand duchy of Luxembourg.

Then, and only then, did she ask for Allied aid. While a British-French army crossed the Belgian border from France to fight for the Low Countries, the Dutch Government sent Ministers to London to request and receive pledges of direct British-French aid.

Holland's Hopeful Picture

Tonight, while British and French planes droned high above Dutch canals to signalize assistance, Holland's high command drew this hopeful picture of the defense of the nation by an army of 400,000 men:

On the east: Four armored trains destroyed (one "blown to pieces" on the railroad bridge near border Venlo); first-line armies holding their ground on the Maas and the Ijssel rivers; coastal defenders at Delfzijil, in extreme northeast Holland across the Eems from the German naval base of Emden, holding out against strong attack.

The interior: German troops, landed by seaplane and parachute, attacked from all sides by Dutch defenders.

The air: Seventy German planes shot down.

Rotterdam Invasion Dramatic

There was every evidence that even the interior footholds gained by the invaders, behind the main flood water and land defenses of the central Netherlands, were won at tremendous costs.

The most dramatic invasion and the most spectacular fighting of all was in the heart of Rotterdam.

There, where the terrifying roar of hundreds of planes sent virtually all the population of 600,000 into the streets at 4 o'clock in the morning, the Germans managed to land great troop transport planes in the middle of the Nieuwe Maas river, which cuts through the city, and put troops ashore in rubber boats. Other troops parachuted down on the Waalhaven Airport to the south.

Fierce Fighting In Streets

But tonight, fierce fighting proceeded in the streets of Rotterdam and the invaders, pounded with incendiary shells and counter-attacked by waves of Dutch marines, were in a precarious position.

DUTCH RETAKE AIRPORTS

AMSTERDAM, May 10 (A. P.).—The Commander-in-Chief of the Netherlands armed forces tonight declared Germany's surprise attack on Holland a failure.

(The Netherlands consulate here late today reported that heavy Nazi bombardments took place all over the Netherlands throughout the day, and, although parachute troopers were dropped from German planes at many points, all were reported captured or killed. This information was received from the Netherlands legation in Washington. No fifth column activity was reported in Holland, and, so far as known, no Holland cities were taken by the enemy.)

The commander-in-chief, Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, gave his appraisal in an order of the day to his troops. The order follows: "Her Majesty the Queen ordered me to relate her high gratification on the way the Netherlands troops resisted the violator of our neutrality. By this resistance the surprise attack of the enemy can be considered a failure."

to push a few miles inland to The Hague. Dutch land and sea forces were said to have repelled this attack.

One Dutch destroyed, the Jan Van punished them hard, setting fire to their hotel headquarters with incendiary shells and threatening to destroy the German forces holding the great bridge across the river.

Nazis Completely Encircled

These troops were completely encircled and forty had been captured up to this evening.

Flames lighted the German-occupied sector with a red glow as the old Maas Hotel, from which they were operating, was fired by the Dutch cannon and spread, menacing other structures.

Other Germans still held Waalhaven Airdrome, but it was in ruins from their own bombs. The hangars and runways were destroyed before the parachute troops were landed.

Routed From Maas Station

Maas station, on the right bank of the river above the bridge, was captured early in the day by Germans who shot down its few policemen defenders, but it appeared the Germans had been driven out.

A transport plane which alighted in the river was wrecked in a collision with a boat.

Troops trying to advance along the left bank from the airport were checked, too, and the Dutch, clinging tenaciously to the right bank, opened drawbridges to prevent crossings.

Barricades were thrown up in the streets as the Germans attacked from the shelter of abandoned tramcars.

Many Dutchmen Killed

Several hundred Dutchmen were killed before the German parachute troops overwhelmed the Waalhaven Airport defenders.

Meanwhile, at Schiphol Airdrome, at the south edge of Amsterdam, Holland's capital and largest city of some 800,000, fifteen persons were injured in heavy bombings which began at dawn and lasted all day.

The city, with a ringside seat for this action, was not attacked.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter planes kept parachute troops or transports from landing at Schiphol, but houses around the airport were wrecked by bombs.

Scores of planes could be seen from the streets of Amsterdam and explosions and gunfire were heard every few minutes. Schiphol is but five miles to the south.

At The Hague, seat of the Royal Court, from which Queen Wilhelmina issued a "flaming protest" against the invaders and called on her army to fight, German leaflets showered down this afternoon, asserting the city was surrounded and that resistance was "insane."

There was nothing to indicate this was true.

Fire And Water Defense Weapons

The Netherlands fought back with both fire and water.

Sluices in the main water line running south from the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer) were opened wide to complete the shallow flood-water defenses that are intended to save western Holland and its rich cities from an invading army coming by land from Germany.

Farther east, where strategic points in the first defense line above and below the Rhine were flooded last fall, the Dutch troops blew up bridges across the Maas and the Ijssel rivers.

The exact position of the German troops on the west was in question, but it was assumed they were somewhere in the vicinity of Arnhem, in east-central Netherlands, and southward in Limburg province.

[Associated Press Editor's Note:—The Germans claimed they had cut clear across south Limburg province, which hangs down like a watch fob and shields Belgium from Germany, and had seized Maastricht and the vital Albert Canal bridgeheads on the Belgian border there. The Albert Canal is Belgium's chief defense against a German invasion by way of Holland.]

Bitter resistance was being offered by the Dutch border troops on both the Maas and the Ijssel, the high command insisted.

On the home front the Netherlands was deep in strict wartime conditions. Blackouts were enforced tonight in all large cities; amusement places were closed; telephone service in Amsterdam and elsewhere was restricted to vital business; all Germans were confined to their homes; Dutch Nazi and Communist papers were suppressed.

For air-raid protection, cities like Amsterdam and The Hague have strongly reinforced air-raid shelters, built above the ground because of the watery nature of the soil.

Courage And Calmness Urged

Posters carried an appeal from Premier Derek Jan de Greer for courage and calmness. Civilians were warned to stay at home if the enemy approaches, to refrain from the use of arms, "as this might cause damage or provoke counter-measures."

Air-defense units were told to regard the French, British and Belgian planes over the country as "those of our Allies."

Prisoners Used As Shields

On the other hand, the Dutch charged officially that some of the German parachutists were dressed in Netherlands uniforms and that, in some cases, Dutch prisoners were used as shields for the attacking Germans.

Some of the disguised parachutists were declared wiped out.

Remembering Norway and Poland, the general headquarters also told the army and people that "the Government never will negotiate with the German enemy" and warned against false radio reports and pamphlets intended to stop Dutch resistance.

Queen's "Flaming Protest"

Peace-loving Queen Wilhelmina told her people in an early morning proclamation that Germany had flouted her "solemn promise" to respect Dutch neutrality.

"I make, herewith, a flaming protest against this unexampled violation of good faith," she said.

"I and my Government will do our duty; do yours everywhere and in all circumstances . . ."

The Dutch Foreign Minister, Eelco N. van Kleffens, and Charles J. I. M. Welter, Minister for Colonies, left thereafter by plane for London to ask for Allied help.

German Ultimatum Rejected

Earlier, at 6 A. M., the German Minister, Count Zech von Burkersroda, had called upon van Kleffens with a note announcing "the coming of an enormous German army," and guaranteeing Dutch home and empire possessions and the Orange dynasty if resistance were dropped. Otherwise, the note threatened "complete annihilation of nations and government."

That was at least three hours after the first thunder of invasion, and the note was all but thrown in the Minister's face.

Said van Kleffens formally:

"On account of this unexampled assault, undertaken without warning from the side of Germany upon the Netherlands, the Dutch Government considers herself to be at war with the German Reich."

Nazis Repulsed in Rotterdam.

ROTTERDAM, May 10 (A. P.).—Germany's plane and parachute troops, attempting to fight their way through Rotterdam, were driven back into a dangerous position late today by the attacks of reinforced Dutch troops and the pounding of Dutch artillery.

Strong detachments of Netherlands marines made repeated rushes into the enemy positions on the River Nieuwe Maas and the fighting was fierce.

Dutch incendiary shells set fire to the large Maas Hotel from which the Germans were operating on the left bank of the stream, which divides Rotterdam.

The fire spread rapidly, threatening the thin German lines.

One German transport plane, alighting on the river, was damaged badly when it hit a boat.

Meanwhile at Amsterdam the Netherlands announced officially today that her defense forces had shot down at least seventy German planes, had blown up a German armored train at Venlo and was offering strong resistance along rivers just inside the eastern frontier.

The armored train, described as one of four "successfully attacked," was reported blown up while it was attempting to cross the Maas River bridge at Venlo, on the border between the province of Limburg and Germany.

The announcement said that Dutch troops had offered strong resistance to the invaders on the Ijssel and Maas rivers, a short distance within the Netherlands, and maintained positions at Delfzijl.

Delfzijl, on the northeast coast of Groningen province, is across the Eems from Emden, German naval base.

The Netherlands announcement was contained in a communique by Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander-in-chief of its armed forces.

Text of Netherlands Communique.

The communique read:

"Netherlands border troops offered bitter resistance to the Germans on the Ijssel and Maas rivers.

"Notwithstanding strong German attacks, our troops maintain themselves in Delfzijl.

"Four German armored trains have been disposed of; one was blown to pieces on the railroad bridge near Venlo.

30.24-2163

"At least seventy German planes have been shot down on air fields or when they tried to make landings in the interior of the country.

"German troops landed by parachute in the interior tried to maintain themselves, but they are attacked from all sides by our troops.

"From various places it is reported that Netherlands prisoners have been used by Germans as a shield."

Nazis Span Holland's Defenses.

A German army of the air spanned the strong land and water-line defenses of the Netherlands today and, landing by parachute and in huge seaplane transports at the western side of the nation, fought its way into part of this seaport city.

MAY 9 1940

The troops occupied Rotterdam's Waalhaven Airport, after first having razed it with a tremendous aerial bombardment; alighted on the Nieuwe Maas River in the center of Rotterdam, occupied a big bridge across the river and captured the Maas railway station in the city.

Heavy fighting was going on in Rotterdam itself, with the Dutch troops clinging tenaciously to the right bank of the Nieuwe Maas, which bisects the city.

On the other side of Holland, across the main water line now fed by wide open dikes, first line defenders were resisting a German land army which entered the country along the Rhine and swarmed ahead some fifteen miles to the vicinity of the Ijssel River, near Arnhem.

Queen Wilhelmina Calls on Army.

Doughty Queen Wilhelmina uttered a "flaming protest" against Germany, urged her nation to its duty and sought strong assistance from the British-French Allies.

They said that they would help, and quickly. British and French planes were over the country long before noon, seeking the enemy. Allied troops and naval forces were confidently expected.

[Allied troops at this time already have entered Belgium to battle the Germans.]

It all was part of a vast, combined German offensive against Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, combined with aerial assaults against both France and Great Britain.

The amazing methods of aerial warfare enabled the Germans to circumvent the entire Netherlands water and land defense system and move into this key city, scarcely more than 100 miles from the British coast and home of 600,000 people.

Rotterdam was taken completely by surprise at 4 A. M. (11:40 P. M., New York time), by the roar of hundreds of German planes over the city.

Virtually the entire population streamed into the streets in nightclothes.

The Waalhaven airport, south of the city, was converted into a series of craters by air bombs and the hangars were knocked to the ground.

Although anti-aircraft batteries kept up a constant barrage, the Germans succeeded in landing their men by parachute and overwhelming the Dutch defenders.

Great German seaplanes alighted on the Nieuwe Maas, putting troops ashore in rubber boats, but the Germans were unable, for the time being, to penetrate the right bank of the river. German troops trying to advance along the left bank also were kept from crossing the stream by stubborn Dutch resistance.

The Dutch were entirely in control of the right bank early this afternoon. All drawbridges had been opened to prevent crossings.

Rotterdam Streets Are Barricaded.

Barricades were thrown up in the streets. The Germans were using abandoned street cars for shelters.

The Germans who landed in the river had both light and heavy machine guns. They easily disarmed the few Dutch soldiers guarding the big bridge and took the railway station on the left bank with little trouble.

A police inspector who was near the station drew a revolver and was shot down immediately. Other policemen were killed or wounded in trying to resist.

In Amsterdam, only an hour and a half by motor northeast of Rotterdam, the Stock Exchange was closed and Dutch Nazi and communist newspapers were shut down by Government order.

Schiphol airport, about five miles south of Amsterdam, was bombed heavily at dawn, but Amsterdam, capital and largest city of the Netherlands, with a population of nearly 800,000 was not attacked.

Fifteen Persons Wounded.

Fifteen persons were wounded, five seriously, at Schiphol and houses about the airport were wrecked. Anti-aircraft fire and fighter planes met the attackers, and shell bursts were clearly visible from buildings in Amsterdam.

Many German planes flew over Amsterdam, but there were no bombs to drive the population to the shelters, all built above, rather than below, the water-soaked ground.

Defense guns ringing the city were in action from 3:30 A. M. to after 7 A. M., but German planes were over the country as early as 2 A. M.

Holland hurled its entire strength against the encroaching German spearheads and battled fiercely with the "suicide squads" of German machine-gunners landed by parachute in the interior.

The Netherlands air force also took to the skies, joining patrols of British, French and Belgian planes, and it was reported that at least six German planes were shot down in the first hour of warfare.

Defenses Declared Ready.

Another communique read:

"Air attacks have been tried on some airports. The army and the defenses are ready. Inundations are going on as scheduled. As far as is known at least six German planes have been shot down."

Observers northeast of The Hague reported at 5:55 A. M. that twenty-two dive bombers were seen headed toward the seat of the Government where Queen Wilhelmina and the remainder of the royal family live.

A still later announcement by the general headquarters declared that the Netherlands Government would never negotiate with the enemy and elaborated on the warning against any "false" German reports.

"Distrust all radio news and pamphlets telling you about stopping our resistance, about negotiations with the aggressor or about assistance from the German side against an attack by the Allies," this communique said.

"No matter how reliable and official these may sound they can only come from the enemy.

"Never will the commander-in-chief and the Government negotiate with the enemy."

Ministers Go to London.

Close upon the heels of Allied offers of aid against the Germans Foreign Minister Eelco N. Van Kleffens and Colonial Minister Charles J. I. M. Welter left for London to make contact with the British and French leaders, it was announced by radio.

The semi-official news service said it had learned advance approaches to the Allies had been made by the regular envoys to London and Paris.

A broadcast to air defense units said British, French and Belgian planes which were flying over the Netherlands were to be regarded as "our allies."

This was the first indication that the British and French had sent their aircraft to oppose the Germans. The announcement was made about 7:45 A. M. Up to that time the Dutch had had no assistance against German planes.

A big force of parachutists also landed in the Hooge Zwaluwe area at the Rhine estuary. This area contains the chief bridge connecting southern and northern Holland at that point.

In the strategic Eindhoven area parachutists descended in great numbers, after the Welschap airdrome was bombed by six planes.

The invasion of Germany's legions came during the night while most of the Netherlands slept.

The first German troops struck at the Netherlands border at 3 a. m. (10:40 p. m. Thursday, N. Y. time) and at 9 a. m. today were reported to have advanced as far as Ysel.

For the parachute landing of troops some of the invaders, according to the Dutch, wore Netherlands uniforms. (Germany denied this charge immediately—it would be a violation of the conventions of war).

"Surrounded, Destroyed"

The Germans said to have worn their enemy's uniform were reported to have been surrounded and destroyed.

Observers northeast of the Hague reported at 5:55 a. m. that 22 dive bombers were seen headed toward the seat of the government, where Queen Wilhelmina and the royal family live.

The High Command broadcast a warning to the people to disbelieve any German announcements of armistice.

The government also put into force plans for civil defense. A blackout was ordered starting tonight. Voluntary civil militia in Amsterdam was mobilized and efforts were made to frustrate any fifth column activities within the nation.

All Germans in the Netherlands were ordered to remain in their houses.

"Persons arousing suspicion that they infringe this order expose themselves to serious danger for their lives," said a Dutch broadcast.

Nazi Attackers At Rotterdam Hard Pressed

Reinforcements Rushed as Dutch Retake Bridges, Harass Foe Along River

ROTTERDAM, May 10 (AP).—Germans fighting in the center of this Dutch seaport landed reinforcements for their hard-pressed parachute and air shock troops late tonight and fighting in the streets became intensified.

The Dutch also moved additional forces to Rotterdam in an effort to annihilate the Nazis holding the left (south) bank of the River Nieuwe Maas. They succeeded in dislodging the Germans from their control of the big bridge over the river. The Dutch fighters thus held all bridges. The fighting then centered on the left bank of the river.

The Germans succeeded in extinguishing the fire set by incendiary shells in the Maas Hotel, their Rotterdam headquarters, and continued to hold that building.

Other Germans still held Waalhaven airdrome, but it was in ruins from their own bombs. The hangars and runways were completely destroyed before the parachute troops were landed.

Maas station, on the right bank of the river above the bridge, was captured early in the day by Germans, who shot down its few policemen defenders, but it appeared the Germans had been driven out.

A transport plane which alighted in the river was wrecked in a collision with a boat.

Troops trying to advance along the left bank from the airport were checked, too, and the Dutch, clinging tenaciously to the right bank, opened drawbridges to prevent crossings.

Barricades were thrown up in the streets as the Germans attacked from the shelter of abandoned tramcars. Several hundred Dutch were killed before the German parachute troops overwhelmed the Waalhaven airport defenders.

Rotterdam, scarcely more than 100 miles from the British coast and the home of 600,000 people, was taken completely by surprise at 3 a. m. by the roar of hundreds of German planes over the city. Virtually the entire population streamed into the streets in nightclothes.

the Netherland's border at 3 A. M. (10:40 P. M., Thursday, New York standard time) and at 9 A. M. today were reported to have advanced as far as Ijsel.

For the parachute landing of troops some of the invaders, according to the Dutch, wore Netherlands uniforms.

Germans said to have worn their enemy's uniform were reported to have been surrounded and destroyed.

Warned Against German Radio.

HILVERSUM, The Netherlands (By Radio to London), May 10 (A. P.).—The people of the Netherlands were advised by radio today that their country considers herself at war with Germany.

Reports gave incomplete descriptions of the fighting in invaded Netherlands and Belgium.

An air battle was fought over Amsterdam at 4:20 A. M.(midnight Thursday, New York standard time) fighter planes dived on bombers believed to be German and columns of smoke rose from Schiphol airdrome near Amsterdam.

Throughout all the Netherlands, intense air activity was reported, with squadrons of foreign planes circling Denhelder naval base. Six German planes were reported over Ijmuiden. Parachutists landed at Maarden, Sliedrecht and near Delft, only thirteen miles from The Hague. A hundred parachutists landed at Dodrecht.

Hundreds of Parachutists Land.

Six German planes bombed the airdrome at Welschap near Eindhoven. Three German planes attempted to land at Soubrug in Zeeland and were fired on by defenders.

Hundreds of parachutists landed at Hooge and Zwaluwe, where a bridge forms the principal link between north and south Holland. Others landed on Rozenburg Island near Rotterdam.

Eyewitnesses said Heinkel bombers inflicted heavy damage on the Schiphol Airdrome.

The Hilversum radio announcer states that a plane also flew over the Frisian Island. It also broadcast a warning to the Dutch people that German parachute troops had descended, some in German and some in Dutch uniforms. The people were asked to watch for them.

The announcer said two big formations of planes were reported approaching the Netherlands.

Fifteen Heinkel bombers and twenty-three other bombers have crossed over into the Netherlands, the announcer added.

The first German troops struck at

At various places German planes dropped pamphlets which presented the German case for the invasion and urged the Dutch to lay down their arms.

The Government immediately put into force plans for civil defense. A blackout was ordered starting tonight. Voluntary civil militia in Amsterdam was mobilized and efforts were made to frustrate any "Fifth Column" activities within the nation.

The Dutch had before them the recent lesson of Germany's invasion of Norway in which confusion of orders, sabotage and treachery within Norway aided the German advance.

All Germans in the Netherlands were ordered to remain in their houses.

"Persons arousing suspicion that they infringe this order expose themselves to serious danger for their lives," said a Dutch broadcast.

The military advised newspaper correspondents that telegrams for dispatch abroad would be handled as usual, but subject to severe censorship of anything considered "alarmist or tendencious." No telephone calls to foreign countries were permitted.

Bridges Are Destroyed.

A Dutch High Command communique said:

"German troops passed through the Dutch border during the night and our border troops fulfilled their tasks.

"They succeeded in carrying out their trust. Bridges over the Maas and Waal have been demolished by them.

"East of Arnhem, fifteen miles from the German-Dutch border, Germans have advanced to Ijsel.

"In the interior enemy planes tried to land and in some places dropped parachutes and planes landed.

"These landings were partly unsuccessful and parachutists who dressed in Netherlands uniforms have been surrounded and destroyed.

"Over various places Germans dropped pamphlets which are untrue and threats against the Dutch.

"The High Command urges the population not to believe such utterances, which are only intended to create disorders.

"The Dutch are executing measures imposed by the acts and words of the Queen for the defense of the Netherlands soil."

British Troops Arrive

AMSTERDAM, May 10 (AP).—British troops came tonight to the defense of Holland, fighting tenaciously and for the first time in 145 years against a foreign invader.

Two British destroyers and one French vessel arrived this afternoon at Flushing and proceeded up the ship canal to Middleburg. Motorized French troops also reached Middleburg from the sea early tonight. German planes raided the port several times, dropping incendiary and explosive bombs in the vicinity of the docks. Several fires were started.

Four hundred British Royal Engineers were under a severe air attack, but the landing was made without a hitch.

The British troops aiding Holland crossed the North Sea by transport, landing at several points on the west Dutch coast while the Dutch Army struggle with a German blitzkrieg which crisscrossed the kingdom's defenses by land, air and water.

Tonight one British detachment marched through war-darkened Amsterdam on its way to the east, where the Dutch, marshaling both guns and the flood waters they used first during the Spanish siege of Leyden, in the sixteenth century, were fighting bravely and with some success.

Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, the Dutch commander in chief, in the name of Queen Wilhelmina thanked the troops tonight and declared: "The surprise attack of the enemy can be considered a failure." He said "at least seventy" German planes had been destroyed.

[In Brussels the Belgian Defense Minister, Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis, told the House of Deputies that he was "convinced the Germans failed to obtain their first objectives and failed to gain the initial successes they expected." King Leopold III was at the front as active commander of the Belgian Army.]

The Dutch also rushed to strengthen their forces battling to destroy this small but strong Nazi force, confined to the left (south) side of the River Nieuwe Maas. The Germans had lost control of the great bridge across the river connecting the two parts of the city, but they continued to occupy the Maas Hotel, their headquarters, after extinguishing a fire set by Dutch incendiary shells.

The Nazis bombed The Hague tonight, governmental seat of the invaded nation, one explosive falling close to American Minister George A. Gordon. There were numerous air alarms all evening at half-hourly intervals. German leaflets were showered down on The Hague this afternoon, asserting that the city was surrounded and that resistance was "insane." There was nothing to indicate that was true.

One German transport plane carrying nineteen soldiers plunged through the roof of a house in The Hague when the Dutch shot it down. The falling soldiers all wore Dutch uniforms. The Germans succeeded in landing troops at two small landing fields near The Hague, and gained control of them. They were at Okkenburg and Ypenburg. But the Nazi units were small and were immediately surrounded.

Meanwhile, at Schiphol airdrome, at the south edge of Amsterdam, Holland's largest city, with a population of 800,000, fifteen persons were injured in heavy bombings which began at dawn and lasted all day. The city, with a ringside seat for this action, was not attacked.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter planes kept parachute troops or transports from landing at Schiphol, but houses around the airport were wrecked by bombs. Scores of planes could be seen from the streets of Amsterdam, and explosions and gunfire were heard every few minutes. Schiphol is but five miles to the south.

Many small towns in south Holland were bombed. A number of houses were destroyed at Tilburg and several civilians killed or wounded; in the village of Etta, near Breda, every window was broken and the roof was torn off the church.

From the narrow Ems Channel on the northeast to the tip of Limburg and west across the country to the great airport of Rotterdam, invaded by seaplanes and parachute platoons, the green-uniformed armies of the Queen defended, inch by inch, the country their forebears took out of the sea.

High Command Is Hopeful

Tonight, while British and French planes droned high above Dutch canals to signalize assistance, Holland's high command drew this hopeful picture of the defense of the nation by an army of 400,000 men:

On the east: Four armored trains destroyed (one "blown to pieces" on the railroad bridge near the border at Venlo); first-line armies holding their ground on the Maas and the Ijssel Rivers; coastal defenders at Delfzijl, in extreme northeast Holland, across the Ems from the German naval base of Emden, holding out against strong attack.

The interior: German troops, landed by seaplane and parachute, attacked from all sides by Dutch defenders.

The air: Seventy German planes shot down.

There was every evidence that even the interior footholds gained by the invaders, behind the main flood water and land defenses of the central Netherlands, were won at a tremendous cost.

Holland fought back with both fire and water. Sluices in the main water line running south from the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer) were opened wide to complete the shallow flood water defenses that are intended to save western Holland and its rich cities from an invading army coming by land from Germany.

Further east, where strategic points in the first defense line above and below the Rhine were flooded last fall, the Dutch troops blew up bridges across the Maas and the Ijssel Rivers.

The exact position of the German troops on the east was in question, but it was assumed they were somewhere in the vicinity of Arnhem, in east-central Netherlands, and southward in Limburg province.

Report Cutting Limburg

[The Germans asserted they had cut clear across South Limburg province, which hangs down like a watch fob and shields Belgium from Germany, and had seized Maastricht and the vital Albert Canal bridgeheads on the Belgian border there. The Albert Canal is Belgium's chief defense against a German invasion by way of Holland.]

Bitter resistance was being offered by the Dutch border troops on both the Maas and the Ijssel, the high command insisted.

On the home front Holland was deep in strict war-time conditions. Blackouts were enforced tonight in all large cities; amusement places were closed; telephone service in Amsterdam and elsewhere was restricted to vital business; all Germans were confined to their homes; Dutch Nazi and Communist papers were suppressed.

For air-raid protection, cities like Amsterdam and The Hague have strongly reinforced air-raid shelters, built above the ground because of the watery nature of the soil.

Posters carried an appeal from Premier Derek Jan De Geer for courage and calmness. Civilians were warned to stay at home if the enemy approached, to refrain from the use of arms, "as this might cause damage or provoke counter-measures."

Air defense units were told to regard the French, British and Belgian planes over the country as "those of our allies."

Remembering Norway and Poland, the general headquarters also told the army and people that "the government never will negotiate with the German enemy," and warned against false radio reports and pamphlets intended to stop Dutch resistance.

The Dutch communique of Gen. Winkelman follows:

"Netherlands border troops offered bitter resistance to the Germans on the Ijssel and Maas Rivers.

"Notwithstanding strong German attacks, our troops maintained themselves in Delfzijl.

"Four German armored trains have been disposed of; one was blown to pieces on the railroad bridge near Venlo.

"At least seventy Germany planes have been shot down on air fields or when they tried to make landings in the interior of the country.

"German troops landed by parachute in the interior tried to maintain themselves, but they are attacked from all sides by our troops.

"From various places it is reported that Netherlands prisoners have been used by Germans as a shield."

Text Of Dutch Communique

Amsterdam, Saturday, May 11 (AP)—The text of the Dutch commander-in-chief's communique early today follows:

"A German flying officer who has been taken prisoner made the statement that the German high command until this morning did not dare inform their own officers about the intended violation of Dutch neutrality which Holland had maintained strictly on all sides.

"In contradiction to the communique of the German high command in which it is denied that seventy German airplanes have been shot down by us, I state that this number has increased to more than 100.

"Moreover, on one of the airfields that was captured by Dutch troops fourteen undamaged enemy planes fell into Dutch hands.

"All airfields that had been occupied by the Germans are now in our hands except one.

"A shameless act was committed by German troops when a German officer named Hohendorf, who was in command, threatened to kill captured Dutch troops who had been in charge of an airfield if the Dutch should fire against the airfield."

Note Exchange Brought War Formally to Dutch

Nazi Demand for Submission Rejected at The Hague

THE HAGUE, May 10 (AP).—A diplomatic duel was fought behind the scenes in this Dutch capital at dawn today—at least three hours after Germany had started her invasion.

At 6 a.m. the German Minister, Dr. Julius Count von Zech Sonst von Bleversroda called on Dutch Foreign Minister Eelco N. Vankleffens and presented the following note:

"We announce the coming of an enormous German Army. Every resistance is absolutely useless.

"Germany guarantees the present status of possessions (of the Netherlands) in Europe as well as overseas, as well as the dynasty, if every resistance is dropped. If not, then there is danger of complete annihilation of the country and of the state's government.

"Therefore, we recommend you urgently to address the summons to the nation and the military forces and, furthermore, to enter into communication with German military commanders.

"The motives are: We have undeniable proofs of an immediately threatening invasion by France and England of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, which invasion had been prepared long ago with the privity (knowledge) of Holland and Belgium, with the aim to attack the Ruhrgebeit (Ruhr district).

To this Vankleffens answered:

"Her majesty's government denies the supposition that any hostile agreement has been brought about with any foreign power against Germany.

"On account of this unexampled assault, undertaken without warning of Germany's part against the Netherlands, the Dutch government considers itself to be at war with the German Reich."

Queen Wilhelmina's Protest Against German Invasion

ROTTERDAM, May 10 (A. P.).—Following is the text of the 'flaming protest' addressed by Queen Wilhelmina to the people of the Netherlands over the Hilversum Radio a few short hours after the Germans began their invasion of the Low Countries today:

"To my people:

"Despite the fact that our country all these months has maintained strict neutrality with the utmost conscientiousness, and whereas it had no other intention than to maintain this neutrality strictly and in all its consequences, German troops last night made without any warning a sudden attack upon our territory and that despite a solemn promise that the neutrality of our country would be respected so long as we maintained it ourselves.

"I am making herewith a flaming protest against this unexampled violation of good faith and of what is considered decent between civilized nations.

"I and my Government will do our duty now, too.

"Do yours everywhere and under all circumstances, every one in the place to which he is assigned, with utmost watchfulness and with inner calmness and devotion to which a pure conscience entitles us."

Germans Warn Dutch: 'Violence Means Death

Planes Over The Hague Drop Threat in Leaflets

THE HAGUE, May 10 (AP).—German leaflets dropped in The Hague by plane today said:

"Germany does not fight your country but England. The German Army, compelled to continue a struggle it has not wanted, had no other choice but to invade your country.

"The German Army guarantees the life and property of every peaceful citizen, but every act of violence committed by the population will be followed by capital punishment.

"Every Dutch citizen should go about his business. Then he is serving the interest of his own nation."

Dutch Forbidden To Buy More Food Than Needed

Government Also Limits Ordinary Bank Withdrawals To 3% Of Monthly Deposits

Amsterdam, May 10 (AP)—Netherlanders, perhaps the world's greatest gourmets, were forbidden tonight to buy more food than they need for their families for one day.

The order was issued by the Economic Ministry.

The Government also limited ordinary bank withdrawals to three per cent. of total deposits each month, or a maximum of 50 gulden (normally about $26.50) weekly.

German Seized in Holland As Economic Spy

AMSTERDAM, May 9 (A. P.).—A German business man and his chauffeur were arrested today at Haarlem on suspicion of economic espionage.

The man formerly was president of the German-Dutch Chamber of Commerce.

Spying in Reich Is Blamed Upon Low Countries

Germans Declare Invaded States Were Helping to Carry Out Plot of Allies

BERLIN, May 10 (AP).—The Nazi high command and Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick declared today that startling espionage activities had been uncovered in the Reich. The announcement coincided with Germany's swoop into Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg.

The government made public purported documents which allegedly demonstrated that the Low Countries were already associates at arms and in spirit with the Allies. Nazi officials argued that it was therefore necessary that Germany strike to protect the vital southwestern part of the Reich where was concentrated the bulk of her steel and coal industries.

Official quarters said these documents had been attached as annexes to notes handed to the governments of Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxemburg.

Frick charged the Netherlands had maintained the closest collaboration with Great Britain in espionage activities against Germany since 1914. He linked with this the name of the late Prince Consort Heinrich of the Netherlands (husband of Queen Wilhelmina) who died in July, 1934, saying English money had gone to Prince Heinrich to assure co-operation.

Promises Proof at Trial

Frick asserted these facts and more would be brought out in the early trial of Capt. S. Richard Henry Stevens and Sigismund Payne Best, alleged British agents, who were seized by Gestapo agents on the Dutch side of the Netherlands-German border last Nov. 9 in connection with the Munich beer cellar explosion on Nov. 8, which Adolf Hitler escaped by only eleven minutes.

Gen. Heinrich Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, added to the weight of the purported documentary reason for the German invasion of the Low Countries by written charges that ever since the last World War, Belgium and the Netherlands had planned to join with Britain and France against the Reich.

One of Keitel's reports said the entire line of Dutch and Belgian fortifications faced toward Germany.

Frick announced the trial of Best and Stevens, who were seized at Venloo, on German soil, within a few feet of the Netherlands border, would "unravel the dark plans of obscure homosexual and anti-social elements" to bring about a revolution in Germany, overthrow Fuehrer Hitler and make peace with Britain.

Frick's report said the co-operation of these British officers with Dutch officials was a continuation of collaboration during the last European war, which functioned with the active support of "Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Heinrich" through Rotterdam Police Commissioner van Tsant.

[After the seizure of Best and Stevens last November, authoritative British quarters said the officers were acting with the knowledge of the British government to determine the genuineness of a purported German peace offer.]

Frick's report said German agents posing as anti-Nazis had met with the British officers five times on Dutch soil between Oct. 21 and Nov. 9. It alleged that each time, Dutch military officials had provided guards and otherwise acted to "assure a hitchless procedure."

Dutch Version Ignored

Frick's report said that the negotiations between the British officers and the supposed "pro-Allied" German agents were based upon British proposals for German abandonment of her economic policy and her return to the gold standard.

It does not refer to Netherlands authorities' contentions that the British officers were seized and a Dutch general staff officer, Lieut. Klop, was shot on the Dutch side of the border at Venloo, but reiterates the original German version that the British and Dutch officers were overwhelmed by German police after an exchange of shots and taken "ten meters within German soil."

The report said that copies of the "confessions and investigations" of the British and Dutch officers would be the basis of "public proceedings which will take place soon."

Berlin Rejects Protests

Todt Tells Construction Crews to Get Ready to Work

BERLIN, May 11 (Saturday) (AP).—Dr. Fritz Todt, in charge of fortification construction, appealed early today to workers on Germany's Westwall to "be ready to build new fortifications for German soldiers."

"The hour of the Westwall has arrived," he said, "it will be shown that you have not worked for nothing for the last two years."

U. S. CHARGE RUSHES BACK TO BERLIN

Kirk Takes Over Affairs of Two More Nations.

BERLIN, May 10 (A. P.).—Alexander C. Kirk, United States charge d'affaires, en route to the United States on leave, hurriedly returned to Berlin today to find himself handling the business of two more legations—Belgium and Luxemburg.

Those two nations asked the United States embassy to take over their affairs as soon as German troops crossed their borders before dawn.

A phone call caught Mr. Kirk before he reached the Brenner Pass. He left his train and flew back to Berlin.

United States embassy business already includes that of England, France, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The Netherlands asked Sweden to take over its affairs in Berlin. Belgian and Dutch diplomats were held here pending arrangements between their governments and Germany.

German Ambassador Visits Mussolini

BERLIN, May 10 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio announced tonight that Germany's Ambassador to Italy, Hans-Georg-Viktor von Mackensen, had visited Premier Mussolini today in Rome.

When the present conflict started the possibility was raised that the exiled monarch might be taken to Kadinen, East Prussia, where the Hohenzollerns have a castle, it was learned reliably.

But Wilhelm decided it would show scant gratitude to the nation which has given him a haven since 1918 if he were to abandon it.

It was indicated that the former emperor was staying serenely at his Doorn estate, but watching with greatest interest the progress of the German Army, which is following its' invasions of Norway, Denmark and Poland with a thrust into Belgium as well as the Netherlands and Luxemburg.

Refuge in Flood Area.

A central figure in the hectic days of August, 1914, when Germany was first violating the neutrality of Belgium, the ex-Kaiser appeared to be a forgotten man in the path of the storm today.

He is living on route the Germans would be expected to take in a drive toward Amsterdam. It is in the center of the floodable area where, presumably, the dikes have been opened in an effort to stem the invasion.

Although in his eighties, the former Kaiser has been reported to be active both physically and mentally. His closest friend in this country, Poultney Bigelow, revealed in February that the one-time ruler of Germany was following European events closely. At that time, he said, the Kaiser had written Hitler urging him to stop fighting the Allies and unite with them in going to the aid of Finland against Russia.

From other sources it was said that the ex-Kaiser, who had been distinctly sympathetic toward the efforts of the Nazis to rehabilitate Germany and shake off the Versailles yoke, had been greatly depressed over the alliance with Stalin. Communism, to him, has always represented the force that caused the collapse in Germany in 1918 and the loss of the war.

Last September, when Poland was invaded, he is said to have sent a "solemn warning" to Hitler that the move forecast disaster for his dream of German world domination. Nevertheless, it was said that he had had a big map of Europe set up on the walls at Doorn and was moving colored pins to represent the German advances just as he must have done in 1914.

Low Countries' Citizens In Germany Must Report

Ordered to Appear at Nearest Police Station in 24 Hours

BERLIN, May 10 (AP).—Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick ordered tonight all citizens of Belgium, the Netherlands and their colonies who might now be in Germany to report at the nearest police headquarters within twenty-four hours.

The order also affects any persons now without a state but formerly citizens of those countries. Police approval is necessary for them to leave their present stopping places.

Pledge To Respect Brussels

Berlin, Saturday, May 11—Taking cognizance of a Belgian declaration that Brussels was an open (undefended) city and that all measures would be taken to avoid sending troops through the capital, DNB, the German official news agency, said early today the Nazi air force would respect it as long as no troop movements occurred there.

Berlin Denies Violations.

BERLIN, May 10 (A. P.).—Apparently in response to foreign radio broadcasts, a German Government spokesman said today that nothing but military objectives had been bombed in the drive against Belgium and the Netherlands.

Foreign reports concerning bombings of Antwerp, Nancy and Lyon were mentioned in this respect.

The spokesman reiterated that Adolf Hitler had told his air force that nothing but military objectives should be attacked.

It was denied that German parachute troops used Dutch uniforms when they dropped behind the Netherlands lines. German parachute troops have their own distinctive uniform, the spokesman asserted.

Belgians Halt Nazis Close To Frontier

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels, May 10—Belgium met the German invasion today by full mobilization, and her king, Leopold III, assumed command of the nation's forces, as his father, Albert, did more than twenty-five years ago.

French and British liaison officers reached Brussels for contacts with the Belgian general staff six hours after Belgium had asked her old Allies of 1914 for aid against the new German invasion.

While the first wave of Nazi bombers took a toll of at least seven killed and eighty wounded throughout the country, the Foreign Ministry said the German land forces had been stopped no more than a few hundred yards over the Belgian frontier.

Foes Halted At "Demolition Line"

They were halted by Belgian troops entrenched behind the "demolition line," a first defense area of destroyed bridges and roads and other barriers.

Defense Minister Gen. Henri Denis told the Chamber of Deputies that, at noon, the Germans were halted everywhere on the Belgian defensive lines. He said he was "convinced the Germans failed to obtain their first objective and failed to gain the initial success they expected."

Premier Hubert Pierlot told the House that King Leopold had expected to make an address, but had taken his place as commander in chief with the army in the front lines.

Brussels Bombed, Children Killed

Brussels was bombed this morning and had three air-raid alarms in the early afternoon. Two children were killed and fifty persons were wounded in the morning raid. The Brussels airport also was bombed.

(Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, reported to London today that 400 persons were killed or wounded in the first German air raid against Brussels.)

After the first bombing of Brussels, German Ambassador von Bulow-Schwante delivered to Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak a note saying a "tremendous" German army was marching into Belgium and neighboring Holland and Luxembourg to forestall an Allied attack.

Belgium's Reply To Germany

The note asked the Belgians not to resist and promised to preserve their country.

Even before the Ambassador spoke, Spaak reported "the answer is negative," and handed him a note saying Belgium would defend herself against an invasion worse than that of 1914.

The text of Spaak's note:

"Germany for the second time has invaded neutral and loyal Belgium. The present invasion is even worse than that of 1914.

"No ultimatum was given. No official notification. No protests.

"Instead, a direct attack violating the neutrality of the country.

"This attitude deprived Germany of any justification. This violation will hurt the conscience of the entire world abroad.

"Belgium is resolved to defend herself by all means. She has the right with her and cannot be vanquished."

"Brussels has been attacked by air despite being an open city deprived of military," said the Foreign Minister, "and no troops will march across it."

One bomb hit across a square from the United States Embassy.

Twenty-nine German planes were reported over the province of Brabant and others over Limbourg, both adjoining the Netherlands border. Anti-aircraft fire could be heard here.

Belgians cheered the arrival of the first cars flying Allied flags.

German diplomats were confined to their Embassy, near which a bomb fell this morning, and all other Germans in the Capital—several thousand—were arrested.

Hunting Parachute Troops

The Government warned that German parachute troops already had been landed in northern Belgium and told the people to watch out for them and for saboteurs.

Soldiers on leave hastened to rejoin units which have been in the field since September.

German airmen raided Antwerp and Jemelle, an important railway center in the southeast, on the main line between Brussels and Luxembourg. Aerial fights were reported over Tournai, forty-five miles west of Brussels.

(The Belgian radio said the Chamber of Deputies had voted, 154 to 1, to give the Government full powers. There were no abstentions.)

Communications Cut Again

Censorship which was clamped down during the night was relaxed about 7 this morning, but all communications were ordered cut again at 9.30 A. M. The government office area was surrounded by guards.

As people in Brussels recovered from the first shock, flags blossomed in the streets, people strolled in the center of the town, and trolleys and automobiles ran as usual.

Insane Hospital Reported Bombed

A hospital for the insane at Mortsel was reported to have been set afire by bombs. (This report was denied immediately in Germany, where it was said Adolf Hitler had given explicit orders that hospitals marked with the Red Cross were not to be bombed.)

Martial law was proclaimed and the King drafted notes for all neutral countries as well as a protest to Berlin.

The invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg was signaled by waves of German bombers and parachute troops dropped in the dark hours before dawn.

The Brussels radio announced that German troops crossed the frontier of Belgium at four points. It said parachute troops dropped from German planes at Nivelles, less than twenty miles south of Brussels, and at St. Trond, forty miles east.

The Belgian Embassy in London said it was informed that thirty-seven German planes participated in the raid on Antwerp and that a military hospital was destroyed.

More than one hundred German planes roared over Brussels, and the city's airport was subjected to heavy bombing.

Violent explosions of anti-aircraft fire were heard over the city where the Cabinet had been sitting in extraordinary session since 1 A. M. Ambulances clanged continuously through the streets, apparently bearing wounded.

Bombs fell in numerous railway stations in the heart of the country. The station at Jemelle, in the southeast corner of Belgium, was reported in flames.

Public Told Of Call For Aid

By a broadcast proclamation, the Government told the Belgian people it had appealed to Britain and France for aid, and that King Leopold had instructed his diplomatic representative at Berlin to lodge a protest against the invasion.

The Netherlands and Luxembourg were reported to have sent similar appeals to the Allies.

The radio said that no diplomatic approach had been made by Germany to Belgium before the invasion.

In a communique, the Belgian Government urged the population to remain calm, ordered schools closed and the nation blacked out at night. Everyone was advised to take cover from air bombs.

The Cabinet remained in session after Premier Hubert Pierlot conferred with the King.

Belgian King Leads Fight on Invaders; Brussels Bombed

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, May 10.—Belgium mustered her fullest military strength today against a German blitzkreig which struck also in the neighboring Netherlands and Luxemburg as Nazi bombers and aerial transports ranged behind the battle lines and land troops hammered at the frontiers.

Two children were killed and 50+ persons wounded in an air raid on Brussels. The Brussels airport also was bombed.

Bombs fell on numerous railway stations in the heart of the country.

King Leopold III, taking active command of the armed forces as his father, King Albert, did in 1914, ordered complete mobilization against the invaders and appealed to the Allies for help.

Both Britain and France promised quick aid against the German blow, which came without warning in an attempt to clear a route into France and secure bases for attacking England.

Spaak Makes Appeal.

The Belgian Foreign Minister, Paul Henri Spaak, imploring for assistance "without delay," told the French and British Ambassadors that the Belgian government "has decided to resist with all its powers."

The King prepared to address a special session of the Chamber of Deputies.

Defense Minister Gen. Henri Denis told the Belgian Chamber of Deputies today that at noon the Germans were halted everywhere on the Belgian defensive lines. He said that he was convinced that the Germans failed to obtain their first objective and failed to gain the initial success they expected.

Premier Hubert Pierlot told the House that King Leopold III had expected to make an address, but had taken his place as Commander-in-Chief with the army in the front lines as his father, Albert, did more than twenty-five years ago.

While the first wave of Nazi bombers took a toll of at least seven killed and eighty wounded throughout the country, the foreign ministry said that the German land forces had been stopped no more than a few hundred yards over the Belgian frontier.

"This time the crime is even greater since no ultimatum, no protest was presented to the Belgian government, which learned only by the assault itself that pacts between Germany and Belgium had been broken.

"This crime will rouse the general conscience and the Reich will have to justify herself before history.

They were halted by Belgian troops entrenched behind the Demolition Line, a first defense area of destroyed bridges and roads and other barriers.

Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak, in a note to the German Ambassador, said: "Belgium will defend herself with all means . . . and can not be vanquished."

The note asked the Belgians not to resist and promised to preserve their country.

Gets A Quick No.

Even before the Ambassador spoke, Mr. Spaak replied "the answer is negative." He handed the Ambassador a note saying that Belgium would defend herself.

The note said:

"Germany for the second time has invaded neutral and loyal Belgium. The present invasion is even worse than that of 1914.

Protests Bombing.

"Brussels has been attacked by air despite being an open city deprived of military," said the Foreign Minister, "and no troops will march across it."

One bomb hit across a square from the United States embassy.

Since the first wave, Brussels itself has not been bombed, though three air raid alarms were sounded. Twenty-nine German planes were reported over the province of Brabant and others over Limberg, both adjoining the Netherlands border. Anti-aircraft fire could be heard.

Say Bomb Hit Hospital.

Martial law was proclaimed and the King drafted notes for all neutral countries as well as a protest to Berlin.

The Belgian Government appealed to France and Great Britain "to safeguard our independence." The Netherlands and Luxxemburg were reported to have sent similar appeals.

Ambulances clanged continuously through the streets of Brussels, apparently bearing wounded.

It was reported here that the Germans, invading Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg in the dark hours early today, had dropped leaflets on the Netherlands capital, The Hague, saying Germany was attacking Great Britain and that the population must abstain from attacking the Germans.

The Brussels radio announced that German troops crossed the frontier of Belgium at four points.

Troops Drop by Parachute.

Parachute troops, said the Brussels radio, dropped from German planes at Nivelles, less than twenty miles directly south of Brussels and at St. Trond, forty miles due east.

More than 100 German planes roared over Brussels. The Brussels airport was subjected to heavy bombing.

German troops were landed by parachute at Hasselt, in eastern Belgium, while reports of other troop landings could not be confirmed immediately.

Official notices were plastered over walls telling military men to join their units at once.

A state of alarm was declared officially as planes attacked the airdrome at Brussels at 5 A. M. (11 P. M. Thursday, Eastern standard time).

Belgians stood in the streets of Brussels in their night clothes watching blobs of anti-aircraft fire in the sky as military cars and motorcycles dashed through the streets.

The Belgian Foreign Ministry said the invasion was launched by bombardment of the Brussels airport.

Great clouds of smoke could be seen rising from the airport while anti-aircraft batteries kept up a continual pounding against the invaders.

LEOPOLD'S MEN BATTLING FOES 'FOOT BY FOOT'

"Our Cause Is Pure And With Help Of God We Will Triumph," King Says

Army Claims It Has Halted Germans All Along Border Area

By ROBERT OKIN
Associated Press Correspondent

Brussels, Saturday, May 11—British and French troops moved last night and early today into the most important centers of Belgium while King Leopold, a fighting king in command of his own army, proclaimed that the Belgians were battling "foot by foot" to halt the German invaders.

The King's proclamation declared "the power of our country today is infinitely greater than in 1914" and said the fight to oust the Germans would be hard "but no one can doubt the final result."

Second Time In 25 Years

King Leopold said that "for the second time in a quarter century Belgium—loyal and neutral—has been attacked by the German Empire in spite of the most solemn engagements."

He declared that "up to the last we had faithfully discharged our duty of neutrality," but now, "like my father in 1914, I have placed myself at the head of my troops with the same faith and confidence." He proclaimed:

"The Belgian cause is pure, and with the help of God will triumph."

Claim Invaders Were Halted

While the Allied troops headed toward positions at the front kept secret by government order, refugees streamed from the combat zones where the Belgian army declared it had halted the German invaders all along the border area.

Traps, barricades, blown-up bridges and roads stopped the Nazis' land invasion, Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis, defense minister, told a cheering House of Deputies, while behind the lines Belgian troops "dealt with" German parachute troops.

Eight German planes were shot down, an official announcement said.

Meanwhile, the economics ministry ordered food rationing to begin tomorrow at fixed prices, and Belgium experienced its first blackout since the initial nervous weeks of the war last fall.

Constant Raid Alarms

Sirens signaling the start or end of air raid alarms wailed almost constantly. Cafes were closed and deserted.

Windows were hastily taped to prevent injuries from flying glass, and "blackout paper" to seal cracks appeared like magic, as did gas masks.

The casualties in German air raids on Greater Brussels were placed at forty-one dead and eighty-two wounded. Four air raid alarms were sounded today.

All Airports Cleared

The waves of German bombers, however, were cheated of a major portion of their objective because the Belgians had cleared airports of all planes.

Gen. Denis said, only two planes were destroyed, although many buildings were damaged.

Street crowds cheered the arrival of French and British liaison officers conferring with the Belgian general staff and later handed Allied troops flowers as they entered the country in growing numbers.

Belgian authorities heard of suspicious German troop movements at 9 o'clock last night and immediately placed the army on guard. The Foreign Office said the bombing of Antwerp at 4.30 this morning opened hostilities.

First Cross Border At Gemmenich

The first German troops, preceded by waves of bombing planes, crossed the border at Gemmenich, near Aix-la-Chappelle, close to the point where the first German troops invaded the country in 1914.

"I am convinced the Germans failed to obtain their first objective and failed to gain the initial success they expected," Denis told the House.

Then, referring to the Belgian appeal for Allied assistance, which was followed six hours later by the arrival of the British and French officers, he said:

"Our soldiers are comforted in knowing that our friends are coming to their aid."

"Cannot Be Vanquished"

Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak earlier in the day handed German Ambassador von Bulow-Schwante a note declaring Belgium would "defend herself with all means . . . and cannot be vanquished."

"I am convinced we shall win, but sorry that I have to live through this moment."

Premier Hubert Pierlot told the Deputies that King Leopold had expected to address them but that he, like his father, King Albert, in 1914, had taken over command of all the armed forces and was in the front lines.

Pleads For National Unity

The Premier asked for national unity, but said the Government would request no additional powers at present.

"There will be no peace until the unity of the country is recognized," he said.

The Chamber adjourned after a vote of 134 to 1 in favor of the Government measures.

Twenty-seven German planes were reported over the province of Limbourg, adjoining the Netherlands frontier, and later nine more over Herenthals, twenty miles east of Antwerp, and others over Gembloux, twenty-eight miles southeast of Brussels.

HITLER GIVES FOES TASTE OF AIR BLITZKRIEG

Nazi Total War Unleashed By Land And Plane On Western Europe

Swarms Of Bombers Hit At Low Countries, Britain And France

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 10—The thunderous impact of German total war descended upon western Europe today.

Adolf Hitler, proclaiming the start of a fight to "decide the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years," pushed his tremendous armies by land and air across the frontiers of Holland and Belgium, through the tiny Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and gave these countries and his great enemies, France and England, their first real taste of hell from the air.

Nazi Platoons Land From Air

Superbly equipped platoons, ferried by sea and land planes or dropped by parachute, penetrated the lowland seaports and airports on the very western coast lines of the Low Countries. They formed enemy islands within the carefully prepared land and flood water lines of the little defenders, while by land the German columns beat across eastern frontiers.

Swarms of bombers smashed at airports at Brussels and Antwerp in Belgium and near Rotterdam and Amsterdam in Holland. Others, streaming into eastern and central France, were declared by the high command to have razed the airport at Metz, and to have bombed airdromes at Saint Omer and Vitry-Le-Francois.

Blitzkrieg Carried To England

Other planes darted straight for the heart of England, to drop bombs and engage defense fighters. One British Spitfire pursuit plane was shot down north of the Thames, in the vicinity of London, said the high command.

With Hitler himself at secret general headquarters, "Somewhere in the West," directing operations along a fighting front that now stretches 1,200 miles, from Basel on the Swiss frontier to Arctic Narvik, Norway, the army tonight announced resistance on the Luxembourg-Belgian-Netherlands frontiers "broken everywhere in the first attack."

Albert Canal Bridges Seized

Within these frontiers, the high command said, the Germans smashed across Holland's "appendix" province of South Limburg, seized Dutch Maastricht and the vital Albert Canal bridges on the Belgian frontier; penetrated to the Ijssel river east of Arnhem in east central Holland; crossed the Maas river at several Dutch points; seized Malmedy, former German town in Belgium north of Luxembourg, and crossed the Belgian frontier farther south after moving through Luxembourg.

The Albert Canal is Belgium's great defense weapon, and the Maastricht bridgehead is an important key to it.

Blow To British Navy Claimed

At the same time, the high command said that a British submarine had been sunk by a German U-boat near the Dutch North Sea island of Terschelling and that "an enemy destroyer" had been sent to the bottom by the torpedo of a German speedboat.

An official announcement tonight said almost one hundred "enemy" airplanes either had been shot down in aerial battles or destroyed on the ground. Seven German airplanes were reported missing, in addition to two known to have made forced landings, it said.

The German high command timed the crossing of three borders by land troops at 5.30 A. M., but this was in the wake of the bombing and transport planes. (By that time, said Dutch advices, German troops had parachuted to earth at Rotterdam's bomb-ruined airport, on the west side of Holland, and, with other men landed by seaplane in the Nieuwe Maas river, had fought their way into the city itself.)

"Had To Act First," Nazis Say

Juridically, Germany based her invasion of three little states on the western fringe of the European conflict—and lying directly between Germany and her British enemy—on what is said was proof that Belgium and the Netherlands, in active connivance with France, were about to attack Germany's rich industrial basin, the Ruhr.

Hence, Germany "had to act first."

Hitler offered Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg "protection" and restoration if they capitulated; promised them they would bring bloodshed and ruin upon themselves if they resisted.

This was the familiar pattern and Hitler's action, too, was the same steamroller cooperation between air and land forces which brought the Blitz decision in Poland and cleared Allied and Norwegian resistance out of all central and southern Norway in an amazingly short time.

Another World War Nearer

But the possibility of another World War was alarmingly near for Germany, for it is to be remembered that Italy has yet to decide whether to enter the fray actively; Turkey is allied with the western powers; Rumania and Greece have accepted guarantees from

Hitler Leads German Armies; 3 Neutral Borders Crossed

Nazi Planes Bomb Flying Fields, While Troops Claim Capture of Belgian Port—French Bases Reported Destroyed.

BERLIN, May 10 (A. P.).—Germany's powerful war machine moved at dawn today on its third blitzkrieg since September 1, 1939.

Adolf Hitler announced this was the beginning of a fight that "decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years."

Steamrolling its way into Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg by a combination of the land and air forces that proved so effective against Poland, Norway and Denmark, the armed forces of the Third Reich, under Adolf Hitler's personal direction, "darted over Germany's western borders along the broadest front for attack," as a High Command communique briefly put it.

At the same time German fighting planes, with Holland's hitherto neutral air no longer a hindrance, darted straight for the heart of England.

Other units of bombers and fighting planes roared over central and eastern France and over Belgium and Holland, striking at airports and other military objectives, supporting the army's advance into the Low Countries, and sharing in the capture of a Belgian seaport.

As the first result of the raids on England, the High Command announced the shooting down of an English chaser (pursuit [illegible]

[The Albert canal comprises part of Belgium's great defense system.]

"Malmedy has been taken. Farther south, the troops moving forward through Luxemburg have crossed the Belgian frontier."

An official announcement tonight said that almost 100 "enemy" airplanes either had been shot down in aerial battles or destroyed on the ground. Seven German airplanes were reported missing, in addition to two known to have made forced landings, it said.

Describes Air Activity.

The German High Command late today issued the following communique:

"The German air force at dawn of May 10 started with strong units of all kinds for operations in the west and landed many units on Belgian and Dutch airports.

"The airports and their environs were brought into the hands of the German air force in a very short time.

"Airports lying in eastern and central France were the targets of the Spitfire type north of the Thames River.

Maastricht Reported Taken.

The Berlin radio announced tonight that German troops had taken Maastricht, Holland, and Malmedy, Belgium.

The Nazis crossed the Maas river with a few men on the West Dutch-German frontier at several points, the announcement said.

[Maastricht is almost due west of Aachen, and Malmedy is on a line due west of Coblenz.]

"German troops reached the Ysel river (east of Arnheim) early in the afternoon Friday and crossed the Maas river on Dutch territory in several places," the radio said.

"Maastricht and bridges over the Germans Grave, Pensive

As for Germans, they realized that war in its grimmest reality now lies ahead.

Wherever one meets a German, he seems grave, serious and pensive.

Old-timers naturally recall the World War with its series of German successes—counter-balanced by the acquisition of ever-new enemies.

On the other hand, many young folk feel sure that Hitler has shown such genius that there can be no repetition of the disasters of 1918.

All, however—old and young, large and small—faced the situation calmly.

Belgium and Luxembourg had the United States take over their interests and Holland asked Sweden to do the same for her.

Dutch Goverament declared a state of war between Holland and Germany, German air attacks also were extended to include military objectives in Belgium and Holland.

"In the course of these actions the airports at Antwerp and Brussels, among others, also were bombed successfully.

"Units of the air force supported the advance of the army and shared decisively in capturing one Belgian port.

Capt. Koch and First Lieut. Witzig especially distinguished themselves by their boldness and energy. The Fuehrer and Most Supreme Comander awarded these two officers the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross."

[This is the highest military award, superseding the Pour le Merite of the Iron Cross of world war days.]

"A German U-boat sank a British submarine in the sea region near Terschelling (Dutch island in the North Sea).

"A German speedboat sank an enemy destroyer with a torpedo in the course of operations in the North Sea," the communique ended.

Hitler Offers Protection.

Hitler's lightning action was based on the expressed conviction that the English and French, with the active aid and connivance of Belgium and Holland, were about to attempt to invade Germany's industrial sections—the Ruhr region, with its famous Krupp plants, United Steel Works and other heavy industries.

With thousands of rubber boats to carry her troops across the flooded Dutch lowlands and with every other conceivable preparation painstakingly made, Germany struck without warning.

Diplomatic representatives of the three tiny neutrals standing in the way of Germany's winged and motorized legions were summoned to the Foreign Office at daybreak to be told what was afoot.

By that time, German troops long had been on the move and German bomber-pilots started on their day's work over the lowlands.

Expect Collapse in 24 Hours.

Authoritative Germans said that Holland and Belgium confronted

German surprise bomb attacks, in the course of which airports were destroyed and large fires started.

"The airports at Saint Omer, Vitry-le-Francois (on the Marne, 100 miles due east of Paris) and Metz were effectively destroyed.

"After the Belgian Government had called English and French troops into the countries and the

with the same lightning would not last twenty-four hours.

Huge Junkers airlanes capable of carrying fifteen men with full equipment and even faster and more modern types were used to sprinkle parachuting troopers at far-interior vital points.

German battle tactics practiced in Poland called for fast, deep mechanized thrusts followed by pinching tactics.

These tactics were made possible only by Germany's enormous air force, which controlled observation and kept the ground segments informed of every movement of the enemy.

From the beginning of the action Germany had a military advantage in several ways. Her planes had bases close to the scene of operations. Any defending planes which the Allies might rush against them would have to be based in England or France or be dispatched to Belgian-Netherlands fields opened under fire.

The main consideration was how much time the Belgians, noted for heir stubborn defense in 1914 and he solid Dutch would be able to give their allies to reach the front.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop summoned foreign press representatives to the Foreign Office for a 7 A. M. conference, but apparently his talks with the Belgian Ambassador, Vicomte Jacques Davignon, and the Netherlands Minister, Jonkheer H. M. Van Haersma, and the Luxemburg Chargé d'Affaires, Dr. Albert Wehrer—to whom the situation was imparted—took longer than the mere handing over of the memoranda.

Not until 8:25 A. M. (3:25 A. M. New York time) did Herr Ribbentrop, pale, sleepless and with a voice husky and deep in bitterness, address the foreign correspondents.

"England and France at last dropped the mask," he declared. "The attack on the Ruhr Valley was definitely planned. It was to come via Belgium and Holland.

"This attack was planned with the knowledge and connivance of the Belgian and Dutch Governments. Our Fuehrer was not willing to have this important region submitted to new aggression.

"The Fuehrer therefore has decided to take the neutrality of Belgium and Holland under his protection.

"Germany now will talk only the language which the English and French Governments seem to understnad, and settle scores once and for all with them," Herr von Ribbentrop declared.

The Foreign Minister then read the text of the memorandum to the three Governments which began with a reiteration of the German standpoint that "the main object of the British and French is to extend the war to other countries."

The news distributed by Britain and France of impending action in the Balkans was a blind, the memorandum said, to mislead Germany.

Although maintaining the "appearance" of neutrality, the memorandum then charged, Belgium and Holland in reality "have supported them (the Allies) in their intentions."

Eight facts, which were declared incontrovertible, were presented as proof of these assertions.

These may be summarized by the following excerpts:

1. "Since the outbreak of the war the Belgian and Dutch press has shown an anti-German attitude in excess even of that taken by the British and French newspapers. In addition, the leading personalities in the public life of both countries to an increasing extent expressed the view that Belgium and Holland were at the side of Britain and France.

2. "Holland, in conjunction with certain Belgian circles, has lent support to attempts of the British secret service to bring about revolution in Germany.

3. "Measures taken in the military sphere provide incontrovertible proof of the true intentions of the policy of Belgium and Holland.

4. "Belgium, to give an example, exclusively fortified her eastern frontier against Germany, whereas on other frontiers no forts of any kind have been built.

Say Dutch Coast Is Open.

5. "The Dutch coast likewise is an open and unguarded means of entry for the British air force. One hundred and twenty-seven cases in which British military aircraft crossed the Dutch territory were proved indisputably in every detail and the Dutch Government was duly notified. In reality the number of violations was far greater.

6. "Still more striking proof of the real attitude of Belgium and Holland, however, is the concentration of mobilized Belgian and Dutch troops directed solely against Germany.

7. "This massing of Belgian and Dutch troops on the German frontier took place at a time when Germany had concentrated no troops on the Belgian or Dutch frontiers, but when Britain and France, to the contrary, has assembled a strong mechanical attacking force on the Franco-Belgian frontier.

the Allies; Russia is turning yearning eyes in the direction of Rumania's Bessarabia a... ne Japanese are gazing at the Dutch East Indies.

Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg was documented by Hitler's "new Bismarck," Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, in notes to the three governments involved.

Because the Ruhr "nerve center" allegedly was to have been the avenue of an Allied attack through Belgium and Holland, it was argued that Germany had no choice but to safeguard the neutrality of these two countries and their Luxembourg neighbor with all the milita.y measures at the disposal of the Reich.

Ribbentrop's Eight Reasons

To reinforce the German legal position, von Ribbentrop cited eight reasons to prove that Holland and Belgium were neutral in name only, and actually, actively pro-ally. In brief, these were:

1. Anti-German press and individual activities.
2. Dutch and Belgian help to British secret service attempts to foment a German revolution.
3. "Military measures" proving lowland "true intentions."
4. Exclusive fortification by Belgium of the eastern frontier.
5. Holland's "open and unguarded" coast, providing entry for the British air force.
6. Concentration of both Dutch and Belgian troops against Germany alone.
7. Coincident assembly of a strong Allied attacking force on the French-Belgium frontier.
8. "Undeniable proof" that the Allies would attack the Ruhr through the lowlands.

Documentary "Evidence"

In turn, von Ribbentrop attempted to back these deductions with two documents, reports of the Reich Ministry of the Interior. One of these, dated March 29, purported to give revelations made by the British secret agents, Capts. Richard H. Stevens and S. G. Best, who were captured on the Dutch frontier near Venlo last November by German armed guards.

The other was dated May 4 and was a survey of the German high command.

Both documents attempted to trace "unneutral" Dutch and Belgian military moves since the outbreak of the war.

Tells His Story To Press

Von Ribbentrop told his story to seventy-five foreign correspondents in an early morning press conference, held after he had conveyed the news to the Belgian Ambassador, Vicomte Jacques Davignon; the Netherlands Minister, Jonkheer H. M. Van Haersma, and the Luxembourg charge d'affaires, Dr. Albert Wehrer.

Hand in hand with the roar of cannon and the rustling of diplomatic notes was a vast barrage of words over the radio and in the press under the direction of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels.

Goebbels himself chose to read the notes to Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg over a nation-wide hookup. The start of the broadcasts, significantly, was in Dutch, Flemish and French.

The marching troops, now facing war in earnest, were pepped up by Hitler's order of the day, telling them "the fight beginning today decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years."

To Play All His Aces Now

This seems to indicate that Hitler is determined to play all his aces now.

Curiously enough, as vitally affected as anyone by this explosion of German-Dutch relations is the great Hohenzollern dynasty.

Anxiously, the royal family wondered how ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II, who nearly twenty-six years ago sent his Imperial army into Belgium, was faring on his estate in Doorn, the Netherlands, which is southeast of Utrecht and barely on the eastern edge of the Dutch main defense "water line."

It is known that the aged former Emperor declined to leave Holland when rumors of the impending conflict accumulated, on the ground that this would be disloyal to the nation which offered him exile.

Move Prepared Thoroughly

Whatever else Hitler may have up his sleeve, certainly the preparations for the invasion of the Lowlands was made with the utmost thoroughness.

For days the Reich had been calling reserves in a fashion never precedented—even men in their fifties and World War veterans who had lost an arm or a leg.

Roads and railways to the borders were choked; the army, ahead of time, took over all rail lines and drastically curbed civilian traffic.

There even were reports that 185,000 rubber boats, each holding sixteen men, were ready for navigating the flooded areas of the Netherlands.

Expected To Bow In 24 Hours

The Foreign Office bristled with confidence that Holland will be "pacified" in twenty hours.

Appearance of the parachute jumpers at various parts of the "protected" kingdoms was another instance of German Grundlichkeit (thoroughness).

The Belgian Embassy and the Dutch and Luxembourg legations folded up at once.

30.24-2169

8. "Documents in the possession of the German Government proved that preparations made by Britain and France in Belgian and Dutch territory for an attack on Germany already have reached an advanced stage. . . . We have undeniable proof that Anglo-French attacks upon Germany were imminent and that this attack on the Ruhr will occur through Belgium and Holland."

Called Struggle for Life.

Charging Belgium - Netherlands connivance with this plan of attack, the memorandum then declared the German Government "can no longer count Belgium and Holland neutral" and said that agreements between the general staffs of the two countries and those of Britain and France could only serve the purpose to support aggression on Germany.

"In a struggle of life and death," said the memorandum, "the German Government does not intend to await attack by the British and French inactively. . . . It has therefore issued orders for its troops to safeguard the neutrality of the two countries with all the military measues at the disposal of the Reich."

Von Ribbentrop's note then solemnly announced—and the Foreign Minister impressively underscored every word by thumping his fingers on the long green table—"German soldiers are not entering Holland and Belgium as enemies, for the German Government neither desired or brought about these developments."

Von Ribbentrop declared the "German Government does not intend by these measures to attack the integrity of the kingdom of Belgium or the kingdom of Holland or their possessions, their property in Europe or their colonies either now or in the future."

Closes With an Ultimatum.

The note closed with an ultimatum and threat to the Belgian and Dutch governments.

"The Belgian and Dutch governments today still have it in their power to safeguard the welfare of their people at the last moment by insuring no resistance is offered to the German troops," it said.

"The German Government herewith requests the two governments to issue the necessary orders without delay.

"If German troops encounter opposition in Belgium and Holland it will be crushed with every means."

Hitler's Order to Troops

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 10 — Chancellor Hitler in an Order of the Day to his troops declared:

Soldiers of the West Front!

The hour of the deciding fight for the future of the German nation has come.

For 300 years it was the aim of the English and French rulers to prevent every real consolidation of Europe and, above all, to hold Germany in weakness and impotency.

For this purpose France alone has declared war on Germany thirty-one times in 200 years.

For decades it has been the aim of British world rulers to keep Germany from unity, to deny the Reich every earthly possession which is necessary to the preservation of a nation of 80,000,000 people.

England and France have carried through this policy of theirs without worrying about the regime that happened to rule in Germany at the time.

What they wanted to strike was always the German people. Their responsible men admit this goal quite openly.

Germany shall be dashed to pieces and reduced to small States. With that the Reich will lose its political power and with it the possibility of securing for the German people their living rights on this earth.

For this reason all my peace overtures have been rejected and war was declared on us Sept. 3 of last year. The German people has no hatred, no inimical feeling toward the English or French people.

It stands, however, before the question whether it will live or perish. In a few weeks the brave troops of our armies have crushed the Polish opponent pushed forward by England and France, thereby eliminating danger from the east.

Thereupon England and France decided to attack Germany from the north. From April 9 the German armed forces have nipped this attempt in the bud.

Now what we have seen for many months as a threatening danger for us has happened. England and France are attempting, by employment of a gigantic manoeuvre of distraction in Southeast Europe, to thrust forward into the Ruhr district over Holland and Belgium.

Soldiers of the West Front:

The hour for you has now come.

The fight beginning today decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years.

Do your duty now!

The German people, with its best wishes, is with you.

Nazis Say Foe Bombed Town, Killed Civilians

Report 24 Dead in Attack on Freiburg, 'Open City,' Vow 'Fivefold Revenge'

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, May 10.—Three "enemy" planes bombed the "open city" of Freiburg, in southwestern Germany today, killing twenty-four civilians, German authorities said tonight, adding that Germany would answer fivefold. The bombs were said to have dropped in the center of the city.

A communique said:

"On May 10 three enemy airplanes attacked with bombs the open city of Freiburg in Breisgau, which lies entirely outside operations and is not a military objective.

"Bombs fell on the inner city and killed twenty-four civilians.

"As a reprisal for this action, which is, counter to international law, the German air force will answer in the same manner.

"From now on every further regular enemy bombing attack on the German population will be answered fivefold by German planes on an English or a French city."

BERLIN, May 10—A High Command communique datelined from the "Fuehrer's Headquarters" today said:

In view of the immediately impending extension of the war area by evening onto Belgian and Netherlands territory and the threat to the Ruhr territory connected therewith, the German Western Army at daybreak, May 10, started over the German western borders along the broadest front for attack.

Simultaneously, the air force attacked an enemy airport with great success, and strong units have taken a hand in land fighting in support of ground troops.

To conduct general operations of the defense force, the Fuehrer and Supreme Commander has gone to the front.

A later High Command communiqué said:

The German air force at dawn of May 10 started with strong units of all kinds for operations in the West and landed many units on Belgian and Netherland airports.

The airports and their environs were brought into the hands of the German air force in a very short time.

British Pour Into Belgium

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM, May 10 (AP).—British troops crossed the Belgian frontier today and are pressing forward to a new battle front.

Since the frontier barriers were lowered this morning, the khaki-clad columns have been moving smoothly and steadily toward the east.

French troops also are marching into Belgium.

Crowds of civilians pelted the singing soldiers with flowers, and ran beside troop-filled trucks, offering the soldiers bottles of beer.

German bombers had been in action since 4 o'clock this morning, and newspaper correspondents with the B. E. F. heard air-raid warnings five times during the day.

Long columns of trucks, tanks, armored cars, staff autos and motorcycles moved across the frontier in a steady stream. Interspersed in the column were anti-aircraft guns. A small group of correspondents watching the mobile units cross into Belgium saw German planes high overhead.

For a time the transports moved to the accompaniment of explosions from the big stationary anti-aircraft emplacements, but the invading planes apparently were not hit.

Tank commanders sat high up in the open turrets of their clanking machines, scanning maps spread out in front of them.

A young British Royal Air Force pilot stood by the road watching. He said he was there because he had made a forced landing earlier in the day after a fight with a German plane.

"I think we got six of them," he said, before a truck came to take him back to his airdrome and a new fighting ship.

Many vehicles in the long column bore names, often of famous race horses. One tank was christened "Old Bill" after a cartoon character of the World War.

Some of the troops entered Belgium with wild whoops. A sergeant shouted: "We are the boys!"

Speedy motorcyclists rode along beside the column, keeping the units moving steadily. The column did not halt and there was no end of it in sight.

Lloyd George Is Expected to Have Place in New Cabinet.

LABORITES MAY PARTICIPATE

Change Is Made While Britain Prepares to Combat New Nazi Blitzkreig.

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, became Great Britain's Prime Minister tonight, succeeding Neville Chamberlain as war surged over western Europe.

The Government announced: "The Right Honorable Neville Chamberlain resigned the office of Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury this evening, and the Right Honorable Winston Churchill accepted his Majesty's invitation to fill the position.

"The Prime Minister desires that all Ministers should remain at their posts and discharge their functions with full freedom and responsibility while the necessary arrangements for the formation of a new administration are made."

Mr. Chamberlain, the apostle of appeasement, who saw his policy fail and when war came expressed the hope he could carry on long enough to see victory, arrange for co-operation with the Allies. Elaborate precautions were taken to guard them.

The recall of Parliament, possibly next Tuesday, was considered certain. It recessed only yesterday for twelve days.

European blitzkreig loosed by Hitler came as a result of the Allied failure in Norway.

In the midst of a series of conferences today of the war Cabinet, chiefs of staff and other leaders, the Labor party—the Government's bitterest critic in the House of Commons—announced a unanimous decision to join a new Cabinet if some one besides Mr. Chamberlain were Prime Minister.

Mr. Churchill, the new man for the post, has been intrusted progressively with more and more of the burden of Britain's conduct of the war.

One of the most popular personalities in British official life, he is an old-time foe of Hitler's expansion of power. Long before there was any recognition of the air force the Nazis had developed secretly, Mr. Churchill, then the most voluble critic of the British Government, was crying in the House of Commons for Britain to recognize danger in Europe.

Mr. Chamberlain saw the King for twenty minutes this afternoon and was followed to Buckingham Palace by Mr. Churchill, who stayed for forty minutes.

Chamberlain's Farewell.

Mr. Chamberlain, his face pale and drawn, told his war Cabinet he had determined not to carry on further since the broader-based Government which would command the full support of all parties was not practicable under him. He thanked the ministers for their loyalty during arduous days.

Mr. Chamberlain said his valedictory today as Prime Minister in a radio broadcast to the empire just after resigning.

". . . You and I must now put all our strength behind the new government. . . . And we must fight until this savage beast who has sprung out of his lair at us is finally overthrown," he said.

He recalled the recent parliamentary crisis in which his leadership was but barely upheld after sharp and angry debate and added that after that he had "no doubt that some new and drastic action" must be taken to restore confidence.

"By today," he went on, "it was apparent that some unity could be attained under some other Prime Minister. . . . My duty was plain. I saw his Majesty (to resign)."

Chamberlain Resigns

In response to urgent appeals from Brussels and Amsterdam, Britain promised full military aid to the invaded nations, but said that Germany, through her speed, had again gained an advantage.

Lloyd George Ready to Serve.

David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister, according to reports today said that he would be willing to serve under Mr. Churchill as Minister without portfolio.

The Labor executive committee announced a unanimous decision to take "their share of responsibility as a full partner in a new Government under a new Prime Minister who would command the confidence of the nation."

Mr. Chamberlain emerged with only an eighty-one-vote margin in the House of Commons on Wednesday at the end of a two-day debate on the failure of the Allies in Norway.

British troops, meanwhile, took over Iceland to forestall any German occupation of the island, which is linked with German-occupied Denmark.

German bombers brought the war to England's doorstep with forays up the Thames estuary, along the southeast coast and into Kent, but heavy anti-aircraft fire drove the invaders from Dover and other points.

The Air Ministry denied a German report that a British pursuit plane had been downed over the Thames.

Four incendiary bombs were dropped near Canterbury in Kent.

The War Office warned the public that sentries had been posted to guard vulnerable points and that all who fail to halt upon being challenged are liable to be shot at.

Two Netherlands Government officials, Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens and Colonial Minister Charles J. I. M. Welter, arrived in London by air from the Hague to arrange for co-operation with the Allies. Elaborate precautions were taken to guard them.

The recall of Parliament, possibly next Tuesday, was considered certain. It recessed only yesterday for twelve days.

The Ministry of Home Security warned all civilian defense and air raids precautions services to be on the alert.

The Government canceled the week end holiday for Whitsunday and appealed to the nation to forego the holidays as far as practicable. Holiday transport services were canceled or restricted.

The Foreign Office announced that Iceland, linked through the Danish throne with Denmark, was occupied by a British landing force to insure the security of the North Atlantic island against a German invasion, and that it would be withdrawn "upon the conclusion of hostilities."

[The German radio, in a broadcast intercepted by the Columbia Broadcasting System, charged: "England raped Iceland and occupied it militarily" at the very moment "when German armed forces were preventing—in the nick of time—the Allied plans of war expansion in Belgium and Holland." "It does not have to be pointed out," it added, "that the assertions that Iceland was threatened by Germany is only a ridiculous pretext for this criminal action of the British Government."]

London streets were devoid of uniformed men. Their absence today was taken as an indication that all forces had received orders to stand by.

Chamberlain Farewell Speech

LONDON, May 10 (AP).—The text of the speech broadcast today to the British people by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain follows:

Early this morning, without warning or excuse, Hitler added another to the horrible crimes which already disgrace his name by a sudden attack on Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg.

In all history no other man has been responsible for such a hideous total of human suffering and misery as he. He has chosen a moment when perhaps it seemed to him that this country was entangled in the throes of a political crisis and when he might find it divided against itself. If he has counted on our internal division to help him he has miscalculated the mind of this people.

I am not now going to make any comment upon the debate in the House of Commons which took place on Tuesday and Wednesday last, but when it was over I had no doubt in my mind that some new and drastic action must be taken if confidence was to be restored to the House of Commons and the war carried on with a vigor and energy which are essential to victory.

Saw Need for United Front

What was that action to be? It was clear that at this critical moment in the war what was needed was the formation of a government which would include members of the Labor and Liberal oppositions and thus present a united front to the enemy.

What had to be ascertained was the conditions which would be necessary to enable such a united government to be formed, and to this question I devoted myself, with the assistance of some of my colleagues, yesterday afternoon.

By the afternoon of today it was apparent that the essential unity could be secured under another Prime Minister, though not under myself. In these circumstances my duty was plain. I sought an audience with the King this evening and tendered him my resignation which His Majesty has been pleased to accept.

His Majesty has now intrusted to my friend and colleague, Mr. Winston Churchill, the task of forming a new administration on a national basis, and in this task I have no doubt he will be successful.

For that purpose, my other colleagues in the government have intimated to me that they will place their resignations in Mr. Churchill's hands, but they will, of course, retain their present offices pending the appointment of the new government.

I should perhaps say, too, that Mr. Churchill has expressed to me his strong desire that I should be a member of the war Cabinet, and I have told him that I will gladly give him any assistance that I can in that capacity.

Now, as this is my last message to you from No. 10 Downing Street, there are one or two things I should like to say to you.

Three Years of Heavy Load

During the period—it is almost exactly three years—that I have been Prime Minister, I have borne a heavy load of anxiety and responsibility. As long as I believed there was any chance of preserving peace honorably, I strove to take it. When the last hope vanished and war could no longer be avoided, I strove equally hard to wage it with all my might.

Perhaps you will remember that in my broadcast of Sept. 3, last year, I told you that we should be fighting against evil.

My words have proved to be insufficient to describe the vileness of those who have now staked everything on the great battle just beginning.

Perhaps it may at least be some relief to know that this battle, though it may last for days or even weeks, has ended the period of waiting and uncertainty, for the hour has come when we are to be put to the test, as the innocent people of Holland and Belgium and France are being tested already.

You and I must rally behind our new leader and with our united strength and with unshakable courage fight and work until this wild beast that has sprung out of his lair upon us be finally disarmed and overthrown.

SOLDIERS CROSS BELGIUM AND BATTLE VANGUARD OF INVADERS IN LUXEMBOURG

Drive Ahead On Front Running 200 Miles South Of North Sea—Germans Kill Sixty Civilians In French Raids

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Saturday, May 11 — Air-raid sirens sounded an alarm in Paris at 6.13 A. M. Others had been sounded in other parts of the country a few hours earlier, but there was no anti-aircraft firing.

By ROY P. PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, May 10—Allied forces driving into the face of Germany's invasion of the Low Countries have advanced on a front extending more than 200 miles from the North Sea to the juncture of German, Luxembourg and French territory east of the Moselle river, the French high command announced tonight.

It reported continuing progress in Belgian territory, while in tiny Luxembourg military advices said there were "sharp combats" as vanguards of the Allied and Nazi war machines established contact.

44 Nazi Planes Downed, French Say

At the same time, while German warplanes thundered into France in widespread raids, killing at least sixty civilians, French defenders aloft and on the ground manning anti-aircraft batteries blasted forty-four German planes out of the sky onto French soil, the high command asserted.

Germany's push to the west, the high command said, extended to the region of Sierck, French town east of the Moselle river, a short distance from the juncture of Germany, Luxembourg and France.

Preceded By Aerial Attack

The French communique said

"The attack by German troops on Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg was preceded by an aerial attack on a large scale during the early hours of May 10. Besides the bombing attacks many enemy detachments were landed by airplanes or by parachutes at various points in Belgium and Holland.

"In Holland, especially, these detachments tried to take airdromes by surprise. On the whole, they were successfully counter-attacked by local troops.

Bombings In France Continue

"The enemy's aerial attack which began in the latter part of the night on French territory was continued during the day. Some material damage of small importance was the only result of this bombing.

"Our fighters and anti-aircraft came into action against these expeditions and inflicted heavy loss on the German aviation. Forty-four enemy planes were brought down on French territory.

Allies Respond To Appeal

"The Netherlands, Belgian and Luxembourg governments have appealed to the Allies this morning, French and British troops at once responded to this appeal and advanced on a front extending from the North Sea to the Moselle.

"Their progress continues in Belgian territory. Sharp fighting has taken place in Luxembourg territory where German attacks extend to the region of Sierck and slightly to the east of the Moselle."

Raids Go On All Over France

Evidence that the war had broken out in earnest was seen in German raids and bombings over almost all of France. Towns in the north, the east and even central regions of the country were subjected to attack and the list of dead and injured mounted steadily.

The Paris region, raided early this morning, again heard anti-aircraft batteries in action tonight. Central-eastern and southeastern France also heard raid alarms late at night, but there was no anti-aircraft firing.

The Government announced its intention of replying with air bombardments on other than military objectives if the Germans bomb such targets.

Reports Of Casualties

Incomplete reports listed the following casualties:

Nancy—16 killed, 30 injured.
Laon—4 killed, 10 injured.

30 24 - 2171

30.24-2171

Franay—10 killed.
Breugcy—7 killed.
Lyon—2 killed.
Abbeville—1 killed.
Villers-Cotterets—10 killed, 30 injured.
Henin-Lietard—3 killed.
Lens—Entire family of Poles, number undetermined.

Other places reported bombed, with unrevealed casualty tolls, were Colmar, Pontoise, Luxueil, Bethune, Coques, Lens, Calais, Dunkerke, Hazebrouck and a number of small villages.

A War Ministry spokesman said the Allies backed up assurances of assistance for invaded Belgium and the Netherlands by sending a long-prepared French-British war machine rumbling north and east into Belgium.

Meet Nazis In Luxembourg

The vanguards of this force, it said, made contact with Nazi motorized infantry units which pushed into the little Duchy of Luxembourg this morning.

A few hours after the Nazis extended the war to the Low Countries, Premier Paul Reynaud broadened his Cabinet to a virtual national union Government by including Rightist Leaders Louis Marin and Jean Ybarnegaray as ministers without portfolio. They also will become members of the inner war committee of the Cabinet. He dropped all but four of thirteen under secretaries.

Fight To The Death

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander in chief of the British and French armies, proclaimed to his forces that Germany had begun "a fight to the death against us."

In his order of the day he said: "The attack which we have foreseen since last October was launched this morning.

"Germany has begun a fight to the death against us.

"The orders are, for France and her Allies: Courage, energy, confidence."

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of the British and French armies, had proclaimed earlier to his forces that Germany has begun "a fight to the death against us" and M. Reynaud reorganized his Cabinet to include two extreme Rightists, Louis Marin and Jean Ybarnegaray.

Authoritative spokesmen said that a Franco-British army was moving rapidly across the Belgian border and a Paris military spokesman said the "most gigantic battle of all time" may be imminent.

M. Reynaud in his broadcast announced that French troops crossed the frontier into Belgium between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning.

Pledges All Possible Aid.

He challenged directly Hitler's allegations that Germany had an old account to settle with France and pledged that the Allied troops would bring all possible assistance to the three countries invaded this morning.

Two Ministries of State without portfolio were added to the Cabinet for the newcomers, the offices being created "to obtain the participation of all political parties," an official announcement said.

Despite air raids by German bombing planes, M. Reynaud said France remains "calm and strong."

"Her troops know how to reply to the German attacks and will fight to the finish," he asserted.

A military spokesman said that the Germans must have one of two military purposes in mind. Pointing out that it was difficult at the moment to determine their exact objectives, he said that they may be trying:

1. An operation to gain control of a long strip of coastline facing England, or

2. "A vast strategical movement of invasion comparable to and infinitely larger than that carried out by the German troops across Belgium in 1914."

In the latter case, he said, "We are at the beginning of the most gigantic battle of all time."

'Cleaning Up' Parachute Troops.

The Belgian Army was reported by Havas, the French news agency, to be busy mopping up small detachments of German parachutists who landed on Belgian territory.

Several German planes were shot down from the numerous squadrons which flew over Belgium.

The War Ministry spokesman said that there was as yet no precise information in Paris of the exact line of march of the Germans.

The Germans, he continued, are following the usual tactics of sending shock forces in advance, preceded by intense aerial bombardment of roads, bridges, railroads and air fields.

The bombardments, he declared, are on a vast scale in "Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg and France, those in France being notably in the eastern and northern areas."

Earlier today Germany struck deep into France with her air force as an accompaniment to her typical blitzkrieg invasion of the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg.

The German air force, abruptly abandoning the practice of the warring Powers to refrain from bombing each other's interior zones, raided numerous French cities.

Airports were bombed. According to official French reports there were victims in the cities themselves.

Nazi Bombs Kill 16.

Sixteen persons were killed and thirty injured in bombing raids by German planes during the day in the Nancy region, civil and military authorities announced tonight.

Two new alarms were sounded, from 3 P. M. to 4:35 P. M. and from 5:30 P. M. to 6:30 P. M. during which several bombs were dropped. Military authorities said a schoolhouse was among the buildings destroyed.

[The British Air Ministry announced at London, meanwhile, that the Royal Air Force shot down five German bombers in "successful" resistance of Nazi attacks on British air bases in France, declaring: "In the early hours this morning enemy aircraft unsuccessfully attacked several airdromes occupied by the R. A. F. in France. R. A. F. fighters engaged the enemy and it is already known that five enemy aircraft were shot down."]

The French Army received its marching orders to go to the aid of Belgium shortly after the German invasion and appeals went out to the Allies from both The Hague and Brussels.

Strike at 1 A. M.

Taking advantage of a moment when both London and Paris were raked by impending Cabinet crises as a result of the failure of their Norwegian campaign, the Germans struck at the neutral countries with heavy forces liberally equipped with tanks and artillery.

French reports said that the blow fell at 1 o'clock in the morning (8 P. M. yesterday, New York time), when the long-prepared invading army moved simultaneously against the three Low countries.

Advices reaching Paris said that Luxemburg, not attempting to resist the might of German arms, was being occupied methodically today by German military contingents.

In Belgium the young King Leopold III, in uniform and in command of his army, ordered his own troops to stay away from Brussels so that there would be no pretext for further bombing of the capital.

While the western front remained comparatively calm, raiding German airplanes were declared to have bombed numerous cities back of the line. The French officially listed Lyon, Nancy, Colmar, Pontoise and Luxeuil.

After an early morning raid in which German planes were driven off by anti-aircraft fire, Parisians took the news of the war developments calmly.

Nazi Statement Denounced.

There was no report of bombings in the Paris zone.

The Dutch Minister called on Premier Reynaud and made an appeal for aid. Belgium and Luxemburg also asked for French assistance. All received assurances of prompt aid.

A French spokesman denounced as "pure inventions" the charges of the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, that English troops had landed in the Dutch ports and that the Allies were preparing military occupation of Holland and Belgium.

In its morning communique the French High Command said:

"During the early hours of May 10 German troops began to penetrate the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg.

"The French armies had been put on the alert during the night.

"The governments concerned appealed to the Allied governments.

"Moreover, the enemy undertook aerial bombing activity in the north and east of France.

"Several enemy planes, the number of which is not yet known here, were brought down, both by anti-aircraft guns and pursuit planes."

Notes from Belgium and Luxemburg appealing for French and British aid were made public by the Foreign Ministry at noon.

The Belgian note said:

"The Belgian Government is determined to resist the aggression with all its force.

"The Government of the King is firmly confident that, as in the past, the joint efforts of France, England and Belgium will assure triumph of the right."

The Luxemburg note, delivered to the Foreign Ministry by the Duchy's Charge d'Affaires, pointed out that that country was without arms and asked French aid "for the re-establishment of the independence and integrity of Luxemburg."

No Comment Needed.

The French promise of aid was made in answer to appeals from the Belgian and Dutch Governments, which notified France of the invasion early today.

The French Minister of Information Louis Frossard, personally reading news of war developments over the radio, declared: "No comment is necessary. The hour has come for every Frenchman to do his duty silently and resolutely."

French Death List Mounts

The French government announced its intention of replying with air bombardments on other than military objectives if the Germans bombed such targets as air-raid casualty and damage reports came in from all parts of the country.

Allied Troops Go Into Belgium; Historic Battle Is Looked For

Reynaud Announces Drive Northward to Meet Invaders—French Cities Bombed —16 Killed in Nancy Region.

Dutch Fight Fiercely; Allied Aid Arrives

[By the Associated Press] O'SULLIVAN

The Hague, May 10—The Netherlands today became one target of a German sweep against the West and, with German soldiers already fighting on Dutch soil, gave notice that she considers herself at war with Germany.

Airports and other strategic centers were bombed, but the results of these attacks were not known.

From The Hague flew the Netherlands Foreign Affairs and Colonial Ministers, seeking liaison with Allied leaders in London, lest the Netherlands be swept by German conquerors before effective help could be given to stop them.

Despite the stubborn resistance of the Dutch air force and anti-aircraft batteries German planes were said to have landed troops at some interior points while Hitler's power-diving bombers blasted at strategic airdromes.

An air battle was fought over Amsterdam at 4.20 A. M. Fighter planes dived on bombers over the nearby Schiphal Airport.

Landing Blocked

The Germans were blocked from landing at Schiphol by anti-aircraft fire.

Fifteen persons were wounded, five seriously, at Schiphol and houses about the airport were wrecked. Anti-aircraft fire and fighter planes met the attackers, and shell bursts were clearly visible from buildings in Amsterdam.

Many German planes flew over Amsterdam, but there were no bombs to drive the population to the shelters, all built above, rather than below, the water-soaked ground.

Defense guns ringing the city were in action from 3.30 A. M. to after 7 P. M., but German planes were over the country as early as 2 A. M.

The explosion of bombs could be heard clearly in Amsterdam but the people there went about their business much as usual. The only other outward indications of a departure from normal were queues in front of Amsterdam's banks.

The Government immediately put into force plans for civil defense. A blackout was ordered starting tonight. Voluntary civil militia in Amsterdam was mobilized and efforts were made to frustrate any "fifth column" activities.

Offering Strong Resistance

The Dutch announced that their troops offered strong resistance to the invaders on the Ijssel and Maas rivers, a short distance within the Netherlands, and maintained positions at Delfzijl.

Delfzijl, on the northeast coast of Groningen province, is across the Eems from Emden, German naval base.

The announcement was in a communique by Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander in chief, as follows:

"Netherlands border troops offered bitter resistance to the Germans on the Ijssel and Maas rivers.

"Notwithstanding strong German attacks, our troops maintain themselves in Delfzijl.

Armored Train Blown Up

"Four German armored trains have been disposed of; one was blown to pieces on the railroad bridge near Venlo.

"At least seventy German planes have been shot down on air fields or when they tried to make landings in the interior of the country.

"German troops landed by parachute in the interior tried to maintain themselves, but they are attacked from all sides by our troops.

"From various places it is reported that Netherlands prisoners have been used by Germans as a shield."

Norway Provides Lesson

The Dutch had before them the recent lesson of Germany's invasion of Norway in which confusion of orders, sabotage and treachery within Norway aided the German advance.

All Germans in the Netherlands were ordered to remain in their houses.

"Persons arousing suspicion that they infringe this order expose themselves to serious danger for their lives," said a Dutch broadcast.

The military advised newspaper correspondents that telegrams for dispatch abroad would be handled as usual, but subject to severe censorship of anything considered "alarmist or tendencious." No telephone calls to foreign countries were permitted.

One crossing of the Dutch frontier was said to have occurred near Lobith, where the Rhine enters the Netherlands.

Throughout all the Netherlands intense air activity was reported, with squadrons of foreign planes circling Denhelder naval base. Six German planes were reported over Ijmuiden. Parachutists landed at Maarden, Sliedrecht and near Delft, only thirteen miles from the Hague. A hundred parachutists landed at Dodrecht.

Six German planes bombed the airdrome at Welschap, near Eindhoven. Three German planes attempted to land at Soubrurg, in Zeeland, and were fired on by defenders.

Hundreds of parachutists landed at Hooge and Zwaluwe, where a bridge forms the principal link between north and south Holland. Others landed on Rozenburg Island, near Rotterdam.

Dutch Communique

An earlier Dutch high command communique said:

"German troops passed through the Dutch border during the night and our border troops fulfilled their tasks.

"They succeeded in carrying out their thrust. Bridges over the Maas and Waal have been demolished by them.

"East of Arnhem, fifteen miles from the German-Dutch border, Germans have advanced to Ijsel.

"Parachutists Destroyed"

"In the interior, enemy planes tried to land and in some places dropped parachutes and planes landed.

"These landings were partly unsuccessful and parachutists, who were dressed in Netherlands uniforms, have been surrounded and destroyed.

"Over various places Germans dropped pamphlets which are untrue and threats against the Dutch.

"The high command urged the population not to believe such utterances, which are only intended to create disorders.

"The Dutch are executing measures imposed by the acts and words of the Queen for the defense of the Netherlands soil."

(The Dutch high command in a communique broadcast in London and picked up by NBC said invading German troops had been able to break the Dutch defense lines in only one sector, where they penetrated to a depth of ten miles. The London broadcast also said large-scale aerial bombing by German planes had started in the north and northeast of France.

("The Dutch air force is fighting gallantly," the announcer

"The German people has no hatred, no inimical feeling toward the English or French people.

"It stands, however, before the question whether it will live or perish.

"In a few weeks the brave troops of our armies have crushed the Polish opponent pushed forward by England and France, thereby eliminating danger from the East.

"Thereupon England and France decided to attack Germany from the north.

"From April 9, the German armed forces have nipped this attempt in the bud.

Decision "For Next 1,000 Years"

"Now what we have seen for many months as a threatening danger for us has happened. England and France are attempting, by employment of a gigantic maneuver of distraction in southeast Europe, to thrust forward into the Ruhr district over Holland and Belgium.

"Soldiers of the West front!

"The hour for you has now come.

"The fight beginning today decides the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years.

"Do your duty now!

"The German people, with its best wishes, is with you."

Signed, ADOLF HITLER.

attack, delivered without warning against the Netherlands, th Netherlands Government regards itself at war with the Reich."

It was reported Germany likewise made no diplomati approach in Brussels before the attack was launched.

Nazis Try To Seize Dutch Queen; Killed

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 10—Two squadrons of Nazi planes, loaded with soldiers, were said today by Edwin Hartrich, Amsterdam correspondent for C. B. S., to have made a "daring attempt to capture Queen Wilhelmina, an attempt which evidently "has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators."

The text of Hartrich's cable from Amsterdam to C. B. S follows:

"A daring attempt of the German air force to capture Queen Wilhelmina in the early hours today apparently has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators.

"A flight of sixteen large Junkers and possibly more landed at the airport of Valkenburg, five miles from the Queen's summer villa at Ruygenhoek and about seven miles from her residence Huis Ten Bosch, in the outskirts of The Hague.

20 Heavily-Armed Soldiers Per Plane

"Each Junker carried twenty soldiers or more. All were equipped with automatic rifles or machine guns. The planes landed in the early hours of the morning.

"Other contingents of aerial kidnappers landed at Delft about four miles south of The Hague. The strategy was to cut off The Hague from the rest of Holland, surround the capital city and capture the Government, even if only for a few hours.

"Together with Norman Alley, American newsreel man who was on the U. S. S. Panay when the gunboat was bombed by Japanese planes, and Beach Conger, of the New York Herald Tribune, I bumped into a hot-pitched battle on the outskirts of Valkenburg.

"Driving behind some military lorries on the Amsterdam-Hague road, our chauffeur was stopped, along with the lorries, by a sudden burst of machine-gun fire. Across the road in the ditches and at the bridge heads, Dutch soldiers were replying with short bursts aimed at a small group of farm houses.

One Destroys Railroad Track And Barely Misses Train

Mobilization Ordered Under "Precautionary State Of War"

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 10—Twenty-seven bombs fell on Switzerland today as foreign warplanes battled over this still neutral country.

A bomb which destroyed the railway track at Delamont just missed a passing train. Two other planes were sighted over Schaffhausen, but were not brought down.

The Basel railway station was closed to traffic between Switzerland and Germany, and several lines passing through Schaffhausen near the German frontier east of Lake Constance were closed early in the morning.

Some Flee City

Some of the Basel population voluntarily vacated the city.

The Government ordered general mobilization beginning tomorrow dawn and announced a "precautionary state of war" beginning at midnight tonight.

It was estimated 300,000 men already are in the Winkelried Line facing Germany. Large forces of crack frontier troops rushed to reinforce them. A total of 600,000 to 700,000 Swiss may soon be under arms.

24 Nazi Divisions There

German troops north of the Swiss frontier were estimated at twenty-four divisions a few days ago.

Sharp air battles took place near Basel just after midnight today. One group of twenty German bombers crossed Swiss territory toward France. They are believed to have bombed Lyons in France later.

Swiss anti-aircraft guns fired on some of the foreign planes.

SWISS MOBILIZE; OPEN FIRE ON NAZIS FLYING TO FRANCE

Frontiers Are Closed as Nation Is Ordered on War Basis.

BERNE, Switzerland, May 10 (A. P.).—The Swiss Government today ordered general mobilization beginning at dawn tomorrow and announced that a precautionary "state of war" begins at midnight tonight.

The official communique, which followed a series of bombings and sharp air battles over Swiss soil, said that the mobilization was ordered "in view of the profound changes which have taken place on the western front."

The Swiss army, it was said, was ready "for any eventuality . . . to face any menace from whatever side it may come, in comformity with the absolute desire of the federation for neutrality."

All visas for entry into Switzerland were canceled.

The guard over border traffic was heavily re-enforced.

The Swiss General Staff announced that seventeen bombs fell on Swiss soil in the Courrendlin region.

Large forces of crack Swiss frontier troops were rushed from the rearguard to the German and French frontiers.

It was estimated that 300,000 men are already in the Winkelried Line facing Germany and in small fortifications along the French frontier.

A total of between 600,000 and 700,000 men may soon be under arms.

The army command announced an unidentified bomber dropped several bombs on the Swiss Railway line between Delemont and Moutiers, but did little damage.

At 12:30 A. M. sharp air battles took place near Basle, Switzerland.

A German bomber crossed the frontier at Grenzach and flew over Basle en route to France. The German craft was immediately the target of anti-aircraft fire from the guns at Altkirch and Belfort.

The plane returned to Germany at 4:15 A. M.

Soon afterward, twenty bombers crossed the frontier at Loerrach, some of them passing over Swiss territory on their way to France.

A heavy fog prevented the Swiss air defense from bringing down any of the planes.

The Nazi aircraft were believed to be those which bombed Lyon, France.

One of these planes dropped bombs on the railroad near Courrendlin, Switzerland. The damage was not great enough to disrupt communications, however.

ALLIES WARN OF RETALIATON IF CIVILIANS DIE

London and Paris Assert 'Appropriate' Action Will Be Taken.

RECALL PLEDGE TO ROOSEVELT

Say They Reserve Right to Counter if the Enemy Hits Unarmed Towns.

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—Great Britain and France today warned Germany of retaliatory action in event of Nazi bombings of civil populations.

The British Government publicly proclaimed that they reserve the right to take any action which they consider appropriate in event of bombings of civil populations by Germany.

A similar announcement was issued by the French Government in Paris.

Britain's proclamation followed a report of bombing of Chilham in rural Kent, forty miles southeast of London, and raids on various towns in the Netherlands and Belgium.

A communique issued by the Foreign Office said:

"His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, who, in their reply of September 1 to the appeal of the President of the United States, gave assurance that their air forces had received orders prohibiting the bombing of civilian populations in limiting bombings to strictly military objectives, now publicly proclaim that they reserve to themselves the right to take any action which they consider appropriate in the event of bombing by the enemy of civil populations whether in the United Kingdom, France or in countries assisted by the United Kingdom."

FRENCH CABINET IS REORGANIZED

Reynaud Announces Change in Line-up of Ministry.

PARIS, May 10 (A. P.).—Premier Reynaud announced tonight a reorganization of his Cabinet to face the intensified threat of Germany's drive to the west.

M. Reynaud's office announced that the reorganization had been accomplished with the inclusion of two extreme Rightest Ministers in the new Cabinet.

The announcement followed an earlier statement that the resignation of thirteen Under-Secretaries of State had been accepted.

The new Ministers are Louis Marin, head of the Rightist Republican Federation, and Jean Ybarnegaray, Chamber leader of the French Social party.

Volunteer Ambulance Corps To Help Evacuate 3 Villages On Belgian Border

Paris, May 10 (AP).—The American Friends of France Committee, organized by Miss Anne Morgan to aid French civilian refugees, called on the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps today for aid in the evacuation of three villages on the Belgian border.

Miss Morgan left for a frontier town in the Ardennes department after she had received assurance that the ambulance corps would rush all possible assistance.

Committee members refused to estimate the number of civilians to be evacuated, but said that refugees would be sent to the center of France and cared for by the committee.

PARIS CARRIES ON WHILE WAR AREA SPREADS

Residents Hurry To Work After Early Morning Air-Raid Alarm

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, May 10—Parisians, dragging their sleepy-eyed way to breakfast after a dawn air-raid alarm, took it calmly today when the radio told them of the war's grave new turn.

They gulped down their continental breakfast of black coffee and "croissants," then hurried out into the May sunshine to take the subway to work. Business went on as usual.

Shopkeepers rolled up their iron shutters and dusted off their counters. Shoppers were the customary crowd of smartly dressed women, decked out in their new spring hats.

Storm Newsstands

People gathered in little knots on street corners to discuss the situation and stormed the newsstands for special editions which had not yet appeared.

Women with husbands in the North gasped—then went about their business with dry eyes. These French women don't cry—at least not in public.

"C'est vraiment la guerre (it's really the war)," was the phrase on every one's lips. They know what that means.

The policeman stood on the corner calmly wagging his white baton as the customary flow of traffic. The woman who keeps the little cafe near by tranquilly bathed her cat as she gossiped with her customers.

Shock But Not Surprise

"It's terrible, isn't it?"

France bombarded. The Low Countries invaded. It came as a shock—but hardly a surprise.

One be-mustached old man, anxiously pumping me for news, seemed most concerned over whether Holland and Belgium had decided to resist.

"They won't do like Denmark, will they?" he demanded, and seemed relieved when I told him they had decided to fight with Allied assistance.

Husband With Troops

The dark little woman behind the cigarette counter listened closely to our conversation.

"Have you someone in the North?" I inquired.

"Ah, oui," she said. "My George."

"Look at that sun," she went on pensively. "And up there . . ." Her voice trailed off.

A customer stepped up.

"A package of Gauloise Blues!"

"Oui, monsieur."

Business as usual.

French Will Retaliate.

PARIS, May 10 (A. P.).—The French Government announced today its intention of replying with air bombardments on other than military objectives if the Germans bomb such targets.

The French Government "proclaims publicly that it reserved and does reserve the right of recourse to any action which it would consider appropriate in case of bombardment by the enemy of civil populations in France, Britain or the countries aided by France," the announcement said.

The French pointed out that they had assured Mr. Roosevelt that orders had been given the air force prohibiting bombardment of civil populations and limiting bombardments to military objectives.

The air force now, however, is to await action by the enemy, the announcement said.

French

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 10—The following French communiqué was issued tonight:

The attack by German troops on Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg was preceded by an aerial attack on a large scale during the early hours of May 10. Besides the bombing attacks, many enemy detachments were landed by airplanes or by parachutes at various points in Belgium and Holland.

In Holland especially these detachments tried to take airdromes by surprise. On the whole, they were successfully counter-attacked by local troops.

The enemy's aerial attack, which began in the latter part of the night on French territory, was continued during the day. Some aerial damage of small importance was the only result of this bombing.

Our fighters and anti-aircraft came into action against these expeditions and inflicted heavy loss on the German aviation. Forty-four enemy planes were brought down on French territory.

The Netherland, Belgian and Luxembourg Governments have appealed to the Allies, and this morning French and British troops at once responded to this appeal and advanced on a front extending from the North Sea to the Moselle.

Their progress continues in Belgium territory. Sharp fighting has taken place in Luxembourg territory, where German attacks extend to the region of Sierck and slightly to the east of the Moselle.

This morning's communiqué said:

During the early hours of May 10 German troops began to penetrate the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg.

The French armies had been put on the alert during the night.

The governments concerned appealed to the Allied governments. Moreover, the enemy undertook aerial bombing activity in the north and east of France.

Several enemy planes, the number of which is not yet known here, were brought down both by anti-aircraft guns and pursuit planes.

ITALY ACCEPTS NAZI MOVE AS ONE MORE COUP

Rome Looks at Invasion as Another Defeat in Speed for Allies.

WITHOUT INVOLVING ITSELF

Diplomats Expect Mussolini to Stay Out of War Until All Repercussions Are Over.

ROME, May 10 (A. P.).—Italy accepted the German invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg today as another beating in speed for the Allies without involving Italy in the war.

Newspapers announced the invasion with streamer headlines, with "Allies Beaten Once Again in Swiftness," their only comment.

Rome was criss-crossed by a network of feverish diplomatic activity as ambassadors exchanged views, some of them calling at the Foreign Ministry.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count Andre de Kerchove, saw Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, presumably to inform him of Belgium's reaction to the invasion.

It was assumed the British and French ambassadors also would seek interviews for a similar purpose.

Phillips Sees Ciano.

United States Ambassador William Phillips was summoned to the Chigi Palace to see Count Ciano.

Confidence that Italy is remaining out of the war for the present was indicated by the United States embassy in refraining from advising Americans in Rome to leave the country.

The absence of any such recommendation even after the German invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg was considered significant.

The almost unanimous impression in diplomatic circles was that Premier Mussolini would keep Italy out of the war until the meaning of its new stroke and its repercussions became apparent.

Gayda Backs Nazis.

Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, indorsed the German allegation that the invasion of the lowland neutrals had been executed only to forestall similar action by the Allies.

After asserting that both sides sought a more direct field of battle, Gayda wrote that this had been particularly evident on the part of the Allies.

"It happened again today," he wrote, "that the Germans have won the race and prevent the initiative in decisions and action from escaping them."

As a consequence, the editor said, the war "assumes its natural immediate characteristic also in respect to its necessary violence from which the Allies hoped to escape by cutting off Europe's economic liberty."

The first Italian news of Hitler's move came in a brief dispatch by Stefani, the official Italian news agency. Even then some officials of the Italian Press Ministry said that they were unaware of the news.

Belgian Envoy Sees Ciano

ROME, May 10 (AP).—The Belgian Ambassador to Italy, Count Andre de Kerchove de Denterghem, saw Foreign Minister Count Ciano today, presumably to inform him of Belgium's reaction to the German invasion. It was assumed that the British and French Ambassadors also would seek interviews for a similar purpose.

While diplomats awaited a definition of Italian policy, many speculated on the possible influence King Vittorio Emmanuele III might exert since Italy's Princess Marie Jose is a sister of King Leopold III of Belgium. Marie Jose is the wife of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, who commands Italy's northern armies.

Pavolini Flying Back to Rome

ROME, May 10 (AP).—The Italian Propaganda Minister, Alessandro Pavolini, who had been called to Berlin for consultations with German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, started back to Rome in a German government plane this afternoon.

ANTI-BRITISH PLACARDS ARE PUT UP IN ROME

Thousands Deridng England Pasted In Streets By Blackshirts

Most Consist Of Excerpts Of Speeches Made By Chamberlain

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Saturday, May 11—Thousands of posters deriding England were tacked up during the night in Rome's principal squares by Italian Blackshirts.

Headed "England's failure," the posters warned against British aid. They consisted almost entirely of former Prime Minister Chamberlain's speeches, with a few from other British leaders.

Six titles summed up their contents:

"Look out for English aid."

"Serious threat to England."

Cite Failure in Norway

"Our plan failed" (referring to Chamberlain's words admitting failure in Norway).

"Brilliant pages of English military tradition."

"Always late."

"Nightmare of menace."

Many of the posters were plastered on automobiles parked in the streets.

Not all read the same; some were headed "unanswerable testimony of Franco-British defeat," while others bore the caption "England has missed the bus."

POPE IS SHOCKED BY NEW INVASION

Vatican Editor Bitterly Condemns Nazi Move.

VATICAN CITY, May 10 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII is "shocked and deeply grieved" by Germany's invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, high Vatican quarters said today, and L'Osservatore Romano strongly condemned the Nazi action, saying civilization would "sorrowfully" protest.

The reproof in the Vatican City newsaper was written by its editor-in-chief, Count [illegible] Torre.

Challenging the German explanation for the invasion, the newsaper said: "Belgium and Holland always have preserved their neutrality with scrupulous vigilance, with vigorous loyalty."

Of Luxemburg, it said, "There never was any question."

"It is horrible," the newspaper said of the invasion.

"That most heartfelt sense of humanity, of Christian charity, of Christian conception of relations among nations, of the bases of peaceful civilization cannot fail to be wounded by it, to rise up sorrowfully and sorrowfully to protest."

Vatican quarters said the Pope particularly was affected by the invasion of Belgium, because "King Leopold is one of the most devoutly Catholic of modern rulers."

Air Raid Warden Beaten Up in Belfast

BELFAST, May 10 (A. P.).—Armed men dragged John Quinn, an air raid precautions warden, into the street last night and beat him so badly he had to be hospitalized.

Spain Determined To Be Neutral

MADRID, May 10 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's latest adventure has not shaken Spain's determination to remain neutral, it was indicated in official quarters tonight.

No Comment by Soviet On Latest Nazi Thrusts

Radio Gives Simply German Bulletin on Operations

MOSCOW, May 10 (AP).—A special Soviet news broadcast this afternoon gave without comment a German bulletin on operations in Holland and Luxemburg, and the British announcement of the occupation of Iceland.

An article in "Pravda," official Communist organ, said the so-called neutrals should ponder the "help" given by the British and French to Norway. Reviewing the situation in the Mediterranean, the article said that the British and French "undoubtedly want to increase their possibilities for pressure on Italy as well as on the Balkans with the purpose of preparation of new fronts."

Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg, German Ambassador to Russia, visited Premier Vlacheslav Molotov this afternoon. No official statement has been made regarding the meeting.

Confidence that a Yugoslav-Russian trade agreement would be reached shortly was expressed today by members of the Yugoslav delegation, who said the trade talks were proceeding "successfully."

MOSCOW, May 10 (A. P.).—Confidence that a Russo-Yugoslav trade agreement would be reached soon was expressed today by members of the Yugoslav delegation, who said that the trade talks were proceeding successfully.

A Slovak cultural delegation, which has been visiting Moscow, planned to leave tomorrow for Leningrad, from where it will go to Germany via Riga, Latvia.

DUTCH COMMUNIQUE NO. 1

PARIS, May 10 (AP).—Havas News Agency today carried the following as the Netherlands' first communique:

"German troops have crossed the Netherlands frontier starting at 3 o'clock.

"Aerial attacks have been launched on some airdromes."

"The army and anti-aircraft artillery are ready.

"The inundations are proceeding according to plans.

"At present as far as one knows at least six German planes have been shot down."

A later communique said:

"German troops passed through the Dutch border during the night, and our border troops were fulfilling their tasks.

"They succeeded in carrying out their trust. Bridges over the Maas and Waal have been demolished by them.

"East of Arnhem, 15 miles from the German-Dutch border, Germans have advanced to Ijsel.

"In the interior, enemy planes tried to land, and in some places dropped parachutes, and planes landed.

"These landings were partly unsuccessful, and parachutists who dressed in Netherlands uniforms have been surrounded and destroyed.

"Over various places Germans dropped pamphlets which are untrue and threats against the Dutch.

"The High Command urged the population not to believe such utterances, which are only intended to create disorders.

"The Dutch are executing measures imposed by the acts and words of the Queen for the defense of the Netherlands soil."

Daring Sentiment In the Balkans

SOFIA (A. P.).—Bulgaria's censors were censured by new Premier Bogdan Philoff for "stifling the expression of our people's thoughts."

In his first speech to Parliament, he declared newspaper men and authors should be freed from government restrictions. Philoff, an archeologist until he entered politics two years ago, is himself a prolific writer—on scientific subjects.

Yugoslavia Increases Army.

BELGRADE, May 10 (A. P.).—Yugoslavia called 100,000 more men to the colors today as southeastern European nations took new military precautions in light of the spreading war. Previously 600,000 Yugoslavs had been reported under arms.

Hungary, Bulgaria and Greece rushed additional troops to their frontiers.

The Rumanian Cabinet met with King Carol in Bucharest and dreed new military measures.

Rumania Shuts Black Sea Ports

BUCHAREST, May 10 (AP).—The Rumanian Army ordered today the closing from dawn to dusk of Constanza and other Black Sea ports. The significance of the measure was not disclosed.

BALKAN NATIONS BREATHE EASIER

Lowlands Invasion Seen as Reprieve for Southeast.

BUDAPEST, May 10 (By telephone to New York) (A. P.).—The German invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands today was taken in Balkan capitals as a reprieve for southeastern Europe.

The belief was expressed that Germany and the Allies would be so occupied with extension of the western front that the southeast would be spared war, at least for the present.

Officials were apprehensive, however, that like the lowland countries all Europe eventually would be drawn into the conflict and orders were issued in all Balkan capitals for redoubled vigilance.

Informed sources said the fear of further spread was based on belief that whichever side is unsuccessful on the lowland front will want to open up a new front for operations in some other quarter of Europe.

"England and France now must prove once and for all whether they are capable of resisting Germany," they declared. "Otherwise all other countries now left in peace in Europe automatically will knuckle under to Hitler."

War Is Declared By Curacao, in The West Indies

Dutch Territory Proclaims Martial Law as Germans Try to Destroy 4 Ships

WILLEMSTAD, Dutch West Indies, May 10 (AP).—The Governor proclaimed today a state of war against Germany in the territory of Curacao, a possession of Holland. It was the first such declaration in the American Hemisphere in this war, except for Canada.

Martial law was put into effect after the crews of four German ships in harbor here and at Aruba attempted to scuttle or set fire to their vessels. One German was reported to have been killed when he resisted Dutch authorities.

Soon after word was received that Germany and Holland were at war, the Patricia and Alemania were set afire by their crews, but quick action by fire fighters controlled the flames. Sea cocks were opened by the crew on the Henry Horn, but the authorities closed them. The vessel was left listing.

Other German vessels in the harbor were safe. German crews were picked up and sent to Bonaire.

All Germans in the rich oil-shipping island of Aruba were detained and sent by steamer to an unidentified island. One hundred and fifty French marines from the French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc landed there tonight fully equipped.

The crew of the German ship Antilla set fire to their vessel and almost burned it out. The crew was detailed.

The proclamation of a state of war and martial law in Curacao followed attempts by the crews of three other German ships to scuttle or burn their ships. The destructive attempts were frustrated.

The population remained calm, and it was said that any offers of help from outside world would be refused.

The Governor General, declaring the Indies as part of the Netherlands kingdom to be at war with Germany, said the Government was in position to guard the island territories and would reject all offers of outside assistance.

This was in line with the Netherlands Government's announcement last month, following Tokyo's expression of concern, that it neither wanted nor would seek the assistance of a third power in protecting the Indies.

All Germans over 16 will be interned, the Governor General's office announced. There are said to be between 2,000 and 3,000 Germans in the East Indies.

Sixteen German merchantmen which took refuge in East Indies ports early in the war were seized. It was reported they had been preparing to attempt a dash to the friendly Russian Far Eastern port of Siberia.

Willemstad, Netherlands West Indies, May 10 (AP)—The Governor of the Netherlands West Indies proclaimed a state of war against Germany today and ordered martial law put into effect after crews of four German ships in harbor here and at Aruba attempted to scuttle or set fire to their vessels.

Whole Of Dutch East Indies Placed Under Martial Law

Governor General Warns Other Nations That Any Offer Of Help Would Be Unwelcome

[By the Associated Press]

Aruba, Netherlands West Indies, May 10—One hundred and fifty French marines, from the cruiser Jeanne d'Arc, landed here tonight. They were fully equipped.

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, May 10—The entire Netherlands East Indies, richest Dutch colonial possession, were placed under martial law today by Governor General Tjarda van Starckenborgh Stachouwer, who proclaimed the Indies to be at war with Germany and warned other nations that any offer of help would be unwelcome.

This was interpreted as a reference to an official Japanese statement of concern on April 15 over the status of the Indies if the Netherlands were to be involved in the European war.

DUTCH PACIFIC ISLES DECLARE MILITARY RULE

Governor-General Warns No Help Is Needed to Defend East Indies.

BATAVIA, May 10 (A. P.).—Gov. Gen. Tjarda van Starckenborgh Stachouwer issued a proclamation today placing the entire Dutch East Indies under martial law.

In a broadcast he declared that the Indies as a part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands were at war with Germany but that their status was otherwise unchanged.

He said that the Government was able to guard the East Indies and that any help from other nations would be rejected as unwelcome.

That statement was believed here to refer to an official Tokio declaration of April 15 expressing Japanese concern over any change in the status of the Dutch East Indies as a result of the possible involvement of the Netherlands in the European war.

2,000 Germans in Islands.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull on April 17 issued a formal statement asserting that any intervention in the East Indies "would be prejudicial to the cause of stability, peace and security in the entire Pacific area."

The Netherlands Government subsequently announced that it neither desired nor would request any third Power protection in the East Indies.

The Governor-General's office announced that all Germans over 16 years old would be interned. Between 2,000 and 3,000 Germans are believed to be in the Dutch East Indies.

Nineteen German cargo ships taking refuge in Dutch East Indian ports were reported seized, their crews interned. It was said that they had been preparing for a dash to the Russian Siberian port of Vladivostok.

Tokio Declares Unconcern.

TOKIO, May 10 (A. P.).—Germany's invasion of the Netherlands has brought no concern in Japan over the Dutch East Indies, Yakichiro Suma, the Foreign Office spokesman, said today. Japan, he said, is following a policy of "strict non-involvement."

He said Japan had no evidence to indicate that the European move would affect the East Indies.

"Germany is too busy in Europe to pay attention to the East Indies," he said, adding that there was no indication that Great Britain was planning protective custody of the Netherlands' rich and strategic colonial possession.

In proclaiming that Japan is "maintaining a policy of strict non-involvement," Mr. Suma said that there was no need for special measures to enforce this policy.

MackenzieKing Puts Casgrain In His Cabinet

House Speaker Is Named StateSecretaryinShuffle, Mackinnon in Trade Post

OTTAWA, May 10 (AP).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King in a Cabinet shuffle today brought Pierre Casgrain, Speaker of the House of Commons, into his government as Secretary of State and appointed J. A. Mackinnor, of Edmonton, formerly Minister Without Portfolio, to head the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Mackinnon succeeds W. D. Euler, who left the Trade and Commerce Ministry to fill a Senate vacancy. The duties of Secretary of State had been carried on by Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe since the death of Fernand Rinfret last July.

C. G. Power, Acting Defense Minister in the absence of Norman Rogers, who is in England, was one of those in consultation with the Prime Minister, after which he called a meeting of the Defense Council.

Jean Desy, Canadian Minister to the joint legation serving Belgium and Holland, was still in Brussels at 6 a. m. Several messages were received from him during the night, it was learned. It was understood the Prime Minister had conferred with Baron Robert Silver Cruys, the Belgian Minister, and others in the diplomatic service.

Meantime it was announced from the office of the Custodian of Enemy Property that banks had been notified to take into protective custody accounts held in Canada by interests of Holland, Luxemburg and Belgium. Thus assets of the three invaded countries were "frozen" in the Dominion to prevent their withdrawal and possibility of falling into German hands.

There was no immediate announcement of steps to be taken in regard to shipping of the newly invaded countries that might be in Canadian waters, but it was presumed they would be held under Allied jurisdiction, as were Danish ships when Denmark was taken over by the Germans.

London Says Hague Has Been Bombed.

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—An unofficial British statement today said that The Hague, the seacoast capital of the Netherlands, had been bombed by the German invaders. "Our air attache at The Hague was nearly killed by a bomb which fell close to the Foreign Office early this morning," the statement said.

Dutch Anti-Aircraft Nearly Down Own Envoy Seeking English Aid

London, May 10 (AP)—A Netherlands seaplane bringing Dutch Foreign Minister Eelco van Kleffens to England to ask for help made a forced landing at Brighton today with leaking gas tanks, punctured by Dutch anti-aircraft guns covering the flight against German bombers.

"It was a very close shave," said van Kleffens, who was accompanied by his wife and the Netherlands Colonial Minister, Charles J. I. M. Welter.

"Off the Dutch coast six German bombers appeared overhead high in the sky. Our anti-aircraft went into action immediately to cover our flight. Unfortunately they shelled us."

'Shall Not Pass This Time'—Belgium.

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—"They shall not pass this time," Belgium's Ambassador to London promised today a few hours after Germany invaded his homeland and neighboring Holland.

The envoy, Baron Cartier de Machienne, declared: "We have been invaded savagely, although we offered no offense."

Broadcast Is Delayed With Good Reason

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.). The British Broadcasting Company was late with its 8 A. M. news broadcast.

When it finally started, the announcer said:

"I must apologize for keeping you waiting—Germany has just invaded Holland and Belgium."

Londoners, In Blackout, Go About Their Business

London, May 10 (AP)—Londoners went about their business as usual tonight of taking their fun where they found it—only it was a little harder to find.

It was there, but the going was more tedious for the crowds—outwardly oblivious to the war's critical turn—as a result of rigidly enforced total blackout precautions.

Even Hyde Park had its customary quota of hand-holding strollers and high-pitched soap-box orators and out-of-tune choristers.

Virtually the only change noticeable in the night routine was the appearance of more gas masks.

Stop-the-war Candidate Defeated in England

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—Major E. G. R. Lloyd, National Government candidate, today defeated Annie Maxton, a stop-the-war candidate, in a by-election to fill the House of Commons seat left vacant when the Marquis of Clydesdale went to the House of Lords on becoming the Duke of Hamilton. The vote was 34,316 to 8,206.

'It's Started at Last, Is London View

LONDON, May 10 (A. P.).—Sir Dudley Pound, Chief of the British Naval Staff, today entered No. 10 Downing street, Prime Minister Chamberlain's official residence, with this remark to bystanders:

"Well, it has started at last."

British Call It "Quite Untrue"

LONDON, May 11 (Saturday) (AP).—The British Air Ministry described today as "quite untrue" and a "further example of German mendacity" a German allegation that Allied planes bombed an unfortified German town (Freiburg) and killed twenty-four civilians.

British Securities Sale Outside Realm Curbed

Treasury Issues Order Requiring License And Proof Enemy Will Not Benefit

London, May 10 (AP)—The British Treasury announced tonight an order in council, effective next Monday, forbidding sale without special license of securities in the United Kingdom by persons living outside the area where the pound sterling is the monetary basis.

Licenses, it was said, can "normally" be obtained through banks and stock brokers in the United Kingdom "provided that the securities are shown to have been neither in ownership nor under control of an enemy since September 2 and that no direct or indirect benefit to the enemy is involved." Control was said to have been made necessary by "the German invasion of neutral countries."

The order strengthens existing regulations regarding the transfer of securities from residents of the United Kingdom to non-residents and prohibits the issue of securities in bearer form.

4 Bombs Hit British Town

LONDON, May 10 (AP).—An unofficial British announcement said today four incendiary bombs had been dropped by German raiders early this morning at Chilham, near Canterbury in Kent, about forty miles southeast of London. The captain of a searchlight unit, protecting against air raids, was quoted as confirming the report.

Two Heinkel bombing planes were chased away from the southeast coast of England this afternoon by anti-aircraft fire and British fighting planes.

British Air Ministry Issues Casualty List

List Of 33 Killed, 10 Wounded Brings Announced Totals To 707 And 120

London, May 10 (AP)—The Air Ministry tonight issued a casualty list covering an unspecified period, showing:

In Action—14 killed, 6 wounded, 37 missing.

On Active Service—19 killed, 4 wounded, 12 died.

The list brought the announced totals to 252 killed, 45 wounded and 245 missing in action and 455 killed, 75 wounded and 224 died on active service.

Canadian Clubs Appeal For Tour By Cromwell

Association Writes Hull People "Would Be Delighted" If Visit Could Delay Departure

Ottawa, May 10 (AP)—The Association of Canadian Clubs today addressed a letter to Cordell Hull, Secretary of State of the United States, suggesting it would please Canadian people if J. H. R. Cromwell, American Minister to Canada, could postpone his scheduled May 21 departure and make a tour of Canada.

Cromwell recently announced he would resign May 21, the date of the primary elections in which he is a candidate for Democratic nomination as New Jersey Senator. He said he regretted he would be unable to make a proposed tour of the Dominion.

In its letter to Hull, the association said "if it would be possible to defer Mr. Cromwell's departure from Canada until after the summer months so he could make the tour of this country that he had planned, the Canadian people as a whole would be delighted."

War Won't Change U. S. Navy Plans In Pacific

Honolulu, May 10 (AP)—The office of Admiral James O. Richardson, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, said today developments in the European war will not alter plans to send the fleet to Lahaina Roads Monday for further training.

Rumors that some ships would be sent to augment the Asiatic fleet were termed in naval circles "a pipe-dream."

Naval men said shore liberty would not be curtailed.

To Censor Broadcast Of Hawaiian Blackout

Army Officers Will Take Steps To Prevent Listeners From Being Alarmed

Honolulu, May 10 (AP)—A projected national broadcast of the blackout of Hawaii next Thursday during army maneuvers will be censored to prevent alarming listeners, army officers promised today.

The Hawaii Tourist Bureau had expressed fear the broadcast might lead to mass hysteria, similar to that which greeted Orson Welles' "Martian Invasion."

The scene would be perfect, with the spread of war in Europe and fear that it might involve Japan and the United States in the Dutch East Indies. The entire American fleet is concentrated in Hawaiian waters.

Gannett Would Aid Allies By Private Finance Plan

Advocates Syndicate Action to Prevent U. S. Involvement

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 10 (AP). Frank R. Gannett, Rochester publisher and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, proposed today a plan for private financial backing for the Allies which he believed would minimize danger of American war involvement.

Blaming Allied reverses for "acceptance of the idea that we are going to get into the war," Mr. Gannett advocated, in an interview, a syndicate of American private interests to buy up English and French securities and provide credit.

"The Allies," he said, "have in America several billions of dollars in securities. It would be disastrous to the stock market and to our own business conditions if these securities should be dumped on the market.

"I believe strong private financial interests could form a pool and take over at least a part of these securities and thus give the Allies all the credit they may need here. This would be much better than having the government take any steps in helping the Allies financially."

U. S. IS FACING INVOLVEMENT, WILLKIE SAYS

Utilities Magnate Declares It Would Be Foolhardy To Get In War Now

"We Should Show Our Sympathy With Allies," However, He Adds

[By the Associated Press]

Minneapolis, May 10—Wendell Willkie, New York utilities magnate who is currently talked of as a potential Republican Presidential nominee, today said that the United States faces possible involvement in Europe's war.

"If Germany and Russia get away with what they are doing now," Willkie told interviewers here, "some day we'll probably have to meet them in a contest of arms.

"It would be foolhardy for us to get into war at this time—I don't think we should get into this war at all—but we should show our sympathy for the Allies."

Not Active Candidate

Willkie consented to fill a speaking engagement tomorrow night, still insisting he is not actively a candidate for the Republican nomination, but:

"Of course I would be gratified if I were nominated for President—and I would be doubly pleased if President Roosevelt were the opposing candidate. Mr. Roosevelt is the ablest advocate of the New Deal philosophy, and I think the issues should be drawn sharply and put up to the country to decide.

"I would want to lick the champ, not Galento."

Job No Disadvantage

The tall, thick-chested president of the Comomnwealth and Southern did not agree with commentators who have suggested his connection with a big utility firm would be a disadvantage to him as a candidate.

"I should think," he said, "the Roosevelt family had more of a stake in the utilities than I have. I'm sure they hold more stock in General Electric than I have in Commonwealth and Southern."

Willkie will speak over a nation-wide CBS radio hookup at 9.30 P. M. Saturday from St. Paul.

Roosevelt Holds Status Unchanged

MAY 9—1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 10—President Roosevelt today expressed "full sympathy" with Queen Wilhelmina's proclamation that Germany violated a "solemn promise" by invading Holland, but said there was no change in the United States neutral status.

The President told reporters that they could put these words in direct quotations:

"I think I can say personally I am in full sympathy with the very excellent statement that was given out, the proclamation by the Queen of the Netherlands, and let it go at that. It is worth reading."

(In her proclamation the Queen also addressed "a flaming protest against this unexampled violation of good faith and what is considered decent between civilized nations.")

"Situation" Speaks For Self

There was not much else he could say about the situation abroad, Mr. Roosevelt asserted. It spoke for itself, he said.

Asked if he "would care to say at this time what you think the chances are that we can keep out of the war." Mr. Roosevelt replied, no, explaining that would be speculative.

In other words, he hastened to add, don't for heaven's sake say that means that we may get in.

To do so, the President said, would be writing completely off on a limb.

Asked whether "there has been any change" since the President's speech to the nation immediately after the outbreak of war in September, in which he said that there would be no blackout of peace in the United States, he replied that there had been none.

Reconsidering German Pledge

Mr. Roosevelt said that a German pledge not to bomb "open" unfortified towns was being considered in the light of reports of the bombing of such cities.

Later, Secretary of State Cordell Hull told reporters that the State Department was gathering all the information it could from American envoys on whether German planes were bombing unfortified cities in Holland and Belgium.

President Roosevelt crowded into his busy day today four conferences with representatives of the Lowland Countries invaded during the night by German troops.

Hull said the department has been assembling such information since the beginning of the war.

The Secretary who had conferred shortly before with the President, also indicated to his press conference that consultations would be held with the Latin American republics concerning the status of Dutch possessions in the Western hemisphere.

West Indies Question Open

Hull said that no effort had been made at his conference today with the Dutch Minister, Dr. A. Loudon, to reach any decisions with regard to the Dutch West Indies.

He said also that no communication had been sent to the Japanese Government with regard to the Dutch East Indies.

Both Japan and the United States recently issued statements urging the maintenance of the status quo there regardless of invasion of Holland by Germany.

Cudahy informed the State Department just before noon today that German forces had overrun the whole of Luxembourg and all of Limeburg, a province of Holland.

The Ambassador's information was given by telephone to American Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris who relayed it to Secretary Hull.

Bomb Strikes Near Embassy

Cudahy said there was heavy fighting going on in the Ardens forest.

MAY 9—1940

He added that he had almost been knocked down by a bomb which struck about 300 feet from the American Embassy in Brussels and that one of his ears had been deafened. A number of windows were shattered, he said.

American Minister George A. Gordon in The Hague telephoned the State Department that he had been informed that German ground forces had attacked along the entire eastern Dutch frontier.

Gordon reported that parachute troops had attempted to land at Delf and was in the midst of saying that three German planes had been seen from the American chancery when his call was cut off.

At about 8 A. M., a few hours before seeing the press, Mr. Roosevelt had signed an order to "freeze" all Dutch and Belgium credits in this country. Then the President had conferred for thirty-five minutes with key foreign and military advisers.

With regard to possible extension of the zone of dangerous waters around northern Europe from which American shipping is barred under the Neutrality Act, Mr. Roosevelt said that no change is contemplated in its status.

He had been asked whether it might be extended to the Dutch West or East Indies.

How About Congress?

A reporter remarked that until last night there had been a strong effort under way to get Congress to adjourn the first week in June. He inquired whether the President believed the current situation across the Atlantic "warrants Congress remaining in session."

Mr. Roosevelt said he had given that matter no thought.

Gathered in solemn conference about Mr Roosevelt's desk, these advisers canvassed further possible actions demanded by Germany's invasion of the Netherlands and Belgium:

Secretary of State Hull and Under Secretary Sumner Welles of the State Department; Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, White House naval aide.

The White House conference lasted thirty-five minutes but details were withheld pending a press conference with the President.

Upon its conclusion Admiral Stark indicated that the United States fleet would remain in Hawaiian waters for some time despite the completion of war maneuvers in the area.

AMERICANS SAFE IN NETHERLANDS

U. S. Minister Reports on All but One Family.

WASHINGTON, May 10 (A. P.).—Americans in the Hague, Amsterdam and Rotterdam were reported safe today by George A. Gordon, United States Minister to The Netherlands.

Mr. Gordon, barely able to conduct the telephone conversation on account of the noise of anti-aircraft and machine-gun fire, told Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles that all Americans in The Hague consular district had been "brought in" and were safe, except for one family that lived in an outlying district. A military attache had gone out to escort it to the city.

The State Department was unable to say whether Mr. Gordon meant in saying "brought in" that the Americans had been taken to the embassy.

At the beginning of this year 892 Americans lived in the Netherlands. There were 747 in Belgium and sixty-five in Luxemburg.

Consul General Frank C. Lee in Amsterdam told Mr. Welles at 5:35 A. M., Eastern standard time, that because of the closing of the borders he had instructed Americans "to sit tight" and keep in touch with him.

Mr. Lee described Amsterdam as quiet, but he said he had heard that there was some firing in the streets of Rotterdam.

that Brussels, which had been bombed by Nazi planes, is an open city and that no troops are stationed there.

The department immediately communicated this message to the German Foreign Office through the United States embassy in Berlin.

The Belgian request was conveyed through Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in London, who had received it by phone from United States Ambassador John Cudahy in Brussels, who said that during the bombing a house near the United States embassy was hit.

George A. Gordon, United States Minister to the Netherlands, telegraphed the State Department that the Netherlands Government considered itself to be in a state of war with Germany and had asked aid from Great Britain and France.

Mr. Gordon reported that the Netherlands frontier had been crossed by the Germans, who had bombed military objectives, including the airfield at Waalhaven.

He said the Dutch had opened anti-aircraft fire in the vicinity of The Hague. The commercial attache at the American embassy said he saw two bombs dropped in the outskirts of the city.

WASHINGTON, May 10 (A. P.).—Representative Shanley, Democrat, of Connecticut, said today that the United States would not permit transfer of the Dutch West Indies to Germany or any other nation as a result of Holland's invasion.

Remarking that the Dutch West Indies were in the Caribbean Sea, "where absolute height of sea power must be held, maintained and defended by the United States," Mr. Shanley, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee termed the Indies "the Achilles heel of Panama Canal and the Atlantic defenses."

30.24-2177

Concerning the Dutch East Indies, Mr. Shanley remarked that they were "out of sphere."

Pan-American Discussion in Order

Later this afternoon Secretary Hull indicated that consultations would be held with the Latin American republics concerning the status of the Dutch possessions in the Western Hemisphere. This matter has not quite reached the stage of discussion yet, he added.

Naturally, he continued, the United States Government will discuss with the American republics any and all questions that may arise in which they are concerned.

Mr. Hull said that no effort had been made at his conference today with the Dutch Minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, to reach any decisions with regard to the Dutch West Indies.

He said also that no communication had been sent to the Japanese Government with regard to the Dutch East Indies.

Zimmerman Notified Here.

Emil C. Zimmerman, Trade Commissioner of the Dutch East Indies, with offices at 10 Rockefeller Center, New York, received at noon today the following cable message from the Department of Economic Affairs at Batavia:

"Netherlands Indies situation quiet. Our necessary preacutions taken. All enemy males above 16 years interned and enemy property, including about 100,000 tons loaded ships, seized.

"Attach greatest importance continuation normal business.

"Home Government firmly resolved fight to finish and refuse any negotiations with enemy.

"No news yet concerning Allied support, but will keep you posted."

Reports German Missile Hit 300 Feet From Embassy

WASHINGTON, May 10 (AP).—John Cudahy, American Ambassador at Brussels, informed the State Department just before noon today that German forces had overrun the whole of Luxemburg and all of Limberg, a province of Holland.

The ambassador's information was given by telephone to American Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris, who relayed it to Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

He added that he had almost been knocked down by a bomb which struck about 300 feet from the American Embassy in Brussels and that one of his ears had been deafened. REPORTS RETAKING OF DUTCH AIRPORT

MAY 11 1940

Holland's Envoy Is Told of Heavy Nazi Losses.

WASHINGTON, May 10 (A. P.).—Dr. A. Loudon, the Netherlands Minister to the United States, said at the White House today that he had been informed by his country's Minister in London that more than seventy German planes had been brought down in Holland.

A landing force of parachutists had been destroyed at the Hook of Holland, and an airport at the Hague, called Ypenburg, has been recaptured, Mr. Loudon told reporters on the basis of his London information.

He said "another force of parachutists which landed on the beach near the village of Wassenwaar, sixteen miles north of The Hague, is being cleaned up."

He added that he was sorry to have to report that Rotterdam's airport, Wallhaven, still was occupied by German forces.

He said he had had no direct reports from The Hague.

With reference to his conference with the President, he said it was a "very agreeable talk." The Minister added that Mr. Roosevelt was "very interested" in the proclamation of Queen Wilhelmina, to which the President referred earlier at a press conference. He said the President had repeated to him what he had said at that conference.

Before going to the White House Mr. Loudon said that German ships in the Dutch East Indies and West Indies had been interned.

Seemingly calm at a press conference despite the strain put on him by Germany's invasion of his country, Dr. Loudon said also he was ready to undertake the work of general paymaster for Dutch officials working abroad, for which he has already received instructions.

He said these instructions go into effect in case Amsterdam falls.

Allies Increase Orders in U. S. For Warplanes

Contracts for 2,000 Here in Last Few Days Raise Month's Total to 4,000

MAY 11 1940

WASHINGTON, May 10 (AP).—Aviation authorities said today that the British and French governments had ordered 2,000 or more additional American-made warplanes in the last few days.

The new contracts, for the latest type fighting planes and bombers developed for the United States Army Air Corps, were said to have boosted the Allies' purchases within the last month to 4,000 or more military aircraft.

The latest Allied plane purchases coincided with authoritative reports that the Anglo-French Purchasing Mission contemplated relying more heavily on the United States for aerial reinforcements than originally planned, in view of the European war's new turn and official admissions by the British that the Allies were inferior to Germany in air power.

The latest orders included an undisclosed number of Martin bombers and of a fast new pursuit plane developed for the Air Corps by the North American Aviation Corporation, of Inglewood, Calif.

Congress Ready To Increase U.S. Defense Plans

MAY 11 1940

Hears Roosevelt May Ask Arms for Million; House Clamors for Bigger Fleet

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The new European war explosion produced strong indications today of a quick acceleration of American national-defense preparations.

With many members apparently in a mood to disregard expense, Congress heard that President Roosevelt contemplated asking both an immediate expansion of the Army and Navy and reviving a War Department recommendation for reserve arms and supplies costing altogether $500,000,000 or more.

Added to appropriations already made or pending, this would raise the total defense outlay for the fiscal year beginning July 1 to $2,266,796,512.

In the House there was a chorus of demands for an immediate reenforcement of defenses as a result of the developments abroad.

At the White House the President received recommendations from the heads of the armed forces within a few hours after the invasion of Holland and Belgium. There was no direct word from the conference itself, but legislators said they heard from Administration officials that funds might be asked within a few days to carry out a long-standing War Department aim of acquiring remaining equipment for an army of a million men.

For the immediate future, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, already has recommended expansion of the regular army by 15,000 men.

One well informed source in Congress said that, until last night, the War Department had been working on estimates for a $210,000,000 deficiency appropriation, including $45,000,000 for 200 additional four-motored bombers.

"As a result of the invastion of Belgium and Holland," this source said, "the ante may be raised as high as $400,000,000."

Meanwhile, Chairman Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, went ahead with plans for the House Naval Committee's extraordinary study of the Navy's entire shipbuilding and aircraft program. He said the size of the additional appropriation to be sought for that service at this session would depend largely upon the findings of that committee.

Chairman Vinson added, however, that it would be substantially larger than the $46,000,000 originally estimated by the Navy as necessary to expand existing shipyard facilities and provide the initial funds for starting work on the projected 11 per cent expansion of the fleet.

The House naval expert said his committee would inquire first into whether existing laws, such as the Walsh-Healy act regulating wages and hours of government contractors, were interfering with the Navy's shipbuilding program. He said representatives of the private shipbuilding industry would be summoned to testify.

Immediately thereafter, Mr. Vinson said, the committee would examine the Navy's aviation program to determine whether the fleet should have more planes and pilots.

Representative Patrick H. Drewry, Democrat, of Virginia, second ranking member of the Naval Committee, said he thought Congress ought immediately to authorize the full 25 per cent fleet expansion originally recommended by the Navy. It would cost about $1,300,000,000, compared to $655,000,000 for the 11 per cent expansion measure now pending in the Senate.

Chairman Vinson contended, however, that 11 per cent was all the nation's building facilities could handle at this time.

Talk of holding Congress in continuous session developed, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, proposed that Congress formally express its desire to remain here ready "to meet any eventuality."

Speaker Bankhead said, however, that despite the "frightful" news from Europe he found no reason to believe the session should be prolonged. Leaders had planned for adjournment the first week of June.

In their comment on the broadening of the conflict, some members urged the country to a calm appraisal of the situation, others speculated on the chances of American involvement and still others declared for prompt aid—short of an actual expeditionary force—to the Allies.

Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, declared for "every assistance short of actually sending over an expeditionary force" and added "Germany ought to be wiped off the face of this earth."

Senator William H. King, Democrat, of Utah, likewise advocated sending "military supplies to help the Belgians and the Dutch defend their countries."

Representative Sol Bloom, Democratic, of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, asserted that the government should "deliberate and ponder very carefully what is happening throughout the world, but nothing should be done that would in any way involve us in this war."

Senator Key Pittman, Democratic, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that the German invasion of Holland and Belgium had given the United States renewed cause to watch for development in the Orient.

Observing that the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries was "not unexpected," Senator Pittman commented:

"It again demonstrates that totalitarian powers are unrestrained by any precepts of divine or human law. Absolute obedience to a single commander undoubtedly makes for the greatest expedition and efficiency in war, which it is difficult to obtain under a democracy. Our government has cause to watch developments in the Orient."

WAR SPREAD JOLTS SECURITY MARKETS

Curtailment Of U. S. Merchandise Exports Feared-Cotton Prices Fall

MAY 11 1940

Officials Worried Over Supply Of Rubber And Tin From Dutch East Indies

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 10—Economic reverberations of war in the low countries jolted American securities markets today and brought prompt intervention by President Roosevelt to protect about $1,500,000,000 of assets which the invaded countries own in the United States.

The invasion also caused officials some worry over the source of supply, in the Netherlands East Indies, of such strategic materials as rubber and tin, and brought redictions that the enlargement of hostilities might curtail United States merchandise exports.

The President routed Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, and a score of other Treasury officials out of bed to draft for his signature hsortly before 8 A. M. an executive order prohibiting withdrawal from the United States of any funds of the Low Countries without special Treasury licenses.

Follows Previous Order

The order was almost identical with the one he issued on Danish and Norwegian assets when those countries were invaded.

Worried market operators reacted diversely to the news. Stock and bond markets declined pessimistically. The cotton market fell for fear the war phase might cut off usually large American cotton sales to Belgium and Holland. Wheat, rubber and some other commodity markets, however, rose sharply.

Officials declined to say what, if any, action they may have taken to regulate any of the markets. The Federal Reserve Board, however, had a special $500,000,000 authorization to buy Government bonds, if necessary to halt or regulate declines in those quotations. Last fall, when the war first began and depressed bond prices, the Federal Reserve System bought $400,000,000 worth.

DNB SAID THE EVIDENCE "UNEQUIVOCALLY PROVED" THAT THE ALLIED ATTACK WOULD BE TOWARD THE RUHR THROUGH BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS.

"THE REICH'S GOVERNMENT THEREFORE ORDERED GERMAN TROOPS TO SAFEGUARD THE NEUTRALITY OF THESE COUNTRIES WITH ALL THE MILITARY MEANS OF THE REICH."

MAY 11 1940

Distibrution Of Holdings

The Dutch Minister, Dr. A. Loudon, who was appointed paymaster for all foreign officials of his Government last Saturday, was expected to apply for a general license giving him a free hand with Dutch Government money deposited in the United States.

Although no exact figures on money of the invaded countries could be obtained, Commerce Department estimates indicated that cash and security holdings in the United States totaled $296,000,000 for Belgium, $14,000,000 for Luxembourg, $1,076,000,000 for the Netherlands and $2,000,000 for the Netherland East Indies.

As in the cases of Norway and Denmark, it was understood that the primary purpose of the freezing order was to prevent Germany, if successful in the invasion, from claiming ownership of funds in the United States formerly owned by governments or residents of the invaded countries.

Roosevelt Asks Nation's Aid for Red Cross Fund

Cites War's Latest Victims in Urging Response to $10,000,000 Relief Call

MAY 11 1940

WASHINGTON, May 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt today urged all Americans with sympathy for "the peoples of those unfortunate countries" suffering "the horrors of invasion and aerial bombardment" to respond "quickly and generously" to the American Red Cross appeal for a $10,000,000 war-relief fund.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is national head of the agency, issued this statement:

"The American Red Cross has issued an appeal for a war-relief fund of at least $10,000,000.

"I urge all Americans who have a feeling of deep sympathy for the peoples of those unfortunate countries who today have been added to the long list of those who are suffering the horrors of invasion and aerial bombardment, to respond quickly and generously to this appeal.

"The American Red Cross, our official national volunteer relief agency, is efficiently organized to answer such emergency calls.

"It is, therefore, the logical agency through which our citizens can express their compassion for the innocent victims of the wars that rage overseas. I am confident we will not fail them."

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, said that the expansion of the European war into Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg meant that large relief funds would be required if the Red Cross was to mitigate the suffering.

Reporting that authorization for the drive was voted by the Red Cross convention meeting here earlier this week, Mr. Davis said:

"The hour has struck, with a threat of ensuing suffering and horror to be endured by women and children, and the aged, such as the human mind never has conceived.

"I urge all sympathetic Americans to respond quickly and generously to this appeal by making immediate contributions to their local Red Cross chapters."

He said each of the 3,700 local Red Cross chapters had been advised of its quota of the $10,000,000 to be raised.

Chairman Davis said that the Red Cross "must send relief as needed and not too late to be of use."

"We must send clothing, bedding, shoes, medications, surgical supplies, and food," he added, explaining that all belligerent countries requiring assistance would get it.

"The Red Cross societies of all the countries involved in armed conflict in Europe have requested aid except Germany," he said.

Quota for Brooklyn Red Cross

C. R. Beardsley, chairman of the Brooklyn Red Cross, announced yesterday that the National Red Cross in Washington had assigned to the Brooklyn division a quota of $200,000, to be raised as quickly as possible for materials to be used in making surgical dressings for European war casualties. Mr. Beardsley said that the advisory committee would meet at 9:30 a. m. today at the headquarters, 66 Court Street, Brooklyn, to arrange for the campaign.

Pittman Tells U. S. To Watch Orient

WASHINGTON, May 10 (A. P.).—Senator Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asserted today that the German invasion of the Netherlands and Belgium had given the United States renewed cause to watch for developments in the Orient.

MAY 11 1940

Observing that the invasion of the Low Countries was "not unexpected," he commented:

"It again demonstrates that totalitarian Powers are unrestrained by any precepts of divine or human law. Absolute obedience to a single commander undoubtedly makes for the greatest expedition and efficiency in war, which it is difficult to obtain under a democracy.

"Our Government has cause to watch developments in the Orient."

Text of Roosevelt Address

WASHINGTON, May 10 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's speech tonight before the eighth American Scientific Congress follows:

All of the men and women of this Pan-American Scientific Congress have come here tonight with heavy hearts. During the past few years we have seen event follow event, each and every one of them a shock to our hopes for the peaceful development of modern civilization. This very day three more independent nations have been cruelly invaded by force of arms.

MAY 11 1940

In some human affairs the mind of man grows accustomed to unusual actions if they are oft repeated. That is not so in the world happenings of today—and I am proud that it is not so. I am glad that we are shocked and angered by the tragic news from Belgium and the Netherlands and Luxemburg.

The overwhelmingly greater part of the population of the world abhors conquest and war and bloodshed—prays that the hand of neighbor shall not be lifted against neighbor. The whole world has seen attack follow threat on so many occasions and in so many places during these later years. We have come, therefore, to the reluctant conclusion that a continuance of these processes of arms presents a definite challenge to the continuation of the type of civilization to which all of us in the three Americas have been accustomed.

I use this Pan-American Scientific Congress as one of many similar illustrations. It is no accident that this meeting takes place in the New World. In fact, this hemisphere is now almost the only part of the earth in which such a gathering can take place. Elsewhere war or politics has compelled teachers and scholars to leave their great calling and to become agents of destruction.

We, and most people in the world, believe in a civilization of construction and not of destruction. We, and most people in the world, believe that men and women have an inherent right to hew out the patterns of their own individual lives, just so long as they as individuals do not harm their fellowbeings. We call this by many synonymous terms — individual liberty, civil liberty, democracy.

Tells of Great Adventure

Until now we permit ourselves by common consent to search for truth, to teach the truth as we see it—and by learning a little here and a little there, and teaching a little here and a little there, to allow the normal processes of truth to keep growing for the well-being of our fellow men. In our search and in our teaching we are a part of a great adventure—an exciting adventure—which gives to us a larger satisfaction even than did the adventure of settling the Americas give to our founding fathers. We feel that we are building human progress by conquering disease and poverty and discomfort, and by improving science and culture, removing one by one the cruelty, the crudity and the barbarism of less civilized eras.

In contrast, in other parts of the world, teachers and scholars are not permitted to search for truth lest the truth when made known might not suit the designs of their masters. Too often they are not allowed to teach the truth as they see it, for truth might make men free. They become objects of suspicion if they speak openly, if they show an interest in new truth, for their very tongues and minds are supposed to be mobilized for other ends.

This has not happened in the New World. God willing, it shall not happen in the New World.

At the Pan American Conference at Buenos Aires, and again at Lima, we discussed a dim and unpleasant possibility. We feared that other continents might become so involved in wars brought on by the school of destruction that the Americas might have to become the guardian of Western culture, the protector of Christian civilization.

In those days it was merely a fear. Today the fear has become a fact.

The inheritance which we had hoped to share with every nation in the world is, for the moment, left largely in our keeping; and it is our compelling duty to guard and enrich that legacy, to preserve it for a world which must be reborn from the ashes of the present disaster.

Today we know that until recent weeks too many citizens of the American republics believed themselves wholly safe—physically and economically and socially—from the impact of the attacks on civilization which are in progress elsewhere. Perhaps this mistaken idea was based on the false teaching of geography—the thought that a distance of several thousand miles from war-torn Europe gave to us some form of mystic immunity which could never be violated.

Says Europe Draws Closer

Yet, speaking in terms of timetables, in terms of the moving of men and guns and planes and bombs, every acre—every hectare—of the Americas from the Arctic to the Antarctic is closer to the homes of modern conquerors and the scenes of attacks in Europe than was the case in historic efforts to dominate the world in bygone centuries. From the point of view of conquests, it is a shorter distance from the center of Europe to Santiago de Chile than it was for the chariots of Alexander to roll from Macedonia to Persia. In modern times it is a shorter distance from Europe to San Francisco than it was for the ships and legions of Caesar to move from Rome to Spain or Britain. Today it is four or five hours from the Continent of Africa to the Continent of South America, where it was four or five weeks for the armies of Napoleon to move from Paris to Rome or Paris to Poland.

You who are scientists may be told that you are responsible because of the processes of invention for the annihilation of time and space, but I assure you that it is not the scientists of the world who are responsible, because the objectives which you have had have looked toward closer and more peaceful relations between all nations through the spirit of co-operation and the interchange of knowledge. What has come about has been caused solely by those who would use, and are using, your inventions of peace in a wholly different cause—those who seek to dominate hundreds of millions of people in vast continental areas—those who, if successful in that aim will, we must now admit, enlarge their wild dream to encompass every human being and every mile of the earth's surface.

Question of Science Solved

The great achievements of science and even of art can be used to destroy as well as create; they are only instruments by which men try to do the things they most want to do. If death is desired, science can do that. If a full life is sought, science can do that also. Happily for us that question is solved—for in the New World we live for each other and in the service of a Christian faith.

Is this solution—our solution—permanent or safe if it is solved for us alone? That it seems to me is the most immediate issue that the Americas face. Can we continue our peaceful construction if all the other continents embrace by preference or by compulsion a wholly different principle of life?

Surely it is time for our republics to spread that problem before us in the cold light of day, to analyze it, to ask questions, to demand answers, to use every knowledge, every science we possess, to apply common sense and especially to act with unanimity and singleness of purpose.

I am a pacifist. You, my fellow citizens of twenty-one American republics, are pacifists.

But I believe that by overwhelming majorities you and I, in the long run and if it be necessary, will act together to protect and defend by every means our science, our culture, our freedom and our civilization.

Text of Germany's Memorandum to the Belgian and Netherlands Governments

MAY 11 1940

BERLIN, May 10 (AP).—Following is the text of the German memorandum addressed to the Belgian and Dutch governments:

The Reich government for a long time has known of the main aim of British and French war policy. It consists of the expansion of war to other countries and the misuse of their peoples as auxiliary mercenary troops by England and France. The last attempt in this direction was a plan to occupy Scandinavia with the aid of Norway in order to establish a new front there against Germany.

This attempt was frustrated at the zero hour through Germany's interference. Germany gave the world public documentary proof of that.

Immediately after the failure of the British and French action in Scandinavia, England and France resumed their policies for the expansion in other directions.

Thus, during the flight-like retreat of the British troops from Norway the English Prime Minister announced that England, because of the changed situation, was now in a position to transfer the main force of her fleet to the Mediterranean and the English and French units were already by the way to Alexandria.

The Mediterranean now became the center of the Anglo-French war propaganda. Partly this was intended to conceal the defeat in Scandinavia and the great loss of prestige thereby suffered from their own people and from the world, and partly to make it appear as if the Balkans now had been selected as the next theater of war against Germany.

In reality, however, the ostensible shifting of Anglo-French war policy to the Mediterranean served an entirely different purpose: it was nothing other than a large-scale maneuver to divert attention in order to deceive Germany as to the actual scene of the next Anglo-French attack.

For some time it has been realized by the German government that the true object of Britain and France is this: a carefully prepared and now imminent attack on Germany in the west with the view of advancing toward the Ruhr district across Belgian and Dutch territory.

Germany has recognized and respected the integrity of Belgium and Holland on the natural supposition that the two countries would preserve the strictest neutrality in the event of war between Germany on one hand and Britain and France on the other.

Belgium and Holland have not complied with this condition.

It is true that so far they have tried to retain the outward appearance of neutrality, but the countries have favored Germany's enemies with complete partiality and have even supported them in their intentions.

Basing their views on documents in their possession and particularly on appended reports of the Reich Ministry of the Interior of March 29, 1940, and of the German high command of May 4, 1940, the German government desires to draw attention to the following facts:

First, since the outbreak of the war the Belgian and Dutch press have shown an anti-German attitude in excess even of that taken by British and French newspapers. In spite of continual protests on the part of the Reich they have not up to the present time changed their attitude.

In addition to this, leading personalities in public life in both countries have to an increasing extent in recent months expressed the view that the place of Belgium and Holland was at the side of Britain and France. Many other incidents in the political and business life of Belgium and Holland emphasize this tendency still more.

Second, Holland, in conjunction with certain Belgian circles, has lent herself to giving support to attempts of the British Secret Service to bring about a revolution in Germany, which amounts to a flagrant breach of their most elementary obligations as a neutral.

The organization built up by the secret service on Belgian and Dutch soil, which enjoyed the fullest support of the Belgian and Dutch authorities reaching as far as the highest circles of officials and of the general staff, had no other object than the removal of Der Fuehrer and of the German government by all the means at their disposal and the setting up of a government in Germany which would be ready to work for the destruction of the unity of the Reich and would agree to the formation of a powerless federation

30.24-2179

Measures taken by the Belgian government and the Dutch government in the military sphere make the position even clearer. They provide incontrovertible proof of the true intentions of the policy pursued by Belgium and Holland.

They are in marked contrast to all declarations made by the Belgian government and the Dutch government to the effect that they would, with all their power and in every direction, oppose any attempt to make use of their sovereign territory for the passage of troops or as a base for operations on land, at sea or in the air.

Thus Belgium, to give an example, has exclusively fortified itself (on its German border). Facing France no fortifications of any kind have been built. The repeated urgent representations of the German government were, it is true, answered each time by the Belgian government with assurances that care would be taken to put an end to this state of affairs, which operates against Germany only. In actual fact, however, nothing was ever done and all promises in this direction remained unfulfilled.

On the contrary, Belgium up this very moment continued exclusively and unabatingly to perfect her fortifications. Her Dutch coast represents an equally open and unguarded means of entry for the British Air Force. The German government has furnished the Dutch government, by a series of communications, with proof of the violation of the Dutch neutrality by the British aircraft.

Since the outbreak of the war, British airmen have been appearing almost daily over German territory coming from Holland. There are 127 cases in which British military aircraft has crossed over Dutch territory. It has been proved indisputably in every detail, the Dutch government being duly notified.

In reality, however, the number is far greater, being many times the number of cases notified. In all these additional cases there is likewise no doubt that the British planes were involved. In a large number of cases in which Dutch territory has been flown over and the fact that the Dutch government took no effective measures of any kind against this action prove without a shadow of doubt that the British Air Force has systematically been using Dutch sovereign territory as a base for operations against Germany with the knowledge and consent of the Dutch government.

Still more striking proof of the real attitude of Belgium and Holland is, however, the concentration of the entire mobilized Belgian and Dutch troops which is directed against Germany. While at the beginning of September, 1939, Belgium and Holland had their troops distributed fairly evenly along their frontiers, some time later and as collaboration between the Belgian and Dutch general staffs and those of Britain and France intensified, the western frontiers of these countries were completely denuded of troops and the entire Belgian and Dutch forces concentrated against Germany on the eastern frontiers of these two countries.

This massing of Belgian and Dutch troops on the German frontier took place at a time when Germany had concentrated no troops on her Belgian-Dutch frontiers, but when Great Britain and France, on the contrary, had assembled strong mechanized attacking forces on the Franco-Belgian frontier.

In other words, at a time when the neutrality in the west appeared more and more menaced by the attitude of Great Britain and France, and by a massing of British and French troops, and when Belgium and Holland would consequently have had every reason to strengthen their protective measures here, they withdrew their own troops from the endangered western frontier, where no German troops at all were stationed.

It was not until that moment that Germany adopted her counter measures and now also passed her troops on Belgian and Dutch frontiers. However, the Belgian and Dutch general staffs by these sudden measures, quite contrary to every rule of strategy, disclosed their true attitude.

Their action becomes understandable when it is realized that these measures were taken only after reaching the staff and that Belgian and Dutch troops have never considered themselves as anything but the vanguard of the Anglo-French Army.

Documents in possession of the German government prove that preparations made by Britain and France on Belgian and Dutch territory for their attack on Germany have already reached an advanced stage.

Thus some considerable time ago all obstacles on the Franco-Belgian frontier which might have impeded the advance of the Anglo-French forces were secretly removed. Airdromes in Belgium and Holland were inspected by British and French officers and improvements were duly carried out. Means of transport were stationed in readiness on the frontiers in Belgium and recently advanced staff and troop units of British and French armies arrived in various places in Belgium and Holland.

These facts, as well as additional reports, which have become more frequent in the last few days, are undeniable proof that an Anglo-French attack on Germany is imminent, and that this attack on the Ruhr will take place through Belgium and Holland.

An impression of the Belgian and Dutch attitude as gained from these irrefutable facts is incontestible and clear. From the very outbreak of the war, contrary to the declaration ostensibly made by their governments, both countries have secretly sided with Britain and France—that is to say, with the very powers who had determined to attack Germany and had actually declared war.

Although the attention of the Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs has on more than one occasion been earnestly directed by Germany toward this attitude, nothing has changed in the least.

On the contrary, the Belgian Minister for Defense recently made a statement in Belgium tantamount to admission that the general staffs of Belgium, France and Britain had come to an agreement on all measures necessary for concerted action against Germany. If, in spite of this, Belgium and Holland still persist in making a pretext of a policy of independence and neutrality, this cannot lighten these indubitable facts, which must be regarded as anything but an attempt at deception as to the real intentions of Belgian and Dutch policy.

In view of this state of affairs, the German government can no longer doubt that Belgium and Holland are determined not only to tolerate the impending Anglo-French attack, but support it in every direction, and that agreements reached between the general staffs of the two countries and those of Britain and France can serve only this purpose. The objection advanced by Belgium and Holland, that this development does not conform with their intentions, and that in consequence of their helplessness before Britain and France, they were simply being forced to adopt this attitude, we cannot accept as valid.

In any case, as far as Germany is concerned, it has no bearing on the situation.

The struggle for life and death was thrust on the German people by Britain and France. The German government does not intend to await an attack of Britain and France, nor to allow the war to be carried through Belgium and France on to German soil.

They have, therefore, issued orders for their troops to safeguard the neutrality of the countries with all the military means at the disposal of the Reich.

The German government desires to make the following supplementary announcement: German soldiers are not entering Holland and Belgius as enemies, for the German government neither desired nor brought about this development. The responsibility rests with Britain and France and on the Belgium and Dutch governments, who tolerated and favored them.

The German government further declares that Germany does not intend by these measures to attack the integrity of the Kingdow of Belgius and the Kingdom of Holland or their possessions or property in Europe or in their colonies, either now or in the future.

The Belgian and Dutch governments today still have it in their power to safeguard the welfare of all peoples at the last moment by insuring that no resistance is offered to the German troops. The German government herewith requests the two governments to issue the necessary orders without delay. Should the German troops encounter opposition in Belgium or Holland, it will be crushed with every means. The Belgian and Dutch governments alone would bear the responsibility for the consequences and for the bloodshed, which could then become unavoidable.

RAIDS FOLLOW QUICKLY AFTER NAZI LANDINGS

Some Are Attacked Near The Hague And Others Near Rotterdam

Germans Had No Time To Set Up Anti-Aircraft Guns, British Report

MAY 11 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Saturday, May 11—The Air Ministry announced early today that German troop-carrying aircraft had been destroyed by Royal Air Force flyers yesterday afternoon on the beach near The Hague, the Netherlands, and on the air field near Rotterdam.

The communique said the raids followed so quickly the German occupation of the landing areas that the Germans had no time to establish defenses.

At Waalhaven airdrome the attacks were concentrated on a large number of German planes, including fifty troop-carriers, the British reported. Numerous direct hits were noted.

Four In One Attack

In one dive bombing attack alone, four German planes were destroyed.

"The only ground opposition came from the guns of stationary aircraft, and this was ineffective," a communique said.

"Enemy fighters, however, were active in force, and a number of combats took place.

"The attacks on Rotterdam's former civil airport at Waalhaven began shortly after 3 oclock yesterday afternoon. The airport hangars presumably fired by the Dutch before evacuation were already ablaze when the first of the British bombers arrived over the aerodrome.

Direct Hits Noted

"Attacks were concentrated on the large number of enemy aircraft, including fifty troop carriers which were dispersed along the sides of the aerodrome, and numbers of direct hits were noted until the pall of smoke over the aerodrome from successive bombing attacks became so dense as to make close observation impossible.

"Four enemy aircraft were destroyed in one dive-bombing attack alone. Numerous fires were started, and heavy casualties were inflicted on enemy personnel.

"Ten enemy troop carriers which had disembarked troops on the beach about eight miles north of The Hague also were attacked by a British bomber force in concert with long-range fighters.

"Flying low above the beach and firing with their front guns, the British fighters first attacked the line of stationary aircraft with devastating effect.

One Lifts Plane In Air

"The bombers, attacking from a higher level, followed up the onslaught with salvoes of high-explosive bombs. One salvo bursting twenty feet away from a troop transport was seen to lift the great three-engined machine bodily off the ground, and as it fell back it burst into flames.

"When the raiding forces withdrew, two enemy aircraft could be seen half submerged in the water. Two more were in flames, and the remainder were riddled by bullets and bomb splinters."

Earlier, British reconnaissance flyers had reported they saw large numbers of German troop transport planes flying toward The Hague during Friday.

Britain Weighs Chance Of Parachute Invasion

London, May 10 (AP)—Great Britain weighed tonight the chances of an invasion by Nazi airplane-borne troops on the heels of the attempted German blitzkrieg in the Low Countries.

The outgoing Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain, had warned the House of Commons that Germany might try a "ligthning swoop" on England, which has not known a major land invasion since the Norman conquest of 1066.

MAY 11 1940

Fear increased throughout the nation that Adolf Hitler mgiht send a new "invincible armada" through the sky to mask the landing of troops from planes and ships.

Man In Street Wonders

Analysis of speeches by the Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Oliver Stanley, War Minister, during the two-day debate in Parliament this week showed that each had stressed the gravity of England's peril.

The man in the street, reading that the Government knew of German troop concentrations at Baltic ports, wondered whether the pessimism in high places reflected information concerning the imminent delivery of another Nazi blow.

Although no Briton lives much more than one hundred miles from the sea, the idea of invasion has been as strange to the average man as it is familiar to the French—until this week.

Views Norway Defeats

But as the nation realized that its army had been defeated, its air force overborne and its navy forced to stand idle in Norway the idea spread that Hitler, like Napoleon, might strike directly at Britain.

Britain's millions no longer regard the royal navy as the only answer needed to a force striking across the North Sea or the English Channel.

The public got scant consolation from Air Minister Sir Samuel Hoare's remark that Britain still lagged behind Germany in air strength, and Churchill's prediction of suffering and difficulty to come because of this "deficiency" was hardly reassuring.

Pick Norfolk As Spot

Strategists selected Norfolk county—flat and bordering on the North Sea—as the likeliest site for the first cloudburst of German parachute troops. They predicted German transports would move into the "wash" to unload units for the drive that would strike northwest through the heart of industrial England.

Army officers who laughed at the idea a month ago didn't laugh today.

"The old Hun will try anything," they said.

MAY 11 1940

They took some consolation from the fact that Napoleon cried "give me control of the Channel for six hours and the war will be over," but never got the control.

The dramatic clash preliminary to the first grert blood-letting by the contending powers was accompanied by Chamberlain's resignation as Prime Minister and a final paean of hate against the man he trusted at Munich to "give us peace in our time."

Chamberlain called upon the nation to "fight and work until the wild beast that has sprung from his lair upon us has been finally disarmed and overthrown."

The empire's war effort swelled apace, despite the Cabinet crisis, bearing out Chamberlain's words that if Hitler "counted on our internal divisions to help him he has miscalculated the minds of this people."

War Machine Speeds Up

These developments pointed up the gathering speed of the empire's war machine:

The Royal Air Force threw down the bars and called for volunteers.

Britain "reserved the right" to retaliate for any bombing of civilians.

R. A. F. planes bombed Germany's invading troops in Belgium and airports in Holland seized by the Nazis.

Britain took Danish-owned Iceland under protective custody to prevent, it was announced, its possible use as a submarine and air base by the Nazis, now entrenched in Denmark.

All R. A. F. personnel was recalled.

The Ministry for Home Security asked every Briton to carry his gas mask and watch for invading parachute troops.

Britain canceled the Whitsuntide and the King's birthday holidays.

The British Treasury strengthened its grip on citizens' securities.

While Britain massed her air-striking power and steeled the public against assault from the skies, German planes flew over the Thames estuary, the southeastern coast and into Kent, where an official announcement said four incendiary bombs were dropped near Canterbury, home of famous Canterbury Cathedral.

The Air Ministry said the bombs did little damage and that all the raiders were driven off.

All air force leaves were canceled and pilots, mechanics and ground crews recalled to duty.

A. R. P. Given "Stand-By" Orders

Newspapers screamed "You must carry your gas mask!" Air-raid protection forces were given "stand-by" orders.

Machinery to empty sprawling London of women and children who filtered back into the city since the war started was ready in the event of prolonged raids.

The warning to every Briton to be on the lookout for German troops landing by parachute in Britain pointed to what it said were landings of Germans in the lowlands in uniforms "calculated to deceive observers into thinking they were friendly."

Advised To Notify Police

It continued that "the best way in which the ordinary citizen can help is by keeping watch and if he observes any such attempt reporting it at once to the nearest police station, giving the most accurate information possible as to the place and numbers of persons landing."

The warning said that any attempt to land "would most likely be made during the hours of blackout, particularly at dusk or dawn and in open spaces."

Acknowledge Foe's Advantage

The Government's announcement of speedy aid to Belgium and Holland acknowledged that once again "Germany has gained a military advantage by taking the initiative in attacking neutral countries."

Details of the operations in the Low Countries were kept locked tightly in the conference room at No. 10 Downing street, where the War Cabinet and chiefs of the army, navy and air staffs held three prolonged sessions before Chamberlain resigned.

London prepared to return to total blackout, effective tonight, as the Ministry of Home Defense withdrew most of the relaxations which followed the first groping nights of the war.

Seize Parachute Troops

In Belgium, authoritative British sources said, the Germans had failed to capture a single airport by this means.

The parachute troops are being dealt with and rapidly rounded up, it was stated.

"Some 2,000 Quislings" were rounded up by the Belgians by last night, an authoritative source said, referring to the Norwegian Nazi, Vidkun Quisling, who proclaimed a government and created confusion in orders to the military at the start of the Norwegian invasion.

Reconnaissance planes over Holland reported many road and railway bridges destroyed to hamper the Germans and said signs of inundation were visible from the air.

EFFORT TO KIDNAP QUEEN REPORTED

Nazi Flyers' Attempt To Capture Wilhelmina Of Holland Recounted

Move Apparently Meets With "Failure And Sudden Death For The Perpetrators"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 10—Two squadrons of Nazi planes, loaded with soldiers, were said today by Edwin Hartrich, Amsterdam correspondent for CBS, to have made a "daring attempt to capture Queen Wilhelmina," an attempt which evidently "has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators."

His cable from Amsterdam to CBS in this connection follows:

"A daring attempt of the German Air Force to capture Queen Wilhelmina in the early hours today apparently has met with failure and sudden death for the perpetrators.

Other "Aerial Kidnappers"

"A flight of sixteen large Junkers and possibly more landed at the airport of Valkenburg, five miles from the Queen's summer villa at Ruygenhoek and about seven miles from her residence Huis Ten Bosch in the outskirts of The Hague. Each Junker carried twenty soldiers or more. All were equipped with automatic rifles or machine guns. The planes landed in the early hours of the morning.

"Other contingents of aerial kidnappers landed at Delft about four miles south of The Hague. The strategy was to cut off The Hague from the rest of Holland surrounding the capital city and capture the government, even if only for a few hours."

Goebbels Alleges Plot To Overthrow Hitler

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 10 — Germany threatened the Netherlands and Belgium today with the full force of its military and naval might should they offer the slightest resistance to the Nazi invasion.

In a broadcast German Propaganda Minister Goebbels attributed to England and France and the governments of the invaded nations "a plot to start a revolution in Germany" and said Belgian and Dutch officials sought to overthrow Hitler.

"Should the German troops meet any resistance in Belgium or the Netherlands," Goebbels said in the broadcast, which was picked up by NBC and CBS, "this resistance will be broken with all the power at their (the Germans') disposal.

"Blood On Their Heads"

"Should resistance occur, responsibility for the bloodshed will solely be on the Dutch and Belgian governments.

As is known, there are organizations in Holland and Belgium, to which high personages of the general staffs of both countries belong, which have been plotting to eliminate the Führer and the Reich Government, and to put into power a Government in Germany which would mean the creation of a helpless German Reich again," Goebbels said.

The Low Countries, he went on, made "hostile utterances" against Germany and, "above all, they did absolutely nothing against the hostile utterances against Germany in the press and by persons in public life."

Breaks In On News Program

Goebbels suddenly came to the microphone and interrupted a news broadcast with this statement:

"The war-expansion plans of the Allies and other countries have been well known to the Reich Government. The last such attempt was in Scandinavia—at Norway.

"With their defeat in Norway, the Allies admitted that their troops would be able to go to a new theater of war. . . .

"It has been known to the German Government for a long time that England and France had carefully worked out plans to shift the war to somewhere else.

"England and France never respect the neutrality of any country."

Claims Documentary Proof

On the basis of documentary proof, Goebbels asserted, the German Government was able to enunciate this textual accusation against the Low Countries:

"1. Since the beginning of the war, the Belgian and Dutch Governments have never ceased their hostile utterances against Germany. On the contrary, they outdid themselves with such utterances. Above all, they did absolutely nothing against the hostile utterances against Germany in the press and by persons in public life. They did not make any secret of the fact that their sympathies were with England and France and against Germany. This behavior of the Belgian and Netherlands Governments has all along underlined this tendency.

Charge Of Revolt Plot

"2. The Netherlands and Belgium have done nothing to prevent the violation of their neutrality by Allied planes. They also have connived in a plot to start a revolution in Germany. As is known, there are organizations in Holland and Belgium to which high personages of the general staffs of both countries belong, which have been plotting to eliminate the Führer and the Reich Government, and to put into power a government in Germany which would mean the creation of a helpless German Reich again.

"3. The measures taken by the Royal Dutch and Belgian Governments in a military sphere show even more clearly the real intentions of those governments. If they had been really neutral, they would have taken military measures on all sides.

Alleges One-Sided Moves

"However, they took those measures only in the sectors bordering on Germany, while the frontiers bordering on France were not fortified and no military measures whatever were on them. The repeated complaints of the German Government, however, were always answered with assurances that the (low countries) governments would remove those troops, but this was never done.

"On the contrary, Belgium recently has unabatedly worked on fortifications bordering on Germany, while the Belgian frontier bordering on France was completely unfortified. The open violation of British air forces, flying over the Belgian and Dutch territories, and the violations of their territories were only weakly protested.

"127 British Violations"

"One hundred twenty-seven such violations can be proved in all details. In reality, this figure is much too low. There is no doubt that these violations were always by the British. The fact that no measures were taken by the Royal Netherlands Government against the British air force, and that they quietly tolerated British planes flying over their territory, while protesting against any small German violation, shows their true intentions against Germany.

"The most flagrant fact in the last few days was the complete mobilization of Belgian and Dutch troops. In the beginning of September, 1939, the Belgian and Dutch troops were equally distributed over their countries, but it became immediately obvious that there was cooperation between the Belgian and Dutch, and the English and French general staffs. From then on, the Belgian and Dutch troops were concentrated on their eastern frontiers.

"Never Opposed Other Armies"

"4. Belgian and Dutch troops were concentrated at the German frontiers when Germany did not have any troops whatsoever in those regions. England and France, at the same time, had sent a new army to the French-Belgian frontier. That means, in other words, that the Belgium and the Dutch did not consider as enemies the English and French troops concentrated on their frontiers. Otherwise, they would not have sent their own troops to the eastern borders of their countries against any unthreatened frontier. Only then, did Germany take counter-measures. And Germany herself sent troops to the Belgian and Dutch frontiers.

"The Belgian and Dutch general staffs suddenly took this as an alarming situation, while these measures were taken by Germany only because the others had massed their troops at the frontiers. The Belgians and Dutch never opposed the armies standing on their other frontiers.

"Documents"

"Documents which are in the hands of the German Government prove the plans of the English and French general staffs to use the Netherlands and Belgium for a base of attack against Germany, and that they made plans to this end.

"Allied war material had been brought to the Belgian frontier facing Germany. These facts and the measures taken by the Belgian and Netherlands Governments in the last few days were irrefutable proof that a great attack against Germany was imminent, and that this Allied attack could only be made via Belgian and Dutch territory.

"Irrefutable Proof"

"Germany had the irrefutable proof of those plans, and that the Belgian and Dutch Governments would not resist them. And Germany knows that the declarations given out by the Belgian and Dutch Governments, stating that they wished to preserve their neutrality, were just shields for the outside world, because it was a one-sided neutrality. The neutrality was one in favor of England and France, those powers which have declared war on Germany. Thus, Germany was obliged to take counter-measures.

"The Reich's Government decided to safeguard the neutrality of those two countries (Belgium and the Netherlands).

"Nazi Troops Not Enemies"

"The German Government, therefore, has sent troops into Belgium and Holland. The German troops do not come as the enemy of the Belgian and Dutch people, as the German Government did not want this situation to happen, nor had planned it.

"The responsibility, therefore, rests with England and France, who, together with the Belgian and Dutch governments, had planned to attack Germany through those countries.

"These governments tolerated these plans of the Allies.

Calls For Submission

"The German Government further declares that Germany does not intend that these measures should violate the sovereignity of the Belgian and Dutch governments, neither in Europe nor in their possessions overseas.

"The Royal Belgian Government and the Royal Netherlands Government still can, in the last minute, safeguard the well being of their peoples.

"They have it in their hands to do this, by giving the order that there will be no resistance whatever put up against the German troops.

Denies Responsibility

"The Reich's Government asked the Royal Dutch and Belgian Governments immediately to give out this order.

"Should the German troops meet any resistance in Belgium or the Netherlands, this resistance will be broken with all the power at their, the Germans' disposal. Should resistance occur, responsibility for the bloodshed will solely be on the Dutch and Belgian Governments."

"The above order is dated Berlin, May 9, 1940.

CHARGING BELGIUM-NETHERLANDS CONNIVANCE WITH THIS PLAN OF ATTACK, THE MEMORANDUM THEN DECLARED THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT "CAN NO LONGER COUNT BELGIUM AND HOLLAND NEUTRAL" AND SAID AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE GENERAL STAFFS OF THE TWO COUNTRIES AND THOSE OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE COULD ONLY SERVE THE PURPOSE TO SUPPORT AGGRESSION ON GERMANY.

"IN A STRUGGLE OF LIFE AND DEATH", SAID THE MEMORANDUM, "THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT DOES NOT INTEND TO AWAIT ATTACK BY THE BRITISH AND FRENCH INACTIVELY. REPORTS FROM THE DUTCH AND BELGIAN FRONTIERS BROUGHT BACK BY TRAVELERS UNANIMOUSLY AGREED THAT ROADS AND RAILWAYS TO BOTH BORDERS WERE CHOKED.

AT AACHEN, FOR INSTANCE, ALL ROADS TO THE BELGIAN BORDER WERE CLOSED TO CIVILIAN TRAFFIC.

PATRIOTIC GERMANS OPENLY BOASTED TO FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS THAT GERMANY HAD COMPLETED THE MINUTEST DETAILS, DOWN TO SUPPLYING 185,000 RUBBER BOATS FOR NAVIGATING THE FLOOD AREAS OF HOLLAND.

A CAREFUL READING OF THE PRESS AND A CAREFUL FOLLOWING OF THE COMMENTS OF AUTHORIZED PERSONS ALSO INDICATED THAT GERMANY WAS NOT AIMING PRIMARILY AT STRIKING OR COUNTER STRIKING IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE FOR THE MOMENT, BUT WAS THINKING PRIMARILY OF HER WESTERN BORD-

APPARENTLY GERMAN AUTHORITIES WERE ANXIOUS TO IMPRESS THE GERMAN PEOPLE WITH THE REICH'S INTELLIGENCE SERVICE.

THIS WAS DONE SO THE GERMAN PEOPLE WOULD BELIEVE MORE IMPLICITLY THAT THAT SERVICE AGAIN HAD SUCCEEDED IN FORESTALLING ALLIED ACTION.

IN THE FOREIGN OFFICE SUPREME CONFIDENCE WAS SHOWN THAT HOLLAND "WILL BE PACIFIED" WITHIN 20 HOURS.

TO BACK UP RIBBENTROP'S ASSERTION THAT GERMANY HAD ABSOLUTE PROOF OF THE MARCHING PLANS OF THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ARMIES, THERE WAS HANDED TO THE FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS A REPORT BY THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND.

30.24-2185

30.24-2185

THIS WAS DATED MAY 4 AND CORRESPONDENTS WERE TOLD THERE WOULD BE A FULLER REPORT BY THE GERMAN MINISTRY OF OHE INTERIOR DATED MARCH 29.

THE HIGH COMMAND'S REPORT, SIGNED BY COL.GEN.WILHELM KEITEL, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF GERMAN DEFENSE FORCES, COMPRISES 29 TYPEWRITTEN PAGES.

SECTION ONE ATTEMPTS TO PROVE THAT BELGIUM WAS UNNEUTRAL FROM A MILITARY VIEWPOINT. THIS REPORT SAID BELGIUM LAND DEFENSES SINCE THE WORLD WAR WERE "DIRECTED SOLELY AGAINST GERMANY."

COL.GEN.KEITEL SAID DOCUMENTS FOUND IN WARSAW AFTER THE CAPTURE OF THAT POLISH CAPITAL SHOWED THERE WAS A REGULAR EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION WITH REGARD TO GERMANY ON THE PART OF BELGIUM AND HOLLAND.

SINCE OCT. 2, 1939, OF 21 MOBILIZED DIVISIONS OF THE BELGIUM FIELD ARMY, APPROXIMATELY 14 STOOD ON THE NORTHERN AND EASTERN FRONTIERS.

LOCAL POPULATIONS, HE SAID, WERE PREPARED FOR REMOVAL FROM THEIR HOMES ONLY ALONG THE GERMAN BORDER.

EVIDENCE KEPT ACCUMULATING, THE COMMANDER CHARGED, THAT THE BELGIANS MORE RECENTLY HAD ENTERED UPON MILITARY ARRANGEMENTS WITH THE ENGLISH AND THE FRENCH AND GENERAL STAFF TALKS OCCURRED REGULARLY WITH THE WESTERN POWERS.

MAY 11 1940

AS A RESULT, ORDERS HAD BEEN GIVEN FOR THE BELGIAN GENDARMERY TO CLEAR THE ROADS ALONG THE FRENCH BORDER TO ENABLE FRENCH TROOPS TO ENTER QUICKLY, THE COMMANDER SAID.

BELGIAN EMPTY RAILWAY CARS WERE PLACED AT THE BORDER FOR FRENCH USE, HE SAID, AND LOCOMOTIVES AND HEAVY RAILWAY MATERIAL WERE HELD IN READINESS.

KEITEL ALLEGED THAT 18 BRITISH SPORTS PLANES WITH BRITISH INSTRUCTORS HAD ARRIVED NEAR LIEGE FOR THE BELGIAN ARMY, AND THAT FRENCH AND BRITISH COMMANDS HAD ARRIVED AT VARIOUS BELGIAN GARRISONS.

FRENCH OFFICERS SUPERVISED THE CONSTRUCTION OF BELGIAN FORTIFICATIONS, WHILE BRITISH MUNITIONS SUPPLIES ARRIVED REGULARLY, HE ASSERTED.

THE GERMAN RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS, HE CONTENDED, SHOWED THE FRENCH-BRITISH LEFT WING WITH MOTORIZED AND MECHANIZED DIVISIONS STANDING READY IN RAILWAY STATIONS FOR AN ATTACK VIA BELGIUM.

HE CHARGED THAT BRITISH SOLDIERS HAVE BEEN OCCUPYING IMPORTANT POSITIONS, SUCH AS AIRDROMES, IN BELGIUM.

SECTION TWO OF KEITEL'S REPORT TOOK UP THE NETHERLANDS. AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR, HE SAID, THE DUTCH ARMY WAS SO DEPLOYED AS TO INDICATE THE POSSIBILITY OF A BRITISH LANDING CONSTITUTING THE CHIEF DANGER TO THE COUNTRY.

BY THE MIDDLE OF NOVEMBER, HE SAID, THE PICTURE HAD CHANGED. THE DUTCH TROOPS STOOD AT THE GREBBE LINE (THE NETHERLAND'S WATER DEFENSES FACING EAST) AND SOUTH THEREOF, WITH THE VANGUARD ALONG THE IJSSEL LINE (ALSO FACING GERMANY.) MAY 11 1940

ADDED OBSTACLES WERE BUILT AGAINST GERMANY, HE SAID, AND NON-EFFECTIVE ONES DIRECTED TOWARD THE NETHERLANDS SOUTHERN BORDERS.

TO HOLLAND, TOO, ACCORDING TO KEITEL'S REPORTS, CAME BRITISH OFFICERS WHO POSED AS TOURISTS.

THE INTELLIGENCE SERVICES OF ENGLAND AND HOLLAND COOPERATED WITHOUT STINT AND COUNTLESS NEUTRALITY VIOLATIONS DIRECTED AGAINST GERMANY WENT UNCHALLENGED, HE COMPLAINED.

VARIOUS REPORTS REACHING THE GERMAN GENERAL STAFF LED TO THE SUSPICION THAT THE DUTCH AND ENGLISH AIR FORCES GENERAL STAFFS WERE COOPERATING, WITH BRITISH OFFICERS INSPECTING DUTCH AVIATION UNITS AND SUPPLYING ANTI-AIRCRAFT FORMATIONS WITH GUNS.

TRANSPORTS WERE MOVING CONSTANTLY FROM BRITISH AND FRENCH HARBORS TOWARD THE NORTHEAST. COMMERCIAL SHIPPING IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL WAS FORBIDDEN.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH OFFICERS, ACCOMPANIED BY DUTCH OFFICERS, RECONNOITERED AROUND UTRECHT.

SECTION CEE CONTAINS A SUMMARY OF DEDUCTIONS MADE FROM REPORTS RECEIVED BY THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND.

ITS TEXT READS:

MAY 11 1940

"DURING THE PAST WEEK IT BECAME MORE AND MORE CERTAIN THAT BRITISH AND FRENCH MEASURES SUCH AS THE MASSING OF MOTORIZED AND ARMORED DIVISIONS ON THE BELGIAN BORDER, STRENGTHENING THE LEFT WING WITH NORTH AFRICAN ATTACKING DIVISIONS, LANDING CANADIAN UNITS ON FRENCH SOIL, ETC., X X X X WERE INTENDED TO PREFACE AN ATTACK IN THE NEAREST FUTURE ON THE PART OF THE WESTERN POWERS VIA BELGIAN AND DUTCH TERRITORY.

"DESPITE THESE FACTS, NO MEASURES OF ANY KIND WERE INAUGURATED BY BELGIUM AND FRANCE. MARCHING PLANS CONTINUED TO BE DIRECTED AGAINST GERMANY, ALTHOUGH FOR MONTHS ALLEGEDLY 'ALARMING' FORMATIONS FOUND NO CONFIRMATION.

"ALONG THE BELGIAN-FRENCH FRONT, STREET BARRICADES WERE REMOVED IN THE ENTIRE AREA UP TO THE OCEAN WHILE AT THE SAME TIME CONSIDERABLE AUGMENTATIONS WERE EFFECTED AGAINST GERMANY ALONG THE BORDER. THEREBY THE BRITISH FRENCH BORDER WAS OPEN AT ALL TIMES TO AN INMARCH OF INVASIONARY CHARACTER FOR THE WESTERN POWERS.

"OF A DECISIVE NATURE IN THIS CONNECTION WAS THE ATTITUDE ESPECIALLY OF BELGIUM, WHICH MUST BE CHARACTERIZED AS ONE-SIDEDLY OPPOSED TO GERMANY.

"ONLY ON THAT SCORE CAN BE EXPLAINED THE REASONS GIVEN BY THE BELGIANS FOR THE ONE-SIDED MARCHING PLANS AGAINST GERMANY AND FOR THE REMOVAL OF SECURITY MEASURES AGAINST FRANCE DESPITE MARCHING PLANS, THE DANGER TO BELGIUM FOR A FRENCH-ENGLISH FLANK ON THE BELGIAN FRONTIERS.

"THE REASON ASSIGNED IS IN EFFECT THAT BELGIUM HERSELF WAS THREATENED ONLY BY THE GERMAN MARCHING PLAN.

"FAVORITISM SHOWN BY BELGIUM TO A FRENCH-ENGLISH ENTRY ALWAYS PRESUPPOSED A GERMAN INVASION.

MAY 11 1940

"HEREIN LIES A LACK OF CANDOR WHICH HAS AS ITS PURPOSE TO CAMOUFLAGE THE ENGLISH-FRENCH INTENTIONS OF ATTACKING, INTENTIONS WHICH WERE FAVORED BY BELGIUM.

"THE SUDDEN REGROUPING OF BELGIAN FORCES AT THE EASTERN FRONT WAS BEGUN OCT. 2, 1939, ALTHOUGH THERE WAS NO THREAT OF GERMAN MEASURES EXISTED AND THERE WAS AN INIMICAL ATTITUDE IN BELGIUM BEYOND PERADVENTURE OF DOUBT.

"SUCH STRIPPINGS OF THE BORDER COULD ONLY BE CARRIED THROUGH AFTER AGREEMENT WITH THE POWERS ON ITS BORDER, NAMELY THE WESTERN POWERS.

MAY 11 1940

LONDON, MAY 10 (AP)---
LONDON-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--HARD-HITTING WINSTON CHURCHILL, ENGLAND'S NEW PRIME MINISTER, IS THE ONE MAN TO WHOM THE BRITISH PUBLIC HAS LOOKED FOR INSPIRATION AND ENCOURAGEMENT SINCE THE WAR BEGAN.

AGGRESSIVE

CALLED BACK TO HIS WORLD WAR JOB AS SUPREME DICTATOR OF HIS MAJESTY'S NAVY ON THE DAY BRITAIN DECLARED WAR ON GERMANY, THE 65-YEAR-OLD POLITICIAN HAS BECOME A NATIONAL HERO.

PEOPLE LIKE THE FORTHRIGHT WAY HE ALWAYS SAYS WHAT HE THINKS AND FEELS, THE FREQUENT SURPRISES HE SPRINGS, AND HIS "BULLDOG DETERMINATION" TO INFLICT A CRUSHING DEFEAT ON NAZI GERMANY.

MAY 11 1940

IN SIX MONTHS THE NAVY HAS LOST AROUND 3000 OFFICERS AND MEN AND OVER 30 SHIPS, YET SO GREAT IS THE NATION'S CONFIDENCE IN CHURCHILL THAT HIS CONDUCT OF THE WAR AT SEA HAS SELDOM BEEN CRITICISED BY THE MAN IN THE STREET.

A TIRELESS, ENTHUSIASTIC WORKER WHO ALWAYS HAS POURED HIS ABUNDANT ENERGY INTO WHATEVER JOB HE HAD, CHURCHILL SELDOM HAS SPENT MORE THAN A FEW HOURS AWAY FROM HIS OFFICE IN WHITEHALL SINCE HE TOOK OVER THE NERVE CENTER OF THE NAVY.

THE DAY CHURCHILL ASSUMED OFFICE AN OFFICIAL HANDED HIM A GOVERNMENT PASS SO HE WOULDN'T BE STOPPED BY ADMIRALTY DOORKEEPERS POSSIBLY UNAWARE OF HIS IDENTITY. HE TORE THE PASS INTO SHREDS. "MY FACE IS MY FORTUNE," HE SAID.

MAY 11 1940

A FAVORITE TARGET OF POLITICAL CARTOONISTS FOR MORE THAN 30 YEARS, CHURCHILL IS BETTER KNOWN BY SIGHT TO THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND THAN ANY OTHER STATESMAN.

HIS WARTIME SPEECHES HAVE BEEN HAILED AS "THE BEST ORATORY OF THE WAR." THE PUBLIC HAS TURNED TO HIM WITH EAGER ANTICIPATION FOR THE COLORFUL, DRAMATIC DETAILS OF THE CONFLICT, AND HE SELDOM HAS DISAPPOINTED. HIS SPEECHES HAVE BEEN CRITICISED, BUT CHURCHILL WEATHERS CRITICISM WITH DOGGED IMPERTURBABILITY.

AUTHORIZED ARMY AND NAVAL SPOKESMEN, SCRUPULOUSLY HONORING THE TRADITION OF THE "SILENT SERVICE" BY DECLINING TO DRAMATIZE

WHAT MEAGER NEWS THEY ARE ALLOWED TO GIVE OUT, OFTEN HAVE APPEARED SURPRISED BY THE "STARTLING DISCLOSURES" CHURCHILL HAS MADE.

MAY 11 1940

TO BOLSTER THEIR INCREASINGLY PRECARIOUS POSITION, THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED INTENSIFYING EFFORTS TO LAND ADDITIONAL PARACHUTE TROOPS TO AID THEIR BESEIGED GARRISON. THE ALLIES WERE TRYING TO WORK AROUND INTO POSITIONS FROM WHICH THEY COULD BLAST OUT STRONGLY-ENTRENCHED GERMAN MACHINE-GUN NESTS.

Nyadagligt Allehanda declared that "the attack has this time been started with brutal accuracy, characteristic of Germany's plans of war."

"England has been busy publicly washing her dirty linen," this newspaper continued. "The disorganization which possibly could have been a result of this among England's highest leaders has given the Germans a favorable opportunity for a surprise."

Washington, May 10 -(AP)-The Belgian govt. asked the state dept. early today to inform the German govt. that Brussels, which had been bombd by Nazi planes, is an open city and that no troops are stationed there.

The department immediately communicated this message to the German Foreign Office thru the United States Embassy in Berlin. The Belgian request was conveyed thru Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in London, who had received it by phone from United States Ambassador John Cudahy in Brussels.

MAY 11 1940

Cudahy informed Kennedy that during the bombing a house near the United States Embassy was hit.

George A. Gordon, United States Minister to the Netherlands, telegraphed the state department that the Netherlands government considered itself to be in a state of war with Germany and had asked aid from Great Britain and France.

Gordon reported that the Netherlands frontier had been crossed by the Germans, who had bombed military objectives, including the airfield at Waalhaven.

He said the Dutch had opened anti-aircraft fire in the vicinity of the Hague. The commercial attache at the American Embassy said he saw two bombs dropped in the outskirts of the city.

BERLIN, MAY 10-(AP)-GERMANY'S MARCH INTO BELGIUM, LUXEMBOURG AND HOLLAND TODAY GAVE EVERY PROMISE OF FOLLOWING THE WHIPLASH PATTERN OF 1914.

MAY 11 1940

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE NEXT FEW DAYS OR OF THE NEXT HOUR MIGHT DECIDE WHETHER THE DRIVE WILL CONTINUE ON TO PARIS.

IT WAS PURELY SPECULATIVE WHETHER THE GERMAN GENERAL STAFF PLAN CONTEMPLATED A DRIVE THROUGH BELGIUM TO PARIS AND DESTRUCTION OF THE ENEMY FORCE, OR SIMPLY THE ABSORPTION OF THE LITTLE COUNTRIES TO GAIN A PLATFORM FOR BOMBING ENGLAND.

ADVICES HERE INDICATED ACTIVITIES WERE CONCENTRATED ON A FRONT NORTHWARD FROM THE END OF THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE OPPOSITE THE BELGIAN AND DUTCH FRONTIERS, AND THAT THERE WAS LITTLE ACTIVITY TO

30-24-2191

THE SOUTH, WHERE THE MAGINOT LINE FACES THE WEST WALL.

THE HIGH COMMAND WITHHELD EVEN THE BRIEFEST DETAILS OF WHAT WAS GOING ON AT THE FRONT, BUT EARLY OFFICIAL AND SEMI-OFFICIAL BULLETINS INDICATED THAT IN MANY RESPECTS THE CAMPAIGN WAS FOLLOWING THE PATTERN SET IN POLAND.

THE REICH'S AIRPLANES LAUNCHED A DRIVE NOT ONLY AGAINST THE AIR FORCES OF BELGIUM AND HOLLAND, BUT BOMBED NUMEROUS AIRPORTS IN FRANCE, INCLUDING THOSE AT METZ, SAINT OMER, VITRYLE AND FRANCOIS.

"SUCCESSFUL AIR ATTACKS," GERMAN BULLETINS SAID, HAD BEEN LAUNCHED AGAINST BOTH AIRPORTS AND AIR FORCES, "PUTTING OUT THE EYES OF THE ENEMY."

HUGE TRANSPORT PLANES, ACCOMPANIED BY FAST PURSUIT SHIPS, SHOWERED PARACHUTE TROOPS ON BELGIAN AND DUTCH AIRPORTS AND ON OTHER MILITARY POINTS. A REPORT THAT SOME OF THE PARACHUTE TROOPS HAD BEEN DRESSED IN DUTCH UNIFORMS TO ESCAPE IMMEDIATE DETECTION WAS FLATLY DENIED BY THE GERMANS. ALL WORE STANDARD NAZI UNIFORMS, THEY DECLARED.

THE HIGH COMMAND CLAIMED TO HAVE CAPTURED SEVERAL BELGIAN AND DUTCH AIRPORTS SOON AFTER HOSTILITIES BEGAN, AND TO HAVE MACHINE GUNNED FRENCH AIR FIELDS IN ORDER TO KEEP THEIR PLANES ON THE GROUND.

MAY 11 1940

"AIRPORTS LYING IN EASTERN AND CENTRAL FRANCE WERE TARGETS OF GERMAN SURPRISE ATTACKS," SAID THE HIGH COMMAND, "IN THE COURSE OF WHICH MANY FIRES WERE STARTED."

THE HIGH COMMAND IMPLIED THAT WAR HAD BEGUN ON THE FULLEST SCALE WHEN HOLLAND AND BELGIUM CALLED UPON BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS FOR ASSISTANCE. AS A RESULT, OBSERVERS SAID, GERMANY NOW WAS PRESENTED

WITH AN EXCELLENT CHANCE TO DUPLICATE THE VON SCHLIEFFEN PLAN WHICH NEARLY CAPTURED PARIS IN 1914.

UNDER THAT PLAN, A FIVE-FORKED ATTACK WAS LAUNCHED ON THE FRENCH CAPITAL, WITH THE FASTEST UNITS MOVING THROUGH BELGIUM. ONLY A GERMAN BLUNDER AT A CRUCIAL POINT AND BRILLIANT ALLIED DEFENSE SAVED PARIS THEN.

IT IS WIDELY UNDERSTOOD THAT HUGE GERMAN FORCES HAVE BEEN CONCENTRATED OPPOSITE LUXEMBOURG. THIS FORCE POSSIBLY WILL DRIVE TOWARD PARIS, WHILE FASTER-MOVING MOTORIZED AND ARMORED DIVISIONS SWEEP SOUTHWARD THROUGH HOLLAND AND BELGIUM IN THE PATH OF THE 1914 ARMIES.

MAY 11 1940

THIS DRIVE A QUARTER OF A CENTURY LATER IS DRAMATIZED BY THE AMAZING ACTIVITY OF THE AIR ARM, WHICH HAD ITS BIRTH IN THE LAST WAR. THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND HAS CREDITED THE AIR FORCE WITH A DECISIVE PART IN CAPTURING ONE FORT, AND OBSERVERS HERE EXPECT CONTROL OF THE AIR TO ENABLE THE ARMY TO CONSOLIDATE ITS EARLY ADVANTAGES. #

GERMANY'S DOMINATING POSITION IN THE AERIAL TO DATE BRANCH OF EUROPEAN WARFARE CAN BE EXPLAINED READILY.

ENOUGH BY THE FACT THAT THE BEST AVAILABLE ESTIMATES GIVE ADOLF HITLER'S AXIS A 3 TO 1 NUMERICAL SUPERIORITY IN FIRST-LINE WAR PLANES OVER THE COMBINED FORCES OF THE BRITISH AND FRENCH AND THEIR NEW ALLIES IN THE LOW COUNTRIES, BELGIUM AND HOLLAND.

THESE ESTIMATES GIVE GERMANY UPWARDS OF 20,000 FIRST-LINE PLANES, WITH UPWARDS OF 100,000 MEN TO FLY THEM.

HERE IS HOW THE BELLIGERENTS LINE UP:

NATION	AREA (SQ. MILES)	POPULATION	MEN UNDER ARMS	FIRST-LINE PLANES

MAY 12 1940

BRUSSELS, May 11 (A. P.).—The Belgian High Command reported tonight that German troops, supported by planes and tanks, had gained a foothold in Belgian defensive positions in the Maastricht region.

(In Berlin, the German High Command reported the capture of Eben Emael, the strongest fort in the defenses around Liege. DNB, the German official news agency, reported the capture yesterday of another fort in the Liege chain.)

The communique reported that "around Liege our positions remained intact." It added:

"The enemy suffered heavy losses before certain of our fortifications. Enemy aircraft carried out systematic bombing attacks on numerous districts in a large part of our territory."

PARIS, May 11 (A. P.).—The French military authorities reported tonight that Germans had crossed the Maas River in southern Holland and had taken Arnhem in east central Holland.

Military sources said that German troop landings on beaches south of The Hague had caused a "troubled" situation in the Netherlands.

The Germans first began to land troops from boats, they said, while Nazi motorized forces were crossing the eastern Netherlands frontier yesterday.

British planes bombed the beaches and at the same time Dutch troops attacked German units.

The landings began again today, French sources said tonight.

MAY 12 1940

They described the situation as still uncertain, although Dutch detachments were reported to be in control.

Berlin Claims Victories.

BERLIN, May 11 (A. P.).—Germany's High Command announced tonight that the armies of Adolf Hitler, in a slanting assault from above on the Albert Canal-Liege fortified zone, had occupied Eben Emael, termed the strongest fortress in the Liege defenses.

The commander and 1,000 men surrendered, the announcement said.

It was the second fort claimed to have been taken in the greater Liege zone, where the imperial German steamroller was stalled for a week of frontal assault in 1914.

This time the German armies sliced through the Dutch appendix province of southern Limburg, which virtually is undefendable; seized Maastricht, on the border between the western edge of Dutch Limburg and Belgium, and captured the vital bridges over the Maas River and the Albert Canal in Maastricht and to the west of it.

Action 15 Miles From Liege

MAY 12 1940

Then, according to the official German announcement, they stormed Fort Eben Emael, which controls these crossings, and it surrendered this afternoon.

The scene of this action is some fifteen miles north of Liege proper. The new Albert Canal runs north from Liege to above Maastricht, thence west to Antwerp, and, with its correlated fortresses, is Belgium's shield against invasion from the northeast and north.

DNB, the official German news agency, said that the fort taken yesterday in the Liege area was made "completely defenseless" by German planes.

Add Berlin

It was for its capture, the Agency said, that Capt. Koch and Lieut. Witzig received Germany's highest war decoration, the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross.

MAY 12 1940

DNB said it disclosed the identity of the fort to show how the German air force had proved anew there was nothing which it could not demolish.

Nazis Claim Fort Before Liege; Say They Still Hold Airdromes

Hitler Issues Communique on Activities of Personally Directed Warriors—Reports Victories on New Front.

MAY 12 1940

BERLIN, May 11 (A. P.).—One of Belgium's strong forts before strategic Liege, where the Germans were checked crucially in the world war, is in German hands after proving "completely defenseless against surprise attack by German planes," DNB, the official German news agency, reported today.

At the same time authoritative quarters claimed that Belgian and Netherlands airports occupied by the German Air Force in the new blitzkrieg continued definitely in German possession, although "German troops there are fighting with Belgian and Dutch troops."

[The Netherlands Foreign Minister announced in London that all airdromes seized by the Germans in his land had been recaptured.

[Liege, 25 miles within Belgium from the German border and 62 miles southeast of Brussels, capitulated in August, 1914, only after the stubborn Belgian resistance had given the Allies more than a week to concentrate forces to throw into the path of the Germans.]

After recalling the German claims (denied by the British) of having sunk a British battleship off Namsos, Norway, DNB said:

"The first day of the German advance against the formidable fortifications which the Belgians erected in the East against Germany already has shown that these too are unequal to withstanding the lightning attack of the German air force.

"For instance, one of the strongest forts in the area before Liege proved completely defenseless against surprise attack by German planes.

"After a brief, desperate fight on the part of the garrison, the fort was overwhelmed by the superiority of forces from the air and fell into the hands of the German troops in a few minutes."

Say Civilians Were Killed.

Meanwhile authorized German spokesmen challenged the Allied Powers to prove that German bombers had attacked non-military objected in Brussels, killing civilians, and offered to furnish evidence to foreign journalists in Berlin that the French attacked what the Germans called the open town of Freiburg, Germany, and killed twenty-four civilians.

Freiburg, a famed university town with a population of 120,000, is near the Black Forest. It lies within the zone of the German West Wall, but the Germans contend it is an open town.

It was reiterated officially that Hitler has given strict orders to the Air Force to attack military objectives only.

Hitler Reports Victories.

Lightning successes were also reported today by the German High Command on land and sea and in the air as Adolf Hitler's personally directed warriors relentlessly pressed their total warfare against the Allies on a front extending from the Arctic to mid-Europe.

A communique from Hitler's headquarters at the front reported these successes:

1. The destruction of between 300 and 400 enemy airplanes on the ground and the shooting down of twenty-three more in air fights during operations in France, Holland and Belgium.

2. The repulse of enemy border troops in the Netherlands and Belgium by the German western army with the aid of the air force and parachute troops.

3. The sinking of an enemy destroyer, one enemy submarine and two merchant ships.

In the air, the Germans acknowledged the loss of eleven of their own planes and said fifteen others were missing.

Mass air attacks were carried out yesterday on air bases in Belgium, France and Holland.

Seventy-two airports were raided, the report said, and numerous airport buildings and hangars were destroyed by fire and explosions.

"Especially hard hit were the French air bases at Metz, Nancy, Rheims, Rommilly, Dijon and Lyon," the communique added.

Three paragraphs of the communique were devoted to the invasion of the former neutrals by land.

"The German Western Army, after crossing the Netherlands, Belgian and Luxemburg borders, everywhere repulsed enemy border troops . . . and despite the destruction of many bridges and barricades of all kinds is on a swift forward attack," the High Command reported.

"Parachute and air troops landed . . . units of the Air Force supported the advance of the Army . . far-reaching reconnaissance brought clarifications of the enemy army movements."

The sea attack saw the destruction by bombs of two merchantmen of 5,000 and 2,000 tons respectively between Calais and Dunkerque, off the French coast.

MAY 12 1940

Hitler Issues Communique.

The communique from the Fuehrer's headquarters said:

"The German western army, after crossing the Netherlands, Belgian and Luxemburg borders, everywhere repulsed enemy border troops in the Netherlands and Belgium and, despite the destruction of many bridges and barricades of all kinds, is on a swift forward attack.

"Parachute and air troops landed at various places and are about to execute the tasks of protection given them. In a continuous flow units of the air force supported the advance of the army in so far as they attacked fortifications, defense positions, marching columns, troop concentrations, and damaged or destroyed roads, rail lines and bridges through bomb hits.

Enemy Movements Clarified.

"Far - reaching reconnaissance brought clarifications of the enemy army movements.

"The German Air Force furthermore on May 10 carried out the first big-scale attack with massed forces against army enemy air bases in France, Belgium and the Netherlands.

"Seventy-two airports were raided, between 300 and 400 enemy airplanes were destroyed on the ground and numerous airport buildings and hangars were destroyed by fire and explosions.

"Especially hard hit were French air bases at Metz, Nancy, Rheims, Rommilly, Dijon and Lyon.

"The enemy lost twenty-three airplanes in air fights. Eleven of our own planes were shot down and, in addition, fifteen are missing.

"The enemy, as previously reported on May 10, bombed the city of Freiburg and, during the night of May 10-11, dropped incendiary and splinter bombs on three localities in the Ruhr region, killing two civilians. Several civilians were injured and slight material damage caused. Three enemy airplanes were shot down by anti-aircraft.

"Sunk were: By bombs, two merchant ships of 5,000 and 2,000 tons, respectively, between Calais and Dunkirk; through a submarine of our own, one enemy submarine; through a speedboat, an enemy destroyer."

With Hitler himself at the front, directing activities from a secret headquarters, his own newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, declared:

"The geographic position of this new theater of operations—at the crossroads of three great fighting powers—elevates this phase of the struggle high above everything else which so far has happened.

"The war has been carried to its strategic center, where the decision must fall. Main bodies of the fighting armies and air forces now are going into action."

Contact Points Not Indicated.

There was no indication in Berlin whether the French and British forces had come to grips with the Germans in the course of the first spectacular day of western fighting.

[The French said they were fighting the Germans in Luxemburg, the British told of smashing German aerial troop transports into junk in Holland, and the Allied forces moved into strategic centers in both Belgium and the Netherlands.

[The Netherlands reported taking a toll of more than 100 German planes in recapturing all but one of her seized airports.]

Nor was there any gauge here to compare the German army's progress with the speeding steam-roller strategy with which it rolled over Poland last September and moved into Denmark and Norway on April 9.

Curt army communiques showed that the German effort to smash westward was undertaken from several distinct sectors. Troops from the area in front of the Luxemburg border advanced across that vest-pocket principality and crossed the Belgian frontier, according to the communiques.

Former German Town Taken.

How far the Germans penetrated into Belgium was not made clear. Further north units moving from the Eifel sector reported capture of Malmedy, a former German town which is in Belgium, roughly, fifteen miles due west of the German border.

Germany ceded Malmedy to Belgium under the Versailles Treaty after the world war. Since Hitler's rise to power there have been frequent calls for its "return home to the Reich."

Still further north a German Army group operating out of the Aachen sector reached the Netherlands city of Maastricht, dashing clear across the narrow loop of South Limburg province and taking control of bridges across Belgium's defensively vital Albert Canal, the German communiques said.

Maastricht is about ten miles north of Liege, Belgium, which is the heart of a twenty-mile-deep zone of heavy Belgian fortifications.

MAY 12 1940

It was impossible to determine from the military reports whether the German troops would attempt to break through to Liege.

Other German advances were reported to have cut across the Maas River at many points in Holland and penetrated to the Ijsel River east of Arnhem, east central Holland.

Air Force Blasts Way.

The scrappy, young German air force, developed especially to conduct the Nazi-type blitzkrieg, took a leading role in opening the German drive. It bombed Dutch and Belgian airports and dropped parachute troops to occupy many of them. There were no reports in Berlin, however, on what happened to these advance units.

The air force also raided airdromes in eastern and central France yesterday.

[The French said towns were bombed, killing at least fifty persons, and that forty-four of the raiders were shot down. Belgians reported eight German planes shot down in the first day of war.]

The German infantry also got direct air support in beating down resistance wherever it was particularly tough.

The German flyers, however, did not appear to have that control of the air of which they could boast after the first day's operations in Poland. On the contrary, they admitted encountering heavy resistance, saying they lost seven planes and that some others had made emergency landings.

Contradictory Air Reports.

They listed 100 enemy planes shot down or disabled on the ground, however, and pledged a stern five-fold retaliation for what was described as an enemy air raid on the open city of Freiburg, in southwest Germany, in which twenty-four civilians were reported killed.

[The British denied any such Allied raid, but said they bombed German troops back of the western front.]

Dr. Fritz Todt, in charge of German fortification construction, directed workers on the German West Wall today to be ready to build new fortifications and told them that the value of their work on the West Wall now is being shown.

This was taken to indicate that construction crews might follow the army advance to solidify its gains with forts.

The novel but historic Netherlands defense stratagem of flooded lowlands was derided by the German shortwave radio, which said the waters had forced the Dutch to retreat, while the Germans, reportedly forearmed with 185,000 rubber boats, overcame the obstacle.

Great Britain's Cabinet change, with Winston Churchill succeeding Neville Chamberlain, has "very little interest for us at the moment," said authoritative Nazi sources. But DNB, the official news agency, said the change meant that "the most extreme war agitators have seized power in London. Chamberlain, who constantly sought to play the role of gentleman with an umbrella and prayer book, is now succeeded at the head of the English Cabinet by an exponent of plutocracy, who always has preached a brutal war of destruction against the German people."

Brussels Raided Twice.

BRUSSELS, May 11 (A.P.).—Brussels was bombed twice today while the Belgian Army's strong line of defense continued to hold up the German invaders, and British and French troops, supported by tanks and artillery, moved up to bolster the Belgian positions.

A late-day communique said the Belgians are continuing their fight against the enemy at the Albert Canal of the Meuse River and in the Ardennes Mountains. It reported that several air raid alarms had been sounded in Brussels and that an aerial battle had taken place over the Evers Airdrome.

An earlier Belgian communique told of fighting between advance Belgian units and German troops "at several places."

The communique added that German parachute troops had landed at points in the interior, but that most of them had been captured. Fifteen German airplanes were reported brought down.

Planes Reported All Night.

Ambulances returning to Brussels hospitals indicated that the latest raids by Nazi bombers had taken a further human toll. The first bombing of the capital yesterday nine and ten planes were seen over morning left forty-one dead and eighty-two injured.

This morning's first alarm sounded at 6:15 A. M. (1:15 A. M., New York time); the second fifty-five minutes later.

Planes were reported all over the country last night, and shortly after 5 o'clock this morning flights of Namur, thirty-five miles southeast of the capital, and Dinant, fifteen miles south of Namur.

Four Soldiers Are Killed.

Four soldiers were reported killed in a bombardment of Rixensart, about ten miles from Brussels, while Alost, fifteen miles west of here, also was reported bombed.

British and French troops, with tanks, artillery, motorcycles and engineers, were observed moving through Belgium this morning, but the Government kept strict censorship on their movements, as well as on the situation at the front and other military information.

Refugees from the frontier areas arrived in Brussels throughout the night, many of them riding in open trucks.

Brussels, which early in the war became accustomed to blackouts and restrictions on cafes and theaters, presented a perfectly prepared blackout during the night. Blue bulbs had been placed in all the street lights before the war began. The inhabitants were calm.

BELGIAN CHIEF SAYS GERMANS' DRIVE IS HALTED

MAY 12 1940

Gen. Denis Asserts Traps and Mined Roads Have Stalled Invader.

'CHUTE TROOPS MOPPED UP

British and French Soldiers Are Advancing to Join Army of Defenders at the Front.

BRUSSELS, May 11 (A. P.).—Militant Belgium proclaimed today that a lightning defense had stopped Nazi Germany's lightning invasion.

On land, Defense Minister Lieut.-Gen. Henri Denis declared the German thrust bogged down in a maze of traps, obstructions and mined roads and bridges long prepared to halt just such a blitzkrieg as Adolf Hitler sent upon Belgium before yesterday's dawn.

MAY 12 1940

The army, under the direct command of thirty-eight-year-old King Leopold 3d, backed up Gen. Denis's pronouncement. In all the border area, it said, the German invaders were halted.

Behind the lines, Belgian defenders mopped up German parachute troops and at the same time police were alert against any fifth column movement that might aid invaders dropped from the skies.

All Germans in the country were arrested. Leon Degrelle, leader of Belgium's Rexist (Fascist) party and Staf Declerq, Flemish extremist, were taken into custody.

Germans Carried to Jail.

Crowds of Belgians, roused by the fighting words of their King that "the Belgian cause is pure," jeered angrily as police vans carried Germans to jail.

British and French fighting men, brothers-in-arms of the Belgians in the last war, streamed through the country on their way to the fighting front. The cheering populace greeted the Tommies and poilus gaily, pelting them with flowers.

The entire country was on the alert for further air raids.

The death list from German bombs which fell yesterday in the center and suburbs of Brussels reached forty-one. Eighty-two persons were wounded. Eight German planes were shot down over Belgian territory, an official announcement said.

MAY 12 1940

In one area of Brussels twenty houses were wrecked by Nazi bombs. German raids on Belgian airports missed fire in one respect: All planes had been moved from the ports. The planes of the Sabena Air Lines, for instance, were reported safe in England.

Fighting Foot by Foot.

King Leopold raised the fighting spirit of his subjects by a proclamation saying that "foot by foot" the Belgians were fighting the German advance.

The powers of the country, he said, is "infinitely greater than in 1914," and though a hard fight lies ahead, "no one can doubt the final result" because "the Belgian cause is pure."

Refugees hurried out of the combat zones as the British-French Allies moved in. Evacuation of the residents of Liege, a battleground in the world war, was to begin today.

Happy over the turn of events were four British Royal Air Force aviators, interned since their planes crashed on Belgian territory earlier in the war. Among them was Jim Trotter of Charlottesville, Va., U. S. A., who crashed on February 24.

Belgium steeled herself internally for total warfare. Food rationing at fixed prices started today. Motion picture theaters and some shops were closed as well as the Brussels Bourse.

The blackout through the country last night was the first since the tense days at the beginning of the war.

While sirens signaled, the people slung on their gas mask containers, taped up windows and sealed windows and doors with blackout paper.

Dutch Report Germans Halted.

AMSTERDAM, May 11 (A. P.).—The Dutch General Staff announced today that British and French troops now are operating in conjunction with Dutch forces and that the German advance has been stopped at the front.

Stout defense by troops on the eastern frontier gave engineers time to complete the inundation of the main flood water defenses, cutting Holland in half. The sluices were opened early yesterday, when the invasion began, but the process takes more than thirty-six hours.

Meanwhile Nazi bombs smashed at the center of Amsterdam, the greatest city in the Netherlands, killing about twenty persons.

MAY 12 1940

One bomb fell 300 yards from the post office, demolishing dwellings. This is near the Dam, a broad plaza on which is located the gloomy royal palace, seldom used.

One bomber dropped its destructive load just before the sirens sounded the second alarm of the day.

The bombs hit about 200 yards from the window from which this correspondent was watching in the Associated Press bureau in De Telegraaf Building.

There was a tremendous explosion. Black smoke, dust and debris rising for several hundred feet.

Many Persons Are Injured.

Three old houses on the corner of the Blauwburgwaal and the Heerengracht were razed. Many persons were injured.

Downtown streets were crowded at the time, and civilians made for the shelter of buildings. They exhibited remarkable composure, however.

The all-clear signal was sounded fifteen minutes after the bombing.

The raid, which came at 11 A. M., was Amsterdam's first, although the city had a twenty-five-minute alarm beginning at 6:25 A. M., when a large enemy plane drew defensive fire. At that time, a sentry atop the palace tower fired his rifle at the high-flying plane.

Later the plane was reported shot down southeast of the city.

A raid on Amsterdam's airport, south of the city, resulted in four German planes being shot down by Dutch and British flyers.

Bombs from the planes set several small fires, but no one was killed or injured.

MAY 12 1940

Queen Appeals to King of Italy.

The radio announced this afternoon that Queen Wilhelmina had sent a message to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, saying:

"I trust your Majesty will use your influence in the hope that civilian populations may be spared the catastrophes of the war and that the principles of humanity may be respected by all belligerents."

She appealed to the "noble sentiments always shown by the House of Savoy" and to the King's humanitarian sentiments in the war "which has been thrust upon Holland."

The Dutch Army, after holding its own in the first surprise attack by land and air troops yesterday, fought vigorously to wipe out "islands" of German parachute troops who are trying to gain control of strategic points behind the nation's land and water defenses.

The armies of the east on the Ijssel and Maas rivers, were fighting bitterly to gain time for the complete flooding of the main water line from the Zider Zee to the Belgian border.

Allied troops, British and French, were arriving and marching east toward the main defenses.

The radio announced that Dutch army units had been attacked outside The Hague by a group partly in civilian dress and partly in Dutch military uniform.

"They probably were traitors and some of them possibly were German parachutists," said the announcer, bitterly.

Fifth Column Is Active.

In disclosing that besides the parachute troop menace, the Dutch Government was fighting a "Fifth Column," officials said that German residents had tried to capture Police Headquarters in The Hague, but had failed.

Documents found on some captured parachute troops disclosed that they were to be met at landing points by German residents of Holland, bearing special orders and identification cards, Government officials said.

"But undervaluation of Dutch soldiers already has cost these parachute troops dearly," said a semi-official statement. "Many of them have been killed or taken prisoner.

"The methods the parachutists were instructed to use are in flagrant contradiction of international law and morals.

"They were instructed to summon Dutch drivers and threaten them with their arms to make them transport them.

"This is a negation of the position of the civilian population in a belligerent country."

Dutch Recapture Airdromes.

Meanwhile Dutch shock troops were reported officially today to have recaptured airdromes at The Hague and Rotterdam in bitter see-saw battles which saw The Hague field change hands three times.

The Dutch Foreign Minister, Eelco N. van Kleffens, made an announcement in London that no airdromes in the Netherlands remain in the hands of the German forces which seized them yesterday.

MAY 12 1940

The Dutch attacked this morning at Rotterdam, determined to wrest from the Germans the nearby Waalhaven airfield, base of their forces of occupation in the big coastal city.

The assault lasted for two hours—directed not only at the airport but also at Germans on Dordrecht Island.

In the attack on Dordrecht Island alone, Van Kleffens said, more than 1,000 Dutch were lost but the German force was completely destroyed.

British Warplanes Help.

The Dutch counter-assault at Rotterdam was launched at 8:40 A. M. (3:40 A. M., New York time) in conjunction with a heavy British bombardment of the airdrome, on the left bank of the Nieuwe Maas, which bisects Rotterdam.

Had the Germans been able to consolidate their hold within Rotterdam, they would have had a coastal base for assaults directly across the narrow lower neck of the North Sea against the British Isles.

From the Allied viewpoint, the reported victory at Rotterdam over Adolf Hitler's plane-carried advance guard appeared as the most dramatic, if not most important, development thus far in the two days of Blitzkrieg and counter-Blitzkrieg.

Van Kleffens, who went to London yesterday to establish liaison with the Allied command, declared that the Germans, apparently the air force—had sown magnetic mines in all Dutch harbor entrances. He added that all the mines had been swept up by last evening.

On other fronts, the Dutch and Belgians reported that their troops were holding the German Army a short distance from the frontier; the French said that the first real German attack on the Maginot Line in the Moselle region east of Luxemburg had been repulsed and the British Air Ministry said that the Royal Air Force had destroyed at least fifty German planes and put many others out of action yesterday.

However, the Germans reported advances. DNB, the official German news agency, reported that one of the Belgian fortresses before Liege was in German hands and the Germans asserted they still held Dutch airports seized in the Blitzkrieg yesterday, although they were being forced to fight for them.

Germany carried the aerial transport warfare to Belgium, dropping fresh parachute troops from transports between Brussels and Louvain.

Other Reports of Fighting.

Other reports on the shifting fates of war included:

1. The announcement by British military circles that Arlon, in South Luxemburg, was in Allied hands. This was one of the first concrete indications that Germany had not gobbled up all of the little grand duchy, nestled in a corner of the Maginot and Siegfried lines.

2. Unconfirmed advices that German forces in Belgium had reached the outer defenses of Liege and had crossed the Albert Canal, a main line of Belgian defense. German forces crossing Holland's appendix province of Limburg were said to have taken the Albert canal bridges west of that city. Further north, another German column pushed on Roermond, a center of the Netherlands first line defenses near the eastern border.

3. The declaration of a British source that the Allied advance in Belgium is "proceeding according to plan"—this coupled with the statement that, although it is too early to be optimistic, yesterday's operations were "satisfactory."

4. The Belgian claim that lightning defense, consisting in part of blasting away bridges and other routes of approach, had halted the German overland advance.

5. Word that the strongest German advance in the Netherlands appeared to be north of the Rhine, toward Almelo, Hengelo and Arnhem. German forces were said to have penetrated as far north as Groningen.

Dutch Bridges Blown Up.

A British source said that the Nazi blitzkrieg tactics seem to have been frustrated by the swift action of the Dutch in destroying bridges on the Nieuwe Maas River. All were blown up except one at Gennet, some fifteen miles south of the Rhine.

Parachute invasions have been defeated thus far, said the Dutch, warning their citizens, however, to be on the alert for further incursions.

In all, the Allies said, they had shot down, captured or damaged at least 180 German planes during yesterday's fighting and the Germans declared 100 Allied planes were destroyed.

Ships Land Nazi Troops.

German troops were being landed on Holland's coast from small freighters flying the Swedish flag, Edwin Hartrich, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, informed network news officials here today in a cable from Amsterdam, where he is stationed.

Bombing of Amsterdam and parachutist attacks south of Rotterdam were described by Mr. Hartrich in the balance of the cabled report, which stated:

"The Holland radio cut off its programs at 2:30 P. M. today to give a steady stream of communiques and warnings about a mass attack of German planes which were dropping parachutists over Tilburg, to the south of Rotterdam.

"Minute by minute the story came through the loud speakers—all revealing how the Germans were engaged in an aviation drive to cut off Holland at the south from the Allies.

Put Death Toll at 43.

"Parachutists are reported to be dropping from transport planes and bombers. The transports are accompanied by Messerschmitt planes to ward off any Allied attacks.

"Amsterdam was bombed this morning at 10:45 o'clock. At least forty-three persons were killed and about thirty injured when four bombs dropped in the city on the Herrengracht Canal. A single German bomber dived on the city to about 2,000 feet and then let go four bombs which completely demolished a bakery, a private residence and a canal coffee house.

"The surprise bombing came as a distinct shock to the local residents, for the bomber had struck before the sirens began their wailing.

"This was the second alarm of the day. The first took place at 6 A. M. and lasted twenty minutes."

DUTCH RESIST NEW LAND AND AIR ATTACKS

MAY 13 1940

ALLIED TROOPS MOVING UP

Parachute Forces Alight in Droves but Holland Says They Are Being Wiped Out.

AMSTERDAM, May 11 (A. P.).—The Netherlands' fighting forces, with Allied re-enforcements moving up to join them in the fighting zones, put up a stiff resistance today against new land and air assaults of the Nazi blitzkrieg.

The Dutch claimed they were winning their fight. Army communiques and official announcements cited numerous specific victories against the German war machine.

German parachute troops, clinging to a foothold gained at Rotterdam on the first day of the German invasion, were reported to have received re-enforcements by air during the night.

Sharp fighting was going on at Rotterdam, where the Germans were reported hard pressed.

Bitter Resistance Reported.

Along the frontier the Dutch reported bitter resistance.

[Reuters, British news agency, said that foreign observers at Amsterdam were of the belief that at no point have German troops penetrated more than thirteen miles into Dutch territory.]

As soon as light came again German warplanes resumed their methodical flights over the country.

Amsterdam had a twenty-five-minute air raid alarm early today, but the German warplanes flew away amid the roar and rattle of anti-aircraft and machine guns and it was said no bombs were dropped. The raiders returned less than an hour later but the results of this foray were not known.

[A British broadcast said the Dutch wireless had reported that several hundred parachute soldiers tried to land this morning.

"Waves of them attempted to come down in the Dorbrecht area on the river Maas, near Rotterdam. Their objective was believed to be the bridge of the Moerdyk which forms the connection between west Holland and Belgium," said the British announcer.

Since 6 o'clock this morning, numerous landings in various parts of the Netherlands have been reported by the Dutch wireless.]

Says 'Chute Troops Wiped Out.

The Dutch declared the Nazi attack by parachute soldiers was meeting defeat. Literally swarms of these "men from Mars" were being wiped out, they said.

A Netherlands communique said that in the first day of the blitzkrieg at least 100 German planes were shot down.

All but one of the airports taken early yesterday by Nazi soldiers dropped by parachutes or brought in by air transports now are back in Dutch hands, the announcement continued.

In the recapture of these airports fourteen Nazi planes were taken.

At the Waalhaven airport, at Rotterdam, only port still held by the Germans, the parachute soldiers were hard pressed.

Every five minutes, however, the Dutch radio declared that "increasing numbers" of parachutists were dropping in southern Holland, near the Belgian frontier.

Transport Plane Downed.

During the air fighting over the Hague a transport loaded with German troops was shot down and it crashed into a house. The Dutch declared the German soldiers were dressed in the uniform of the Netherlands Army.

[Yesterday a German Government military spokesman declared it was untrue that any German parachute troops dropped in Holland were disguised as Dutch soldiers.]

British planes joined in the Netherlands' hot fight against invasion by air. The British air ministry declared British bombing attacks destroyed many German-occupied airports. At the Rotterdam airport fifty planes, including troop carriers, were reported attacked.

British troops were on their way to the eastern fighting zone where the Dutch were fighting both with modern arms and the flood waters which have been a part of their defense scheme since the Spanish seige of Leyden in the sixteenth century.

Britain Sends Warships.

The British-French Allies, moving quickly to aid the Netherlands, also sent warships. Two British destroyers and a French vessel arrived yesterday afternoon at Flushing and went up the ship canal to Middleburg.

Early last night motorized French troops also reached Middleburg from the sea. German planes raided the port, dropping incendiary and explosive bombs near the docks. Several fires were started.

A severe air attack was launched on 400 royal engineers but they made the landing without confusion.

Last night there was intense fighting as the Dutch sought to wipe out a small but strong Nazi force on the south side of the River Maas at Rotterdam. Driven out of their positions controlling a big bridge connecting two parts of the city, the Germans established themselves in their headquarters, the Maas hotel.

British Destroy 50 German Warplanes

[By the Associated Press]

30.24-2197.

London, May 11—The Air Ministry announced today the Royal Air Force destroyed at least fifty enemy aircraft yesterday and damaged or put out of action many more.

"Some twenty of our aircraft are missing," the Ministry said.

"During last night the airdrome still occupied by the enemy at Waalhaven, near Rotterdam, was heavily bombed by a large number of Royal Air Force aircraft.

"Extensive damage was done to the airdrome and many enemy aircraft were destroyed.

Nazi Troops Bombed

"Bombing attacks were made between the Rhine and Meuse rivers on enemy concentrations and on troops advancing toward the Dutch frontier.

"Reports so far received show that, in the course of extensive operations carried out yesterday and last night by bomber, fighter and reconnaissance aircraft of the Royal Air Force operating from this country and in France, at least fifty enemy aircraft are known to have been destroyed and many more put out of action or seriously damaged, either in the air or on the ground.

"Altogether some twenty of our aircraft are missing."

Nazi Troops Crushed

Meanwhile, Dutch shock troops fighting for their invaded homeland were reported officially to have recaptured airdromes at The Hague and Rotterdam in bitter see-saw battles which saw The Hague field change hands three times.

MAY 12 1940

Dutch Foreign Minister Belco Van Kleffens, who made the announcement in London, declared that no airdromes in the Netherlands remain in the hands of the German forces which seized them yesterday.

He declared that the German forces on the left bank of the Nieuwe Maas river at Rotterdam had been crushed—but at a cost to the Dutch of more than 1,000 lives.

Two-Hour Assault

At the same time fresh German parachute troops were reported dropping from aerial transports between Brussels and Louvain, Belgium.

The Dutch attacked this morning at Rotterdam, determined to wrest from the Germans the nearby Waalhaven air field, base of their forces of occupation in the big coastal city.

The assault lasted for two hours—directed not only at the airport but also at Germans on Dordrecht Island.

Admits Loss Of 1,000

In the attack on Dordrecht Island alone, Van Kleffens said, more than 1,000 Dutch were lost, but the German force was completely destroyed, he declared.

Had the Germans been able to consolidate their hold within Rotterdam they would have had a coastal base for assaults directly across the narrow lower neck of the North Sea against the British Isles.

From the Allied viewpoint, the reported victory at Rotterdam over Adolf Hitler's plane-carried advance guard appeared as the most dramatic, if not most important, development thus far in the two days of Blitzkrieg and counter-Blitzkrieg.

13-Mile Penetration

Belgian and Dutch forces, on land and in the air, fought as comrades in arms of the British and French. Thousands of British Tommies and French poilus poured into the Low Countries, Belgium especially, to help the Belgians and Dutch dam the tide of invasion.

Foreign observers at Amsterdam believe that at no point have German troops penetrated more than thirteen miles into the Netherlands, it was reported today by Reuters, British news agency.

Reports that German planes had bombed Belgian towns of Alost, Renaix, Louvain and Verviers were relayed from Brussels today by Reuters, British news agency.

Nazis Reported Across Canal

Other reports on the shifting fates of war included:

1. The announcement by British military circles that Arlon, in south Luxembourg, was in Allied hands. This was one of the first concrete indications that Germany had not gobbled up all of the little Grand Duchy, nestled in a corner of the Maginot and Siegfried lines.

2. Unconfirmed advices that German forces in Belgium had reached the outer defenses of Liege and had crossed the Albert Canal, a main line of Belgian defense. German forces, crossing Holland's appendix province of Limburg, were said to have taken the Albert Canal bridges west of that city. Farther north, another German column pushed on Roermond, a center of the Netherlands' first-line defenses near the eastern border.

"According To Plan"

3. The declaration of a British source that the Allied advance in Belgium is "proceeding according to plan"—this, coupled with the statement that, although it is too early to be optimistic, yesterday's operations were "satisfactory."

4. The Belgian claim that lightning defense, consisting in part of blasting away bridges and other routes of approach, had halted the German overland advance.

5. Word that the strongest German advance in the Netherlands appeared to be north of the Rhine, toward Almelo, Hengelo and Arnhem. German forces were said to have penetrated as far north as Groningen.

Calls For Reinforcements

Van Kleffens, who flew to London yesterday to establish liaison with the Allied command, said a British bombardment of the Rotterdam airport during the night preceded the 8 A. M. attack in that sector.

The Minister said reinforcements were needed in south Holland because "the German plan makes it necessary for us to scatter forces which would be kept together in the normal course of events."

Magnetic Mines Sowed

Van Kleffens said that two-thirds of his country's gold deposits had been sent away before the invasion and that the remainder is being sent.

The Minister said that German planes sowed magnetic mines in all Netherlands ports on the first day of the invasion, but that all had been swept up by evening.

He credited the Royal Dutch Navy for "a great part" in dislodging the Germans from Dordrecht Island in the Rotterdam operations.

Concealed In Barges

The island and other interior and coastal vantage points had been gained by German parachutists or soldiers landed in harbors by seaplanes, where they were said to have been concealed in barges until the signal to strike.

A British source said that the Nazi blitzkrieg tactics seem to have been frustrated by the swift action of the Dutch in destroying bridges on the Nieuwe Maas river. All were blown up except one at Gennet, some fifteen miles south of the Rhine.

Two of the most tensely interested neutrals were Switzerland and Italy—each wondering when their turn might come.

MAY 12 1940

Swiss Mobilize

The Swiss commenced general mobilization and Generalissimo Henri Guisan announced, "Our army is ready to do its duty on each of our frontiers."

Messages of sympathy to rulers of the three invaded countries went out from King George VI, expressing dismay over "the brutal and wholly unwarranted German invasion."

Prime Minister Winston Churchill is expected to announce his new war Cabinet within a few hours, the authoritative British Press Association reported. It added other members of the Cabinet will be named next week. Churchill conferred with his predecessor, Neville Chamberlain, and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, and later with two Labor leaders, Major Clement R. Atlee and Arthur Greenwood.

Former Prime Minister Chamberlain, "the great appeaser," who relinquished the seals of Britain's highest office yesterday to still party strife, agreed to serve in Churchill's Cabinet.

Seen Check On Churchill

Financial circles said Chamberlain probably would be chosen Chancellor of the Exchequer, the post he held in the Baldwin Government before becoming Prime Minister May 28, 1937. Other quarters predicted he would be Lord President of the Council, Minister Without Portfolio or leader of the House of Commons.

It was generally agreed that his function would be to act as a check on Churchill's daring.

Eden Is Mentioned

Political observers thought either Greenwood or Major Attlee would represent Labor, and Sir Archibald Sinclair the Liberals. Anthony Eden, Alfred Duff Cooper, A. V. Alexander and Herbert Morrison were others mentioned as strong possibilities.

The British looked for a national Government to unite political factions into a war regime such as led the nation to victory in the World War, something many Britons feared the Chamberlain regime could never do.

There was also the likelihood that David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister, would be given a Government post to end what Conservatives call his "brilliant mischief-making" in parliamentary debate.

Fighting Speech

In a fighting speech calling on the nation to rally behind the new Prime Minister, Chamberlain said simply, "My duty was plain. I saw the King and presented my resignation."

That decision was reached, he said, when bitter debate in Commons over the British military failure in Norway made it clear that "some new and drastic action must be taken if confidence was to be restored to the House of Commons and the war carried on with a vigor and energy which are essential to victory."

Terms Hitler "Beast"

He said it became apparent yesterday "that the essential unity could be secured under another Prime Minister, though not under myself," and, therefore, he resigned.

Chamberlain's farewell speech from No. 10 Downing Street, broadcast internationally, termed Hitler—the man with whom Chamberlain shook hands at Munich over "peace in our time"—a "wild beast."

French and British Allies Continue to Pour Fresh Troops Into Low Countries.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—Belgium and the Netherlands, fighting shoulder to shoulder with the Allies, struck back today at a German blitzkrieg which thundered into the lowland countries at the time-worn crossroads of European conflicts.

The Dutch and Belgians reported success in holding back the invaders.

Germany gave little information about the progress of the fighting and poured more Nazi legions into the battle zone, attempting to outflank France's western front fortifications.

Great Britain and France rushed troops and planes to the battlelines, while in London a domestic political drama unfolded.

Neville Chamberlain stepped out as Prime Minister so that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty in two wars, could form a National Government of many parties to still the storm of criticism arising from Britain's military failure in Norway.

Paris was roused by repeated air raid alarms but there was no reported repetition of German bombings which yesterday killed at least 100 civilians in French towns and cities.

MAY 12 1940

German planes, the strong arm of Nazi military might, continued to roar over Amsterdam and the Dutch said that "increasing numbers" of German parachute troops were dropping in Dutch territory near the Belgian frontier.

The parachutes have been defeated thus far, said the Dutch, warning their citizens, however, to be on the alert for further incursions. British dispatches from Amsterdam reported that the Germans had penetrated no farther than thirteen miles into the Netherlands across the frontier.

All But One Airport Recaptured.

All but one airport—that at Rotterdam—has been recaptured, along with fourteen Nazi planes, Dutch reports stated, drawing a picture of a nation summoning her every resource—including a complex flood system—to fight off the invaders.

180 Planes Shot Down.

In all, the Allies said, they had shot down, captured or damaged at least 180 German planes during yesterday's fighting and the Germans declared 100 Allied planes were destroyed.

Both British and French troops were in the Netherlands moving toward the war front. Warships and planes also arrived to help stiffen Dutch resistance.

Through the fields of Flanders 200,000 British Tommies streamed eastward across the Belgian frontier to meet a foe which came over this same route in 1914 to menace Paris.

King Leopold said that the Belgians were fighting the Germans "foot-by-foot" and expressed faith that this time the Germans, halted by tank traps, blasted bridges, and highly trained Belgian soldiers would be thrown back.

Tiny Luxemburg, south of Belgium, had apparently been almost completely overrun by Germans before the French made contact with them in the grand duchy wedged between the Maginot Line and the German West Wall fortifications.

It was understood that the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemburg had reached safety on French soil.

The British Command in France announced that eight Nazi air attacks, attempting to break up the British advance into Belgium, had been driven off in the past twenty-four hours.

During the first day of the German invasion at least forty-one Belgian civilians were killed in air raids, but dispatches said the people's morale remained high.

German reports said that Malmedy, fifteen miles inside Belgium from the German frontier, had been captured and that Masstricht, the Netherlands, only ten miles north of Liege, was taken. Liege is in the heart of Belgium's twenty-mile deep defense zone.

Germans Say Little.

The Germans, however, were telling little about military operations, but they indicated belief the decisive phase of the war was beginning in the Low Countries where European armies have fought for centuries to determine mastery of the Continent.

Two of the most tensely interested neutrals were Switzerland and Italy—each wondering when their turn might come.

The Swiss commenced general mobilization and Generalissimo Henri Guisan announced, "Our army is ready to do its duty on each of our frontiers."

Some Italian elements cheered for a German victory, but Italy remained on the sidelines.

Messages of sympathy to rulers of the three invaded countries went out from King George VI, expressing dismay over "the brutal and wholly unwarranted German invasion."

Chamberlain to Serve

Mr. Chamberlain, "The Great Appeaser" who relinquished the seals of Britain's highest office yesterday to still party strife, agreed to serve in Mr. Churchill's cabinet.

Calls Hitler a Beast

In a dramatic ceremony at Buckingham Palace last night, Mr. Churchill, whose mother was an American, realized a lifetime ambition when he solemnly kissed the King's hand signifying his acceptance of the Premiership.

In a fighting speech calling on the nation to rally behind the new Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain said simply: "My duty was plain. I saw the King and presented my resignation."

That decision was reached, he said, when bitter debate in the Commons over the British military failure in Norway made it clear that "some new and drastic action must be taken if confidence was to be restored to the House of Commons and the war carried on with a vigor and energy which are essential to victory."

Watch for Parachute Troops.

The British people willingly abandoned their Whitsuntide holidays for this week end to speed production of war materials as the Government cautioned citizens to carry gas masks, tighten blackout restrictions and watch out for German parachute troops who might drop from transport planes.

Communiques described how the British, in co-operation with their French Allies, had gone into action on land and in the air in response to appeals from Belgium and the Netherlands.

The Air Ministry told of a "devastating" attack on German troop-carrying planes at the Hague and Rotterdam, saying heavy damage was inflicted before the Germans could wheel anti-aircraft batteries into position after capturing the airports.

Four Nazi Planes Down.

Four German planes were destroyed, they said, in one dive attack alone over Waalhaven, Rotterdam's Civilian Airport which was one of the first Nazi objectives after their dawn invasion was launched yesterday.

The air ministry denied a Berlin announcement that Allied planes had bombed Freiburg, Germany, killing twenty-four civilians. The British and French governments previously had warned that if German planes attacked undefended towns the Allies would consider themselves free from pledges given President Roosevelt to refrain from bombing anything but military objectives.

Belgium and the Netherlands were described in reports reaching London as putting up strong resistance while the Allied forces moved in to their assistance.

Britain's mechanized army, which had been stationed opposite the Belgian frontier in France for just such an emergency, was reported moving steadily eastward.

The London Times in a leading editorial, welcomed the Netherlands and Belgium "into the growing fellowship of nations pledged to active maintenance of the cause of civilization.

"The grand alliance of our time for destruction of the forces of treachery and oppression is being steadily marshaled," the paper said.

Germans Score Direct Hits On French Homes

By William McGaffin

Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Somewhere in France (Note: Dateline Deleted by Censor), May 11—I have just seen the scattered remains of three private homes where two civilians were blown to bits and another gravely injured by Germany's first great aerial onslaught on France.

Plowing through the debris on the outskirts of this village (name deleted by censor), I suddenly came upon a jagged piece of bone and flesh wedged against a wall.

"Her thigh," said one of the military officers who was conducting me.

Was Engaged To Wed

Malca Leon, young and pretty, was engaged to be married. They picked up her remains in a sack after the German planes went over at dawn today.

Four planes dropped twenty-four bombs, according to the officer. When I asked him if there were any military objectives in the neighborhood he replied with an emphatic "none whatever."

"Then why?" I inquired.

His explanation was that the Nazi aviators, growing nervous, must have wished to lighten their loads to facilitate their escape after being caught in a curtain of anti-aircraft fire.

Direct hits were scored on two of the three houses which stood in a row along the side of the road. The a... was reminiscent of the destruction a Mid-Western tornado leaves behind.

Direct hits were on the two end houses, killing one person in each. In the center house Madame Pauline Bluteau and her seven children escaped unhurt, though all the windows were smashed.

Chickens Unharmed

The other person killed was Gilbert Vasseur. The injured person was Jean Gourot, future father-in-law of Mlle. Leon. He was taken to a hospital.

The area about the houses looked like a miniature battlefield. Soldiers were prodding the craters for pieces of the bombs, while a crowd of spectators looked on. Out in back, by the side of the onion patch, a flock of chickens clucked and pecked, with not a feather out of place.

Nazis Make First Big Maginot Line Attack

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 11—Germany's first large-scale drive of the war against France's Maginot Line was launched yesterday in concert with the invasion of the Low Countries, French military sources said today.

The Nazis threw a full division—between 12,000 and 15,000 men— against the French in an attack east of Luxembourg which was reported to have been unsuccessful.

While French authorities termed the battle the "first great attack of the war," the high command contended itself with an announcement that the French had maintained their positions.

The attack, launched as a vast struggle began in Belgium and the Netherlands for air supremacy and advantages on land, apparently was intended to keep the French forces busy on their heavily-fortified line and thus hamper the shifting of forces into the invaded Low Countries.

The general staff said fighting was continuing today, French troops moving into a "spirited" battle with German infantry in two sectors.

When the Nazi division attacked yesterday, the French advance guard followed its appointed role, sounded the alarm, and then withdrew.

This particular sector extending east from the Luxembourg border has been one of the most agitated along the Western front, even in the days when patrol activities were the main actions of a stalemated war.

It extended the German push to a jagged line between 300 and 400 miles long—from the North Sea along the Dutch and Belgian borders through the territory of Luxembourg and along the French border itself east of the tiny Grand Duchy.

French Recapture Moselle Outposts

In the struggle for air supremacy over Belgium, British and French planes fought off German flyers attempting to halt the flow of Allied troops into the beleaguered Low Countries.

Luxembourg and the country east of the Moselle river along what was previously known as the French front were the scenes of the fighting today.

In the Moselle river sector, French troops were said to have recaptured outposts from which they withdrew yesterday under heavy German attacks.

Situation In Other Sectors

French sources described today's situation in the other main lowland sectors as follows:

Netherlands—Dutch forces have succeeded in "mopping up" virtually all the German troops landed by plane and parachute yesterday in an attempt to seize the nation's airports; only one field remained in German possession. Fourteen Nazi planes were captured intact at one airport. The German frontal attack was said to have been halted thirteen miles inside the border.

Belgium—Belgian and German troops are in contact near the Belgian-Northern Luxembourg frontier, where "light" Nazi advance units have been halted at the first line of Belgium's defenses.

A Belgian communique reported today that contact units were continuing the fight against the Germans along the Albert canal and the Meuse river as well as in the Ardennes Mountains.

FRENCH TROOPS JOIN IN BATTLE WITH GERMANS

Nazis Throw Full Division Into 'First Great Attack' in Moselle Sector.

AIR WAR ON OVER BELGIUM

Struggle for Supremacy Develops as Allied Troops Are Bombed Eight Times.

PARIS, May 11 (A. P.).—French troops moved into a "spirited" battle with German infantry in two sectors of the newly opened war front today, the General Staff reported, while their Belgian and Dutch Allies fought to stem the Nazi advance further north.

The tiny Duchy of Luxemburg, through which the Germans moved swiftly yesterday, and the country east of the Moselle River along what was previously known as the French front, were the scenes of the land fighting today.

In the Luxemburg sector, a General Staff spokesman said, French advance guards were "maintaining our advance" in a series of engagements with Nazi patrols.

On the Moselle River sector, French troops were said to have reoccupied the outposts from which they withdrew yesterday under heavy German attacks.

Germany threw a full division of troops against the French forces in the sector east of the Moselle yesterday in what French military spokesmen described today as the "first great attack of the war."

Battle for Air Supremacy.

Meanwhile, today a vast struggle for air supremacy was developing over Belgium as British and French planes fought off the attacks of German bombers attempting to halt the flow of Allied re-enforcements into the beleaguered Low Countries. This struggle was disclosed in a terse British communique which reported that Allied planes had fiercely resisted attempts by the German Air Force to smash the movement of Allied troops into Belgium.

British General Headquarters said that the German air force had made eight attacks on Allied columns moving into Belgium in the last twenty-four hours, only to be met by "vigorous" resistance.

Allied fighting planes and anti-aircraft guns drove the Germans off as they attempted to machine-gun roads and troops concentrations, the communique said. The troops were said to have behaved admirably under fire.

Mention Parachute Troops.

The communique mentioned "reports" that the Germans had attempted to land parachute troops, but did not mention the outcome of this maneuver nor the sectors involved.

The British communique follows:

"The Germans are trying to prevent the movements of the Allied troops in the direction of the Belgian front by machine-gunning roads and communicating centers.

"Eight raids have taken place in the last twenty-four hours, but Allied aviation retaliated vigorously as well as the anti-aircraft batteries accompanying the convoys and installed for the protection of open cities and forts.

"Reports were received that the enemy attempted to drop troops by parachute.

"No panic was noted, but to the contrary an admirable coolness continues to reign among the Belgian and French population."

100 Killed or Wounded.

Meanwhile, an official spokesman in Paris announced that Nazi bombing planes had killed or wounded 100 French civilians in a series of widespread air raids which accompanied the assault on the Low Countries yesterday. Forty-four of the raiders were reported shot down.

Paris experienced its second air alarm in two days shortly before dawn today and German airplanes appeared at several other places over France, but there were no reports of new bombings. Anti-aircraft batteries blazed into action in east-central France during one thirty-minute alarm.

In retaliation for the Nazi air raids yesterday, the French said, their bombers successfully attacked "several enemy airdromes" during the night and also made extensive reconnaissance flights over Germany. All planes were said to have returned safely.

For the second successive day Paris was roused at dawn by the distant drone of airplane motors and shrilling sirens, but the threat from the skies failed to materialize. The alarm drove the civilian population to cover for forty-five minutes, beginning at 6:13 A. M. (1:13 A. M. New York time).

Anti-aircraft batteries blazed into action in east-central France during a thirty-minute alarm which began three hours earlier and another air raid scare roused the southeastern region at about the same time.

The latter area experienced a second alarm which began at daybreak and lasted for an hour and fifteen minutes.

Official French Version.

The French High Command issued later the following communique:

"During the night our movements were continued in Belgium.

"In southern Luxemburg, despite violent attacks, the enemy was unable to effect any new advance.

"Nothing to report from Lorraine and Alsace.

"Bombing by German aviation in French territory yesterday caused many victims among the civil population. The High Command regrets to announce that more than a hundred were killed or wounded including, more particularly, women and children.

"French bombers attacked during the night several enemy airdromes.

"Numerous aerial reconnaissances were made over German territory.

"All our planes returned to their bases."

Clash In Luxemburg.

The High Command also asserted that forty-four of the Nazi bombers which participated in yesterday's raids over France had been shot down by anti-aircraft batteries.

While the bulk of the Anglo-French northern armies raced to positions in Belgium, the first direct engagements between Allied and German troops on the new war front took place in the little Duchy of Luxemburg.

Military dispatches indicated that most of that unarmed country's 1,000 square miles of territory had been quickly overrun by the Germans before they came in contact with French outposts.

"Sharp combats" were reported between the opposing advance guards.

Using pontoon bridges hastily thrown across the Moselle River, the Nazi motorized columns sped swiftly through the defenseless duchy and hastily consolidated their positions against the possibility of an Allied counter attack.

Their advance was halted—at least temporarily—near the French boarder where the Allies had converted a series of abandoned mine pits into strong defensive positions.

Gigantic armies were massing for battle further north where the Belgians and Dutch—with almost 1,600,000 men under arms—were putting up stiff resistance against the German attacks by land and air.

At least that many more men, including 200,000 British troops who have been poised for months behind France's northern frontier, were in the Allied columns hastening to the assistance of the invaded countries.

British Force Spreads Out.

Endless lines of staff cars, motorcycles, tanks and trucks crowded with men and arms sped northward on all available roads, raising clouds of dust in the little Belgian villages where the civilian population cheered their coming.

The movement of the Allied columns was carried out with precision, according to plans worked out months ago in preparation for just such a contingency.

The British divisions participating in the operation advanced on the left flank of the long front extending from the Moselle River to the North Sea.

With the exception of two brigades stationed at Strasbourg the British expeditionary force in France has been concentrated in a sixteen-mile long, three-mile wide sector near Lille.

The Vanguard of the advancing columns was composed of speedy mechanized combat units, which were followed by the slower three-and-a-half ton, five-ton and twelve-ton tanks. Motorized infantry, and artillery brought up the rear, while overhead roared fighting planes en route to Low Country bases.

News of the Belgian and Dutch success in delaying the German land advance yesterday was received with gratification. The French High Command, in its communique last night, said that the Nazi attempts to land troops by parachute behind the lines in Holland were on the whole unsuccessful.

The political situation in France, which had been unsettled just before the Low Country invasion, appeared to have been calmed by the expansion of Premier Reynaud's Cabinet to include the extreme Right.

Latest additions to the Cabinet were the Rightist leaders Louis Marin and Jean Ybarnegaray as Ministers-without-portfolio.

Reports on the widespread German air raids on France yesterday indicated that the material damage was slight, but the French Government asserted that it would reply in kind if the Germans continued the attacks—which were said to have been aimed at non-military objectives.

Two British Officials Beaten Up By Anti-Allied Crowd in Rome

Secretary of Embassy and Assistant Naval Attache Are Set Upon by Seven Men —Pro-Nazis Demonstrate.

ROME, May 11 (A. P.).—Reliable spokesmen reported today that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, was preparing to protest to the Italian authorities against a reported assault on two members of his embassy staff and the appearance of anti-British posters in Rome.

The two British diplomats, George La Bouchere, secretary of the embassy, and Commander Rodd, Assistant Naval Attache, were attacked and beaten by men who were plastering posters on midtown walls last night, it was stated.

The posters said: "England has missed the bus." They were part of an extraordinary campaign to impress Italians with Germany's strength and the Allies' weakness.

At the same time Premier Mussolini, in the Senate and in a report from Luca Pietromarchi, Chief of the Economic War Office of the Foreign Ministry, heard two expressions of Italian displeasure over Allied contraband control.

Two American newspaper correspondents, Miss Virginia Cowles and John Whitaker, had been guests of the British officials at a dinner party and the diplomats were taking them home when the attack occurred.

Attacked Without Warning.

The party first stopped at the hotel of Miss Cowles, where they found posters on the hotel facade.

While they were reading the posters, a witness said, seven men attacked the three men without warning and slugged them for several minutes. The British then told their assailants they were from the British Embassy.

Friends said that Miss Cowles was pushed but not struck.

They reported that a crowd collected, about fifty men who had been pasting up the posters. The British officials then entered the hotel and telephoned Sir Noel Charles at the British embassy.

The hotel manager was said to have been knocked down when, appearing in pajamas and dressing gown, he asked the crowd to respect the foreigners.

When Sir Noel arrived he hailed two passing motorcycle policemen, but witnesses said they declined to intervene and rode away. Sir Noel and his colleagues then telephoned the police from another hotel across the street.

Witnesses said that eventually the Police Chief arrived and escorted the foreigners to their two cars, which they found covered with posters. Sir Noel insisted that they be removed, and the Police Chief complied while the crowd shouted disapproval.

Posters were still on the walls of the hotel this afternoon.

Demonstration Called Off.

Before the attack on the Britons had become known, Italian spokesmen said that an anti-British demonstration, which they had previously announced for today, would not take place. They gave no reasons for the change in the plan which was said to have called for the assembly of Italian students this afternoon in the Piazza Venezia under the balcony of Premier Mussolini's residence.

Meanwhile, in a pro-German demonstration in the center of Milan, several hundred students shouted "down with the Allies!" and paraded through the central streets of Milan, cheering Premier Mussolini, Germany and Adolf Hitler.

Mussolini Approves.

Mussolini himself applauded as the Italian Senate was told earlier today that the "disturbance" of Italy's shipping by Great Britain and France must change.

The statement was made by Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, Under-Secretary of the Navy, whose declaration that "only the possession of force can modify a situation which is just contrary to one's own interest" caused Mussolini to nod in approval.

"Serious disturbance to international sea traffic caused by Anglo-French control is felt particularly by nations bordering on the Mediterranean," Admiral Cavagnari said, "and first of all by Italy, because of her geographic, strategic and economic situation.

30.24-2201

30.24-2201

"This must necessarily change because it is contrary to natural rights."

Not Impressed by Air Claims.

The speaker's reference to the Allied blockade of Germany, which has been tying up Italian imports of cotton, oil and other raw materials, was made in a discussion of the navy budget.

Admiral Cavagnari indicated that he had little faith in figures of naval losses announced either by the Allies or Germany.

After observing that both sides had boasted of inflicting huge losses on the enemy in the Norwegian campaign, he expressed the conviction that "after the damaged ships are repaired there will not be much change in the ratio of strength between the two opposing navies."

He said that airplanes had met with considerable success in attacks on unarmed merchant craft, but had not proved effective against war vessels.

"We have learned reliably that experienced pilots, both German and Allied, have even recently affirmed and confirmed the great difficulty of striking a warship maneuvering at high speed," he said.

Calls Control Illegal.

Signor Pietromarchi, in making his report for the Economic War Office, recalled Italy's protest to London on March 3 against the Allied contraband control as a violation of international law.

He said that the control had "completely banished from the economic life of Europe the essential conditions for the carrying on of commercial relations and therefore the safety of contracts."

He said it appeared "not only as a weapon between the belligerents, but as an instrument of commercial hegemony destined to reach sectors which have nothing to do with contraband control."

He declared that 857 Italian ships had been stopped and taken to control ports from the beginning of hostilities up to May 3.

The statement was made by Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, Under-Secretary of the Navy, whose declaration that "only the possession of force can modify a situation which is just contrary to one's own interest" caused Mussolini to nod in approval.

"Serious disturbance to international sea traffic caused by Anglo-French control is felt particularly by nations bordering on the Mediterranean," Admiral Cavagnari said, "and first of all by Italy, because of her geographic, strategic and economic situation.

"This must necessarily change because it is contrary to natural rights."

Not Impressed by Air Claims.

The speaker's reference to the Allied blockade of Germany, which has been tying up Italian imports of cotton, oil and other raw materials, was made in a discussion of the navy budget.

Admiral Cavagnari indicated that he had little faith in figures of naval losses announced either by the Allies or Germany.

After observing that both sides had boasted of inflicting huge losses on the enemy in the Norwegian campaign, he expressed the conviction that "after the damaged ships are repaired there will not be much change in the ratio of strength between the two opposing navies."

He said that airplanes had met with considerable success in attacks on unarmed merchant craft, but had not proved effective against war vessels.

"We have learned reliably that experienced pilots, both German and Allied, have even recently affirmed and confirmed the great difficulty of striking a warship maneuvering at high speed," he said.

Forecasts German Victory.

The Fascist press meanwhile considered the substitution of Winston Churchill for Nevile Chamberlain as British Prime Minister and the shakeup in the Cabinet of the French Premier, Paul Reynaud, as likely to have little effect on events.

The extremist Fascist newspaper of Bologna, Resto del Carlino, asked whether it would be during the Government of Mr. Churchill, "another octogenarian," that Britain would "receive the first salute of landing German troops and whether M. Reynaud would be able to placate with another Cabinet shake-up" a revolution which may break out in France.

Resto added its voice to the Fascist effort to discourage manifest sympathy for Belgium and Holland among the Italian people. It said that Fascist Italy would not "feel sorry for the fate which befell two sacrosanct countries rotten with democracy and anti-Fascism."

It predicted a short and bloody war with a German victory.

Fascist press comment, although restrained, was frankly pro-German.

No Sign of Decision Yet.

An undercurrent of excitement ran through the people, who have been repeatedly warned by their leaders that they cannot hope to escape the war indefinitely, but the failure of the authorities to restore the blue street lamps and provisional air raid shelters which marked the chief cities last September was taken generally as an indication that Italy is not intending to fight immediately.

Diplomatic spokesmen expressed the belief that the Catholic Church was exercising a strong restraining influence to offset extremists who might wish to see Italy in the war on the side of Germany. The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, strongly condemned the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries, and expressions of sympathy for the people of Belgium and Holland were heard among some elements of the population, who speculated on the feelings of King Victor Emanuel, whose only son, the Crown Prince Humbert, is married to the Belgian Princess Marie Jose.

It was generally believed in diplomatic circles that one factor that would govern Italy's future action would be the attitude of the United States. Some observers expressed the belief, however, that Mussolini might decide the time was ripe to enter the fray if the Germans scored a quick success in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Pro-Nazis Demonstrate.

MILAN, Italy, May 11 (A. P.).—Several hundred students shouting, "Down with the Allies!" staged a pro-German demonstration today in the center of Milan.

They made no effort to march on the British and French Consulates, as is a common move in such demonstrations.

The students had attended a semester-end meeting at the School of Fascist Culture, where the Milan secretary of the party told them to remain calm and sure of Italy's destiny. The speaker's subject was: "Why We Are Anti-Bolshevist, Anti-Democratic and Anti-Bourgeois."

After parading the central streets of Milan and cheering Premier Mussolini, Germany and Reichsfuehrer Hitler, the students dispersed.

RULERS OF INVADED NATIONS RECEIVE BRITISH SYMPATHY

King George Calls Nazis' Attack a Brutal and Unwarranted Act.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—King George VI today sent to the ruling heads of the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxemburg his sympathy over "the brutal and wholly unwarranted German invasion."

The King's message to Leopold III, King of the Belgians, said: "German forces are invading your country in flagrant violation of international law and of specific assurances given by the German Government.

"This outrage is committed in spite of the strict neutrality observed by Belgium since the outbreak of the war.

"I wish to express to your Majesty how deep is my disgust at this crime and how profound my admiration for the gallant resistance now being made by the Belgian people under your Majesty's leadership.

"For the second time within a quarter of a century Germany has made an unprovoked attack upon your country and once more, in accordance with obligations assumed by my Government and the French Government, the Allied forces are hastening to the support of your people.

"I have complete faith that together our arms will again prevail and that Belgium will maintain her freedom and independence.

"In this critical hour, I wish to convey to Your Majesty and to your people an expression of sympathy and admiration for your country which is felt by my peoples throughout the world.

"George R. I."

The messages to Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands and Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemburg were phrased similarly.

London Teachers Told To Prepare for Bombings

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—Kenneth Lindsay, Parliamentary secretary to the Board of Education, advised the National Association of Head Teachers to end its conference today instead of on Monday.

Winnie.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—The man in the street has nicknamed aggressive new Prime Minister Winston Churchill "Winnie."

But for telephone operators Churchill has a private nickname—"Mister Winch."

He combined the first letters of his two names for a "nom-de-phone" to deceive wire-tappers, it was disclosed.

Now he may have to coin another.

Dutch Women Attack Parachute Troops

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—Dutch housewives took vengeance on captured German parachute troops unlucky enough to land in a suburban market place near Amsterdam, the London Daily Express correspondent reports.

"When the Nazis were rescued by Dutch soldiers they were too weak to walk. They had been thoroughly beaten by women who rushed them with knives, clubs and rolling pins," the dispatch said.

England Announces Conscription Schedule

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Labor announced today a monthly schedule for conscription during the remainder of the year "unless military requirements necessitate acceleration." The class of 1912—the Ministry today changed the system of classes from the age to the year of birth in continental style—will be called up on May 25, the class of 1911 in June, 1910 in July and so on in order until 1904 and part of 1903 will be called in January.

The Pope's message was made public a short time after he had received Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, in private audience.

Similar messages also were sent by the Pope to Queen Wilhemina of the Netherlands and Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemburg.

Pontiff's Words to Leopold.

The message to King Leopold said:

"In a moment when, for the second time against its will and right, the Belgian people sees its territory exposed to the cruelties of war, we, being profoundly moved, send your Majesty and to the entire nation so beloved by us assurance of our paternal affection, and, while praying to the all-powerful God that this stern trial may end with the restoration of full liberty and independence of Belgium, we send your Majesty and your people our apostolic blessing with all our heart."

Leopold's Message to Pope.

King Leopold's message to the Pope read:

"In spite of formal and repeated undertakings to respect Belgian neutrality, and in spite of our attitude of absolute loyalty, Germany has brutally attacked Belgium without warning.

"My country, with consideration for its honor and faithful to its word, is defending itself with all its strength.

"I permit myself to ask your Holiness, head of the Catholic Church, that you may, with your high moral authority, support the cause for which we are fighting with invincible determination."

The pontiff telegraphed to the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemburg (reported by the Associated Press to be in exile in France):

"In this sad moment, when the people of Luxemburg, despite its love of peace, is enveloped by wars and torment, our heart goes out to it and, while we implore its celestial patroness to give aid and protection that it may live in liberty and independence, we send your royal Highness and your faithful subjects our apostolic blessing."

The pontiff's talk with the President's representative was one of a series of audiences in which the Belgian Ambassador to the Holy See, Adrien Nieuwenhuys, and the British Minister, Francis Osborn, were received separately.

It was assumed the Belgian and British diplomats called to inform his Holiness of the war situation following the German invasion of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, and that Mr. Taylor obtained his audience to learn the pontiff's views.

Nazis Cite Monroe Doctrine

BERLIN, May 11 (AP).—By landing military forces in the Netherlands West Indies, the newspaper "National Zeitung" said tonight, the British "carried the war into territory which comes within the scope of the Monroe Doctrine."

Every change in this area "is an affair which is of interest for all American states," it continued. "Of special interest, however, is the occupation of Curacao and Aruba because the islands lie in a very important strategic position in relation to the Panama Canal."

Pope Prays for Low Countries

Sends Messages to Rulers Expressing Hope for Their Full Independence.

VATICAN CITY, May 11 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII today threw his moral force to the support not only of Catholic Belgium and Luxemburg, but also of Protestant Holland, in messages to their rulers saying he was praying for their triumph.

Vatican officials disclosed that the Pope had anticipated an appeal for support from King Leopold, one of the most devoutly Catholic of present-day sovereigns, by sending his message last night before receiving one from the King. Leopold's message arrived this morning.

The pontiff told King Leopold he was praying for the restoration of Belgium's "full liberty and independence."

Prayer for Holland.

The Pope's message to Queen Wilhelmina said:

"Having learned with deep emotion that your Majesty's efforts in behalf of peace have not succeeded in preserving your noble people from becoming a theater of war, contrary to its will and its right, we pray God, supreme judge of the destinies of nations, to hasten the restoration of justice and liberty with all His powerful assistance."

Netherlands Ministers Escape Their Own Guns

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—A Netherlands seaplane bringing Dutch Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens to England to ask for help made a forced landing at Brighton yesterday with leaking gas tanks, punctured by Dutch anti-aircraft guns covering the flight against German bombers.

"It was a very close shave," said Van Kleffens, who was accompanied by his wife and the Netherlands Colonial Minister, Charles J. I. M. Welter.

"Off the Dutch coast six German bombers appeared overhead high in the sky. Our anti-aircraft went into action immediately to cover our flight. Unfortunately they shelled us."

Indies Well Defended.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—The Dutch Foreign Minister, Eelco N. Van Kleffens, said today that by far the greater part of the Dutch Navy was in the East Indies.

That colonial area, he said, had strong land sea and air forces, including American-made bombers of latest types and 100 fighting planes.

Nazi Ship Is Hit, Tanks Fired in Raid on Bergen

British Navy Planes Attack Twice; All Americans in Norwegian City Are Safe

LONDON, May 11 (AP).—The Admiralty announced tonight that British Navy planes had "made two further attacks on Bergen," Norwegian west coast port now held by the Germans. The Admiralty said three hits were scored on a German ship believed to be the Bremse, a 1,460-ton training ship carrying four 5-inch guns.

The communique said the second attack was a complete surprise to the Germans.

"The enemy fuel tanks were attacked and heavily damaged," it said. "Two of the largest were set on fire and flames were seen to spread."

"Since the 8th of April the fleet air arm have shot down twenty enemy aircraft off Norway, besides accounting for many others on the ground," the communique added. "Further, fifty-one enemy aircraft have been destroyed by anti-aircraft gunfire of the fleet."

The Admiralty announced earlier today that additional mines "may be laid without further warning" along Norway's west coast from the 60th degree of north latitude (just south of Bergen) to the 65th degree (about 350 miles to the north).

BERLIN, May 11 (A. P.).—Authorized spokesmen reported today that German bombers scored heavy hits on a British battleship off Narvik and also seriously damaged "one or more cruisers" along the Norwegian coast.

An Allied destroyer also was reported to have been destroyed in the English channel.

STOCKHOLM, May 11 (A. P.).—The battle of Narvik, almost forgotten in the rush of events in western Europe, raged on today with British naval guns pounding the German-held northern Norwegian ore port and Allied-Norwegian troops drawing tighter their ring of steel by land.

The Germans were reported intensifying efforts to land additional parachute troops to aid the besieged garrison.

Despite all the maneuvering, the latest advices said no deciding advantage had been gained by either side.

Berlin Refers to Iceland

BERLIN, May 11 (AP).—Authoritative German sources said today the Pope Pius's "prayer and appeal on behalf of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg is completely uninteresting to us unless Iceland is included."

Iceland, a possession of Nazi-occupied Denmark, has been taken over by British troops.

ITALIANS BOLSTER DODECANESE BASES

Merchant Seamen Find New Troops, Guns and Planes.

SMYRNA, Turkey, May 11 (A. P.).—Merchant seamen returning from Italy's strategic Dodecanese islands say that the Fascists are rushing construction on many new land and seaplane bases.

Within the last few days anti-aircraft batteries have been installed at important points on the islands, they declared. Coastal batteries have been strengthened with heavier guns.

More than 40,000 Italian troops are said to have been landed at Rhodes, and 9,000 on the island of Coo. Freighters are busily unloading munitions, guns and light tanks.

Combined naval and air maneuvers were seen. Large numbers of small, fast torpedo boats participated.

A new seaplane-airplane base was reported commissioned at Stampalia three weeks ago.

SWISS SOLDIERS READY FOR DUTY

Frontier People Tense After Seeing Foreign Planes.

AIR PATROL PROTECTS BASLE

Gen. Guisan Says Nation Will Fight All Aggressors.

BERNE, May 11 (A. P.).—Switzerland's frontier population, told by Gen. Henri Guisan that the fully mobilized Swiss Army "is ready to do its duty on each of our frontiers," was tense today after a night in which foreign planes several times flew over Swiss cities.

For the first time since the war began a Swiss air patrol flew over Basle, at the junction of the Swiss, French and German borders, to protect the city last night.

German planes passed over Basle en route to France, but were seen returning to Germany later in the night after they had been met by heavy French anti-aircraft fire.

Over Schaffhausen, near the German frontier in the north, six foreign war planes of unknown nationality were seen flying from east to west through a heavy fog yesterday afternoon.

The Swiss made no protest over twenty-seven bombs which dropped on Swiss territory yesterday. An inquiry still is going on. It is believed they were released by a German pilot seeking to escape from a French pursuit squadron.

Gen. Guisan issued an order of the day which declared the army's determination to defend Switzerland "with its last drop of energy" against "all aggressors whoever they may be."

The general mobilization order of yesterday went into effect at dawn today, bringing to the colors 300,000 to 400,000 fresh troops, it was estimated. It was reported that 300,000 men for some time had been in the Winkelried Line facing Germany and in small fortifications facing France.

The order of the day said that general mobilization had been imposed "by the gravity of the international situation."

Guisan also warned against any news "spread by radio, pamphlets or other means which would put in doubt the national will of resistance." Such news, the generalissimo said, must be considered as "lies of defeatist propaganda."

Those who have reached the age of twenty will be included in each call.

Aragona, Lustig and 128 other American medical students plan to remain in Lausanne and continue their studies.

Stunned By Invasion Of Their Homeland

12,000 Dutch-Americans In Holland, Mich., Consider Plans For Raising Relief Funds

Holland, Mich., May 11 (AP).—Word that the German blitzkreig had been let loose on their homeland came as a stunning blow to the 12,000 or more residents of this community who are of direct Dutch descent. Today they were considering possible plans for the raising of relief funds.

News of the invasion of the mother country came as local Dutch-Americans were making final plans for their annual tulip festival, a revival of old Netherlands costumes and customs.

Instead of abandoning the festival, they plan to make it as reminiscent as possible of the homeland. The tulip festival is scheduled to open next Saturday.

Miss Eden said she was coming to this country for the first time to take undergraduate courses in languages at Vassar College. She left London on April 27 and was delayed at Lisbon for ten days by bad flying weather, she said. Miss Eden went from LaGuardia Field to the Hotel Ritz-Carlton to visit friends. She will return to England next year.

RUMANIA CHOOSES A DEFENSE CHIEF

Tatarescu Gives Gen. Ilcuzu Three Cabinet Posts.

BUCHAREST, May 11 (A. P.).—Rumania's entire defense was placed today in the hands of Gen. Ion Ilcuzu, regarded as the country's cleverest strategist.

Gen. Ilcuzu will head the ministries of National Defense, Air and Marine in a new Cabinet formed by Premier Gheorghe Tatarescu.

Mr. Tatarescu resigned today and was immediately asked by King Carol to re-form and strengthen his Government.

Persons close to the government said King Carol wanted representatives of all political thought, from the extreme Left to the extreme Right, represented in the new Government because of belief that Rumania must be united in the face of a possible extension of the war throughout Europe.

The monarch was understood to be alarmed at the manner in which dissatisfied factions opened the way in other countries for Nazi penetration.

GAFENCU RETAINED.

LONDON, May 11 (AP).—A Bucharest dispatch to Reuters (British) News Agency today said Premier Tatarescu had reconstructed his cabinet, making only minor changes and retaining Grigore Gafencu as Foreign Minister.

Japan Gives Stand on Indies

Demands Status Quo in Dutch Possessions —Sends Notes to Major Powers.

TOKIO, May 11 (A. P.).—The Japanese Government announced today it had notified all Powers concerned that Japan would insist on maintenance of the status quo in the Dutch East Indies in spite of Holland's involvement in the European war.

The Foreign Office said that such notification had been handed to the American, British, French, German and Italian embassies as well as to the Dutch legation.

This action gave effect to a Cabinet decision that Japan should state her position concerning the rich East Indian empire of the Netherlands. The Japanese Foreign Minister, Hachiro Arita, made a declaration on this point on April 15.

The decision was reached at an extraordinary session of the Cabinet.

The earlier Japanese declaration was made in a Foreign Office statement expressing the view of Mr. Arita that Japan attaches importance to the role of the Dutch East Indies in Asiatic affairs as well as economic relations between Japan and the islands.

"Should hostilities in Europe produce repercussions in the Netherlands East Indies it would give rise to an undesirable situation," said Mr. Arita.

Compared to Greenland.

Two days later Cordell Hull, the American Secretary of State, called for international respect of the status quo in the Dutch East Indies, regardless of what might transpire in the Netherlands.

Just before the Hull statement was made the Japanese newspaper Nichi Nichi speculated that the United States or Great Britain might seize the islands if Germany should invade the Netherlands, but said that Japan would "vigorously oppose" any change in the political status of the islands.

On April 18, the day after the Hull statement, Commander T. Kahoe, acting as a spokesman for the Japanese Admiralty, said that Japan's concern for the Dutch East Indies was similar to the interest of the United States in Greenland but that Japan has "much more vital" interests in the Dutch Pacific possessions.

Meanwhile a high Dutch official said here today that Japanese trade with the Dutch East Indies, including receipts of Dutch rubber and oil, may increase as a result of the European war.

Now that the Netherlands has been attacked by Germany, there is no more Dutch Empire trade with the Germans, and sales to Soviet Russia may be reduced in fear that such goods might eventually reach the Reich.

"We have already assured Japan that the European developments would not interrupt trade with the East Indies," this official said.

Assistance Waived.

The Dutch legation issued a statement emphasizing that events in the Netherlands would not affect the Dutch possessions in the East Indies, which were characterized as "a separate constitutional unit" over which the Governor has full powers.

"The Netherlands Government will waive any offer of protection by any foreign Power with regard to its colonial possessions, being itself fully prepared to uphold the independence of overseas territories regardless of conditions in the mother country," the statement said.

Washington Wants No Change.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (A. P.).—The United States reiterated today that any change in the status of the Netherlands East Indies would be prejudicial to the stability and peace of the entire Pacific area.

Secretary Hull, commenting on the announcement that Japan would insist on maintenance of the status quo of the Netherlands's Far-Eastern empire, restated American official interest in the islands.

Noting that both Great Britain and Japan as well as the United States had made it clear recently that the integrity of the islands would be respected, Mr. Hull said:

"This Government assumes that each of the Governments which has made commitments will continue to abide by those commitments."

He quoted from a statement which he issued April 17 setting forth the same position.

Text of Statement.

The statement said:

"I have no full report about the matter referred to in the press dispatches from Tokio. During recent weeks a number of governments, including Great Britain, Japan and the United States, have made clear in official public utterances their attitude of continued respect for the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies.

"This was in harmony with definite commitments formally made in writing in 1922. This Government assumes that each of the governments which has made commitments will continue to abide by those commitments.

"On April 17, 1940, in a public statement, I said:

" 'Intervention in the domestic affairs of the Netherlands Indies or any alteration of their status quo by other than peaceful processes would be prejudicial to the cause of stability, peace and security not only in the region of the Netherlands Indies but in the entire Pacific area.'

"In view of these facts, commitments and expressions of intention to respect the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies cannot be too often reiterated."

Allies Guard Dutch West Indies

Troops Sent to Curacao and Aruba to Aid in Preventing Oil Sabotage.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—Informed persons said today that Allied forces had landed in the Netherlands West Indies islands of Curacao and Aruba to prevent sabotage by Germans.

A statement issued to the press said that the United States Government had been informed by Allied diplomats in Washington of the decision to land troops.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (A. P.).—Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands Minister, said today that his Government had arranged with Great Britain and France for the landing of small Allied forces at the Caribbean Islands of Curacao and Aruba to protect oil refineries.

"The Netherlands Government are seriously concerned to guard against probable German attempts at sabotage at Curacao and Aruba, particularly to the oil refineries which are so vitally important to the Allied war effort," the Minister said.

"Lest it should be found that the local Netherlands authorities have insufficient forces at their disposal to deal with such attempts, it has been arranged by the Netherlands Government in consultation with their Allies that small additional forces from neighboring Allied territories should be made available to proceed to both places."

The Dutch island of Aruba, north of Venezuela, contains the world's largest oil refinery. A nearby Dutch island, Curacao, holds what is reputed to be the second largest refinery.

Both are owned in majority by American capital, with an investment of many millions of dollars.

Officials here estimate that Curacao and Aruba produce one-third of the Allies' supplies of high octane gasoline, necessary for good performance by warplanes. The authorities of the two islands already have declared martial law.

A dispatch from Aruba said that 150 French marines were landed there, but this action was not regarded in Washington as an infringement of the Monroe Doctrine.

The troops were viewed as an aid to Dutch authorities rather than presenting any challenge to Dutch sovereignty.

The Governor proclaimed a state of war against Germany in the territory of Curacao yesterday. All Germans in Aruba were rounded up and sent to an unidentified island for detention. Attempts to scuttle or burn three German ships were frustrated. The crew of a fourth managed to set fire to their vessel and it was badly burned.

Loudon's Explanation.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (A.

An Aruba dispatch last night said that 150 French marines had been landed there from the cruiser Jeanne d'Arc.

The text of the Allied notice:

"It is learned in authoritative quarters in London that the Netherlands Government, the French Government and his Majesty's Government have been in consultation on steps to be taken to prevent possible German attempts at sabotage in the important oil refineries on the Netherlands West Indian islands of Curacao and Aruba.

"In view of the danger that local authorities might have insufficient forces at their command to deal with such attempts, it was agreed that an Allied force should at once be dispatched to co-operate with the local administration in the execution of the necessary measures for security of these islands. Allied units have already been landed and have been cordially welcomed. The United States Government has been kept informed of the position by Allied diplomatic representatives in Washington.

Important to Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (A. P.).—Intensification of the American neutrality patrol to maintain constant watch over the Dutch West Indies appeared likely today in order to prevent any attempt by German sea raiders or submarines to destroy the valuable oil properties there.

The Dutch island of Aruba, north of Venezuela, contains the world's largest oil refinery. A nearby Dutch island, Curacao, holds what is reputed to be the second largest refinery.

Both are owned in majority by American capital, with an investment of many millions of dollars.

Officials here estimate that Curacao and Aruba produce one-third of the Allies' supplies of high octane gasoline, necessary for good performance by warplanes. The authorities of the two islands already have declared martial law.

A dispatch from Aruba said that 150 French marines were landed there, but this action was not regarded in Washington as an infringement of the Monroe Doctrine. The troops were viewed as an aid to Dutch authorities rather than presenting any challenge to Dutch sovereignty.

The Governor proclaimed a state of war against Germany in the territory of Curacao yesterday. All Germans in Aruba were rounded up and sent to an unidentified island for detention. Attempts to scuttle or burn three German ships were frustrated. The crew of a fourth managed to set fire to their vessel and it was badly burned.

Blackout of Hawaii Will Not Be Broadcast

HONOLULU, May 11 (A. P.).—A projected national broadcast of the blackout of Hawaii next Thursday during army maneuvers will be censored to prevent alarming listeners, army officers promised today.

The Hawaii tourist bureau had expressed fear the broadcast might lead to mass hysteria, similar to that which greeted Orson Welles's "Martian invasion."

The scene would be perfect, with the spread of war in Europe and fear that it might involve Japan and the United States in the Dutch East Indies. The entire American fleet is concentrated in Hawaiian waters.

FORD'S ANTWERP PLANT IS BOMBED

Diplomats Report All U. S. Citizens Are Unhurt.

WASHINGTON, May 11 (A. P.).—American diplomats in the European war zone reported to the State Department today that German planes had bombed the Ford automobile plant in Antwerp, parts of neutral Switzerland and eighteen towns in France.

The automobile plant was struck by three small bombs at 2:30 P. M. yesterday without serious damage, a dispatch from Consul-General Louis Sussdorff Jr. said. No Americans were hurt, but four Belgian employees were wounded. The damage to the plant consisted mostly of broken glass.

Ambassador John Cudahy reported from Brussels that from time to time yesterday German planes flew over the Belgian capital and dropped many incendiary bombs without causing serious fires.

From Berne Minister Leland Harrison cabled that Swiss territory was violated many times yesterday by German war planes headed toward France.

Ambassador Bullitt at Paris reported that the French Government had published a list of eighteen towns in France that had been bombed and said the city of Nancy was bombed twice.

The first direct word from Bergen, Norway, since the German occupation of that port city came in a report from Consul Morris P. Dunlap, by way of the Oslo legation, saying that all Americans in Bergen and surrounding districts were well.

Allies Ease Blockade Rule, Navicerts Now Optional

WASHINGTON, May 11 (AP).—Great Britain and France today gave clearance through their contraband patrol to American exports destined for Holland and Belgium.

The British Embassy said the Allies would dispense with navicerts on shipments to the Dutch and the Belgians. Navicerts are certificates, obtainable by shippers from British consulates, which state that designated exports are not contraband and therefore not subject to seizure by the British contraband patrol.

The British Embassy said navicerts still would be issued for shipments to the Netherlands and Belgium if shippers desired them, and that the navicerts would be issued promptly if ships involved [illegible] call at neutral as well as Allied ports.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Department officials said the extension of the war to the Netherlands and Belgium threatens—if the German invasion assumes broad proportions—an important market for American farm products and an important source of supply for Britain.

LARGE PARACHUTE LANDING REPORTED

Destruction of Moerdyk Bridge Said to Be Aim.

A new wave of German parachute troops dropped on the Netherlands at dawn today, the British wireless said in a broadcast intercepted in New York by CBS.

The British broadcast, as reported by CBS, said:

"German parachute troops are being dropped in Holland in large numbers. The Dutch wireless early this morning said that the number who had tried to land this morning was believed to run to several hundred.

"Waves of them attempted to come down in the Dordrecht area on the river Maas, near Rotterdam. Their objective was believed to be the bridge of Moerdyk which forms the connection between West Holland and Belgium.

"Since six o'clock this morning, numerous landings in various parts of the Netherlands have been reported by the Dutch wireless."

British Air Danger

[By the Associated Press] DEVON-FRANCIS

New York, May 11—The next few days may well decide whether the British Isles, free from invasion by a continental power for almost 900 years, are in danger of attack by airborne German infantry.

German strategists have talked for years of the possibility of an invasion of the British Isles over the heads of the British fleet.

The establishment of airdromes within an hour's flying time of England was an objective of the Nazi attack against the Low Countries.

Such an aerial invasion, with troops supported by light field pieces, would be an audacious undertaking, but the lightning Polish campaign and the invasion of Norway proved the Germans capable of such undertakings.

The Germans have the planes and the pilots. Except against very spirited opposition, they have and can use a bombing technique for disrupting highway and railroad communications vital to the defensive movement of troops.

The purpose would be to throw the civil population into panic and demoralize the entire British military organizaton, as much as to seize and hold ground.

Seaplanes In Holland

In descending on Holland, the Germans used seaplanes carrying as many as forty men each with their personal field equipment.

These seaplanes were similar to the Blohm & Voss ships used for three seasons by Deutsche Lufthansa, the German transport company, in experimental flying across the North Atlantic.

In addition the Nazis have almost limitless numbers—considering their factory productivity—of Dornier flying boats, some of which have been shot down off the English coast on reconnaissance flights. The Dornier type is known as the work horse of German naval aviation.

Must Have Superiority

The Germans have in quantity for airdrome operation both bi-motored and tri-motored Junkers metal transport planes and a few of the four-motored type made by Junkers, Heinkel and the Focke-Wulf companies.

If the Allies do not have the airplanes and pilots to match the German version of air warfare—the first tenet of which is establishment of air superiority—they will be in a fair way of losing the lightning campaign in the low countries.

KING GEORGE OF ENGLAND—"I have complete faith that together our arms will again prevail."

ADOLF HITLER, Fuehrer of Germany—"The fight beginning today will decide the fate of the German nation for the next 1,000 years."

QUEEN WILHELMINA of the Netherlands—"I and my Government will do our duty."

KING LEOPOLD of Belgium—"The Belgian cause is pure and with the help of God will triumph."

GEN. MAURICE GAMELIN of France, Commander-in-Chief of the British and French armies—"The orders are, for France and her Allies: Courage, energy, confidence."

Brussels Reports Enemy Losses Heavy And Own Positions Intact—Capital Bombed—Dutch City Of Maastricht Captured By Invaders

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 11—A "new type of weapon" enabled the armies of Adolf Hitler to capture Eben Emael, described as the strongest fortress in Belgium's Liege defenses, the German high command announced tonight.

The fort's commander and 1,000 men surrendered, the announcement said.

A picked air-force detachment, in a slanting attack from above, already had put the fort out of action yesterday, the command said, and held its garrison in check with the new weapon until an army unit attacking from the north arrived and forced the surrender.

Details Kept Secret

"Further and more precise details must, of course, be kept in the dark," authorities said of the new weapon.

30.24-2205

It was a matter of speculation whether this was the weapon which Adolf Hitler mentioned in a speech at Danzig last year and which has had experts guessing at its nature ever since. (There also has been speculation whether it was the magnetic mine.)

Eben Emael was the second fort claimed to have been taken in the Liege fortified zone, where the imperial German steamroller was stalled for a week of frontal assault in 1914.

Nazis Seize Maastricht

This time the German armies sliced through the Dutch appendix province of southern Limburg, which virtually is undefendable, seized Maastricht, on the border between the western edge of Dutch Limburg and Belgium, and captured the vital bridges over the Maas river and the Albert canal in Maastricht and to the west of it.

Then, according to the official German announcement, they stormed Fort Eben Emael, which controls these crossings, and it surrendered this afternoon.

15 Miles North Of Liege

The scene of this action is some fifteen miles north of Liege proper. The new Albert Canal runs north from Liege to above Maastricht, thence west to Antwerp, and, with its correlated fortresses, is Belgium's shield against invasion from the northwest and north.

The German High Command's communique said:

"The strongest fort of the fortress of Liege, Eben Emael, which commands the crossing over the Maas (river) and the Albert Canal at and west of Maastricht, surrendered this afternoon. The commander and 1,000 men were taken prisoners.

Fort Put Out Of Action

"The fort was already put out of action May 10 and the garrison was kept in check by a picked detachment of the air force under the leadership of Lieutenant Witzig and by the use of a new type of weapon. When the unit of the army attacking from the north successfully established contact with the Witzig detachment after a hard fight the garrison gave up."

Authorized sources said German troops who occupied Belgian and Netherlands airports yesterday still held them today, but were "fighting with Belgian and Dutch troops."

Germany's cautiously worded communique, however, claimed between 300 and 400 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and 23 shot down in air fights yesterday. The Germans said they lost 11 and 15 were missing.

Enemy Sub Sunk

The high command also reported the sinking of one enemy submarine by a Nazi submarine, the sinking of an enemy destroyer by a Nazi speedboat, and the sinking of two merchant ships of 5,000 and 2,000 tons, respectively, by aerial bombs between Calais and Dunkerque.

On the far north Norwegian front, which has settled into an Allied siege of a German garrison at the ore port of Narvik, the high command said bombs of various calibers had hit a British battleship and one cruiser off Narvik.

German officials explained that the actual spot news on developments in the latest war arena was meager because details might prove valuable to the enemy.

DNB's account of the capture of the Belgian fort said that the first day of the German advance "against the formidable fortifications which the Belgians erected in the east against Germany already has shown that these too are unequal to withstanding the lightning attack of the German air force.

"For instance, one of the strongest forts in the area before Liege proved completely defenseless against surprise attack by German planes.

"After a brief, desperate fight on the part of the garrison, the fort was overwhelmed by the superiority of forces from the air and fell into the hands of the German troops in a few minutes."

Allies Challenged

Meanwhile authorized German spokesmen challenged the Allied powers to prove that German bombers had attacked non-military objectives in Brussels, killing civilians, and offered to furnish evidence to foreign journalists in Berlin that the French attacked what the Germans called the open town of Freiburg, Germany, and killed twenty-four civilians.

DNB said thirteen of the victims were children between the ages of 5 and 12, killed when a bomb landed in a playground.

German spokesmen intimated that photographic material in the hands of the high command left no doubt that the French attacked Freiburg and violated international law.

Near Black Forest

Freiburg, a famed university town with a population of 100,000, is near the Black Forest. It lies within the zone of the German West Wall, but the Germans contend it is an open town.

Informed sources said the enemy is entitled to bomb a purely military objective in any city, but they must be sure to hit the mark. If the bombs drop elsewhere, though unintentionally, this constitutes a violation of international law.

It was reiterated officially that Hitler has given strict orders to the air force to attack military objectives only.

The German news agency pointed out enemy military communiques "nowhere claim that Germany attacked open cities and villages and other non-military objects," and such claims came only through enemy news agencies.

Fort Eben Emael Falls Before 'New Means of Attack,' Berlin Reports

More Allied Troops Move Up to Front

German Losses Reported Heavy; Planes Bomb Brussels Twice in Day

By The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, May 11.—Supported by planes and armored cars, powerful German forces won a foothold in Belgian defense positions near the Dutch city of Maastricht today. A government communique tonight reported, however, that the Nazis had sustained "heavy losses" in attacks on Belgian fortifications, and said "our positions remained intact" around the fortified town of Liege.

[The German high command claimed the capture, by a "new means of attack," of Eben Emael, strongest fort in the Liege chain commanding the crossing of the Albert Canal and the Meuse River south of Maastricht and twelve miles north of Liege itself. The "new means of attack" was not described, but apparently involved use of the air force. The United Press said Eben Emael was the fort which D. N. B., official German news agency, said had been captured yesterday but which was not identified at that time.]

Nazis Win Foothold

Tonight's Belgian communique said:

"During the day important enemy forces, with the aid of incessant bombardments carried out by powerful aerial units and supported by armored cars, attacked in the Maastricht region. They succeeded in getting a foothold in our defense line.

"Our troops in Luxemburg continued their operations, following a preconceived plan, and vigorously held their own against the invaders.

"Around Liege our positions remain intact. The enemy has suffered heavy losses before certain of our fortifications.

"The enemy aviation has carried out systematic bombardments, attacking numerous localities over a great part of our territory."

An earlier communique said Belgian troops in the first line of defense had established contact with German advance units "in several sectors" of the front, and asserted at least fifteen German planes had been shot down. "Very active" operations of Belgian flyers and anti-aircraft batteries were cited.

Chief points of contact between the Belgian and German forces were said to be along the Albert Canal and the Meuse River, and in the Ardennes Mountains, facing German-occupied Luxemburg.

Heavily equipped British and French troops, bringing up artillery, tanks and engineering equipment, moved through Belgium to undisclosed positions.

Bombers Raid Brussels

Nazi bombers raided Brussels and other communication centers through the second day of the German attack on the Low Countries. German planes also continued to drop parachute troops.

The Belgian communique, however, said neither of these branches of the German air arm had been particularly effective. It reported the enemy bombardments, two of which were aimed at Brussels, had caused no "important damage," and that most of the parachute troops were "captured or neutralized."

Brussels was bombed twice this morning, and two persons were killed while seeking shelter from the raids. Returning ambulances gave indication of other casualties. Air-raid alarms continued at the rate of two an hour, but there were no further important bombings.

A report from Rixensart, about ten miles from Brussels, said four soldiers were killed in a bombardment there. Alost, fifteen miles west of the capital, also was reported bombed, and flights of German planes were sighted over Namur and Dinant, southeast of Brussels.

For the rest, strict government censorship was clamped down on all military information. This applied to operations on the front, beyond the meager word of contact made with the enemy, as well as to the movement of the Allied reinforcements.

[A Havas (French news agency) dispatch from Brussels said an estimated thirty persons were killed in the crash of a German bomber, hit by a shell fired from a British Channel steamer anchored in the canal of Villebrug.]

With German planes reported all over the country last night, Brussels went through its first blackout of the war in the role of a belligerent. It ran off without a hitch. Restrictions were placed on cafes and theaters, many of which were closed, while the inhabitants carried gas masks and took all precautions at home to make the blackout effective.

A steady stream of refugees from the border regions poured into Brussels all during last night and today. Many of them had to make the trip in open trucks.

Two factories near the capital were reported on fire as a result of the morning air raids.

Hasselt, on the Albert Canal, twenty-two miles north of Liege, was said to have been cleared of civilians.

Telephone communication from Brussels to the provinces was barred to all but official calls.

In a continuation of security measures begun yesterday with the arrest of all Germans in Belgium itself, it was reported Germans in the Belgain Congo had been taken into custody.

All Germans in Belgium were arrested. Leon Degrelle, leader of Belgium's Rexist (Fascist) party, and Staf Declero, Flemish extremist, were taken into custody.

Antwerp was bombed again late today, with a number of casualties, but authorities declined to reveal the details. Belgian planes shot down two Messerschmitts, it was reported, and anti-aircraft fire brought down six German planes near Brussels. German aerial bombardments of Antwerp yesterday resulted in thirty casualties, it was learned today.

DUTCH RECAPTURE TOWN; KILL ALL NAZI SOLDIERS ABOARD ARMORED TRAIN

Admit Invaders Have "Crossed A River"—Germans In Civilian Garb Try To Seize Hague Police Station; Snipe At Hollanders From Roofs

Amsterdam, Sunday, May 12 (AP)—At least twenty persons were reported killed today when four bombs fell in the heart of the city.

New York, Sunday, May 12 (AP)—A Brussels broadcast, picked up by NBC, said the Belgian capital had undergone two more German air raids this morning.

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN
Associated Press Correspondent

Amsterdam, May 11—Netherlands border troops were reported officially tonight to have recaptured one town from the main German invading forces in a four-hour counter-attack and to have killed every soldier in a German armored train.

In the interior, the Dutch high command said, the Germans dropped more parachute troops and they, for the most part, were destroyed.

But with German bombs killing at least a score of persons in the first air raid on Amsterdam, the country's largest city, the defending army and police ran into new troubles.

German Snipers In Civilian Garb

Germans in civilian garb tried in vain to capture police headquarters at The Hague and sniped at soldiers and policemen from the roofs of houses.

While first-line Dutch troops, for the most part, were falling back according to plan from the eastern frontier after laying waste to means of approach, the high command acknowledged the Germans had "crossed a river"—presumably either the Ijssel, east of Arnhem, or the Maas, farther south.

Dutch Accomplish Main Purpose

The front-line defenders, however, had accomplished their main purpose: Gaining time for complete flooding of the main water-line defenses in the middle Netherlands.

Moreover, one border fort was sturdily holding out against the Germans.

The town that was recaptured by the Dutch was identified in Allied advices as Mill, ten miles inside the frontier and about the same distance southeast of Nijmegen. It is on a main, cross-country railway line. The same advices identified the fort which is holding out as Pennerden, at Velp, east of Arnhem. (However, French military advices reported Arnhem, in east central Netherlands, about twelve miles from the border, had been captured by the Germans.)

Indicated Still In Nazi Hands

Although Netherlands troops, aided by British planes and the Dutch river fleet, were reported earlier in the day to have wiped out resistance of parachute troops at Rotterdam and Dordrecht Island, tonight's communique indicated the airport at Waalhaven, south of Rotterdam, still was in German hands.

It said:

"French and English troops have come hurrying to our aid and, together with the Netherlands troops, will defend our soil.

"Our border troops gallantly accomplished their task. The demolitions for which they received orders have been executed. After that the greater part of them were withdrawn.

Dutch Uniforms In Nazi Train

"After furious attacks which lasted four hours, a town which had been in the hands of the enemy has been recaptured by us. Thereafter all soldiers on a German armored train were killed. In the train were found pamphlets in the Netherlands language, and Netherlands army uniforms.

"According to last reports from an old fortress, our forces held on there stubbornly despite enemy action.

"The enemy succeeded in passing a river.

"The English air forces have repeatedly bombed the only airport still in German hands (presumably Waalhaven). German troops have penetrated from this airport to some points and vigorous action is now proceeding against them.

Plot To Seize Police Station

"An attempt to take police headquarters somewhere in Holland (The Hague) by surprise failed completely. From some houses where Germans are living who up to now enjoyed the hospitality of our country, there has been firing on the Dutch military and police.

"An effective end has been put to this.

"Though in some places parachutists have landed again, their number is very small. They shared the fate of the parachute troops landed yesterday and have been killed, for the most part."

Another German bomb raid on Amsterdam's airport, Shiphol, was driven off, with four German planes shot down by British and Dutch fighters.

At a cost of more than 1,000 lives, the Dutch army and navy were declared to have wiped out the Germans landed by seaplane and parachute in the southern part of the great seaport city of Rotterdam and on Dordrecht island, about twelve miles to the southeast.

If the Germans had been able to hold these western Holland bases they would have been in superb condition to strike across the narrow neck of the North Sea at England.

Bombs Kill 20 In Amsterdam

An estimated twenty persons were killed and many injured when a lone German bomber, flying over the crowded streets of mid-Amsterdam at 11 A. M., dropped bombs which struck only a few blocks from the great, grey royal palace on the Dam, central Amsterdam square.

The bombs dropped just before Amsterdam's air raid sirens sounded their second alarm of the day.

Civilians, remarkably calm, took shelter in buildings. Amsterdam's air-raid shelters are few, and all built above the ground, because of the water beneath.

Earlier a lone plane had flown high over the city. A sentry in the tower of the royal palace banged away at it with his rifle. Later anti-aircraft guns shot it down.

Queen Appeals To Italy's King

Almost at the very hour of the Amsterdam bombing, Queen Wilhelmina was sending a message to King Victor Emanuel of Italy, imploring him to use his influence, presumably on Hitler through Benito Mussolini, to help save civilian populations "from the calamities of war, and that principles of humanity may be observed by all belligerent powers without exception."

Attracted by the sound of anti-aircraft fire, I was watching from a window of the Associated Press Bureau in the newspaper, De Telegraaf.

SEES HOUSES FALL APART.

The bombs struck about 600 yards away from me sending up great clouds of smoke, dust and debris. Three old houses on the corner of the Heerengracht and Blauwburgwaal were ripped apart.

The Hague, seat of Government some thirty-five miles southeast of Amsterdam, was bombed yesterday, without serious result, and today a Dutch army unit was attacked near The Hague by a group of men in civilian clothes and Dutch army uniforms. A number of small communities in southern Holland also were bombed, with several dead and wounded.

Many In Dutch Uniform

While the armies of the interior hunted out the German parachute platoons, many of them in Dutch uniform, the front-line defenders on the east fought bitterly in their flood-flanked outposts on the Maas and Ijssel rivers to stem the main German armies at least until the main water line, cutting Holland in two, can be fully flooded from the Zuider Zee south and west.

The sluices were opened early yesterday, when the invasion began, but the process takes upward of thirty-six hours.

Destruction of bridges on the two rivers in the Eastern Netherlands, plus the strategic flooding begun months ago in the "first water line" between the Neder Rijn and the Waal, aided the front line defenders.

More British troops and French mechanized forces, too, were landed at North Sea ports and rushed to the central network of fortifications and flood defenses in the Amersfoort area.

Credit Given Dutch Navy

The Dutch navy, operating in the Oude Maas river, was credited with a major part in "completely destroying" the German force on Dordrecht Island. Here, however, a thousand Dutch attackers lost their lives.

The Germans at Dordrecht and elsewhere in the interior and on the coast had been landed by chute or seaplane, then taking refuge in barges until it came time to strike.

This "Men from Mars" method was being pursued today, and reinforced Netherlands patrols were spreading through the interior to frustrate it.

Documents Disclose Strategy

Documents found on some captured German parachute troops disclosed they were to be met at landing points by German residents of Holland, bearing special orders and identification cards, Government officials said.

Americans Abroad 'Stay Put'

AMSTERDAM, the Netherlands, May 11 (AP)—Americans in the Netherlands were advised by United States Minister George A. Gordon tonight to "stay put," as he deemed it inadvisable to attempt to cross any Netherland frontiers. Some 750 persons have claims on American citizenship, but half of these have such close ties in this country they would not try to leave. Of the rest, about a half would have difficulty getting passports validated.

A New Nazi Weapon?

The so-called secret Nazi weapon mentioned today by Louis P. Lochner in his dispatch from Berlin has been a mystery for many months. A secret weapon was hinted at by Adolf Hitler in one of his speeches, but it was assumed later that he referred to the magnetic mine when that device appeared suddenly in English coastal waters.

Another reference to a secret weapon was reportedly made by Joachim von Ribbentrop, Foreign Minister, when he accompanied Hitler to the meeting with Mussolini at Brenner Pass.

News dispatches said he had discussed it mysteriously with Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister.

Another possibility, however, is that the secret weapon is in fact the bomber, raised to a hitherto unknown degree of efficiency by the use of improved bomb sights and 2,000-pound bombs.

If not exactly a new weapon, this at least would be a new method. The dropping of parachute troops on fortified positions also is something unknown to warfare hitherto. The Nazi tactics in this respect are discussed by Hanson W. Baldwin, military expert of the New York Times, in the following article.

Troops Specially Trained

The German parachute troops, apparently used in greater number in the low countries campaign than ever before in military history, are specially trained, specially equipped and specially uniformed soldiers, organized in small units.

The Russian army was apparently the first of the world's armies to experiment with such tactics. They had dropped as many as 1,000 men at a time in parachutes and have transported whole regiments, together with light tanks and field artillery, by air.

The German stook up and greatly improved upon the Russian technique. The Reich army first experimented with parachute troops three or four years ago, but most of their experiments have been closely guarded secrets. The training program, as the experimentation progressed, was ruthless and rigorous.

Quick-Opening 'Chute Devised

The Germans realized the disadvantage of dropping troops from 1,000 feet or more. The men—swaying like pendulums beneath the shrouds of their parachutes as they drifted slowly to earth—made excellent targets for machine gunners or riflemen on the ground and could be seen for miles. The men were taught to jump at lower and lower altitudes—and many were killed in the training—and a quick-opening parachute was devised which permitted leaps at heights almost as low as 100 or 200 feet—heights which generally would be considered suicidial in other countries.

By leaping at such low altitudes the men are vulnerable to ground fire for only a short time and the transport planes can be so maneuvered that men can drop behind a screen of trees or the crest of a hill, thus quickly disappearing from the sight of enemy observers on the ground.

Technique Simple But Deadly

The technique of assault by parachute troops is simple but deadly. If the country is thickly populated and firmly held by the enemy troops, as were the Low Countries, the transport planes are preceded by bombers that bomb and strafe the point of landing thoroughly, killing or driving to cover the ground defenders. Then the parachute troops leap at low altitudes, while the combat planes above them cover their descent, keeping machine-gunners on the ground occupied.

The parachute troops, usually wearing special uniforms--sometimes the uniforms of the enemy—and heavily armed with automatic weapons such as light machine guns, semi-automatic or automatic rifles, automatic pistols, grenades and even light trench mortars, are usually first dropped in small units—perhaps a platoon at a time.

They are trained unhitch their parachute harnesses quickly upon landing and to seek cover and beat down enemy resistance—which usually is taken by by surprise or materially weakened by the prior attack from the air. The position—be it an air field, a road junction or a railroad—then is consolidated as quickly as possible; machine guns are mounted to command the terrain, and just as quickly as possible reinforcements are dropped from the skies, or if feasible, are landed in big transport planes.

When Wearing Garb Of Enemy

When the men wear uniforms of the enemy—as some of the German parachute troops have been doing in the Netherlands, special recognition signals may be arranged, arm bands or other distinguishing devices worn, though usually this may not be necessary, since members of the same parachute unit are trained so long together they know each other's every gesture and attitude.

The objective of parachute troops may be varied and many. In the Low Countries they have seized airports, as at Rotterdam, and prepared the way for the landing of transport planes in such numbers as to enable an advance into Rotterdam itself. They have established islands of resistance in the heart of the Netherlands and Belgium, thus forcing the high commands of these two countries to earmark many of their reserves for duty in the interior, instead of being able to utilize their full strength in the front lines.

Bring War To Every Doorstep

They have brought the war to every doorstep, enabled the seizure and at least temporary disruption of communications within the Netherlands and Belgium, obviously have caused shock and surprise to the defenders and have made the threat of the so-called "vertical envelopment," or action against the enemy's rear areas and flanks, a real and perpetual one.

They are, therefore, a menace to any defense, no matter how well organized, and so they have proved to be in the low lands, though at great cost to themselves—for these men are in real truth men of the "suicide squads."

Uniforms Are Described

BERLIN, May 11 (AP)—German parachute troops, of whom so much has been heard in the last two days, normally are uniformed in one-piece gray-green suits of the coverall type. The trouser legs are baggy at the ankles, like ski pants, and high-cut black [illegible] are worn instead of the infantry knee boots.

Even the helmets are designed to fit these troops' special mission, being of light-weight metal, without the usual flanged edges.

The flying eagles of the German air force are displayed on the uniforms and helmets. The uniforms include the parachute gear, which can be discarded easily.

BIGGEST NAZI DRIVE HALTED, FRENCH CLAIM

War's Heaviest Attack On Maginot Line Is Declared Beaten Off

Maastricht And Arnhem Occupied By Invading Germans, Paris Hears

By ROY P. PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, May 11—Seasoned French troops in the Sierck region of the Moselle River Balley, today beat off the largest German attack on the Maginot Line since the war started, military sources reported. An entire German division of 14,000 men was said to have been halted in its tracks.

The Nazi movement just east of Luxembourg reportedly was crushed from the strongly fortified front-line positions to which outpost units withdrew yesterday at the first assault by Nazi advance guards.

Additional forces quartered in the subterranean Maginot Line supported the battle squads with artillery and machine-gun fire and tonight the military spokesman here said the battle area was quieting down.

Mastricht Reported Occupied

At the same time, a French high command communique said the Germans had lost heavily in fighting in the southern part of Luxembourg.

Meanwhile, Germany's Blitzkrieg troops were said by French military sources to have driven across the Maas river in southern Holland, occupying the city of Maastricht, on the Belgian frontier, and to have occupied the town of Arnhem, in east-central Holland.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The censor deleted four words in this dispatch, apparently relating to town being occupied.]

The Allies were rushing troops to the aid of the Low Countries, the communique revealed.

"Our troops continued their advance across Belgium, aiding their Allied troops at various points by action of their advance groups," the high command reported. "The advance is going on rapidly."

"Troubled" Dutch Situation

German troop landings on beaches in the vicinity of The Hague, have caused a "troubled" situation in Holland, military authorities said.

Dutch troops are reported resisting the new threat with the aid of British aviation.

The Germans first began to land troops yesterday as their motorized forces were crossing the eastern Dutch frontier.

British planes bombed and strafed the beaches yesterday while the Dutch troops attacked German units. The landings began again today, and this afternoon military spokesmen said the situation was uncertain, although the Dutch detachments were reported to be in control.

Big-Scale Fighting Ahead

Some British troops have moved up to reinforce Belgain forces, a military source said, while others are advancing northward to support the Dutch.

He indicated preparations were going ahead for large-scale fighting which forecasters have said might result in the "most gigantic battle of all times."

France counted her civilian dead in two days of air raids at 147 tonight, reports from various towns swelling the first total of more than 100 persons killed.

The report indicated that air fields, railway centers and stations appeared to be the principal objects of the Nazi air force.

Other reports said German planes bombarded Reims, Epernay and Chalons-sur-Marne in France, but results of the attacks were not given.

More Nazi Planes Felled

Official French reports said thirty-six more German planes had been shot down in France and Belgium during a day of intense aerial activity on both sides.

This brings the Nazi plane losses in France and Belgium alone during the first two days of extended warfare to eighty.

The German losses in Holland yesterday were reported at more than one hundred, but were not known for today.

In the Maginot Line fighting the Germans apparently were attempting to divert military forces from a series of sharp engagements inside Luxembourg.

French Deny Bombing Civilians

The French tonight joined the British in a categorical denial of a German charge that Allied planes had bombed civilians in the German town of Freiburg.

"The claim could only have for its purpose to legitimatize in advance new bombardments of French cities," an authorized French spokesman said.

A military spokesman said the Germans appeared to be throwing their principal weight in the attack on Holland and Belgium against the center or point of liaison of the Dutch and Belgian armies.

This would be in the Maastricht area and northward, the attacks extending to around Arnhem, north of the Rhine.

Fighting along Belgium's Albert Canal was reported hourly increasing in intensity.

On the soil of the little grand duchy, other French soldiers hastened their forced advance to block temporarily the German march on Belgium which began yesterday.

Day Crammed With Action

Along a 300 to 400 mile front from the North Sea to east of the Moselle river the day was crammed with action—bombings, skirmishes and attacks on both sides.

Allied forces moved swiftly to consolidate their positions, French military sources said

Military sources estimated the Germans lost at least 150 planes during the intense two-day aerial battles.

The French reported more than 100 persons died in France during terrific bombings yesterday.

French outposts east of the Moselle took the full brunt of the preliminary offensive launched by the Germans.

Under a long-prepared plan, French advance guards swept the attackers with a crumbling cross-fire, while sending the alarm back to sector headquarters.

The outnumbered outpost units then withdrew slowly, maintaining their fire while the French batteries spat shells into the ranks of the advancing Germans.

The net result, based on preliminary French reports while the battle continued, was that the French had withdrawn from few outposts, while the Germans had gained control of only a limited area between established front lines.

147 French Civilians Killed.

PARIS, May 11 (A. P.).—France's civilian dead in two days of air raids throughout the nation was raised to 147 tonight as reports from various towns were received in the capital.

Air fields and railway centers and stations appeared to be the principal objectives of the air raids.

During yesterday's aerial activities a number of victims were listed when two German bombers brought down by anti-aircraft fire exploded after hitting the ground.

WAR CABINET OF FIVE NAMED BY CHURCHILL

Three Others Are Chosen in Addition for Larger Group.

CHAMBERLAIN IS A MEMBER

Laborites, Conservatives and Liberals Are Included—Eden Has a Post.

LONDON, May 11 (A. P.).—Britain's new Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, announced the formation of a new War Cabinet tonight, including the Labor Party leaders, Major Clement A. Attlee and Arthur Greenwood.

The War Cabinet contains only five members. It replaces the eight-man War Cabinet of Chamberlain. The members are:

Prime Minister and Minister of Defense—Churchill.

Lord President of the Council—Chamberlain.

Lord Privy Seal—Attlee.

Foreign Secretary — Lord Halifax.

Minister Without Portfolio —Greenwood.

Appointments outside the War Cabinet were:

A. V. Alexander, Laborite, First Lord of the Admiralty, a position he filled in a former Labor Cabinet.

Anthony Eden, Conservative, Minister of War.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, Air Minister.

The appointments brought into the Government members of Conservative, Liberal and Labor parties.

The announcement bore a note which said:

"The leaders of the three parties participating in the Government, whether members of the War Cabinet or not, will be consulted when questions arise affecting the general character and aims of the Government, including the conditions of peace."

Cabinet appointments Monday or Tuesday.

There were no immediate indications who will be Chancellor of the Exchecquer or whether Sir John Simon is being replaced in this post.

It is regarded now as unlikely that David Lloyd George, World War Premier and chief critic of Chamberlain, will be included in the Churchill Cabinet.

Eden New War Minister

Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary under Chamberlain and later Dominions Secretary, supplants Oliver Stanley, whose replacement of popular Leslie Hore-Belisha in the War Ministry last January caused sharp criticism.

Attlee, chief of the Labor opposition who helped bring Chamberlain's downfall, replaces Sir Kingsley Wood.

Sir Samuel Hoare is supplanted by Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Liberal opposition spokesman, and Greenwood, deputy Labor leader, takes over the post formerly held by Lord Hankey.

As Lord President of the Council, Chamberlain is presiding member of the Privy Council, a position not formerly falling on the Prime Minister, thus freeing Churchill for the big job of running the war.

Some criticism of this appointment was heard in the lobby on the ground that it gives the former Prime Minister too much authority in the government.

Reconstruction of the War Cabinet leaves out the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the three service ministers. One of the criticisms of Chamberlain's War Cabinet was that it included service ministers.

Nazi Concentrations Raided

The War Minstry kept silent on the disposition of British-French forces in the Low Countries, but the Air Ministry let it be known that its arm of service had attacked German concentrations between the Rhine and the Meuse and that "hits" were obtained on a bridge over the Rhine near Wesel and one line of traffic at its approaches.

Also, at least fifty German planes were reported destroyed and many others put out of action in the first day's raids in the Lowlands.

"The enemy's advance was further hampered by a series of operations in which bombs were seen to hit important railways and road junctions and bridges at Alderkerke, Gelgern, Rees and Goch," the Ministry's communique said.

Two Forays Against Bergen

Another Admiralty announcement said British naval planes made two forays against Bergen, scoring three hits on a German ship believed to be the 14,600-ton training vessel Bremse.

The second raid, "achieved with complete surprise," was reported to have fired and heavily damaged German fuel tanks.

Since April 8, the Air Ministry said, twenty Nazi aircraft had been shot down off Norway by the fleet air arm, which is separate from the Royal Air Force, and that many others had been destroyed on the ground. The fleet's anti-aircraft guns were credited with bagging an additional fifty-one enemy aircraft.

Air Force Leads Campaign

Fresh from the lesson of Norway, where lack of air support cost the Allies the rich south and center regions, the Royal Air Force led the campaign to hold lowland flying bases at all costs and delay Germany's land power until Allied troops can take up positions alongside the Dutch and Belgians.

Disposition of the British-French forces was kept secret, but it was no secret that one of the big jobs of the Allies is to prevent the German thrust

Five-Man War Cabinet Selected By Churchill

New Government Of All Parties Formed—Chamberlain Given Post—Allies Speed More Aid To Lowlands—Rhineland And Bergen Bombed

London, Sunday, May 12 (AP). The Royal Air Force, following up morning raids, again attacked German mechanized forces advancing from the Rhine toward the Meuse late yesterday, the Air Ministry announced early today.

Roads leading out of Maastricht were bombed and a few miles southwest of the town on the road to Tonvres a column of small tanks, armored cars and transport vehicles were attacked and several direct hits were obtained.

London, May 11—With characteristic speed, Winston Churchill tonight formed a new British Government of all parties and gathered around himself a new streamlined, five-man War Cabinet while Allied forces raced against time for vantage points in the Low Countries and swapped blows from the air with German warplanes.

The War Cabinet, replacing the old eight-man board of strategy of Neville Chamberlain, includes Chamberlain, Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary under the resigned Prime Minister, and the Labor party leaders, Clement R. Attlee and Arthur Greenwood.

Chamberlain Council President

Its formation was announced as British and French troops sped to positions alongside their new Dutch and Belgian allies, Royal Air Force planes blasted away at German concentrations and communications in the Rhineland and British naval planes gave Adolf Hitler a dose of his own surprise strategy with sudden stabs against German-occupied Bergen, on Norway's west coast.

In addition to the Premiership, Churchill retained the portfolio of Defense Minister and designated Chamberlain Lord President of the Council; Attlee, Lord Privy Seal; Greenwood, Minister Without Portfolio, and kept Lord Halifax in his old foreign post.

Alexander Heads Admiralty

In appointments outside the war Cabinet, he handed over his former job of First Lord of the Admiralty to A. V. Alexander, Laborite, who held the post in Ramsay MacDonald's Government in 1929-31; and appointed Anthony Eden, Conservative, Minister of War, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, Air Minister.

Churchill expects to announce other appointments tomorrow.

Eden is not merly included in the War Cabinet but listed in tonight's announcement as second only to Churchill's post.

Duty To Step Up War Effort

The smaller war cabinet meets the demands of numerous members of Parliament for a less unwieldly body to facilitate quick decisions. Its duty is to step up the British war effort unhampered by departmental red tape.

Chamberlain in his new post is expected to be able to take over a great deal of the House of Commons work toward Leige from separating Belgium and the Netherlands.

Dutch Air Bases Retaken

A gain of significance to the British was the announced recapture of the airdrome at Rotterdam by the Hollanders after British bombers softened the resistance of the Germans who seized it yesterday. Had the Germans been able to consolidate their gains, they would have had a coastal base for assaults on England over only 125 miles of water.

All Netherlands air bases, it was said, now are in the hands of the Hollanders or Allies. (Berlin authorities disputed this claim, saying their forces held all airports they took Friday in the Netherlands and Belgium).

Allies In Dutch West Indies

Developments of the day included:

1. An announcement that new classes of conscripts up to the age of 37 will have been called to arms by January, 1941, under a monthly schedule for the remainder of the year "unless military requirements necessitate acceleration."
2. Authoritative sources announced the landing of Allied forces in the Netherlands West Indies islands of Curacao and Aruba — some 700 miles northeast of the Panama Canal by air—"to prevent possible German attempts at sabotage in important oil refineries." The United States Government has been kept informed, it was added.
3. King George VI, in messages to Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, King Leopold of the Belgians and Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg, expressed "disgust at this crime" of German invasion and complete faith that "our arms will again prevail."

Flyers scouted the whole battle area for a hint of where Germany's strongest blows likely would fall and patroled the region between the Rhine and the Meuse to bomb German concentrations as well as German columns moving toward the Netherlands.

The British Air Ministry announced here last night a series of attacks on enemy concentrations, railroads, junctions and bridges in the German Rhineland.

"Hits were obtained on the bridge over the Rhine near Wesel and one line of traffic at its approaches," the communique said. "The enemy's advance was further hampered by a series of operations in which bombs were seen to hit important railroads and road junctions and bridges at Aldekerke, Geldern, Rees and Goch."

Eden As War Minister Stirs Fascist Misgivings

Rome, May 11 (AP)—The inclusion of Anthony Eden as War Minister in Winston Churchill's new British War Cabinet means no good for the strained Italian-British relations, in the opinion of Fascists. The news of his appointment, however, came too late tonight for official comment.

The name of Eden is linked indelibly in Italy with the sanctions imposed during her Ethiopian campaign—a move in which he took the lead as British delegate to Geneva.

While he was British Foreign Secretary, Eden was lampooned almost daily in the Fascist press. In fact, he probably has been the subject of more disparaging cartoons in Italian newspapers than any other world statesman.

British Planes Rain Bombs On Marching German Troops

Machine Guns Also Pour Destruction On Mechanized Units—Four Nazi Planes Destroyed

[By the Associated Press]

With the British Expeditionary Forces, Somewhere in Belgium, May 11—Motorized British units pounded eastward across the French-Belgian frontier tonight in a rumbling stream that already has lasted for twenty-four hours while British flyers hurled destruction from the skies on German columns moving through Luxembourg toward the French and Belgian borders.

British Tommies, cheered by the populace, already guarded every bridge and railway crossing on the 250-mile motor route. Anti-aircraft batteries dot the fields, and dispatch riders on motorcycles speed past the artillery carriers, tanks and troop-laden lorries that kicked up dusty spirals on the roads.

Bombs, Machine Guns Used

The German mechanized units coming up from the other side were attacked by low-swooping British planes, which loosed showers of small bombs and sprays of machine-gun bullets.

Skipping over the swarm of refugees who preceded the German line of march, the British airmen returned to the attack again and again, and bombs fell amid lines of forty and fifty German motor trucks which piled up in heaps of smoking wreckage.

Other British squadrons rained bombs on a German column at the northeast corner of the German-Luxembourg border, dodging a hurricane of defensive fire from small arms and anti-aircraft guns.

The British reported no loss of personnel despite persistence of German aerial retaliation.

Four Nazi Planes Downed

One German Heinkel and one Dornier bomber were shot down when a large German force raided a Royal Air Force station.

British Hurricane fighters went up to meet them and got two more German planes in a screaming dog-fight witnessed by gaping thousands of civilians and soldiers.

The British said the airfield was not damaged despite a German diving attack to the very treetops, so close that ground troops plugged away at the raiders with pistols.

Yet another British squadron ranged over the Netherlands and reported destruction or heavy damage of nine German troop transport planes near The Hague.

British Dive Within 150 Feet

Describing the battle, the leader of six British fighter planes said his men dived from 5,000 feet, pulling out at 150 feet after firing 18,000 rounds of machine-gun bullets into the German machines.

"Before we reached the troop carriers," this leader said, "we came upon three Messerschmitt fighters, and below them on a beach north of The Hague we saw nine Junkers 52's. After our bombers set two of the big Junkers afire, the fighters formed in line astern. One after another the British planes then dived vertically, flattening out over the beach.

"Of the seven remaining craft, we destroyed four more, and the other three were riddled with our bullets.

"One of our fighters made a forced landing on the sand. We did not leave him until we were satisfied that the pilot and other members of the crew were uninjured."

Rotterdam Airport Bombed

British incendiary bombs also subjected the German-occupied Rotterdam airport to what was described as the heaviest bombardment of the war in a six-hour raid in the face of terrific ground fire.

Fires were started in different parts of the airdrome, and the British pilots said they left twenty four-engined German craft aflame.

TWO AMERICANS ROUGHED UP IN ROME INCIDENT

English Envoy Protests Attack On Members Of His Staff

Vexations Of Contraband Control Assailed As Duce Applauds

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 11—Mounting Fascist feeling against Great Britain was marked today by anti-British posters, a slugging incident and denunciations of the contraband-control system.

Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, was said in reliable quarters to have protested to Italian authorities against both a swarm of posters which sought to impress Italians with the German army's superiority, and a reported assault upon two British diplomats last night.

Two American newspaper correspondents, John Whitaker, Rome representative of the Chicago Daily News, and Miss Virginia Cowles, whose articles are syndicated by the North American Newspaper Alliance, were involved in the incident in which two British diplomats were roughed-up by a crowd of angry Blackshirts.

Whitaker and Miss Cowles had been dinner guests of George Aa Bouchere, Secretary of the British Embassy, and Commander Rous, assistant naval attache, and were being escorted home when the attack occurred.

Two Explanations Given

One version was that the party incurred the wrath of the Blackshirts by attempting to remove a poster to keep as a souvenir. Another report said the party merely was reading the poster when seven men attacked the three men without warning and slugged them. Miss Cowles was pushed around, but not struck.

The British Minister, Sir Noel Charles, arrived and hailed two passing policemen, but witnesses said they refused to intervene. Eventually, the police chief appeared and escorted the foreigners to their two cars, which they found covered with posters. Sir Noel insisted they be removed, and the police chief complied.

Only La Bouchere was injured. He received slight marks on the face. Both British and Italian circles described the incident as "regrettable." Authorities of both nations declined to comment.

Correspondent's Report

[Whitaker, in a copyrighted dispatch telephoned from Rome to his paper, the Chicago Daily News, said in part:

["Seven men, apparently believing that the posters were being torn down, suddenly attacked us without warning, calling us 'Inglese' and slugging for several minutes."

["Your correspondent pondered the advisability of a prompt and orderly retreat, after four hours of fighting and wrangling. But Sir Noel Charles, as representative of his Majesty's Government, insisted that the posters be first removed from the two cars. This the police chief did with considerable apprehension as the crowd roared its disapproval."]

Assail Contraband Control

The Italians counter-balanced the British protest with an intensified campaign against the vexations of the Allied contraband control of their sea commerce. Premier Mussolini applauded in the Senate when Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, Under Secretary of the Navy, declared the "disturbance" of Italy's shipping "must change."

Luca Pietromarchi, chief of the "economic war" office of the Foreign Ministry, reported to il Duce that the Allied contraband control was becoming "ever more vexatious," and called attention to the "seriousness of the situation."

Cavagnari declared in his 5,000-word report that a total of 857 Italian ships had been halted and taken to control points, and some of them detained for months.

"While the long delays at first were supposed to have been caused by the imperfect organization of the control system," the report said, "perpetuation of such system caused it to be considered a measure of reprisal for motives whose nature cannot always be seen."

Sets Damage At $20,000,000

Pietromarchi told the Senate that contraband control damage to Italian commerce amounted to one billion lire ($20,000,000). He charged the prize courts with applying jurisprudence going back to "sailing ship days."

Citing British insistence that shippers, to get their vessels released, must renounce claims for damages and agree to pay Britain for control expenses, such as pilot charges, unloading and warehousing costs, he said such acts "in effect are acts of piracy."

He accused the British of violating diplomatic mail and applying cargo control to passengers' baggage, even that in some cases of diplomats.

Sometimes, he asserted, seizures of goods were made at the behest of rival firms. Red Cross material sent from the United States to Geneva had been free from delays, he said.

The authoritative Virginio Gayda, editor of "Il Giornale d' Italia," appeared less sure of the superiority of Germany's forces than other Fascist commentators. He said he would not "hasten to say when this new phase of the war would be decisive."

"The British and French forces still are imposing and mainly intact," he said.

eastern Mediterranean, ostensibly in anticipation of possible trouble in that area.

REICH'S DEEDS DENOUNCED IN

Add Rome

Two student priests at the British College were reported arrested last night for tearing down one of the anti-British posters. Associates said the College Rector obtained their release this morning.

The two young men, garbed in the long black cassocks were said to have been seen by Blackshirts who turned them over to the police.

ROME, May 11-AP-Posters were plastered on the walls of Rome today saying: "England has missed the bus."

The extraordinary campaign was an effort to impress Italians with Germany's strength and the Allies' weakness.

It was British Prime Minister Chamberlain who declared shortly after the invasion of Noway that Hitler had "missed the bus."

Overnight anti-British posters were hung on walls throughout Rome.

One of the posters was reported plastered on the automobile of SSir Noel Charles, counsellor of the British Embassy. **

Two British Ships Due At Genoa For Cargoes

Vessels Expected At Italian Port Tomorrow—Many Left There On May 2 Under Orders

Genoa, Italy, May 11 (AP)—Two British ships are expected Monday to call for cargoes awaiting them here, shipping circles said tonight.

British ships in port here left hurriedly on the night of May 2, reportedly after receiving urgent orders from London to speed home by way of Suez, instead of the much shorter route by way of Gibraltar.

That order came as British-French naval forces were concentrating in the Buenos Aires, May 11—Condemnation of the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries and Luxembourg was voiced in South American official circles and in the press today.

Ecuador formally notified Holland and Belgium of her sympathy.

One newspaper, El Espectador, of Bogota, Colombia, commenting on President Roosevelt's speech last night in Washington before the American Scientific Conference, declared the German invasion of the three neutrals presented "a definite challenge" to the Western Hemisphere.

El Espectador said the President's speech had shown the Western Hemisphere the necessity of meeting "a concrete problem in our international defense."

Send Notes Of Sympathy

The Government of Acting President Andres Cordova in Quito, Ecuador, telegraphed the Belgian and Dutch Foreign Ministers messages of sympathy and said that "no small nation can disregard the aggression of which your noble nation is a victim."

Ecuador "condemns such an unjustifiable assault."

In Lima the Peruvian Senate adopted a resolution condemning "conquests made through force."

The Peruvian Chamber of Deputies expressed to the Parliaments of the three countries assurances of "its democratic solidarity in this painful hour."

Nazis Criticized

Editorials in the Argentine press reflected the general criticism of the Nazi invasions.

La Nacion, which frequently is close to the Government, said the "present rulers of Germany tend to impose their will on the rest of the world through force without taking into consideration that the world will be compelled by moral principles not to spare any efforts to replace Nazi force with a triumph of spiritual values."

La Prensa said the invaded nations were given only "simple notifications" and declared "this is a good example of war as waged by totalitarians. . . . It is blind force destroying the rights of reason and justice."

The Buenos Aires paper El Mundo said Germany is embarked "once again on the highway of aggression. . . . War is war, but war is made against adversaries, not against women and children. . . ."

RUSSIA, YUGOSLAVIA SIGN TRADE TREATY

Countries Also Will Exchange Business Delegations

MOSCOW, May 11 (AP)—Signature of a trade and navigation treaty between the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia was announced tonight by Tass, official Soviet news agency.

It said that under the agreement total trade turnover between the two countries for 1940 and 1941 would amount to 176,000,000 dinars. (The Yugoslav dinar has a nominal exchange value of about 2¼ cents, but special conditions make accurate translation of the amount impossible.)

Tass reported that a supplementary protocol provided for Soviet trade representation in Yugoslavia and a Yugoslav provisional trade delegation in Russia.

It said Russia intended to import from Yugoslavia copper, lead and zinc ore concentrates, lard and other commodities, and to export agricultural and other machinery, kerosene, cotton and other goods.

The Day's War Communiques

German

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 11—A High Command communiqué "from the Fuehrer's headquarters" today said:

The German Western Army, after crossing the Netherland, Belgian and Luxembourg borders, everywhere repulsed enemy border troops in the Netherlands and Belgium and, despite the destruction of many bridges and barricades of all kinds, is on the swift forward attack.

Parachute and airtroops landed at various places and are about to execute the tasks of protection given them. In a continuous flow, units of the air force supported the advance of the army in so far as they attacked fortifications, defense positions, marching columns, troop concentrations and damaged or destroyed roads, rail lines and bridges through bomb hits.

Far-reaching reconnaissance brought clarifications of the enemy army movements.

The German air force furthermore on May 10 carried out the first big-scale attack with massed forces against enemy air bases in France, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Seventy-two airports were raided, between 300 and 400 enemy airplanes were destroyed on the ground and numerous air buildings and hangars were destroyed by fire and explosion.

Especially hard hit were French air bases at Metz, Nancy, Rheims, Romilly, Dijon and Lyon.

The enemy lost twenty-three airplanes in air fights. Eleven of our own planes were shot down and, in addition, fifteen are missing.

The enemy, as previously reported on May 10, bombed the city of Freiburg and, during the night of May 10-11, dropped incendiary and splinter bombs on three localities in the Ruhr region, killing two civilians. Several civilians were injured and slight material damage caused. Three enemy airplanes were shot down by anti-aircraft.

Sunk were: by bombs, two merchant ships of 5,000 and 2,000 tons, respectively, between Calais and Dunkirk; through a submarine of our own, one enemy submarine; through a speed boat, an enemy destroyer.

The situation in Norway is unchanged.

We succeeded in hitting one British battleship and one cruiser off Narvik with several bombs of different calibers.

Another High Command communiqué said:

The strongest fort of the fortress of Liege, Eben Emael, which commands the crossing over the Maas [River] and the Albert Canal at and west of Maastricht, surrendered this afternoon. The commander and 1,000 men were taken prisoners.

The fort was already put out of action May 10 and the garrison was kept in check by a picked detachment of the Air Force under the leadership of Lieutenant Witzig and by the use of a new type of weapon. When the unit of the army attacking from the north successfully established contact with the Witzig detachment after a hard fight, the garrison gave up.

French

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 11—The following French communiqué was issued tonight:

Our troops advance across their allied points by the advance gro[ups]

The advance is going on rapidly. The enemy is continuing to attack with violence and fresh German troops dropped in parachutes and landed by airplanes have taken positions in Holland, where the Dutch are reacting with the aid of British aviation.

In the southern part of Luxembourg the enemy has suffered heavy losses.

A sharp local attack in the region to the west of the Moselle today was rapidly repulsed. Nothing to report between the Moselle and the Swiss frontier.

German aviation today continued bombarding in French territory. The results obtained are negligible in relation to the number of planes taking part.

Our aviation replied by bombarding violently German air fields and military objectives of the first importance.

In combat resulting from these operations, thirty-six enemy airplanes were shot down by Allied planes in France and Belgium.

One of our pursuit groups alone shot down eleven planes yesterday and five today.

The French morning communiqué follows:

During the night our movements were continued in Belgium.

In Southern Luxembourg, despite violent attacks, the enemy was unable to effect any new advance.

Nothing to report from Lorraine and Alsace.

Bombing by German aviation in French territory yesterday caused many victims among the civil population. The High Command regrets to announce that more than 100 were killed and wounded, including more particularly women and children.

French bombers attacked during the night several enemy airdromes. Numerous aerial reconnaissances were made over German territory. All our planes returned to their bases.

British

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 11—A communiqué by the British General Headquarters in France follows:

The Germans are trying to prevent the movements of the Allied troops in the direction of the Belgian front by machine-gunning roads and communication centers.

Eight raids have taken place in the past twenty-four hours, but Allied aviation retaliated vigorously, as well as the anti-aircraft batteries accompanying the convoys and installed for the protection of open cities and forts.

Reports were received that the enemy attempted to drop troops by parachute.

No panic was noted, but, to the contrary, an admirable coolness continues to reign among the Belgian and French population.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sunday, May 12—An Air Ministry communiqué issued early today said:

German mechanized troops advancing from the Rhine toward the Meuse were again harassed yesterday by a series of attacks made by aircraft of the Royal Air Force.

Roads leading out of Maastricht were bombed and a few miles southwest of the town, on the road to Tonyres, a column of small tanks, armored cars and transport vehicles were attacked and several direct hits were obtained.

An earlier Air Ministry communiqué follows:

During last night the airdrome still occupied by the enemy at Waalhaven, near Rotterdam, was heavily bombed by a large number of Royal Air Force aircraft.

Extensive damage was done to the airdrome and many enemy aircraft were destroyed.

Bombing attacks also were made between the Rhine and Meuse Rivers on enemy concentrations and on troops advancing toward the Dutch frontier.

Reports so far received show that, in the course of extensive operations carried out yesterday and last night by bomber, fighter and reconnaissance aircraft of the Royal Air Force operating from this country and in France, at least fifty enemy aircraft are known to have been destroyed and many more put out of action or seriously damaged, either in the air or on the ground.

Altogether, some twenty of our aircraft are missing.

The British air forces have repeatedly bombed the only airport still in German hands [presumably Waalhaven]. German troops have penetrated from this airport to some points and vigorous action is now proceeding against them.

An attempt to take police headquarters somewhere in Holland [The Hague] by surprise failed completely. From some houses where Germans are living who up to now enjoyed the hospitality of our country, there has been firing on the Netherland military and police. An effective end has been put to this.

Though in some places parachutists have landed again, their number is very small. They shared the fate of the parachute troops landed yesterday and have been killed for the most part.

Netherland

By The Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, May 11—Tonight's Netherland Army communiqué said:

French and British troops have come hurrying to our aid and, together with the Netherland troops, will defend our soil.

Our border troops gallantly accomplished their task. The demolitions for which they received orders have been executed. After that the greater part of them were withdrawn.

After furious attacks that lasted four hours, a town that had been in the hands of the enemy has been recaptured by us. Thereafter all soldiers on a German armored train were killed. In the train were found pamphlets in the Netherland language and Netherland Army uniforms.

According to last reports from an old fortress, our forces held on there stubbornly despite enemy action.

The enemy succeeded in passing a river.

Belgium So Often at War Surprises Are Unlikely

'Classic' Battlefield Slated to Enforce 'Classic' Tactics

PARIS, May 11 (AP).—Europe's "classic battleground" is what French military strategists call the new front on which the war between Germany and the western Allies is being fought.

To the armies of the continent the soil of Belgium is familiar terrain. It was the scene of Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo in 1815, the corridor through which the Russians marched victoriously on Paris in 1870 and the avenue through which the Germans drove toward the French capital again in 1914.

Military men say the general knowledge of the country gained from those experiences precludes anything except "classic" strategy in the campaign unfolding. It's result, they say, will hinge on the historic principles of military intelligence, tactics, the efficient use of the latest weapons and the valor of the fighting men.

Whatever Germany's intentions, strategists agreed, there are likely to be few tacticul surprises in the Belgian campaign and "none of the political coups whiche have marked the war elsewhere.

STRATEGISTS SEE FOUR POSSIBLE OBJECTIVES IN THE MINDS OF THE NAZI GENERAL STAFF

1--TO REACH THE NORTH SEA COASTS OF BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS WITH A STRONG FLANKING ATTACK ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER.

2--TO PUT INTO EFFECT THE "SCHLIEFFEN PLAN"--INVASION OF FRANCE FROM THE NORTH--BY SEVERING THE FRENCH-BRITISH LIAISON AND ENCIRCLING THE FRENCH ARMIES OF THE EAST.

3--A VIOLENT BUT LIMITED OFFENSIVE FROM THE BELGIAN-NETHERLANDS

COAST TO DRAW ALLIED RESERVES FROM THE ALSACE-LORRAINE FRONT AND PERMIT AN ATTEMPT TO PIERCE THE MAGINOT LINE.

4--EXTENSION OF THE WESTERN FRONT TO BRING THE WAR TO A HEAD AT ANY COST.

WASHINGTON, MAY 11-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT REPLIED IN A MOST FRIENDLY VEIN TONIGHT TO AN APPEAL FROM THE KING OF THE BELGIANS THAT HE SUPPORT LITTLE BELGIUM'S FIGHT AGAINST THE NAZI INVADERS WITH ALL OF HIS "MORAL AUTHORITY."

IN HIS MESSAGE TO LEOPOLD III, THE SOLDIER-MONARCH, MR. ROOSEVELT DENOUNCED THE "CRUEL INVASION" OF BELGIUM, THE NETHERLANDS AND LUXEMBOURG.

"THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES HOPE, AS I DO, THAT POLICIES WHICH SEEK TO DOMINATE PEACEFUL AND INDEPENDENT PEOPLES THROUGH FORCE AND MILITARY AGGRESSION MAY BE ARRESTED," HE SAID, "AND THAT THE GOVERNMENT AND PEOPLE OF BELGIUM MAY PRESERVE THEIR INTEGRITY AND THEIR FREEDOM.

"AS AN OLD PERSONAL FRIEND I SEND YOU MY WARM PERSONAL REGARDS."

AT THE SAME TIME, THE PRESIDENT ISSUED A PROCLAMATION APPLYING THE

30.24-2213

NEUTRALITY ACT TO THE LOW COUNTRIES IN THE SAME MANNER THAT HE HAD INVOKED IT PREVIOUSLY AGAINST GERMANY, FRANCE AND ENGLAND. THE PRINCIPLE PRACTICAL EFFECT OF THIS ACTION WAS TO FORBID AMERICAN CREDIT TO THE DUTCH GOVERNMENT. REGARDLESS OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT, THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT IS BARRED FROM BORROWING IN THIS COUNTRY BY THE JOHNSON ACT. THE LATTER STATUTE FORBIDS EXTENSION OF CREDIT TO GOVERNMENTS WHICH HAVE DEFAULTED ON PREVIOUS WAR DEBTS TO THE UNITED STATES.

EVEN BEFORE MR.ROOSEVELT EXTENDED APPLICATION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW TO THE NEWEST BELLIGERENTS, CHAIRMAN MAY (D-KY) OF THE HOUSE MILITARY COMMITTEE CAME OUT TODAY IN FAVOR OF REPEALING THE JOHNSON ACT AND REVISING THE NEUTRALITY STATUTE TO PERMIT THE GRANTING OF CREDIT TO BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES.

"IF I'VE GOT A BULLDOG IN MY FRONT YARD TO SCARE AWAY BURGLARS," THE KENTUCKIAN TOLD REPORTERS, "I'M GOING TO FEED HIM."

RELAXATION OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT HAD BEEN ADVOCATED PREVIOUSLY--PRIOR TO THE GERMAN INVASION OF THE LOW COUNTRIES--BY SENATOR ADAMS (D-COLO). WHEN HE BROACHED THE IDEA, HOWEVER, THE GENERAL REACTION WAS THAT THE SUGGESTION WAS PREMATURE. CHAIRMAN PITTMAN (D-NEV) OF THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE SAID AT THE TIME THAT THE ALLIES WERE ESTIMATED TO HAVE SUFFICIENT FINANCIAL RESERVES TO GO TWO YEARS WITHOUT CREDIT. AND SOME SENATORS EXPRESSED FEAR THAT CREDITS MIGHT LEAD THE COUNTRY INTO WAR.

MAY 12 1940

SEVERAL LEGISLATORS PREDICTED PRIVATELY TODAY THAT, IF THE PRESIDENT WERE TO RECOMMEND REPEAL OF THE JOHNSON ACT AND NEUTRALITY LAW REVISION, CONGRESS WOULD SUPPORT HIM. OTHERS SAID, HOWEVER, IT WAS TOO EARLY FOR SUCH A STEP.

MANY MEMBERS OF BOTH HOUSES PRAISED THE ADDRESS IN WHICH MR. ROOSEVELT PREDICTED LAST NIGHT THAT THE 21 AMERICAN REPUBLICS WOULD ACT TOGETHER, IF NECESSARY, TO PROTECT AND DEFEND THEIR FREEDOM AND CIVILIZATION.

BUT SENATOR REED (R-KAN) TOLD NEWSMEN HE HAD "A RELUCTANT FEAR THAT THE PRESIDENT IS HEADING IN THE DIRECTION OF PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR IN EUROPE."

STEPHEN EARLY, MR.ROOSEVELT'S PRESS SECRETARY, SAID THAT NINE OUT OF EVERY TEN OF SEVERAL THOUSAND TELEGRAMS RECEIVED AT THE WHITE HOUSE IN REGARD TO THE SPEECH APPLAUDED IT. THE REMAINING 10 PER CENT, HE ADDED, WERE FROM PERSONS WHO FAVORED "PEACE AT ANY PRICE."

THE PRESIDENT'S UTTERANCES BROUGHT FROM FREDERICK J.LIBBY, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR PREVENTION OF WAR, A FORMAL STATEMENT RAISING THIS QUESTION:

"IS THIS GOVERNMENT UNWILLING TO DO ANYTHING TO SAVE CIVILIZATION AND PRESERVE DEMOCRACY EXCEPT TO THROW THE FIGHTING POWER, INCLUDING THE YOUNG MEN, OF THIS COUNTRY INTO THE EUROPEAN WAR?"

LIBBY ADDED THAT PLEDGES TO AID THE ALLIES BY "MEASURES SHORT OF WAR" SHOULD "FOOL NO ONE."

"THERE IS NO SUCH THING NOWADAYS AS A 'LIMITED' WAR," HE SAID. "IT IS ALL OR NOTHING."

MAY 12 1940

HE URGED THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT CONVENE THE REMAINING NEUTRAL NATIONS TO ESTABLISH A MEDIATION COMMISSION WHICH WOULD WORK TOWARD A NEGOTIATED PEACE.

AFTER A CONFERENCE AT THE NAVY DEPARTMENT, CHAIRMAN VINSON (D-GA) OF THE HOUSE NAVAL COMMITTEE INFORMED NEWSMEN A "COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM" FOR EXPANSION OF THE NAVY'S AIR FORCE WOULD BE PRESENTED TO THE COMMITTEE NEXT THURSDAY. HE DECLINED TO DIVULGE ITS DETAILS BUT SAID IT WOULD BE BROAD ENOUGH TO INSURE THE ENLARGING FLEET ALL THE AIRCRAFT AND PILOTS IT NEEDED.

VINSON POINTED OUT THAT, WHILE PENDING LEGISLATION WOULD AUTHORIZE A MAXIMUM OF 4,500 PLANES FOR THE NAVY, ITS TOP LIMIT OF TRAINED

RESERVE PILOTS WAS ONLY 6,000. INDICATIONS WERE THAT THE NEW PROGRAM WOULD MATERIALLY AUGMENT THE PILOT TRAINING PROGRAM AND POSSIBLY PROVIDE FOR ADMISSION OF STUDENT PILOTS TO THE NAVY FROM CIVILIAN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES AS WELL AS FROM THE NAVAL ACADEMY AND THE NAVAL AIR TRAINING STATION AT PENSACOLA, FLA.

LEOPOLD'S MESSAGE TO THE PRESIDENT SAID: (ABOUT 100)

"BRUTALLY ATTACKED BY GERMANY, WHICH HAD ENTERED INTO THE MOST SOLEMN ENGAGEMENTS WITH HER, BELGIUM WILL DEFEND HERSELF WITH ALL OF HER STRENGTH AGAINST THE INVADER.

"IN THESE TRAGIC HOURS WHICH MY COUNTRY IS UNDERGOING, I AM ADDRESSING MYSELF TO YOUR EXCELLENCY, WHO SO OFTEN HAS DEMONSTRATED TOWARDS BELGIUM AN AFFECTIONATE INTEREST, IN THE CERTAINTY THAT YOU WILL SUPPORT WITH ALL OF YOUR MORAL AUTHORITY THE EFFORTS WHICH WE ARE NOW FIRMLY DECIDED TO MAKE IN ORDER TO PRESERVE OUR INDEPENDENCE."

REPLYING TO A MESSAGE FROM KING LEOPOLD THAT BELGIUM HAD BEEN "BRUTALLY ATTACKED" BY GERMANY, MR.ROOSEVELT SAID: (ABOUT 100)

"AS I STATED IN AN ADDRESS WHICH I DELIVERED LAST NIGHT TO REPRESENTATIVES OF THE 21 AMERICAN REPUBLICS, THE CRUEL INVASION BY FORCE OF ARMS OF THE INDEPENDENT NATIONS OF BELGIUM, NETHERLANDS AND LUXEMBOURG HAS SHOCKED AND ANGERED THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES, AND, I FEEL SURE, THEIR NEIGHBORS IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

"THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES HOPE, AS I DO, THAT POLICIES WHICH SEEK TO DOMINATE PEACEFUL AND INDEPENDENT PEOPLES THROUGH FORCE AND MILITARY AGGRESSION MAY BE ARRESTED, AND THAT THE GOVERNMENT AND PEOPLE OF BELGIUM MAY PRESERVE THEIR INTEGRITY AND THEIR FREEDOM.

"AS AN OLD PERSONAL FRIEND I SEND YOU MY WARM PERSONAL REGARDS."

NEW YORK,MAY 11-(AP)-TWO THOUSAND AMERICAN WARPLANES--ONLY HALF OF THEM OF A STRICTLY COMBAT TYPE--HAVE BEEN THROWN INTO THE BALANCE BY THE ALLIES IN THE SUDDENLY INTENSIFIED STRUGGLE FOR DOMINANCE IN THE AIR, BUT GERMANY'S NUMERICAL SUPERIORITY PROMISES TO GO UNCHALLENGED FOR MONTHS TO COME.

IF THE LOSSES REPORTED IN THE FIGHTING FOR POSSESSION OF THE LOW COUNTRIES--UPWARD OF 500 PLANES IN TWO DAYS FOR BOTH SIDES--BECOME A STANDARD RATE OF DEPLETION, THE ALLIES' SITUATION IN THE AIR MAY WELL BECOME CRITICAL.

FROM A DOZEN DIFFERENT AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES COMES AN ESTIMATE THAT THE REICH, GRIMLY COUNTING ON AIR POWER TO TURN THE TIDE OF BATTLE, HAS NO FEWER THAN 20,000 WARPLANES ON HAND, HALF OF THEM FOR "FIRST LINE" SERVICE.

AGAINST THAT NUMBER THE ALLIES PROBABLY CAN MUSTER NO MORE THAN 8,000 PLANES, INCLUDING THE MODEST ADDITIONS OF THE DUTCH AND BELGIAN AIR FORCES, AND ONLY HALF OF THEM ARE AVAILABLE FOR BOMBING AND FIGHTING FORAYS.

TRAINERS, ASSIGNED TO BOLSTERING THEIR PILOT MANPOWER.

THE COMBAT TYPES WERE 50 DIVE BOMBERS, 300 PURSUITS AND 650 BI-MOTORED MEDIUM BOMBERS.

ORDERS ARE STREAMING IN TO AMERICAN FACTORIES FROM LONDON AND PARIS NOW FOR GREAT QUANTITIES OF PLANES, BUT IT WILL BE LATE SUMMER OR EARLY FALL BEFORE THE ALLIES BEGIN TO FEEL THE FULL FORCE OF AMERICAN PRODUCTIVENESS. IN ALL, THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH HAVE ORDERED 5,300 PLANES SINCE THE SPRING OF 1939.

NEW YORK--THIRD ADD AIRPLANES BJT XXX OF 1939.

ALLIED INFERIORITY TO GERMANY IN THE AIR--CONCEDED THIS WEEK BY BOTH NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN AND WINSTON CHURCHILL, THE OUTGOING AND INCOMING PRIME MINISTERS--IS NOT SO MUCH A MATTER OF AIRPLANES ON HAND AS IT IS OF THE ABILITY TO REPLACE THOSE LOST IN COMBAT.

ONE AMERICAN MANUFACTURER, WHO SURVEYED BRITISH AND FRENCH FACTORY PRODUCTION LAST YEAR, ESTIMATED THAT THE ALLIES COULD MATCH THE GERMAN WARPLANE OUTPUT ONLY WITH THE ADDITION OF AMERICAN PLANES CONTRACTED FOR IN BULK.

A CONFIDENTIAL REPORT RECEIVED HERE YESTERDAY PUT THE FRENCH WARPLANE OUTPUT AT A BARE 150 PLANES A MONTH. THE BRITISH OUTPUT IS POSSIBLY AS HIGH AS 1,000 A MONTH, INCLUDING TRAINING PLANES. FOR PURPOSES OF REPLACEMENT THE GERMAN OUTPUT IS MUCH GREATER.

FOR THE CURRENT FIGHTING OVER THE LOW COUNTRIES GERMANY IS REPORTED TO HAVE TWICE AS MANY BOMBING PLANES AS THE ALLIES. MORE THAN EIGHT MONTHS OF FIGHTING HAS DEMONSTRATED THAT THE BOMBER IS

MAY 12 1940

MAY 12 1940

THE MOST ESSENTIAL ADJUNCT OF AN AIR FORCE. BOMBERS ARE THE "LONG RANGE ARTILLERY" OF THE AIR.

THE SPECULATION SURROUNDING AMERICAN WARPLANE PRODUCTION IS DISPELLED SOMEWHAT BY THE FIGURES FOR LAST YEAR. IN ALL, 5,500 PLANES WERE TURNED OUT. THREE THOUSAND WERE SO-CALLED SPORT PLANES. THE REMAINDER COVERED TRANSPORTS, EXPORT PLANES OF ALL TYPES, AND WARPLANES.

CONSERVATIVE MANUFACTURERS ESTIMATE THAT, AT THE OUTSIDE, AMERICAN FACTORIES CAN PRODUCE 9,000 TO 10,000 WARPLANES IN 1940--INCLUDING TRAINERS. IF THE BITTER FIGHTING WITH CONSEQUENT HEAVY LOSSES CONTINUES, THE PROSPECTS FOR THE ALLIES' COPING WITH GERMAN AIR POWER ON EVEN TERMS BEFORE THE END OF THE YEAR ARE NOT VERY ENCOURAGING.

SMASHING BLOWS AT RIVAL AIR STRENGTH IN THE FIRST TWO DAYS OF WIDE-SPREAD AERIAL WARFARE IN THE WEST WERE REPORTED TODAY BY BOTH BY THE ALLIES AND BY THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND.

Nazis Flank Liege, Are Halted in Drive on Brussels

GERMAN FLANKING FORCE SWEEPS BEYOND LIEGE; BRUSSELS FLIGHT BEGINS

Leopold's Troops Driven Back To Secondary Defenses—Invaders Pierce Albert Canal Forts:

Advance Stopped Near Waremme

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels, May 12—A German Blitzkrieg spearhead flanking the fortress city of Liege blasted its way to a point thirteen miles to the rear of the city itself today before it was halted by Belgian soldiers entrenched in second-line positions, Belgium's Premier acknowledged tonight in a report to his invaded nation.

The Germans have been stopped near Waremme, twenty miles southwest of the Dutch border at Maastricht and about forty-five miles east of Brussels, Premier Hubert Pierlot declared.

New Attacks Resisted

He also told the hard-pressed Belgians that their troops are successfully resisting new German attacks north and east of the Albert Canal after being driven back from some first-line defenses along that waterway.

"In spite of many (frontal) attacks against the fortifications of Liege, the enemy is unable to make any advance," Pierlot said. Approaches to the east of the vast Liege forts are "covered with German corpses," he added.

Residents Flee Brussels

With rumors sweeping this refugee-packed capital, there was a general exodus under way tonight from Brussels. Many left in comfortable cars, others trudged on foot or rode on trucks. The authorities, however, controlled the roads to France to permit an unceasing march of English and French troops into Belgium.

The Germans who reached Waremme first blasted a hole in the Albert Canal forts just outside Maastricht. They reached Maastricht by cutting across the Dutch appendix province of South Limburg. The Albert Canal forts are the northern extension of the Liege zone, and the ones opposite Maastricht are about fifteen miles north of Liege itself.

Government May Flee

Faced with losses admittedly terrible, the Government prepared for the eventuality of flight from Brussels.

However, with Brussels subjected to numerous air alarms during the day, Paul Henri Spaak, Foreign Minister, said the Government as yet "seriously doesn't dream" of leaving.

Spaak held a press conference the situation was "stabilized," even in the worst part of the front.

Fighting continued fiercely in the new positions, the Belgian war communique reported tonight, with the defenders "standing their ground in spite of the action of armored units supported by aircraft which attacked our columns on the ground."

French In Front Lines

That the French troops now are in the front lines with their new Belgian allies was revealed in the communique.

"A French counter-attack against the enemy motorized units was successful," it said. "A great number of enemy tanks was destroyed."

"One attempt to cross the (Albert) Canal by means of boats failed owing to the fire of our defense," the communique said.

It was not reported where this attempt was repulsed but the Germans already had crossed the Albert Canal, Belgium's first line of defense, at least at Maastricht and perhaps elsewhere.

The advance unit which pushed to the southwest from Maastricht through Tongres (Tongeren) to Waremme had crossed the canal in the Maastricht sector.

Nazis Reach Tongres

Premier Pierlot said the advance unit had fought its way through Tongres despite fierce resistance and in the evening was standing near Waremme."

Pierlot's war report was punctuated by the shriek of an air raid alarm The Belgian capital had been attacked six times from the air during the morning before he spoke, and in Louvain, to the east of Brussels, air alarms came every ten minutes.

Antwerp was heavily attacked from the air yesterday and a large number of casualties was reported.

New masses of parachute troops were dropped during the night, many carrying dummies to throw the defenders off their guard. They also carried miniature radios. Some fell in the royal park.

Communities Blasted

Hardly a community was left untouched as German planes worked incessantly for a lightning cleanup of the area between Antwerp and Brussels.

The Belgian people were called upon to give blood for transfusions as military and civilian casualties mounted.

In what he called a frank and truthful account of the military situation, Premier Pierlot said the Germans were unable to penetrate on any considerable scale Friday, when the blitzkrieg began, because of "thorough demolitions immediately carried out."

Saturday, he said, the Germans crossed the Albert Canal. The officer in charge of the destruction of two bridges near Maastricht was killed by an aerial bomb and the second in command hesitated to carry out the prearranged orders.

During the interval, Pierlot said, German motorized units streamed across the bridges.

Belgian Blows Self Up

Later, a Belgian officer in a suicide dash through the German lines blew up himself and one bridge.

Across the other, Pierlot added, the Germans attacked "with an enormous mass of tanks and aircraft."

The Germans then advanced to Tongeren despite fierce resistance and "in the evening the German advance elements were standing near Waremme."

"When the enemy reached our troops in their new positions, they were stopped," he said. The Premier added that the latest report showed the Germans had "nowhere resumed the advance."

"To the east of Albert Canal as well as further north we are resisting successfully," Pierlot declared. "In spite of many attacks against the fortifications of Liege the enemy is unable to make any advance."

'Chute Troops Hunted

The Premier said parachute troops dropped by the Germans are being "actively rounded up and hunted down."

The movement of British and French troops coming to the aid of Belgium "is preceding normally." Pierlot asserted.

"For obvious reasons I must confine myself to the statement that their advance is very satisfactory."

A noon communique issued by the Belgian army said the defenders were opposing the Germans with "energetic resistance," continuing to defend "step-by-step positions assigned to them by the operations plan."

This communique also said the enemy force "which entered our defense lines did not achieve any important aim. In many places groups of parachutists have been annihilated. Many enemy planes have been brought down."

30-24-2221

100 Planes Shot Down

Pierlot in his report said one hundred German planes had been shot down Saturday.

In Luxembourg province, he said, heavy German forces have attacked east of the Meuse (Maas) and Belgian troops are retiring methodically.

The German Ambassador and his staff left Belgium last night.

Foreign Minister Spaak told the press conference that the government is not discouraged. He said the events would not justify a low morale and that although the situation is serious and Belgium is faced with a great army, the situation may be "perfectly recovered" later. He called for calm and cool heads.

A royal decree split Belgium into an army zone and an interior zone. The army area includes the Provinces of Limbourg, Liege, Luxemburg, Namur, Antwerp and the District of Brabant. The remainder of the country was designated as the interior zone.

GERMANS DRIVE DEEPER INTO NORTHERN HOLLAND AS DEFENDERS WITHDRAW

Invaders Push Across Maas And Ijssel Rivers In Face Of Aerial Bombs—Netherlands Mops Up Traitors And Parachute Troops

MAY 13 1940

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Amsterdam, Monday, May 13—The fighting Dutch, mopping up "Trojan horse" traitors and Nazi parachute troops in the interior, fell back in central and southern Holland today before the merciless German pounding which carried Adolf Hitler's Blitzkrieg veterans across the Maas and Ijssel rivers and deeper into the northern Netherlands provinces.

The Dutch high command acknowledged these reverses in a communique which said the Germans had made their way over the Maas and Ijssel rivers "at various points."

Dutch Planes Bomb Invaders

But, the high command added, French troops are fighting the enemy in East Brabant to the south and earlier reports said 20,000 British troops had been fed into the land and flood-water defenses of the Dutch.

The advancing Germans were being bombed by Dutch planes and fresh parachute troops landed in the interior have been "overcome," the communique added.

The Dutch command failed to give the extent of the withdrawal from the frontier lines, but it said that the troops have been "partly withdrawn."

Troops Fall Back, Mission Fulfilled

Troops in the undefended northern provinces fulfilled their mission by slowing up the oncoming Germans as they fell back to the interior, the communique reported.

"German parties landed during the first day of the invasion," the high command said, "seized motor busses containing civilians. Our armored cars have dealt with these. The Germans do not seem to be able to fight in the Netherlands unless they can use Dutch soldiers or civilians as a shield.

"Our artillery have successfully attacked Waalhaven Airport near Rotterdam.

Mopping-Up In Rotterdam Near End

"Mopping-up activities in Rotterdam are nearing their end. The Royal Dutch Marine is acting with the Allied navies.

"In the interior the Dutch military command has its position fully under control." MAY 13 1940

Claiming the upper hand over air-landed German troops in the seaport city of Rotterdam and smashing an uprising of Germans in The Hague, seat of government, with armored cars and shellfire, the authorities went to work to clean up Amsterdam with a vengeance.

While a sabotaged air-raid siren system howled crazily and repeatedly and saboteurs created a water shortage, police and troops rounded up many hundreds of persons in an overnight search which covered every street and building in this city of 800,000.

The chancellery of the American Legation in The Hague was struck by nine bullets during street fighting Saturday when Dutch troops overpowered Germans sniping at them from houses.

The Dutch declared the main part of Rotterdam is in their hands after fierce fighting with German forces and "fifth columns" and that Dutch troops had recaptured the Maas river bridge, which German troops seized Friday afte rlanding in seaplanes and parachutes.

Fires In Rotterdam Extinguished

Destructive fires which swept large sections of Rotterdam were extinguished.

Although there were ten air-raid alarms in Amsterdam up to 6 P. M. yesterday, there were no bombings. However, firing broke out in several sections as soldiers searched houses for parachute troops or "fifth columnists." Following the seizure of hundreds of persons in Amsterdam, the high command announced that every house from which shots are fired will be smashed to pieces with shells.

Saturday night and again yesterday, everyone on Amsterdam streets was stopped. During one parachute-troop alarm, no civilians were permitted in the open for hours while a search was made.

Nazis In Dutch Clergy Guise

It was reported that Germans, disguised in the flowing black robes and flat hats of Dutch clergymen, had entered Amsterdam in a car.

During the morning officials were silent on the military situation in the east, where the Germans are smashing at sturdy, if small, fortifications, and sloshing into the first line of flood-water defenses.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—A German communique claimed the invaders had passed the Grebbe line in east central Holland, between Amersfoort and Rhenen, and had overrun the undefendable northeast province of Groningen, shooting a spearhead to the Zuider Zee, near the great dam which connects northwest and northeast Holland.]

400,000 Allied Troops There

However, 20,000 British troops were reported to have landed by yesterday morning to reinforce the Dutch central defenses, and French motorized troops already are in the country to bolster the Netherlands army of about 400,000.

In The Hague, things were quiet after a Saturday of havoc from traitorous German-Hollanders who first tried and failed to seize a police station, sniped from housetops at Dutch soldiers and then tried to march to to the center of the city.

How Dutch Smashed Putsch

The way the Dutch smashed this Putsch is best told in the words of a Saturday midnight communique:

"Some Germans living in The Hague tried today to advance to the center of the city, starting from a house in the Suez Kade (lower bank of the Afvoer Canal in the southern part of the city). A detachment of Dutch troops drove them back to the Suez Kade, where they lodged themselves again in the house aforementioned.

"One of our armored cars shelled this house after which the Germans who were not killed surrendered.

"The commander in chief of the army and navy has announced that the same measures will be taken against every house from which shots are fired against the Dutch people."

Things In Hand In Rotterdam

At Rotterdam, where heavy fighting has been going on in the streets since German troops were landed by seaplane and parachute early Friday, the situation was clouded by the lack of direct communication. But the Dutch, with the help of the British Royal Air Force, especially in bombing Waalhaven airdrome south of the city, seemed to think they had things in hand.

The nation called to the colors additional civil guards—older army classes subject to duty only in wartime.

With seven air-raid alarms between 3.45 A. M. and 1 P. M. Saturday, the radio warned the people not to depend on the sirens, because the system had been sabotaged.

"Trouble" At Waterworks

An appeal for economy in the use of drinking water also was broadcast because of "trouble" at the Amsterdam waterworks.

Amsterdam's street-car service was stopped Saturday night to save electricity.

To facilitate the "fifth column" cleanup all internal communications—telephones, letters and telegrams—were stopped.

Voluntary police were pressed into parently enabled the Germans to take forts and whole garrisons with little effort.

Special Mask Required

The gas has no lasting effect and soldiers can be protected only by certain types of gas masks, they said. The fortress troops at Eben Emael had only standard Belgian army filter masks.

Soldiers inhaling the gas stagger and fall, it was said.

The gas was reported to have a faint smell similar to a geranium and is almost beyond detection.

The military experts said that it might be the Nazis' much-vaunted weapon, but that its scope was limited to forts like Eben Emael, where the ventilating system may not be as thorough as that of the French Maginot Line forts.

Allied and Belgian forces are reported to have captured a number of German troops equipped with special gas masks which now are being studied.

3 Berlin Conjectures As To Secret Weapon

Berlin, May 12 (AP)—An amazing secret weapon, or "angriffsmittel," by use of which the German high command says its air force subdued Fort Eben Emael, one of the strongest in the Liege-Albert Canal defense zone of Belgium, tonight had foreign observers conjecturing as to whether Adolf Hitler has found a tool with which to win the war.

Three Guesses In Berlin

A handful of airmen evidently landed by use of this weapon in the center of the fort, if official news of masonry at the juncture of the Maas (Meuse) river and the Albert Canal, on the Dutch-Belgian border near Maastricht.

It bristles with light, heavy and anti-aircraft guns.

It is about a mile in circumference with an open court perhaps 600 to 800 yards in diameter.

Here, DNB indicated, the little air detachment under Lieutenant Witzig landed, employing the mysterious weapon, and made the powerful fortress an easy mark for the attacking column from the North. It swarmed in.

Nazis Landed In Fort Court

Said DNB: "Lieutenant Witzig steered his machine into the center of the fort area. After immeasurable surprise and despite heavy defense measures, 1,000 Belgians were taken prisoner."

The mysterious weapon was the main surprise tonight, after three days of invasion, which the Germans say has placed approximately half of Holland's territory in their hands.

New Weapon A Gas?

MAY 13 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, May 12—Neutral military attaches to Switzerland, who handle much of the war's military information, reported today that the "new weapon" which Germans used to capture the powerful fort of Eben Emael and break through the Albert Canal line was believed by them to be "nerve gas."

Some such gas is known to have been developed in Germany and studied elsewhere in recent months.

It affects the nerves of those inhaling it and brings lassitude and inability to coordinate the muscles, these sources said.

It was said the "new method" agency reports can be interpreted correctly, and the surrender of 1,000 bewildered Belgians ensued.

What was it? No one who knew would tell—but here are three guesses heard tonight:

1. The mysterious bomb which the Germans are credited with using in Barcelona during the Spanish civil war, one projectile exploding square blocks.
2. An unchallengeable flame thrower.
3. A secret device magnetically, or otherwise, to render guns or ammunition impotent.

The high command and other official sources, naturally, declined comment.

Liege Fort Well Armed

It is known, however, that the Eben Emael fortress is a high-walled block

Scientists' News

MAY 13 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Boston, May 12—A specialist in nervous diseases and a chemist in this New England medical center said tonight that a "nerve gas," reported possibly used by the Nazis to capture a Belgian fort, was "entirely within the range of possibility."

Both scientists declined the use of their names, and the nerve specialist would not expand his view.

But the chemist declared it was entirely possible that chemists may have produced "some volatile liquid which, when dispersed from a bomb, would be capable of producing partial anesthesia in men who inhaled it."

Cites Anesthetic Results

He explained that mustard gas, phosgene, and other gases used in the World War were not actual gases but liquids which evaporate slowly, producing a vapor which stays close to the ground.

Pointing out that ordinary anesthetic materials such as ether, propane and ethylene, if not administered in the proper quantities to produce complete anesthesia, could leave a person in a "state of complete indifference to everything," the chemist said it was entirely feasible for chemists to produce a dispersible liquid that would induce lassitude in men who inhaled its vapors.

Compared To Twilight Sleep

As further illustration of the phenomenon of "partial anesthesia," he pointed to the action of a water-soluble solid that induces so-called "twilight sleep."

Regarding the reported description of the "nerve gas" as having a faint smell similar to a geranium, the chemist said he knew of no gas having that characteristic odor.

Mustard gas, he said, has the odor of mustard, while phosgene smells like "decaying hay."

Scientists Suggest Use Of Acetyl Choline

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, May 12—One chemical which may be similar to the "nerve gas" reportedly used by Germans has been discussed by American chemists. It is acetyl choline—a compound that appears naturally in the human body.

Its function is not fully known but it plays a part in the work of the nerves when they transmit impulses to the muscles. It is present in extremely minute amounts.

When a little acetyl choline taken from a chemist's bottle in the form of a liquid is placed in a scratch in the skin, it causes speedy unconsciousness.

Discussed Two Years Ago

This kind of use of acetyl choline, it was suggested at the Rochester (N. Y.) meeting of the American Chemical Society two years ago, would make a soldier unconscious for as much as one hour.

But he would recover without any bad effects.

This form of acetyl choline, however, required direct contact of the liquid in some sort of a wound or break in the skin.

No method was suggested at that meeting by which this chemical might be used to cause weakness or unconsciousness when breathed.

American military gas experts have been discussing a different possibility for a gas surprise in the present war. They have believed it is very unlikely that any really new gas would be used, but they have predicted that a slight change in the form of any one of the old war gasses might make that gas penetrate any and all of the present gas masks.

This possibility is backed up by certain World War experiences.

For example, a change which was nothing more than exploding one of the World War gases at a higher temperature than had been used caused this gas to penetrate existing masks.

Bern, Switzerland, May 12 (AP). The Belgian Legation announced that Belgian diplomats and consular officials from Germany were expected to arrive at the Saint Margrethen frontier station in Switzerland across from old Austria Monday morning.

The Dutch Legation said so far as was known no arrangement had yet been made for return of diplomats between The Hague and Berlin.

Churchill Government Assailed By Germany

Berlin, May 12 (AP)—The new British Government of Prime Minister Winston Churchill was regarded in official Nazi quarters today as the most anti-German and most war-determined thinkable.

"Birds of a feather have now flocked together," an authorized source observed. "From a fellow like Churchill we may now expect every crime and every inhumanity thinkable."

Berlin, May 12 (AP)—All restaurants will cease serving at 11 o'clock at night, starting Tuesday, it was announced today.

Authorized sources said that in the serious task in which Germany is engaged, with its inevitable losses of life, the population at home should be concentrating on victory, not idling in restaurants.

Germany Threatens Sharp Counter-Measures

Berlin, May 12 (AP)—Authoritative German sources warned the enemy today that every "ill-treatment of parachute soldiers and every act against them in violation of international law will result in prompt, sharpest counter-measures."

The German statement was issued, it said, because enemy propaganda not only incites civilians to act against parachutists by every means possible but also shows that "certain officials" are considering treating them as spies.

Regular Troops, Berlin Says

Authorities emphasized that parachute soldiers are regular troops of the German army, that the units were formed in peacetime and have paraded before foreign military attaches.

They also stressed that they have a special uniform suited to their task and that it is in no way camouflaged.

"The uniform is not to be mistaken for civilian clothes or the uniform of a foreign army," a statement said. "Parachute soldiers often are sent into action far ahead of their own front and must carry out certain security work on their own resources."

The uniform is a one-piece gray-green coverall and special light-weight metal helmet, both of which display the insignia of the German air force.

Nancy, France, May 12 (AP)—The population of Nancy remained almost continuously in air-raid shelters today as alarm followed alarm.

Several points near Nancy were reported bombed, but the city itself was not touched. Reports circulated that trains were machine-gunned by air raiders.

Nancy suffered raids on Friday and Saturday.

Big Nazi Force On Move Near Swiss Frontier

More Than 21 Divisions Reported in Baden Area; Border Defenses Ready

BASEL, Switzerland, May 12 (AP).—Large troop movements in Germany north of Switzerland's frontier were reported by foreign military observers tonight, but whether they constituted a real threat or only a bluff remained a mystery.

In any case, the Swiss stood on a war footing, with between 500,000 and 600,000 citizen soldiers mobilized and even Boy Scouts and aged women standing in rear-guard posts.

The German troop movements observed in Baden, Wuertemberg and Bavaria were said to involve even more than the twenty-one divisions reported concentrated in that area just before the German drive into the Low Countries. (Twenty-one divisions would number about 294,000 men.)

Some observers saw a possibility that Germany merely was holding her reserves in this region and moving in newly-mobilized troops for training, but using them at the same time to force the Allies to keep part of their own reserve on the eastern Jura front in France instead of hurling them into Belgium and Holland.

Allies Reassured

However, if the massed divisions plan real action, their drive would start from a line between Basel and Lake Constance and sweep down through Switzerland toward Geneva and Lyons, flanking the Maginot Line, experts believed.

Allied forces have been reassured by the prompt Swiss defense action, however.

The little confederation's military leader, Gen. Henri Guisan, not only called every able-bodied citizen between twenty and sixty years old to arms, but issued forty bullets to every owner of a rifle who was not called, and organized the Swiss to repulse parachute troops and crush possible fifth-column action.

The military today began enforcing the law requiring all foreigners to surrender their arms.

British Successes

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, May 13—Successful attacks on land and from the air against the German invaders of Holland and Belgium were reported officially today by Great Britain.

A communique from the British general headquarters said: "The successful advance of the British expeditionary force into Belgium in conjunction with the French forces is continuing as planned. Minor encounters between our cavalry and the enemy have ended to our advantage."

A War Office official explained that the term "cavalry" applied to motorized units which carry out advance-guard actions."

The Air Ministry reported forty-five German planes have been shot down since Saturday morning and that "it can be safely assumed that as many again have been destroyed or damaged."

Communications Broken

The Ministry also said German railway communications have been interrupted by British air fighters and that "important road and railway damage also was caused in Germany between the Rhine and the Dutch frontier, including damage to supply trains and a railway station."

Earlier reports from correspondents with the British air force told how Britain's Blenheim bombers hammered German concentrations in dawn raids in Belgium.

Thirty-five British planes so far have failed to return but some are known to have made forced landings in Belgium and France.

Text Of Communique

The text of the Air Ministry's communique follows:

"A fuller account can now be given of operations of the Royal Air Force since yesterday morning. Extensive reconnaissances show that much damage has been done by our aircraft to airdromes in Holland used by the enemy for landing troops and that there have been very heavy losses in aircraft in addition to those destroyed by attacks from the air. Fourteen out of sixteen troop carriers observed on one landing ground alone were seen to be damaged.

Enemy Advance Dislocated

"In spite of intense anti-aircraft and fighter opposition, communications of large German mechanized forces now advancing in Belgium and Luxembourg have been dislocated by destruction of both road bridges at Maastricht.

"Railway communications have also been interrupted at that point and roads destroyed.

"Important road and railway damage was also caused in Germany between the Rhine and the Dutch frontier, including damage to supply trains and a railway station.

Nazi Patrols Larger

"It is noticeable that the enemy is now finding it necessary to employ much larger fighter patrols. Some of our fighters have engaged patrols twenty-strong.

"Nevertheless, our fighter losses have not been heavy and enemy aircraft have been unable to prevent our troops from moving rapidly to the aid of our Allies.

"Further attacks have been made by the enemy on our airdromes in France, but without causing serious damage. Our machine-gun posts put up a spirited defense and shot down a number of enemy bombers.

"Fighter aircraft patrolling The Hague and Rotterdam areas engaged and shot down two enemy fighters and two reconnaissance aircraft. Three other enemy aircraft were shot down by defiant fighters off the Dutch coast.

Junkers Driven Down

"A few unidentified aircraft approached the east coast, and one Junkers 88 was intercepted at a great height and driven down. Our reconnaissance aircraft engaged a Heinkel and shot it down in the sea off the Dutch coast.

"The enemy's losses in aircraft are undoubtedly very large. It is impossible to assess them closely. Forty-five are known to have been shot down in combat by the Royal Air Force since Saturday morning. It can safely be assumed that as many again have been destroyed or damaged.

"On all fronts our pilots and crews have pressed home their attacks relentlessly and with high courage. Losses have necessarily been incurred in the hazardous and vital operations. Altogether, some thirty-five of our aircraft have so far failed to return, but some of them are known to have made forced landings in Belgium and France."

In another communique the Air Ministry said: "It is now confirmed that incendiary bombs, dropped in Kent (England) on Friday night, as already announced, numbered twenty-four, and that in addition twenty high-explosive bombe were dropped, which exploded harmlessly in a dense woods near Canterbury."

Paris Defenses Drive Off Nazis In Raid Attempt

PARIS, May 13 (Monday) (AP).—German planes approached the Paris region during an hour-long air raid alarm early today, but turned away in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The capital's defenses put on a brilliant display of shells flashing among searchlight rays. (Here the French censor deleted twenty-one words from the dispatch.)

Sirens sounded alarms also in western and central France. (The censor deleted twenty-two more words here.)

Three air alarms were sounded in northeast France and one in central France yesterday, but they were without incident. At Mezieu, anti-aircraft batteries brought down an enemy plane. The crew of four bailed out. One was arrested but the other three men disappeared.

Last night's French high command communique said:

"The situation in Holland has improved today. British aviation is giving vigorous help to the Dutch defense.

"Enemy pressure continues in Belgium, to the west of Maastricht, and in the region of Tongeren (Tongres). It is strongly hampered, however, by the activity of Allied airplanes attacking bridges in the Maastricht region and enemy columns, which have suffered heavy losses.

"The advance of our troops continues regularly in the central part of Belgium.

"The enemy is exerting an important effort in the Belgian Ardennes (mountains), where violent engagements have taken place.

"Combats have recommenced on the Luxembourg frontier.

"The enemy also attacked our advance positions between the Warndt forest and the Saar.

"Nothing of importance to report on the eastern part of the front between the Saar and the Swiss frontier.

"German aviation has been very active, notably over northeastern France. French anti-aircraft defense and Allied airplanes have combated this activity. Thirty enemy airplanes were shot down during the day. It is to be noted that among German airplanes destroyed Friday and Saturday thirty were shot down by our anti-aircraft artillery."

Yesterday morning's communique follows:

"In the region of the Albert Canal and the Meuse (Maas) River, where German attacks continued with extreme violence, our aviation massively and effectively intervened in support of Belgian troops.

"Toward the end of the day our bombers attacked enemy columns and bridges of the greatest importance. Eight enemy planes were brought down during these expeditions.

"Numerous aerial operations were carried out during the night, the results of which are not yet known.

"On land our approach operations continued normally, according to plan.

"In the region of the Saar and west of the Vosges, where in the latter part of the night fighting began at many points, German artillery opened violent and continuous fire."

Maginot Line Fighting

In the western front action, described in the communiques, fighting was general along an entire forty-mile salient where the French outposts and fortified front line are backed by the underground fortresses of the main Maginot line. Infantry and trench mortar fire was strong in the regions of Forbach, Sarreguemines and Bitche, with continuing attacks by undetermined number of German troops.

Paris newspapers reported that German planes dropped 100 bombs in the Nancy region of eastern France yesterday. Eleven other French towns were reported visited by Nazi raiders and the civilian air toll was put at 148 killed and 337 wounded since Friday morning. The toll from Friday's bombing of Nancy was twenty-two dead and forty injured, it was announced. Bombs fell in the city proper, the French said.

FRANCE WARNS PARACHUTISTS OF EXECUTION

Reynaud Says All Not In National Uniform Will Be Shot At Once

Germany, Denying Camouflage Attempt, Threatens Reprisal

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 12—Premier Reynaud charged today that Germany had used parachute troops wearing Dutch and Belgian uniforms in her invasion of the Low Countries and warned that any captured in France "not wearing their national uniform will be immediately shot."

A communique from Premier Reynaud's office said:

"In the course of the savage aggression that they have just committed against Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, the German armies have made use of parachutists often dressed, contrary to international law, in Dutch or Belgian uniforms or as civil guards.

Order To Kill Given

"The French Government declares publicly that all enemy combatants captured in France who are not wearing their national uniform will be immediately shot.

"The armed forces of the territory have received instruction to this effect."

IL DUCE ORDERS LITTORIO LINE STRENGTHENED

Generals Told To Bolster Fortifications On Western Alpine Frontier

Street Violence Marks New Anti-British Campaign In Italy

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 12—Authoritative sources said today the British Ambassador to Rome "had asked the Italian Government for an explanation" of the assault on members of the British Embassy staff in Rome yesterday.

It also was said that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, had been "instructed by the Government to draw attention of the Italian Government to the unfortunate impression likely to be created by posters of an anti-British character."

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 12—Premier Benito Mussolini today ordered further strengthening of Italy's "Littorio Line" of fortifications on the western Alpine frontier.

Il Duce's order was given to Generals Piertro Pintor and Alfredo Guzzoni, whom he received along with Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, army chief of staff, and Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, Under Secretary of War.

The army chiefs, who are in command of zones along the French frontier, reported to Mussolini on "military questions concerning their armies," an official announcement said.

Details Of Line A Secret

Italy's fortified line which is to be "further perfected" takes its name from the lictor, which is the Fascist emblem.

Details of its fortifications have been kept secret, but they are believed generally to extend through the Brenner Pass—Alpine gateway between Italy and greater Germany—and along the German border as well as the French frontier.

Mussolini, piloting his own tri-motor bombing plane, made "training and observation flights" yesterday and today along the Italian coast, observing movements of ships, and over railroad centers and lines.

He flew for two hours, first over the Pontine marshes to Circello and then over the Tyrrhenian coast near Rome and out over the open sea.

Fresh Anti-British Outburst

The Italians turned their propaganda against the Allied contraband control in a new, violent anti-British campaign enlivened by street incidents among Italians.

With a difference in Italian opinion over the German invasion of Holland and Belgium widely reported, the new outburst of paper hostility was considered in some neutral quarters as a new attempt to aid the German army.

The belief was expressed generally that Italy, not yet ready to enter the war, was trying to disconcert the British and French and divert Allied attention while the Germans were pushing ahead.

Second Similar Attempt

If such were the case, it would be the second similar attempt, observers said. They asserted the first anti-British campaign, in the midst of the war in Norway, succeeded in luring units of the British home fleet into the Mediterranean, away from their base, just before the Germans launched their new invasion.

There was talk in unofficial quarters of the possibility of some Italian move to defy the contraband control which Luca Pietromarchi, chief of the "economic war" office of the Foreign Ministry, reported to Mussolini Saturday was becoming "even more vexatious."

Return Of Rex Watched

There was little expectation that this might materialize, however, because it might lead to war for Italy.

The return of the Italian liner Rex from New York was watched closely to see if the Italians would try to escape or defy the blockade at Gibraltar, perhaps refusing to submit to search. The Rex sailed from New York Saturday and is due at Gibraltar this week.

The temper of Italian people was reflected in reports of several incidents of violence. Tonight a woman who defaced an anti-British poster in the Piazza San Silvestro was reported by bystanders to have been manhandled by a crowd.

The woman was taken into a pharmacy away from the crowd and questioned.

Ire At Vatican Newspaper

There also were several incidents in which copies of the Vatican City newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, which reported Pope Pius' messages of support to the rulers of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg were snatched from the hands of Italians reading them. Blackshirt Fascist groups did the snatching.

One purchaser of L'Osservatore Romano was said by spectators to have been ducked in the famous Trevi Fountain.

Students also seized copies of the Vatican paper from newsstands in railroad stations and burned them, and took the copies away from vendors.

Pro-German Demonstration

A small pro-German demonstration by students occurred in Rome yesterday, and more anti-British posters appeared on the walls of the city.

In a lighter vein was the line scrawled on one such poster which was headed, "England missed the bus."

Someone had scribbled, "But they have money enough for a taxi."

The Fascist extremist newspaper Il Resto del Carlino, of Bologna, said in reference to the Vatican paper: "Those urged to read foreign newspapers, even those written in Italian, should be considered poor citizens, perhaps back-stabbers of soldiers, who, tomorrow, will be fighting."

Put Ahead Of War News

The lengthy report of Italian grievances in the economic war was printed on all front pages ahead of the war news.

All newspapers argued, in justification of the German invasion, that the Lowlands were not really neutral but pro-Ally because their military precautions were taken against Germany without similar measures against Britain and France.

FRESH GERMAN TROOP SHIFTS CAUSE ALARM

Complete Blackout Imposed As Transports Pass Kiel Canal

Lighthouses Darkened Along East Coast And New Mines Are Laid

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 12—Heavy German troopships were reported passing through the Kiel Canal tonight, and Sweden, suddenly alarmed, ordered a complete blackout of the whole country for an indefinite period, darkened the lighthouses on her east coast and announced a mine field had been laid in a section of the Oresund Channel.

The mines were laid near Malmo in the narrow channel which separates Sweden from German-occupied Denmark.

These precautions led to rumors that a sudden air attack is feared by Swedish authorities.

Breathed Easier For Time

For a month Sweden was poised on the fringe of the Norwegian invasion, but had breathed easier when the war suddenly turned toward the Netherlands and Belgium. It was assumed Germany would be occupied in that direction. Today, however, the press expressed general pessimism.

The Government's blackout order included all areas not heretofore blacked out, and came as a surprise because most sources had regarded Sweden's position in the European war as eased with the Germans controlling most of Norway and occupied in attacks against Holland and Belgium.

A small force of Germans still is besieged at Narvik, far northern Norwegian ore port, however.

First Stockholm Darkening

The blackout particularly affected the Swedish capital, as Stockholm has been brightly lighted, except for one or two practice drills, since the start of the European war.

The conservative newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, commenting on the situation, declared:

"In Sweden one would like to believe that our position has been eased, but the indefinite blackout which now has been ordered . . . does not seem to indicate any bright optimism for our country."

Authorities were silent as to the significance of the order.

Dutch Refugees Say Holland Will Fight Nazis Until Death

They Go To Battle Determined If They Perish Each Will Take 10 Germans With Him

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 12—Heroic stories of Holland's grim fight against German invaders were told by refugees arriving at a British port today.

"Every man and every woman in Holland will fight until they drop," declared a woman who witnessed Friday's assault on Rotterdam.

"I saw them crying, but they were tears of rage and not of terror. The Dutch aren't despairing. They got past that."

A British seaman said the Dutch were fighting "like men who know they must die, but in dying will take with them ten of the enemy. They are fighting on the assumption that every Dutchman must fight until he is killed, and that after that the Dutch women must fight."

The arrivals said the sky over and around Rotterdam literally swarmed with German planes and parachutists, who poured into the city and made every street corner a battlefield. They declared that some of the parachutists wore civilian clothes.

Many children were among the refugees. They were battened below decks during the voyage. The ship was bombed and machine-gunned on the way, but escaped damage.

An English woman gave a graphic description of the fight for a bridge over the Maas river in Rotterdam.

"The Nazis held one bank of the Maas and a bridge. A Dutch ship came up and fired thirty rounds at the bridge, setting it afire. The ship was hit and retired, but came back soon and again drove the Nazis from the bridge as bombers roared overhead.

"Dutch civilians were in the fighting now, and they were vicious. When they finally took the bridges there were no Nazis alive."

Large Nazi Troop Shifts Reported On Swiss Border

Basel, Switzerland, May 12 (AP)—Large troop movements in Germany north of Switzerland's frontier were reported by foreign military observers tonight, but whether they constituted a real threat or only a bluff remained a mystery.

In any case, the Swiss stood on war footing, with between 500,000 and 600,000 citizen soldiers mobilized and even Boy Scouts and aged women standing in rearguard posts.

The German troop movements observed in Baden, Wurttemberg and Bavaria were reported to involve even more than the twenty-one army divisions reported concentrated in that area just before the German smash into the Low Countries. (Twenty-one divisions would number about 294,000 men.)

May Be Feint To Tie Allies

Some observers saw a possibility that Germany merely was holding her reserves in this region and moving in newly mobilized troops for training, but using them at the same time to force the Allies to keep part of their own reserve on the eastern Jura front instead of hurling them into Belgium and Holland.

However, if the massed divisions plan real action, their drive would start from a line between Basel and Lake Constance and sweep down through Switzerland toward Geneva and Lyon, flanking the Maginot Line, experts believed.

Allied forces have been reassured by the prompt Swiss defense action.

The little confederation's generalissimo, Henri Guisan, not only called every able-bodied citizen between 20 and 60 to arms, but issued forty bullets to every owner of a rifle who was not called and organized the Swiss to repulse parachute troops and crush possible fifth-column action.

The military today began enforcing the law requiring all foreigners to surrender their arms.

Nazi Regime Reduces Norwegian Bank Rate

Administrative Council Announces Other Credit Measures To Aid Trade And Reconstruction

Oslo, May 12 (AP)—The administrative council for the German-held part of Norway today announced reduction in the bank rate and other measures for bank credits designed to aid trade and effect industrial reorganization.

It said the arrangements were made in cooperation with the Bank of Norway, the Norwegian Bank Association and the Norwegian Savings Banks Association.

Among the measures are lowering of the bank rate from 4½ to 3 per cent., the lowest rate since 1889, and granting of a 2,000,000 kroner credit to farmers for reconstruction in war-damaged districts.

DUTCH QUEEN SENDS THANKS TO KING GEORGE

Happy To Be Fighting By England's Side "Against Ruthless Aggression"

Belgian Ruler Also Replies To British Monarch's Message

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 12—King George today received the "heartfelt thanks" of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands for the message he sent her yesterday decrying the "brutal and wholly unwarranted attack" upon her country.

The Queen's message to her ally said:

"'I desire to express to your Majesty my heartfelt thanks for your kind message, proving that in this moment of grave tribulation your Majesty and your Majesty's people throughout the British Empire are ready and anxious to give us all possible moral and material support.

"I wish to tell your Majesty how happy I am that our people's fleets and armies are fighting side by side against ruthless aggression. I feel certain that the cause of freedom and justice will triumph in the end."

King Leopold's Message

The King also received the following message from King Leopold of the Belgians, to whom he sent a promise of British support:

"Your Majesty's far-reaching and encouraging message has touched me deeply. It brings me in the grave hour through which my country is passing valuable proof of the fidelity of the British people to their pledged word.

"The cause to which Belgium is defending is sacred to my fellow-countrymen, and I share the unshakeable confidence which your message expresses in the free and independent future of our two countries."

Britain Lists 50 Lost on Afridi

LONDON, May 12 (AP).—The Admiralty listed today as "missing and believed dead" one officer and forty-nine men of the destroyer Afridi sunk by German bombers May while covering the withdrawal Allied troops from Namsos, Norway. One other member of the crew reported to have died of wounds. The Afridi normally carried a crew of 219 men.

London Reports B.E.F Gains on Belgian Front

45 Nazi Planes Shot Down by R. A. F.; Cavalrymen Rout Foe in Skirmishes

LONDON, May 12 (AP).—A communique from British General Headquarters said today: "The successful advance of the British Expeditionary Force into Belgium in conjunction with the French forces is continuing as planned." The communique added that "minor encounters between our cavalry and the enemy have ended to our advantage."

The Air Ministry announced tonight that forty-five German planes were known to have been shot down in combat by the Royal Air Force since Saturday morning.

The text of the ministry's communique follows:

"A fuller account can now be given of operations of the Royal Air Force since yesterday (Saturday) morning. Extensive reconnaissances show that much damage has been done by ouru uaircraft to airdromes in Holland used by the enemy for landing troops and that there have bee very heavy losses in aircraft in addition to those destroyed by attacks from the air. Fourteen out of sixteen troop carriers observed on one landing ground alone were seen to be damaged.

"In spite of intense anti-aircraft and fighter opposition, communications of large German mechanized forces now advancing in Belgium and Luxemburg have been dislocated by destruction of both road bridges at Maastricht (on the Holaind-Belgium border). Railway communications have also been interrupted at that point and roads destroyed.

"Important road and railway damage was also caused in Germany between the Rhine and the Dutch frontier, including damage to supply trains and a railway station.

Fighter Patrols 20-Strong

"It is noticeable that the enemy is now finding it necessary to employ much larger fighter patrols. Some of our fighters have engaged patrols twenty-strong. Nevertheless, our fighter losses have not been heavy and enemy aircraft have been unable to prevent our troops from moving rapidly to the aid of our allies.

"Further attacks have been made by the enemy on our airdromes in France, but without causing much damage. Our machine-gun posts put up spirited defense and shot down a number of enemy bombers.

"Fighter aircraft patrolling The Hague and Roterdam areas engaged and shot down two enemy fighters and two reconnaisance aircraft. Three other enemy aircraft were shot down by defiant fighters off the Dutch coast.

"A few unidentified aircraft approached the east coast, and one Junkers 88 was intercepted at a great height and driven down. Our reconnaissance aircraft engaged a Heinkel and shot it down in the sea off the Dutch coast.

"The enemy's losses in aircraft are undoubtedly very large. It is impossible to assess them closely. Forty-five are known to have been shot down in combat by the Royal Air Force since Saturday morning. It can safely be assumed that as many again have been destroyed or damaged.

"On all fronts our pilots and crews have pressed home their attacks relentlessly and with high courage. Losses have necessarily been incurred in the hazardous and vital operations. Altogether, some thirty-five of our aircraft have so far failed to return, but some of them are known to have made forced landings in Belgium and France."

24 Incendiary Bombs Dropped

In another communique, the Air Ministry said: "It is now confirmed that incendiary bombs, dropped in Kent (England) on Friday night as already announced, numbered twenty-four ,and that in addition twenty high-explosive bombs were dropped, which exploded harmlessly in a dense woods near Canterbury."

The Admiralty reported the loss of the eighth British submarine in the war, abandoning hope for the undersea minelayer Seal, which normally carried fifty-five men. The communique said:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that His Majesty's submarine Seal is overdue and must be presumed to be lost. Foreign reports suggest that some of her crew may be prisoners of war. Next of kin have been informed."

Growing concern over the parachute menace sprang from Germany's obvious faith in this new war technique as employed against the Low Countries. Veterans of the World War begged for assignments dealing with any enemies who might drop from the sky. Some British policemen carried guns for the first time.

The British Legion at its annual convention heard its president, Sir Frederick Maurice, declare: "If the Germans would like to send some of their parachutists over here—well, the Legion will undertake to look after them."

Sir Maurice, who was a major general on the British General Staff in the World War, predicted to the cheering veterans that the Allies would win the war "this year."

Northern Scotland had a half-hour raid warning the morning when unidentified planes appeared, but no bombs were dropped and the people went on to work carrying their gas masks. City Down in northern Ireland had a quarter-hour raid alarm before daylight.

Britain Pledges No Intervening In East Indies

Would Continue Status Quo; Troops in West Indies Sent at Request of Dutch

LONDON, May 12 (AP).—An unofficial assurance was given here today that Great Britain would not intervene in the Netherlands East Indies.

"His majesty's government," a British source said, "have previously expressed their interest in the maintenance of the status quo in the Netherlands East Indies.

"This attitude remains unchanged and they have no intention whatever of intervening in the East Indies nor has any suggestion been made from any quarter that they should do so."

Yesterday it was announced that in the Netherlands West Indies, an Allied force had landed "to prevent possible German attempts at sabotage in the important oil refineries" on the islands of Curacao and Aruba.

These troops, another London source said, were sent "in full agreement with the Netherlands government" because it was regarded as necessary that the Netherlands West Indies Governor have additional forces to cope with any emergency.

"The intention is that as soon as the Netherlands government is satisfied that security has been fully established, or additional Dutch forces are available in sufficient numbers, an immediate withdrawal of British and French forces will be effected."

[Both the United States and Japan have expressed their interest in maintenance of the status quo in the rich and strategic colonial posession of the Netherlands in the Far East.]

Churchill Fills His Cabinet Out And Takes Oath

Wood Named to Exchequer, Simon Lord Chancellor, Duff Cooper Press Chief

LONDON, May 12 (AP).—Sir John Simon was named Lord Chancellor today by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Sir Kingsley Wood was appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Sir John Anderson was reappointed Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security. Lord Lloyd was named Colonial Secretary. Sir Andrew Rae Duncan was reappointed President of the Board of Trade. Alfred Duff Cooper was made Minister of Information. Herbert Morrison, Laborite, was appointed Minister of Supply.

Sir John Simon was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Chamberlain Cabinet, and Sir Kingsley Wood was Lord Privy Seal and a former Air Minister. Duff Cooper was First Lord of the Admiralty before the start of the war. Lord Lloyd, a Conservative Peer, has not served in previous cabinets.

A great crowd gathered outside Buckingham Palace while the new Cabinet was being sworn in before King George VI and it gave the ministers a great cheer when they left. As Lord President of the Council, Neville Chamberlain was sworn in first, followed by Churchill.

Earlier, the King, in a field marshall's uniform, had attended church services with Queen Elizabeth in the guard's chapel of nearby Wellington Barracks.

Sir Samuel Hoare, former Air Secretary, and Oliver Stanley, former War Secretary, called at the Palace to relinquish their seals of office.

Churchill's initial selections brought approval from the newspapers, which declared they should mollify all parties. The conservative "Sunday Times" recalled approvingly that Chamberlain himself at the beginning of the war had sought a government reconstructed on similar lines, with the opposition included.

"All big unions will be in favor," said the leftist "Reynolds News." "Both opposition parties had strong objection to the inclusion of self-confessed failures and other 'men of Munich' in ministerial posts. They were prepared to tolerate Chamberlain and had no strong objection to Lord Halifax (Foreign Secretary). But from there on they drew the Line."

The independent "Sunday Pictorial" called Chamberlain's inclusion in the "inner circle" the biggest surprise of the appointments, and the "Sunday Observer" professed to see in his retention a source of trouble.

The "Sunday Chronicle" found most noteworthy the inclusion of three Socialists in the trimmed-for-action-government. One commentator thought the chief public criticism of the Cabinet would be aimed at the ages of its members. Their average is sixty-two years.

German

BERLIN, May 12 (AP)—Following is today's communiqué of the German High Command:

The German attack in the west proceeds swiftly, with close collaboration between the army and the air force.

In the north of the Netherlands German troops have occupied the Province of Groningen. Harlingen and the east coast of the Zuider Zee [Yssel Lake] have been reached.

After penetration of the Yssel fortification, the Grebbe line of fortifications between Amersfoort and Rhenen also and, farther south, the Peel fortification were broken in the march to the west. Between Hasselt and Maastricht a crossing of the Albert Canal was forced.

Fort Eben Emael, strongest cornerstone of Liége, is in German hands as already announced. The commander and garrison of 1,000 men surrendered. Before Liége, German troops have penetrated partially into deep fortifications.

The unit of the German army in Southern Belgium also gained ground swiftly in spite of enemy opposition.

Luxembourg is in German hands.

The German Air Force continued May 11 the great attack against enemy air forces in France, Belgium and the Netherlands that started the day before. A great number of airports were attacked anew, hangars fired, runways destroyed and fuel tanks and munitions dumps exploded.

On the airport at Evreux, thirty planes were destroyed and at Orleans airport thirty-six. In air battles, fifty-two planes were shot down and twelve more by anti-aircraft fire. It can be taken with certainty that, in all yesterday, 300 enemy planes fell victims to our attack and our air defense forces.

Troop concentrations, transport columns, railroad yards, march columns and truck transports behind the Belgian and French fronts were objectives of full attacks.

On the Belgian and Netherland coast, fleet units, transport ships and unloading operations were attacked. In Vlissingen [Flushing], three transport ships and one tanker were hit; in the middle North Sea, one enemy destroyer was damaged by bomb hits.

In the night of May 11-12, individual planes flew over Western Germany and again attacked a number of non-military objectives without particular effect.

Our own air losses, in relation to success, were small. Thirty-five planes are missing.

In Norway, the situation is unchanged. At Narvik, enemy sea and land forces were attacked by the air force. One destroyer was sunk and another damaged.

British

LONDON, May 12 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué said today:

During last night Royal Air Force aircraft carried out further bombing attacks against enemy troop concentrations and military traffic on roads and railways at a number of points in Germany near the frontier of the Netherlands.

A later communiqué said:

German mechanized troops advancing from the Rhine toward the Meuse again were harassed yesterday afternoon by a series of attacks made by aircraft of the Royal Air Force.

Roads leading out of Naastricht [Netherland-Belgian border] were bombed, and a few miles southwest of town on the road to Tongres [Belgium] a column of small tanks, armored cars and troop transport vehicles was attacked and several direct hits obtained.

Another Air Ministry communiqué follows:

A fuller account can now be given of operations of the Royal Air Force since yesterday morning. Extensive reconnaissances show that much damage has been done by our aircraft to airdromes in Holland used by the enemy for landing troops and that very heavy losses in aircraft in addition to those destroyed by attacks from the air. Fourteen out of sixteen troop carriers observed on one landing ground alone were seen to be damaged.

French

PARIS, May 12 (AP)—A French High Command communiqué said today:

In the region of the Albert Canal and the Meuse River, where German attacks continued with extreme violence, our aviation massively and effectively intervened in support of Belgian troops.

Toward the end of the day our bombers attacked enemy columns and bridges of the greatest importance. Eight enemy planes were brought down during these expeditions.

Numerous aerial operations were carried out during the night, the results of which are not yet known.

On land, our approach operations continued normally according to plan.

In the region of the Saar and west of the Vosges, where in the latter part of the night fighting began at many points, German artillery opened violent and continuous fire.

Tonight's French communiqué said:

The situation in the Netherlands has improved today. British aviation is giving vigorous help to the Netherland defense.

Enemy pressure continues in Belgium, to the west of Maastricht, and in the region of Tongres. It is strongly hampered, however, by the activity of Allied airplanes attacking bridges in the Maastricht region and enemy columns, which have suffered heavy losses.

The advance of our troops continues regularly in the central part of Belgium.

The enemy is exerting an important effort in the Belgian Ardennes [mountains], where violent engagements have taken place.

Combats have recommenced on the Luxembourg frontier.

The enemy also attacked our advance positions between the Warndt Forest and the Saar.

Nothing of importance to report on the eastern part of the front between the Saar and the Swiss front.

German aviation has been very active, notably over Northeastern France. French anti-aircraft defense and Allied airplanes have combated this activity. Thirty enemy airplanes were shot down during the day. It is to be noted that among German airplanes d estroyed Friday and Saturday, thirty were shot down by our anti-aircraft artillery.

British Bombers Hit Nazi Transport Roads

Captain Of Squadron Says Blazing Airdrome Lighted Up The Attack

London, May 12 (AP)—The captain of one of the British bombers which attacked strategic roads behind the German lines told today of making direct hits "right on the roads" along which long lines of German transport trucks were moving.

He said a blazing airdrome in the vicinity lighted the attack, and the sky was pierced by so many searchlights that "they looked like lattice work."

When his first bombs struck, he said, all the lights on the vehicles went out in a kind of run from one end to the other."

Report Troop Transport Sunk

BERLIN, May 12 (AP).—The German air force sank a troop transport off the Dutch coast this afternoon and set fire to six other ships, D. N. B., the German official news agency, reported tonight.

"The German air force scored an extraordinary success this afternoon against enemy ships before the Holland coast," the agency said "D. N. B. learns that a large troop transport of 15,000 tons was sunk by the German air force. Six other ships burned brightly as a result of bomb hits."

The agency also said that approximately 5,000 Dutch border troops who sought to nold up the German advance on Friday were taken prisoners.

Mentioning Allied raids over German territory, D. N. B. said that the British had had no success bombing bridges over the Rhine and that there had been no slackening in the German advance because of Allied attacks on communication lines. It further charged that British planes "have avoided military objectives and places protected by anti-aircraft guns" and have tried to attack "only small, undefended cities and railroad yards." The [illegible] civilian deaths by previously reported Allied raids on the German university town of Freiburg was said to have risen to thirty-five.

Dashes Through Nazis, Blows Up Span and Self

BRUSSELS, May 12 (AP).—The Germans were enabled to cross the Albert Canal yesterday, Premier Hubert Pierlot revealed today, because the officer in charge of the destruction of two bridges near Maastricht was killed by an enemy bomb, and the second in command hesitated to carry out the pre-arranged orders. During the interval, Pierlot said, German motorized units streamed across the bridges.

Later, a Belgian officer, in a suicide dash through the German lines, blew up himself and one bridge.

Luce and Wife Driving From Brussels to France

German Bomb Fell 50 Yards From Publisher's Window

BRUSSELS, May 12 (AP).—Henry Luce, publisher of "Time" and other magazines in the United States, left by automobile for France yesterday with his playwright wife. They arrived Thursday night from The Hague on a trip through Europe and were the guests of the American Ambassador here, John Cudahy, when the German invasion began.

One of the German bombs which marked the beginning of hostilities fell fifty yards from their window and destroyed a house.

They expect to sail from Italy for the United States on Saturday.

Red Cross Would Save Civilians From Bombing

International Group Appeals To Belligerents In Low Countries To Refrain From Attacks

Geneva, May 12 (AP)—The International Red Cross committee tonight appealed to all belligerents in the Low Countries to refrain from bombing civil populations and from attacks against persons who, by their inoffensive character, should not be subjected to acts of war."

It also thanked President Roosevelt for his appeal on behalf of civil populations.

Reds See British Desire For New War Theaters

Press Scores Cabinet Change as Signifying 'Reaction'

MOSCOW, May 12 (AP).—The newspaper "Red Fleet," commenting on the British Cabinet changes, declared today that they signified a British desire to "create new theaters of war in various parts of the world."

Laborite participation in the Cabinet, said the paper, "signifies inevitable intensification of reaction and persecution of the working class."

Moscow newspapers refrained from comment on developments on the western front, but gave much space to factual reports.

Urges Soviet, Balkan Economic Cooperation

Yugoslavia Reported To Have Suggested Action To Make Entente Partners Split Surplus

Belgrade, May 12 (AP)—A Yugoslav proposal for economic cooperation with Soviet Russia by the four powers of the Balkan Entente was reported today in authoritative quarters.

They said the project would be given close study when experts of the Entente members — Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey—meet at an economic conference here May 27.

Yugoslavia, counting on political and military understandings with Russia to follow the trade agreement signed at Moscow last night, was reported to have urged the Entente partners to take all possible steps toward making the Balkans economically self-sufficient with Soviet support.

Says Irish Are Willing To Forgive English

De Valera Claims Good Relations Could Be Developed After Eire Gets Her Independence

Dublin, Ireland, May 12 (AP)—Premier Eamon de Valera told a Finna Fail Party meeting in Galway tonight that his people were prepared to let bygones be bygones once Ireland has obtained her independence of Britain.

He voiced regret that there still was cause for [illegible] differences, especially "at a time like the present."

De Valera said he believed the common interests of Britain and Ireland would "beget good relations" and that he was trying to lay the foundation for such relations.

Madrid, May 12 (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco today repeated orders to Spaniards to observe the strictest neutrality in the broadened European war. His action followed official notification of Spain by the Ministers of Belgium and Netherlands that a state of war exists between their countries and Germany.

Galway, Ireland, May 12 (AP)—Premier Eamon de Valera said in a speech today that "a cruel wrong has been done Belgium and Holland, and it would be unworthy of this small nation if it did not utter a protest."

Berlin, May 12 (AP)—Approximately 5,000 Dutch border troops who sought to hold up the German advance on Friday were taken prisoner, DNB, official German news agency, announced today.

ASKS AMERICAS TO STRENGTHEN STAND ON WAR

Argentine Foreign Minister Proposes Non-Belligerent Attitude

Cantilo Says Latest Turn In Europe Calls For New Expression

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, May 12—Declaring neutrality in present circumstances of the world a "fiction" and a "dead conception," Jose Maria Cantilo, Foreign Minister, tonight proposed that the Americas adopt a "non-belligerent" attitude instead.

The Foreign Minister's statement was made after a conference among Cantilo, President Ortiz, Norman Armour, United States Ambassador, and the Brazilian Ambassador.

The statement had been hinted at earlier in a dispatch from Washington, printed in La Nacion, which said consideration was being given to a new declaration of solidarity by the Americas which wuold scrap the declaration of neutrality at Panama for something resembling Italy's non-belligerent status.

Calls For Stronger Stand

The situation in which belligerents do no trecognize the rights, as well as the duties, of neutrals, and the "aggressive methods" in Europe, Cantilo said, show the need for a "stronger stand" than neutrality.

He denied it would "mean bringing us nearer to war."

Disclosing that the first conversations on the subject were held April 19, when the possibility of an invasion of Belgium and Holland was discussed, Cantilo said some of the American republics were not favorable to a change then.

"But since the latest invasion with a wholesale disregard for international rules there appeared a growing demand among these nations for a new expression."

Terms Neutrality A Fiction

Neutrals cannot make "their neutrality respected as a juridicial form of their isolation," said Cantilo. "Neutrality created to preserve sovereignty, either evades or diminishes it in present conditions, but does not protect it. It is a fiction, a dead conception, which must be replaced within the reality of the moment we are living."

Latin-American officials lately have shown dissatisfaction with results of the declaration of Panama expressing neutrality, which the belligerents have not recognized, and are seeking some stronger means of maintaining non-belligerent rights.

One high official said the "concept of neutrality which prevailed under international law has now disappeared.

Wants More Active Stand

"In the face of developments in Europe, including the invasion of Norway, Denmark and other neutrals, American nations should revise their neutrality and make it more flexible and more active.

"Without in any way entering the war, we should be able to proceed in accordance with our own convenience, without feeling bound by the juridicial concept of neutrals."

'Long Live Holland!' Daubed on Nazi Ship

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 12 (AP).—The crew of the 1,271-ton German freighter Cerigo, in port here since the outbreak of the war, awakened today to find a huge flag of the Netherlands and the words: "Long live the Netherlands!" painted on the prow.

The art work was believed to have been done during the night by sailors from the Netherlands steamship Manto, which sailed before dawn for a northern port.

The skipper of the Cerigo put his crew to work scrubbing away the paint.

Fish Asks Deportation Of Alien Propagandists

Tells Boston Crowd Country Wants No Trojan Horses—Approves Roosevelt's Plea On Bombings

Boston, May 12 (AP)—Representative Fish (Rep., N. Y.) proposed today amid applause from a Boston Common audience, that Congress order deportation of alien propagandists.

"We want no Trojan horses in America," he told 5,000 persons at a meeting held by the American Mothers' Neutrality League.

"The Trojan horses of Communism and Nazism need investigation and constant vigilance, but they are as nothing to the dangers and menace of the Trojan horse of the internalists and interventionists who, by intrigue and secret diplomacy, would involve us in war."

He voiced approval of President Roosevelt's pleas to belligerents asking them not to bomb undefended cities and advocated the training of 10,000 airplane pilots as part of a general increase in the Army and Navy air forces.

SUSPECT "OVERLOADING" OF HUMAN MACHINE IN AIR COMBAT

PILOT FAILURE MAY STEM FROM TOO MUCH WORK, SAY AERO MEDICINE EXPERTS--(750)

BY DEVON FRANCIS

MAY 13 1940

ASSOCIATED PRESS AVIATION EDITOR

(ADVANCE) DAYTON, O., MAY 11--THE EUROPEAN WAR, WITH ITS HIGH CASUALTY RATE FROM WHAT IS KNOWN IN BROAD TERMS AS "PILOT FAILURE," AGAIN IS RAISING THE QUESTION WHETHER THE HUMAN MIND AND BODY ARE BEING TAXED BEYOND THEIR CAPACITY BY THE SPEED AND COMPLEXITY OF TODAY'S AIRPLANES.

REPORTS FROM ABROAD INDICATE THAT, AT A MINIMUM, FOR EVERY FOUR PILOTS KILLED AS A DIRECT RESULT OF COMBAT, SIX LOSE THEIR LIVES BECAUSE THEIR JUDGMENT SUDDENLY BECOMES FAULTY OR THEIR BODIES REFUSE T TAKE THE STRAIN.

SOME AMERICAN AUTHORITIES INSIST THAT "PILOT FAILURE" IS ACCOUNTING FOR SIX OUT OF SEVEN DEATHS IN THE WAR. THOSE CASUALTIES WOULD INCLUDE THE MEN OFFICIALLY ENTERED IN THE RECORDS AS HAVING BEEN KILLED IN COMBAT.

IN A GOOD MANY OF THOSE CASES THE PILOT WAS SHOT DOWN BY AN ENEMY BECAUSE HE WENT TO PIECES AT THE WRONG MOMENT AND PRESENTED HIMSELF AS A PERFECT TARGET FOR HIS OPPONENT'S GUNS.

HERE AT WRIGHT FIELD, THE ARMY AIR CORPS TESTING GROUND, THE PROBLEM IS BEING RESOLVED IN THE FIELD OF PURE PHYSIOLOGICAL RESEARCH INTO A QUESTION OF WHETHER THE HUMAN MACHINE IS BEING OVER-LOADED. NO ATTEMPT HAS BEEN MADE AS YET TO ANSWER IT.

BUT CERTAIN FACTS STAND OUT AS A BASIS ON WHICH WRIGHT FIELD AND THE ARMY'S SCHOOL OF AVIATION MEDICINE AT RANDOLPH FIELD, TEXAS, CAN WORK. ONE IS THAT WHILE THE ARMY IS GETTING THE FINEST PHYSICAL AND MENTAL SPECIMENS AVAILABLE AS PILOT MATERIAL BY WEEDING OUT TWO-THIRDS OF THE CANDIDATES FOR TRAINING, YET ITS YOUNG MEN STILL ARE GETTING KILLED IN PEACE-TIME ACCIDENTS.

THE ARMY, LIKE THE NAVY, DOES NOT MAKE PUBLIC ITS CASUALTY FIGURES, BUT ALMOST ALL ITS AIRPLANE ACCIDENTS ARE PUBLISHED IN THE NEWSPAPERS. IN TOKEN OF THE IMPORTANCE ATTACHED TO IT, THE PILOT PROBLEM HAS PRECIPITATED STUDIES NOT ONLY BY THE ARMED SERVICES BUT BY SOME EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS AND THE AIRLINES AS WELL.

ONE OF THE ANSWERS TO PILOT FAILURE IS THE COMPLEXITY OF CONTROLS.

"WHEN WE ENTERED THE OVERCAST," AN ARMY PILOT TOLD ME IN DESCRIBING A FLIGHT IN A BI-MOTORED BOMBER, "IT TOOK MY CO-PILOT AND ME ABOUT A MINUTE TO GET ALL THE HANDLES TURNED AND THE BUTTONS PUSHED FOR INSTRUMENT FLYING UNDER ICING CONDITIONS.

"THEN WHEN WE GOT BACK ON THE GROUND, IT TOOK US A LIKE TIME TO GET EVERYTHING BACK IN PLACE."

HE MAY HAVE BEEN EMBROIDERING THE STORY FOR EFFECT, BUT IT CHECKS CLOSELY WITH YOUR CORRESPONDENT'S EXPERIENCE. COMING OVER THE ALLEGHENIES IN A PRIVATE PLANE THE OTHER DAY I SAW A VETERAN PILOT GET ALMOST TOO BIG A HANDFUL OF MACHINERY IN A DIFFICULT SITUATION. DECIDING TO GO "ON INSTRUMENTS" HE HAD TO MANIPULATE TWELVE DIFFERENT CONTROLS IN THE SPACE OF A MINUTE AND FLY THE AIRPLANE IN THE BARGAIN.

MULTIPLE CREWS ARE HELPING REDUCE THE WORK IN THE COCKPIT IN BIG AIRPLANES, BUT THE PURSUIT PILOT HAS ONLY HIMSELF TO DEPEND ON. NOW SIMPLIFICATION OF INSTRUMENT PANELS IS COMING TO HIS AID. THE CURTISS-WRIGHT "TELL-TALE" INDICATOR, WHICH INFORMS A PILOT IF HE HAS LEFT SOMETHING UNDONE, AND THE SPERRY "FLIGHTTRAY," WHICH COMBINES SEVERAL PRIMARY INSTRUMENTS, ARE STEPS IN THAT DIRECTION.

IT IS IN THE VIOLENT MANEUVERS THROUGH WHICH A LIGHT FIGHTING PLANE GOES THAT THE WORST PROBLEM IN HUMAN ENDURANCE OCCURS. IN TIGHT

AFTER HE WON $22,000 IN AN HOUR'S FLYING IN THE THOMPSON TROPHY RACE IN CLEVELAND'S NATIONAL AIR RACES TWO YEARS AGO ROSCOE TURNER, THE SPEED MERCHANT, WAS ASKED WHY HE WHEELED SO WIDE AROUND THE PYLONS.

"TWO REASONS," HE REPLIED. "I DIDN'T WANT TO HAVE ANY OF THOSE OTHER PILOTS CRASHING INTO ME ON THE TURNS, AND I DIDN'T WANT TO BLACK OUT AT LOW ALTITUDE."

BLACKOUTS USUALLY ARE MOMENTARY, BUT UNDER COMBAT CONDITIONS, WITH AN ENEMY AIRMAN POURING LEAD OR EXPLOSIVE SHELLS AT A BLIND OR UNCONSCIOUS PILOT, THEY CAN WELL BE FATAL.

MAY 13 1940

FROM FIVE TO SEVEN TIMES THE FORCE OF GRAVITY IS NOT AN UNCOMMON FORCE EXERTED ON A PILOT IN FAIRLY TIGHT TURNS AND NOMINAL "PULLOUTS" WITH TODAY'S SPEEDS. THE BEATING THE HUMAN BODY WILL TAKE IF AND WHEN SPEEDS OF 500 AND EVEN 600 MILES AN HOUR--WHICH DESIGNERS ARE TALKING ABOUT--ARE REACHED IS OBVIOUS. TODAY'S TOP SPEEDS IN STILL AIR ARE NOT MUCH ABOVE 400.

VARIOUS WAYS OF MEETING THAT PARTICULAR PROBLEM HAVE BEEN PROPOSED. FEW SEEM PRACTICABLE. ONE IS TO HAVE A PILOT LIE FLAT, THEREBY OBVIATING THE DRAINAGE OF BLOOD DOWNWARD. ANOTHER IS TO FIT HIM WITH AN INFLATABLE BELT TO KEEP THE BLOOD OVER HIS MID-SECTION AND BY SHEER PRESSURE SUPPLY THE BRAIN WITH CIRCULATION.

A COMMON PRACTICE OF PURSUIT PILOTS IS TO LEAN FORWARD IN BANKS AND PULLOUTS, KEEPING THE VERTICAL AXIS OF THEIR BODIES OUT OF RIGHT-

Hitler's Troops Redouble Attacks in Low Countries—His Headquarters Reports Contact in Holland Between Army and Parachutists.

MAY 14 1940

By Associated Press

Military spokesmen announced in Paris tonight that the German advance through southern Holland and Belgium appeared to have been checked and that the battle of the west which is expected to be the greatest engagement in history had entered its preliminary stage.

Dutch troops fought stubbornly behind their flooded defense lines below the Zuider Zee, while Belgian, British and French forces battled side by side against sharp new attacks by German motorized invaders in Belgium.

Adolf Hitler's headquarters on the western front reported the capture of the great Liege fortress citadel in Belgium—on the fourth day of the war. It was here that Kaiser Wilhelm's army was halted a week by a heroic Belgian defense in 1914. The Germans also reported the capture of 18,000 Dutch troops by one German Army, with a Dutch general and his staff seized in south Holland.

The French High Command said that the only fort so far seized by the Germans in the Liege zone was Eben Emael.

The new Prime Minister of Great Britain, Winston Churchill, received a "win the war" mandate by a vote of 381 to 0 in the House of Commons. The conflict in the Low Countries, he said, was rapidly approaching "one of the greatest battles in history."

French artillery and Allied air bombs this afternoon shattered part of the Istein tunnel under Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine," disrupting military traffic between Basle, Switzerland, and the German West Wall fortifications. An official French compilation said that the Germans had lost 400 planes since the blitzkrieg began last Friday.

The German High Command said that a Nazi column in Holland had established contact with parachute troops landed around Rotterdam.

The Belgian troops were being helped by French and British troops in meeting new attacks by mechanized Nazi forces. Residents of Brussels began to flee southward into France as one German column blasted its way to a point forty-five miles east of the Belgian capital.

While student demonstrators paraded in Rome shouting for war, and while the French and British embassies were guarded by Italian troops, Italy re-enforced her Littorio Line, along the French frontier, calling up additional troops.

He explained that this meant that the advanced Allied motorized forces and Allied aviation were supporting the Belgian and southern Dutch armies and had slowed up the Blitzkrieg. They were giving battle pending the arrival of the main Allied forces, which were said to be nearing the line, "ahead of schedule."

Meanwhile word was received from Basle, Switzerland, that French artillery and Allied air bombs this afternoon had shattered part of the Istein railroad tunnel under Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine."

This destruction closed to military traffic a section of the vital army railroad incorporated in the West Wall fortifications.

Paris Calls Nazi Drive Checked.

PARIS, May 13 (A. P.).—A French military spokesman declared tonight that the German advance through southern Holland and Belgium appeared to be checked.

The great "Battle of the West" has started, the spokesman said, but it still is in a preliminary stage.

MAY 14 1940

30.24-2233

Passenger traffic on this German Rhine line was cut off after an attack on a freight train near Istein by a French warplane on Saturday.

The new raid and shelling of the southern side of the bridge of Istein Rock, which the German railroad pierces in a double track tunnel, severed Germany's direct connection with Basle.

Five Miles From Swiss Border.

Istein is about five miles north of the Swiss border.

Heavy German troop concentrations were noted by observers from the Swiss side from north of Basle, where Switzerland, France and Germany come together, on east to Waldshut—a distance of thirty miles by air.

Further troop movements were reported east of this point toward Lake Constance.

The French also re-enforced veteran Moroccan troops, which have been stationed since the war in lower Alsace and the upper Jura frontier with Switzerland.

The Swiss have their Winkelried Line from Basle to the Austrian frontier manned with elite troops backed by fully mobilized reserve forces.

Following the Swiss neutrality plan, many reserve troops also are posted along the Swiss frontier of the Swiss Jura, opposite the French frontier.

Paris Denies Nazi Claims.

A French War Ministry spokesman said at mid-afternoon today that, so far, the only fort in the fortified zone around Liege that has fallen to the Germans is Eben Emael.

The French spokesman declared that in Holland "the interior situation is much improved."

He admitted, however, that some German forces had driven through Luxemburg and, at some points, were fighting on French territory.

But the fighting there, he said, was between advance motorized forces on both sides, and the main German and Allied armies nowhere have come into contact as yet.

Situation Summed Up.

He summed up the situation at midafternoon (about 11 A. M., New York time) as follows:

HOLLAND—No further reports since news that the Germans had succeeded in piercing Dutch defenses on the Ijssel. The interior situation much improved, with most German parachutists mopped up.

BELGIUM — The fortified zone around Liege holding out well. Only fort fallen to the Germans is Eben Emael, where the Albert Canal joins the Meuse.

The progress of German columns toward Tongres and Hasselt from Maastricht has been greatly hampered by Allied aerial operations. The column heading toward Tongres was stopped by a mass assault by French armored cars last night. This was the first time French and German armored cars came into contact in large numbers.

South of Liege the Germans are striking hard due west through the Belgian Ardennes. The Belgians are withdrawing slowly, periodically halting to offer a fight supported by Allied aviation.

German Division Stopped.

LUXEMBURG—French advance cavalry detachments, having retired to the French-Luxemburg frontier, main forces are now in combat from the Moselle to Longwy, which the French hold.

The line of battle is at some points in Luxemburg and some points on French territory.

FRANCE—A full German division which was hurled against a French position immediately to the east of Moselle yesterday has been stopped completely. On the Lorraine front, German attacks proved to be localized operations in the Forbach region and Orenthal salient.

French advance posts fell back and the Germans did not push the attacks further.

Meanwhile the French re-enforcements rushed to the aid of the besieged lowlands, the French High Command reported in a communique.

The enemy attack was reported to be particularly severe in the region north of the Albert Canal, apparently in an effort to widen the breach already forced in the canal fortifications which make up a vital part of Belgium's defense system.

The Germans also threw heavy concentrations into the sector southeast of Tirlemont, which is only twenty-five miles east of Brussels.

Paris had its third air raid alarm within fourteen hours at 2:30 P. M. (9:30 A. M., New York time). The all clear sounded without incident twenty-one minutes later. No planes were heard and no anti-aircraft fire was unloosed.

Twelve Nazi Planes Shot Down.

Other major points in the renewed Nazi drive, the French communique said, were in the Belgian Ardennes Mountains, which face German-occupied Luxemburg, and in the region between the Albert Canal and the lower Rhine.

[This apparently was the Dutch province of North Brabant, where the Dutch High Command reported that French re-enforcements had made contact with the enemy.]

French planes zoomed over the advancing German columns during the day and night, bombing and machine-gunning them time and again and bringing down a total of twelve Nazi planes during the night.

The French Command also reported the destruction of thirty German planes in France yesterday.

Daladier in Belgium.

A War Ministry spokesman announced that Edouard Daladier, member of the War Cabinet and Minister of National Defense, arrived in Belgium yesterday.

The spokesman said that M. Daladier, accompanied by high British and French officials, was received by King Leopold III of Belgium and visited outposts along the Franco-Belgian frontier.

The War Ministry spokesman said that the action in which French advance guards were backing up the Belgians in their fight against tremendous German thrusts in the Tongres region and the Belgian Ardennes was the prelude to a gigantic battle which might be expected in the next day or two, when the main body of the Allied forces will be in position.

On the French main front a full German division was stopped in an attack east of the Moselle River, the spokesman said. In the Ohrenthal salient of the Forbach region French outpost forces dropped back to their first line of fortified positions when the Germans charged after heavy artillery preparations.

At Grips Near Luxemburg.

The French and Germans were also at grips along the Franco-Luxemburg frontier.

A French armored car unit stopped a German column in the Tongres region yesterday as the Germans sought to press on to the West after capturing the Dutch city of Maastricht. Tongres is ten miles west of Maastricht.

Allied planes subjected the German rear lines to a heavy bombardment.

In Belgium's Ardennes Mountains, German units launched a vigorous thrust with forces spread out along a line from east to west.

Parachutes Are Captured.

In Holland the Germans continued to apply pressure along the river Lissel, which they succeeded in crossing at several points, the spokesman said. But he added that German parachute troops who landed in Holland had been rounded up and that the situation in general seemed improved.

A War Ministry communique praised "the magnificent courage" of the Allied soldiers.

"Everywhere our convoys of troops and war material are moving forward in impeccable order and with perfect regularity," it said.

British military sources reported the capture of German parachutists who succeeded in landing "very far" behind the lines. The French press called on the population of the Paris and other regions to ward off danger from parachutists.

Although authorized French sources expressed belief that there was no immediate likelihood of Italy entering the war, the closest watch was being kept.

In regard to the Netherlands East Indies, it was said that there was no thought of any attempt by the Allies to give military protection to the rich colony of the Netherlands, so long as Japan does not threaten.

French circles said they were favorably impressed by the United States attitude toward maintenance of the status quo there.

Called Greatest in History.

French dispatches called the German drive "the greatest attack in history," but expressed confidence that it could be checked now that the main Allied forces were entering the lines.

Advance guards of the French columns which dashed into Belgium on Friday immediately after the German invasion were already in contact with the enemy, military dispatches said.

The Belgian command credited the French with a counter-attack against the Germans, while the Dutch reported the French were fighting in East Brabant as well.

Troops in the great French series of Maginot Line fortresses fought off a series of German attacks which lengthened the battle region to 300 miles, from the northern border of the Netherlands, through Belgium, Luxemburg and along the main French front.

The first defenses of the lowlands, on the Ijssel River in the Netherlands and the Albert Canal in Belgium, were broken by the German assaults, but the defenders were reported falling back to new positions. (Here twenty-eight words of dispatch censored.)

On the French front, the Germans shifted their attack from the Vosges mountain region to the Warndt forest around the central Saar sector, but the main lines appeared unchanged.

Voluntary departure from Paris again was under way as in the first days of the war, last September. About a third of the city's usual population of 3,000,000 already were in the country, and many more were following.

The closing hour for cafes, restaurants and theaters in Paris was changed from midnight to 11 P. M. (Germany also ordered restaurants closed at 11 P. M. starting Tuesday, authorized German sources commenting that the population ought to be concentrating on victory instead of idling at that hour.)

Troops Fall Back In 'Strategic Plan'

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 13.—French, Belgian and Dutch troops in Belgium and the Netherlands were falling back, in accordance with strategic plans tonight, before savage onslaughts of German advance units of motorized corps, supported by air bombardments, said a French War Ministry spokesman.

The authorized commentator described the day's activity as a general German attack, "from Holland to the Moselle River," where France's Maginot line blocks the German push westward.

The Allied withdrawal, he emphasized, however, could not be considered a retreat.

The Allies have erected a "wall on which the great battle will be fought," the spokesman declared. He did not say where this "wall" is located.

In Belgium, south of Liege, French and Belgian troops were dropping back to the Meuse River in the face of a German attack by several divisions of infantry and by additional divisions of motorized units.

In the Netherlands the Dutch troops were retiring to the Grebbe water line, the spokesman said.

Despite violent fighting, the French still held Longwy at the junction of the Belgian, Luxemburg and French borders.

column had "established contact with troops landed by air around Rotterdam."

DNB, the official German news agency, reported the complete occupation of the northern province of Groningen, with the Nazis reaching the Zuider Zee (Ijssel Meer) in force behind vanguards which reached it at Harlingen yesterday.

18,000 Dutch Reported Taken.

DNB also reported that one German army had captured about 18,000 Dutch soldiers, while at one point in south Holland a Dutch general and his staff were seized.

DNB added that 600 French soldiers had been captured in an action south of Saarbruecken, on the Maginot-West Wall front, in which German lines pushed forward.

For even as the Nazis pressed their onslaught in the Low Countries toward what Germans expected to be one of the great battles of history, other Nazi forces in the west took the offensive on the French frontier.

"South and southeastward from Zweibruecken, our positions were moved forward and several hundred prisoners were taken," the High Command reported from the West Wall-Maginot Line front.

The High Command said that French troops in the lowlands were moving up and had been thrown into the area south of Liege and west of the Ourthe River, toward which it said German troops are moving.

German troops also are driving west from Liege, north of the Meuse River.

Text of Hitler Communique.

The communique, issued from Adolf Hitler's headquarters with his army, said:

"The attack of German forces in the west made good progress on May 12.

"In Holland, German troops are moving forward west of the South Willem Canal. They have established contact with troops landed by air around Rotterdam.

"In Belgium, the crossing of the Albert Canal was forced northwest of Hasselt. Our troops are moving forward west of Liege and north of the Meuse and have broken into the city of Liege.

"The German flag has waved on the citadel since the forenoon of May 13 while individual outer forts still resist."

"French troops have been thrown west of the Ourthe and in southern Belgium. Our troops are there in a fluid advance and are beginning to approach the goal set up.

"South and southeastward from Zweibrucken (on the West Wall-Maginot front), our positions were moved forward and several hundred prisoners were taken. The advance of our army was supported effectively by the air force with attacks on troop concentrations, march columns and railroads.

Air Successes Claimed.

"The air force continues its great battle for air superiority over the western area of operations with noticeable success. In all, on May 12, 320 planes were destroyed, among them fifty-eight in air fights, seventy-two by anti-aircraft fire and the rest on the ground. Twenty-five planes were brought down during a British attack at Maastricht by anti-aircraft fire. A single air squadron succeeded in shooting down sixteen.

"Our own losses, compared to the enemy and measured by our successes, were slight again yesterday. They consisted of thirty-one planes.

"The enemy also suffered heavy damage at sea.

"Off the Dutch coast, a cruiser was heavily damaged by bomb hits. One cruiser of the Southampton class (British) as well as a transport of 15,000 tons were sunk and seven more supply ships were hit and set afire."

News of Citadel Lacking.

How the Germans took the citadel of Liege was not immediately told.

But Germany's armies, hammering wedges into both Belgium's and Holland's defenses, are said to have used a mysterious weapon which, in the German opinion, may be the key to the French Maginot Line fortifications.

It is credited with having caused the easy downfall of Eben Emael fortress, one of the strongest in the Liege-Albert Canal defense zone, a break in Belgian defenses which opened the way to Liege itself.

Germans Claim Fall Of Liege, Air Victories

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 13—German troops have broken into strategic Liege and the German flag has waved over the citadel of the famous fortress since this morning, the high command announced today.

Belgian troops are fighting bitterly against the crushing German advance, however, and are offering opposition in some of the outer forts of Liege, it said.

In Holland, the Germans reported two principal gains.

The High Command said that one

A garrison of 1,000 Belgians laid down their arms in the face of the secret Nazi weapon, it was reported.

In the fourth day of their land and air Blitzkrieg in the lowlands, the Germans made these claims:

Luxemburg—The Grand Duchy in complete Nazi control.

The Netherlands—Most of the northern half of Holland, including all of Groningen province, and Harlingen, on the eastern shore of the Zuider Zee in German hands.

Belgium—The citadel of the Liege fortress captured; the Albert Canal fortifications, the main defense line between Liege and the coast at Antwerp, pierced.

The air—Aviation supremacy, with about 700 Allied planes destroyed in flight or aground.

Look for Great Battle.

In official Nazi quarters a historic clash today was predicted, because the massed armies and air forces of the major belligerents were likely for the first time to engage in open battle.

This, it was said, was because the German progress through Belgium and Holland has been ahead of schedule and, apparently, has propelled the situation to the edge of a great battle.

The Belgian Ambassador, Viscomte Davignon, and his staff were said to have left Berlin last night for the Swiss frontier to await the arrival of V. von Buelow-Schwante, the German Ambassador to Belgium, and his staff. Both missions will cross the border at about the same time.

Holland's Minister, H. A. van Haersma de With, still in Berlin because negotiations for the departure of the German Minister to The Hague, Julius Graf von Zech Sonst von Markersroda, have not been completed.

Say They Lost Few Planes.

The Nazis said that they had destroyed more than 400 enemy planes at a loss to themselves of only tihrty-one. They said 320 enemy planes were destroyed on their own bases, fifty-eight were destroyed in air attacks and fifty-six were shot down by German anti-aircraft fire.

Enemy air attacks on German soil were said to have caused virtually no harm. Some potato fields show big holes, streets occasionally are torn up with water and gas mains rent asunder, but no essential damage of military value has been done, it was said.

Air force activities were described as farflung and varied, with Allied airports raided in France, Belgium and the Netherlands. Movements of troops and supplies were attacked.

D. N. B. said that one 15,000-ton transport was sunk off the Netherlands coast on Sunday afternoon and six other ships set afire—in addition to hits on three transports, a tanker and a destroyer, reported by the High Command in operations linked with the low country offensive.

The High Command also said that a destroyer was sunk and another damaged by German attacks near Narvik, Norway's far northern ore port, where a German force of occupation is besieged.

The High Command, in its Sunday communique, said that Allied sea and land forces near Narvik were attacked from the air but that the situation at Narvik was unchanged.

The German press proclaimed that the Nazi attacks were only the beginning—merely the prelude of "the greatest" battle of war history."

(The Allied case, in brief, was that Germany had not yet met the full power of Allied resistance and that Luxembourg was still a battleground between German and French forces.)

Marshland Forts Reported Cracked

Still other Nazi forces were said to have broken through the line of defense which follows the Ijssel river and to have breached the Grebbe Line running from Amersfoort to the Rhine, center of the main fortified zone of the Netherlands.

South of the Rhine the attackers were said to have cracked fortifications in the Peel marshlands, between Nijmegen and Roermond.

The air force activities were far-flung and varied. Allied airports were raided in France, Belgium and the Netherlands. Movements of troops and supplies were attacked.

700 Planes Destroyed, Claim

The German claim that about 700 Allied planes have been destroyed in connection with the Low Country Blitzkrieg represented a total from official announcements, the last being the Sunday statement of the high command:

"It can be taken with certainty that, in all yesterday, 300 planes fell victim to our attack and our defense forces."

The Germans admitted only that eleven of their own planes had been shot down and that thirty-five were missing.

50 Allied Planes Downed, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

BERLIN, May 13—The German air force shot down more than 50 Allied planes this morning, D. N. B., official German news agency, announced. These included 10 Spitfires (British pursuit planes) at Dordrecht, and 26 of the same type at Vlissingen. Both places are in the Netherlands.

CHURCHILL WINS COMPLETE VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Commons and Lords Both Indorse New Cabinet and Its Leader.

HE SEES BIG FIGHT STARTING

Says Months of Suffering Face Nation in War Against 'Monstrous Tyranny.'

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—Great Britain braced herself tonight for the "blood, toil, tears and sweat" of battle under the command of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who pledged "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors."

While the new leader won unanimous votes of confidence in the House of Lords and the House of Commons, British troops went into action in the Low Countries against the Nazi invaders, British warships bombarded German air troops on the Lowlands coast and British planes attacked German communication lines.

Perhaps indicative of hard times to come for Britain, an authoritative spokesman warned the people at home not to be disheartened when they "hear of certain withdrawals." He said that the Germans apparently are staking "almost everything in an attempt to win the war quickly."

Confidence Is Voted.

The Commons voted unanimous confidence—381 to 0—in Mr. Churchill's stream-lined Government after he told the members that the nation's manpower was in "the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles in history."

He, too, warned of grave times to come, but said he was leading the nation with "buoyancy and hope."

Mr. Churchill sent the members home until May 21 with the statement: "At the present time, we are in a very great battle and I do not know what the position will be when we meet again."

He promised that his policy would be:

"To wage war by land, sea and air. War with all our might and all the strength God can give us."

Britain's powerful navy has been operating continuously off the coast of Holland and Belgium in spite of "reported bombing attacks having been made on them, the Admiralty said in a communique.

The Admiralty also announced that British warships had supported Allied operations on land, had bombarded enemy troops landing from the air on airdromes and beaches, and had transported refugees from the war area to England.

R. A. F. Bombs Waalhaven.

Successful bombing attacks by the Royal Air Force last night on the Waalhaven Airdrome, near Rotterdam, were reported as the Air Ministry's contribution to the war news.

The Waalhaven Airdrome, occupied by the Germans when they first went into Holland on Friday, was lost by the Nazis on Saturday and then was recaptured by the invaders yesterday.

The British air force used Beauforts, "the latest and best of British light, long range bombers," in a twenty-minute attack on Waalhaven, and their bombs were said to have fired airdrome buildings and pitted the landing fields.

The Air Ministry also said that its planes had carried out a series of attacks on enemy communications in Germany between the Rhine and the Dutch frontier and that enemy troops advancing in eastern Belgium had been heavily bombed.

More Named to Cabinet.

Additional appointments to the Churchill government were announced tonight.

L. S. Amery, a rebel conservative critic of former Prime Minister Chamberlain's conduct of the Norwegian campaign, was named Secretary for India, succeeding the Marquess of Zetland. Born in India, Mr. Amery has been First Lord of the Admiralty, Colonial Secretary and Dominion Secretary.

Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, was appointed Minister of Labor, succeeding Ernest Brown.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of the former Laborite Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, was named Minister of Health, succeeding W. E. Elliot. As Colonial Secretary under Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. MacDonald handled the delicate Palestine situation.

Lord Woolton was named to succeed himself as Food Minister.

Commons Cheers Churchill.

Prime Minister Churchill and Mr. Chamberlain were cheered loudly by Members of Parliament when they appeared in the House of Commons at the start of the suddenly called session.

Mr. Churchill immediately presented a resolution:

"That this House welcomes the formation of a government representing the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

In the debate, Britain's world war Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, seconded Mr. Churchill's note of warning of harder times in the offing.

He spoke of this critical terrible moment when the nation needed "Mr. Churchill's glittering intellectual gifts, his dauntless courage and his profound study of war."

Two independent Labor members, James Maxton and Campbell Stephen, forced the Commons to ballot on a resolution offered by Mr. Churchill saying that his ministry represented "the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

ALL SIDES COMPLIMENT HIM

New Prime Minister Predicts Ordeal Ahead in Fight Against Tyranny

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that the Allied armies in the Low Countries were meeting the Germans in the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles of history.

He called on the House to declare its confidence in the new Government by approving a resolution which he presented saying that his Ministry represented "the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

Mr. Churchill emphasized the seriousness of his task of Cabinet-making by stating: "We are in the preliminary phase of one of the greatest battles in history. We are in action at many other points—in Norway and in Holland and we have to be prepared in the Mediterranean. . . ."

The Aim—Victory.

On the question of Britain's aim, Mr. Churchill said in ringing tones:

"I can answer in one word—it is victory—victory at all costs in spite of all terrors."

He said, however, that there were "many, many long months of struggle and suffering" ahead, and that "blood, toil, tears and sweat" would be needed in a war by sea, land and air "against a monstrus tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime."

Both Mr. Churchill and the retiring Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain, whom Mr. Churchill made Lord President of the council in the new war Cabinet, were cheered as they entered the House.

Parliament, in recess for the Whitsuntide holidays and not scheduled to reconvene until May 21, was summoned to meet today following the week end Cabinet reorganization.

A Single Day's Session.

Mr. Churchill said that the House would adjourn after today's proceedings to May 21, the original date for its recall, with the usual provision for an earlier meeting if necessary.

In a seven-minute speech he recounted the formation of the War Cabinet and appointment of service ministers "in one single day on account of the extreme urgency and rigor of events."

He said his War Cabinet of five members, including opposition leaders, represented the unity of the nation.

Mr. Churchill said that he would submit a further list of ministers to King George tonight.

Mr. Churchill's War Secretary, Anthony Eden, told a questioner in the House that he hoped to make an early statement on "immediate formation of a voluntary corps composed of older men armed with rifles and Bren guns for instant action in any locality" in Britain in view "of the imminent danger of enemy parachutists landing in this country."

Promises of Unity.

Labor and Liberal spokesmen voiced the unity of the House and nation in approval of Mr. Churchill's administration.

Sir Percy Harris, Liberal, said that Mr. Churchill had the "necessary vigor and imagination for the task ahead."

Laborite H. B. Lees-Smith lauded the Prime Minister's "fighting and stirring and noble words which he has addressed to the nation" and said that Labor supported Churchill's motion.

30.24—2235

30.24—2235

The Independent Laborite, James Maxton, sounded a note of discord, saying he opposed the motion and did not approve of the reconstructed Government.

David Lloyd George, the world war Prime Minister, upheld the motion and offered his personal good wishes to his "old friend—the new Prime Minister."

A resolution by Lord Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, welcoming the new Government was greeted with cheers in the House of Lords.

Lord Halifax paid tribute to former Prime Minister Chamberlain's "sanity of outlook, his resource and tenacity of purpose," which still were at the nation's disposal, he noted.

Lloyd George's Tribute.

Mr. Lloyd George, congratulating the country on Mr. Churchill's elevation "at this very critical and terrible moment," lauded the Premier's "glittering intellectual gifts, dauntless courage and profound study of war, his experience in its operation and direction." He added with dramatic emphasis: "They will all be needed now."

His voice breaking with emotion, Mr. Lloyd George said: "Friends of freedom and human right throughout the world wish him Godspeed. . . . The sacrifices of Britain and her empire will be at his disposal."

Nazi Tactics Analyzed.

An authoritative informant said meanwhile that the main German attack on the lowlands was developing as expected into an effort to drive a wedge between the Belgian and Dutch armies.

There were many indications, not necessarily military, he said, that the Nazis "will stake almost everything in an attempt to win this war quickly."

Britons should not be disheartened when they hear of certain withdrawals and should not be unduly pessimistic, he said, emphasizing that reports for the next few days would be obscure, scattered, often inaccurate.

Information regarding parachutists in Rotterdam and The Hague, he said, was obscure and frequently contradictory.

R. A. F. Bombs Waalhaven.

The Air Ministry announced today a series of bombing attacks by the Royal Air Force in the night on the Waalhaven Airdrome near Rotterdam, which German forces occupied on their invasion of the Netherlands, lost on Saturday, and then recaptured.

Its announcement said:

"R. A. F. aircraft carried out a series of successful bombing attacks during the night against the airdrome at Waalhaven near Rotterdam, which had again changed hands yesterday and was being used as a base by the enemy."

More Appointments.

With three Laborites already holding important posts in his Cabinet, Mr. Churchill invited Ernest Bevin, general secretary of the powerful Transport Workers Union, to become the Minister of Labor and assist in the direction of a drive to turn out munitions and war planes on a vast scale.

Mr. Bevin was expected to accept the appointment after consulting with union executives, thereby following the lead of Herbert Morrison, another key Laborite, who yesterday became the Minister of Supply.

On them would devolve most of the task of stepping up the nation's war industries, which is generally acknowledged here to be imperative if victory is to be achieved.

The drive to step up the British war effort was accompanied by swift action to forestall any German attempt to invade England from the air with the aid of fifth column activity.

Acting on orders from the Home Office, Scotland Yard rounded up more than 3,000 Germans and Austrians living in twenty east coast counties and turned them over to the military authorities for internment in concentration camps.

Innocent Must Suffer.

The police said that a number of innocent aliens would undoubtedly have to suffer as a result of the roundup, but that the Government could not take a chance on missing any potential fifth columnists.

Every male alien between 16 and 60 years old living in coastal areas was ordered to report daily to the police. They were forbidden to use private motor vehicles or bicycles and must stay indoors from 8 P. M. to 6 A. M.

Mr. Morrison, the new Minister of Supply, was one of seven men designated by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday to supplement his five-member "war cabinet."

The others named:

Sir John Simon, veteran Chancellor of the Exchequer, to be Lord Chancellor (Speaker of the House of Lords) in place of Viscount Caldecote.

Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information in place of Sir John Reith.

Lord Lloyd, Colonial Secretary in place of Malcolm MacDonald, who is being mentioned for appointment as Food Minister.

Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer in place of Sir John Simon.

Sir John Anderson was reappointed Home Secretary and Sir Andrew Duncan was reappointed president of the Board of Trade.

The new appointees were sworn in formally before King George this morning at Buckingham Palace.

Some Posts Still Open.

Several places, such as Postmaster-General and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster remain to be filled.

The sweeping reconstruction of the Government, which brought the Laborite leaders into important Government posts and gave Mr. Churchill the greatest power ever accorded to a British Prime Minister, was generally well received by the press.

Newspapers characterized Mr. Churchill's appointment as a happy solution of the crisis which had forced Neville Chamberlain to resign as Prime Minister and predicted that the changes would put a new drive in the war effort.

Labor Approves Cabinet.

BOURNEMOUTH, May 13 (A. P.).—The Labor Party Conference voted overwhelming approval today of a mandate to join the National Government under Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

The delegates ratified the action already taken by Major Clement R. Attlee, the Laborite leader who has become Lord Privy Seal in the new Government, and Arthur Greenwood, Minister without Portfolio, by 2,413,000 to 170,000.

The vote was taken on a basis of members represented.

Text of Resolution.

The resolution presented by Major Attlee and adopted by the conference said:

"This conference indorses unanimously the decision of the national executive committee that the Labor party should take its share of responsibility as full partner in the new Government which, under a new Prime Minister, commands the confidence of the nation.

"This conference further pledges its support to the new Government in its effort to secure a swift victory and a just peace."

Before the vote, the conference went through a stormy session, with Mr. Greenwood at one point branding as a foul lie a suggestion that he and Attlee had been guilty of treachery.

"It would have been an act of treachery for our movement to stand aside," he said. "If we had shirked our responsibility now, the brand of cowardice would have been upon us."

Attlee, Laborite leader, is Lord Privy Seal in the new Government. He appealed for the approval, saying that there is no possibility of an appeal to the electors under present circumstances.

"I have no time for people who talk claptrap about an imperialist war," he said. "You have got to face the issue. Everything is at stake. We have done our utmost to try to divert the calamity of war, but aggression was allowed to march on."

the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

To form an administration of this scale and complexity is a serious undertaking in itself. But we are in the preliminary phase of one of the greatest battles in history. We are in action at many other points—in Norway and in Holland—and we have to be prepared in the Mediterranean. The air battle is continuing, and many preparations have to be made here at home.

In this crisis I think I may be pardoned if I do not address the House at any length today, and I hope that any of my friends and colleagues or former colleagues who are affected by the political reconstruction will make all allowances for any lack of ceremony with which it has been necessary to act.

Text of Churchill's Commons Speech

LONDON, May 13 (AP)—Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement to the House of Commons today:

On Friday evening last I received from His Majesty the mission to form a new administration.

It was the evident will of Parliament and the nation that this should be conceived on the broadest possible basis and that it should include all parties.

I have already completed the most important part of this task. A war cabinet has been formed of five members representing with Labor, Opposition and Liberals the unity of the nation.

It was necessary that this should be done in one single day on account of the extreme urgency and rigor of events. Other key positions were filled yesterday. I am submitting a further list to the King tonight. I hope to complete the appointment of principal Ministers during tomorrow.

The appointment of other Ministers usually takes a little longer. I trust when Parliament meets again this part of my task will be completed and that the administration will be complete in all respects.

Call in Public Interest

I considered it in the public interest to suggest to the Speaker that the House should be summoned today. At the end of today's proceedings, the adjournment of the House will be proposed until May 21 with provision for earlier meeting if need be. Business for that will be notified to M. P.'s at the earliest opportunity.

I now invite the House by a resolution to record its approval of the steps taken and declare its confidence in the new government. The resolution:

"That this House welcomes the formation of a government representing the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute

Months of Struggle Ahead

I say to the House as I said to Ministers who have joined this government, I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat. We have before us an ordeal of the most grievous kind. We have before us many, many months of struggle and suffering.

You ask, what is our policy? I say it is to wage war by land, sea and air. War with all our might and with all the strength God has given us, and to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime. That is our policy.

You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word. It is victory. Victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors—victory, however long and hard the road may be, for without victory there is no survival.

Let that be realized. No survival for the British Empire, no survival for all that the British Empire has stood for, no survival for the urge, the impulse of the ages, that mankind shall move forward toward his goal.

I take up my task in buoyancy and hope. I feel sure that our cause will not be suffered to fail among men.

I feel entitled at this juncture, at this time, to claim the aid of all and to say "come then, let us go forward together with our united strength."

Each Nazi Parachutist Shot May Mean 10 Dead Frenchmen

Berlin Says That Killings in Violation of International Law Will Bring Reprisals on Prisoners.

BERLIN, May 13 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today that in the future it would shoot ten captured French soldiers for every German parachute trooper shot by the French in violation of international law. Germany earlier had advised the Allies, through the diplomats of the United States, Sweden, Spain and Switzerland, that any evidence of dealing with German parachute soldiers in a manner "contrary to international law" would lead to reprisals at a ratio of 10 to 1.

The German communique said:

"The assertion of Herr Reynaud that German parachute troopers wore foreign uniforms or civilian clothes is a lie.

"Herr Reynaud is no soldier. He appears not to know that parachute battalions are regular formations of the German army set up in peace and trained for their particular task.

'Uniform is Known.'

"Their uniform is generally known and is adapted to the particular fighting manner of the parachute soldier. It is not to be confused either with civilian clothing or any kind of a foreign uniform.

"Should, nevertheless, Herr Reynaud seek an excuse to vent his hate on the brave parachute troopers, immediate reprisals against this breach of international law will be taken by German defense forces.

"In the future, for every German parachute soldier shot, ten captured French soldiers will be shot."

Nazis expressed resentment at communiques by Allied authorities speaking of "extermination" of German parachute troops. This language was regarded as a gross insult to the honor of the German soldier.

Text Not Made Public.

The German embassy in Washington delivered a note to the American State Department with a request that it be forwarded to the four governments representing the interests of the belligerents. The text of the note, it was said, would not be released until after the presentation takes place today.

A statement by Premier Paul Reynaud of France that German parachuters, under certain conditions, would be executed on the spot caused particular resentment in Berlin.

It was claimed that Reynaud sought to incite the civilian population to disregard the soldier status of the parachuters and open the door to "barbarous murder."

[French dispatches told of Nazi parachute troops disguised as peasants, as Low Country soldiers and even as clergymen. It was further announced that any such person caught in civilian clothes or in a French uniform would be summarily shot.]

Berlin military sources said the German parachute troops were normally uniformed in one-piece gray-green coverall suits, with baggy-ankled trousers like ski pants and high-cut black shoes instead of infantry knee boots.

They were described as wearing special helmets of light-weight metal, without the usual flanged edges and displaying the flying eagles of the German Air Force as insignia on both uniforms and helmets.

Premier Reynaud's assertion that the parachute troops wore foreign uniforms was declared untrue.

French Don't Relent.

PARIS, May 13 (A. P.).—A French spokesman said today that France had no intention of relenting in her decision to shoot all parachute troops descending in French territory and not wearing the regular German uniform. He termed Germany's threat of reprisal barbarism.

The French explained the threat to shoot German parachutists not in uniform meant those in civilian clothes or in garb that allows them to mix unnoticed with the French people. It was indicated that a uniform which is not at once distinguishable as such would not be considered a uniform.

Developments of the past few days left no doubt in French minds that the German parachute forces who drop behind the lines have become a major factor in modern warfare.

The Allies' answer to the grave use of these gunners from the skies is the creation of vigilante units and mop-up squads as a sort of interior militia.

The German daredevil exploits in Belgium and the Netherlands already have convinced the Allies that a counter-organization is necessary.

Some observers believed that this was Adolf Hitler's vaunted "new weapon," but all viewed it as the first big new element produced in the war.

Where 'Chute Troops are Valuable.

The parachute troops' principal value appeared to be to create confusion in the interior and to seize airdromes by surprise, holding them until troop transport planes could land.

Their use for sabotage also was recognized and the British were reported organizing special machine-gun motorcycle patrols to guard the homeland.

While varied dispatches told of parachute troops disguised as peasants, as Low Country soldiers, and even as clergymen, France announced that any such person caught in civilian clothes or in a French uniform would be summarily shot. All civilians were warned to watch for them.

One Dutch dispatch said parachute soldiers carried small wireless transmitters to signal front-line positions to the German main forces.

British Cite Ruthlessness

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—An authoritative British source said today that information regarding parachutists in Rotterdam and The Hague was obscure and frequently contradictory.

German parachutists, he said, all are very highly trained in offensive technique and "armed to the teeth."

He charged that they were chosen for ruthlessness and wore Allied uniforms, civilian clothes, police and postal uniforms and even women's dresses.

This source said the parachutists were very well informed about the localities in which they landed and instances were reported in the Netherlands of their going directly to addresses of German sympathizers.

Today Field Marshal William Ridell Birdwood suggested that Germany be warned that parachutists dressed in Allied uniforms would be shot. His suggestion was published in a letter to The Times of London, The United Press reports.

U. S. Opinion Favors Allies

WASHINGTON, May 13 (A. P.).—International law experts expressed the opinion today that the Allies would be within their rights in dealing harshly with German parachutists, although they did not concede any right to shoot those captured in German uniforms.

Experts here said that there was not the slightest doubt that the Allies had the right to execute German parachutists if they landed in civilian clothes or uniforms not their own and were taken prisoner.

But, they said, if they landed in their own uniforms and were taken prisoner they should be treated as prisoners of war.

It was suggested by some that to deal with parachutists the Allies might issue proclamations declaring all male citizens within strategic cities or at strategic points like railroads and canals members of a national home guard and authorizing them to shoot parachutists either as they came down or when on the ground.

Under international law a person in civilian clothes who fires on invading troops may, if captured by the enemy, be executed.

Experts here said, however, that the case was different with civilians who sought to prevent parachutists from damaging strategic points within their country or of occupying strategic centers.

Some jurists said they were inclined to think that the solution lay in not taking the parachutists prisoner unless the voluntarily surrendered.

BATTLE CONTINUES AT PORT OF NARVIK

Nazi Transports Reported Sunk Landing Troops.

STOCKHOLM, May 13 (A. P.).—The Norwegian Telegraph Agency reported today from "somewhere in Norway" that a German attempt to land troops to help the besieged garrison at Narvik had failed when several transport ships were sunk. No details were given.

BERLIN, May 13 (A. P.).—Germany today claimed success at the Norwegian ore port of Narvik, in the arctic.

"Off Narvik, where strengthened enemy fleet units appeared, a destroyer was seriously damaged by bombs and another destroyer was seriously damaged off Heemcsoy," said a communique.

"In central Norway, re-enforcements have been sent to German troops operating at Mosjoen and Mo. The group at Narvik stands in the defense fight against a far superior enemy force."

DNB, the official German news agency, also reported the capture of 300 prisoners, mostly British, by German forces in Norway in a fight at Mo, on the west coast between Narvik and Trondheim.

Registration Ordered.

OSLO, May 13 (A. P.).—All male Belgians and Hollanders between 18 and 60 years of age in German-held south Norway were ordered today by the Norwegian police to register.

As relief that the main war arena had shifted from Norway, on Sweden's border, became tinged with doubt over the security of Swedish neutrality, the Government yesterday ordered a total blackout indefinitely.

Swedish east coast lighthouses were darkened and, it was announced, a minefield has been sown in the Oresund Channel, which separates Sweden from Nazi-occupied Denmark, near Malmo.

BERLIN, May 13 (A. P.).—Reports of a German fleet moving through the Kiel Canal with Sweden as its objective were branded here officially today as "a stupid swindle—not a word of truth in it."

REFUGEES ON MOVE IN CARTS AND AFOOT

Village Priests Shepherd Belgians to Rear.

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—Long lines of Belgian refugees from Liege and Namur streamed through the streets of Brussels today seeking refuge in Flanders from German bombings, Reuters news agency (British) reported.

Carts with women and children and the aged sitting atop of hastily gathered possessions jammed the streets around the capital. Others, on foot, carried all their belongings in bundles on their backs. Many groups were led by the village priests.

Meanwhile today preparations were made to shelter the stream of refugees which began arriving in London yesterday from Belgium and Holland.

Twenty of London's twenty-eight boroughs were designated as reception centers and the Government took over the Wembley Sports Arena as a temporary shelter.

Plans were made to send some of the refugees to Northern Ireland if they arrive in numbers too great to handle in England.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 13 (A. P.).—The British Government today commandeered Ulster Hall, one of the city's largest buildings, to house Belgian and Dutch refugees.

SWEDEN ON ALERT FOR NAZI ATTACK

Measures Taken to Meet Surprise Onslaught.

STOCKHOLM, May 13 (A. P.).—Sweden kept anxious vigil today over sea and air approaches to her territory from German bases.

There were reports that German troop ships were passing through the Kiel Canal and rumors that a sudden air attack was feared.

Dutch Retire to Flood Lines

Army Chiefs Admit Strategic Retreats to Water-defended Positions.

AMSTERDAM, May 13 (A. P.).—The Dutch High Command admitted today that its forces were making strategic retreats under the pressure of heavy German attacks, but that they still held their water defense lines.

It announced that the Dutch forces in western Gelderland Province—below the Ijssel Meer (Zuider Zee)—were taking a stand behind their inundation line against a German force which has crossed the Ijssel river and "come into contact at some points" with Dutch forces.

It said that Dutch border troops had also withdrawn with "small losses to prepared defense positions in the northeastern provinces.

In the North, the Germans admittedly reached some points on the eastern shore of the Ijssel Meer.

In the south, the High Command said, German mechanized troops had penetrated to the Laangstraat region, which, roughly, is north of Tilburg and west of Shertogenbosch. Holland's great network of rivers, however, still is beyond the Nazis on this northward path toward Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

Fought Retarding Action.

The action in Gelderland province indicated that fighting had begun along the Grebbe water line—the first main water defense for the so-called stronghold of Holland, the most populous area which includes Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam north of the main rivers.

In the northern provinces, the Dutch border troops had fought a retarding action in a section of the country which Holland had never hoped to hold against an invader.

The Grebbe Line extends south from the Zuider Zee to the great rivers which cut through the middle of the Netherlands from east to west. It is backed up by many fortifications and forms a bulwark east of the main inundation defenses through Utrecht province.

Secured by Inundations.

The communique said:

"German troops which passed the Ijssel have come into contact at some points with our positions in the western part of Gelderland which are secured by inundations.

"In the northern provinces, German troops have reached locally the coast of the Ijessel Meer and of the Wadden Zee (between the mainland and the northern fringe of islands in the North Sea).

"Our border troops in this part of the country have withdrawn further, with small losses, and arrived within our positions.

"Mechanized German troops have reached the Laangstraat.

"In the southern part of Rotterdam there still are small, heavily armed (German) detachments but without artillery.

"Despite great German superiority in the air, our air force has bombed objectives important to the enemy with exceptional heroism."

Planes Over Amsterdam.

In sporadic air activity, two German Heinkel airplanes were reported shot down by the Dutch near Amsterdam while invading transports dropped more parachute troopers.

Amsterdam had three air raid alarms through early afternoon, but up to 1:25 P. M. (9:05 A. M., New York time) no bombs were dropped. The first of the alarms came at 4:30 A. M. (12:10 A. M.) and the two Heinkels were reported shot down at that time.

It was reported that the Germans dropped a number of parachute troops.

The Dutch Army had the situation quickly in hand, it was reported, and the city generally was quiet.

Dutch soldiers, meanwhile, cleaned up fifth-column snipers in the southern section of the city, where there was fighting in the night.

Withdrawn to new positions in central and southern Holland, a determined Dutch Army engaged the German invaders in heavy fighting along a redrawn front, meanwhile with 20,000 British troops bolstering their central positions and French re-enforcements in contact with the Nazis in the south.

At the same time the Dutch High Command announced that the army was "completely master of the situation" in the interior. Enemy parachute troops were virtually cleared out of Rotterdam, where they still held Waalhaven Airport but were unable to use it because of heavy Dutch artillery fire. Elsewhere they were reported wiped out or "rendered harmless."

Strenuous measures were put into effect throughout the country to guard against any further uprisings by traitorous Fifth Columnists.

Civilians in The Hague, the seat of the Government, were ordered to keep their doors and windows closed, and the assembly of three or more persons in the streets was forbidden.

Curfew was already in effect in The Hague. A new order from the commander of the army in the field banned civilians from the streets between 8 P. M. and 8 A. M. in all areas east of a line running from Amsterdam south to the Belgian-border town of Zundert, and in the entire province of North Brabant, which borders on Belgium.

Nazi Gains Admitted.

The Dutch admitted that the Germans had pushed their advance across the Maas (Meuse) and Ijssel rivers at several points. But an early morning communique from the High Command said that:

The Dutch border troops were withdrawn "virtually without damage."

Dutch aircraft bombarded the Nazi columns.

French troops coming to the relief of the Dutch army of 400,000 men engaged the enemy in the eastern part of North Brabant, where the Maas River runs north just inside the German border.

British troops were reported occupying land and flood-water defense posts in central Holland.

The Dutch also withdrew in the northern provinces, where there are no defense lines, but this was no more than had been expected, since the Netherlands defense plans were built around the idea that the main stand would have to be taken behind the flooded central regions which form the chief line of defense.

[The German High Command said that the Nazi advance had pierced the defense line between Amersfoort and Rhenen, about thirty-five miles southeast of Amsterdam, and in the north had crossed through Groningen and Friesland to Harlingen, just north of the dike dam spanning the Ijssel Meer, or Zuider Zee.

Rotterdam Nearly Cleared.

The retreat in the north also was effective in retarding the progress of the Hitler blitzkrieg columns, the Dutch High Command said.

Saying that the clearing of Rotterdam has now been nearly brought to an end, the communique said:

"The airfield at Waalhaven has been heavily shelled by our artillery and in consequence has now lost all importance for the enemy."

Other parachute troops landed at only a few points in the interior, it announced, adding: "But these have been rendered harmless. Some Germans who landed the first day of the war are wandering about and are being chased and annihilated.

"Some of them seized a few buses and took along Dutch citizens. These Germans were rendered harmless by our armored cars.

"It seems that German troops in Holland are not able to fight without being shielded by Dutch soldiers or civilians."

The latest attempted putsch by fifth-columnists occurred in Amsterdam last night, where Dutch soldiers were fired on from windows, but the army soon got control of the situation.

Quiet in the Hague.

There was no further outbreak in The Hague, where on Saturday night Dutch Nazis were driven back to their headquarters and then shelled by an armored car until the survivors surrendered.

It was announced that similar steps would be taken against every house from which shots were fired "against the Dutch people."

Amsterdam's 800,000 residents were kept under rigid scrutiny.

Policemen and soldiers conducted a house-to-house search in which hundreds of persons were rounded up. Heavy guards were placed on all public buildings, and identification papers were demanded at pistol-point. All internal communications were halted, and a call was issued for additional volunteers for the city militia, which does auxiliary guard duty.

Radio broadcasts advised the people that the air raid siren system had been sabotaged, and could not be relied on.

German Rhine line was cut off after an attack on a freight train near Istein by a French warplane Saturday.

The new raid and shelling of the southern side of the bridge of Istein Rock, which the German railroad pierces in a double-track tunnel, severed Germany's direct connection with Basel.

Istein is about five miles north of the Swiss border.

Heavy German troop concentrations were noted by observers from north of Basel, where Switzerland, France and Germany come together, 30 miles east to Waldshut.

Further troop movements were reported east to Lake Constance.

The Swiss have their Winkelried Line from Basel to the Austrian frontier manned with elite troops backed by fully mobilized reserve forces.

Following the Swiss neutrality plan many reserve troops also are posted along the French frontier.

P.).—The alert little Swiss air force, equipped with the latest model German, French and Swiss-made fighting planes, patrolled the frontier today with orders to shoot down any belligerent flyers over Swiss soil who ignored a first warning.

A foreign bombing plane was chased and hit by machine-gun fire and forced to land "on territory of its own country," the Swiss press reported. Dispatches did not say what country.

Intensified aerial vigilance followed upon reports yesterday of large-scale troop movements in Germany, north of Switzerland's frontier.

The nation stood on a war footing, with between 500,000 and 600,000 citizen soldiers mobilized. Even Boy Scouts and aged women were posted in rear positions.

Every able-bodied citizen between the ages of 20 and 60 was called to arms.

A German bomber was reported pierced with bullets from Swiss fighters two days ago after it ignored warnings from the Swiss side of the Rhine River. It made a forced landing just across the river boundary north of Basle.

The Swiss High Command's decision to act against frontier violations by belligerent planes followed upon the bombing of the Delemont region by a German plane which had apparently lost its way May 10.

Another reason cited for the decision was increasing fear that the many frontier violations by German planes south of the Rhine might be intentional flights of observation planes.

NAZIS HOLD ALLIED ENVOYS HOSTAGES

Will Release Them When Own Diplomats Return.

BASLE, Switzerland, May 13 (A. P.).—Staff members of the Belgian embassy and the Dutch legation in Berlin, who were expected to enter Switzerland this morning from Germany, were delayed on the German side of the frontier pending the arrival in neutral Switzerland of German diplomatic officials from Belgium and the Netherlands.

Eighty Dutch diplomats and consular officers sat in a special train somewhere across the border from Schaffhausen today, waiting for the Dutch military authorities to find means of sending 200 German staff members through France to Switzerland.

A party of fifty Belgian officials waited in Germany near Lake Constance, within sight of Switzerland, for similar reciprocal arrangements to be made for German diplomats in Belgium.

Geneva quarters reported that a dozen Dutch and Belgian officials of the League of Nations had resigned and offered their services to their respective military authorities.

These included Andre Peut, executive director of the league information section, and several men on the disarmament section.

Cudahy Confers With Red Cross on Problems of Relief and Food.

BRUSSELS, May 13 (A. P.).—Belgian, British and French troops fought side by side today against German motorized forces which, according to the Belgian High Command, "delivered new attacks against all our positions."

The Belgians, apparently, have taken a better grip on themselves with the Allies' support and, it is said here, the campaign is far from over.

Experienced observers predicted that the next few days will tell the story.

Earlier today refugees streamed out of this tense capital as the troops, entrenched in second line positions, battled fiercely to stem a German drive, which penetrated the Albert Canal defenses yesterday and carried to a point forty-five miles east of the city.

The Government itself was prepared for flight if necessary, but officials said the situation at the front appeared "stabilized" and that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

Cudahy Takes Up Refugee Problem.

The refugees streamed west and south, some on foot, some on bicycles and some in automobiles. All carried small packs containing food and their most treasured possessions.

The United States Ambassador, John Cudahy, said he was conferring with the Belgian Red Cross. The feeding and housing of war refugees is already a tremendous job and funds are needed, he said.

The American embassy was an oasis of calm in this troubled capital. Members of its staff declared that they had no intention of moving.

Text of Communique.

The Belgian communique said:

"Engagements took place at diverse points during the night. Our troops maintained their positions everywhere.

"Early on Monday, enemy motorized forces delivered new attacks against all our positions.

"Belgian troops are fighting in close liaison with French and British forces."

Premier Hubert Pierlot said that the German push had been halted near Waremme, about twenty miles southwest of the Dutch border at Maastricht, through which the Nazis advanced to strike at the Belgian frontier.

The Germans were reported to have breached the Albert Canal defenses on a five-and-a-half-mile front, driving a salient into the Belgian lines just north of the historic fortified city of Liege.

Threaten Flank of Liege.

The spearhead of the Nazi thrust extended thirteen miles west of Liege, thus threatening the flank of the ancient city—which fell to the Germans twenty-six years ago after three days of bitter fighting.

M. Pierlot said that the Liege forts had successfully fought off heavy frontal attacks, and it appeared that except for the break at Maastricht the Belgians were still holding the Albert Canal line.

A Belgian communique said that the Germans had attempted to cross the canal by means of boats at one point but had been beaten back by heavy fire.

The communique disclosed that French troops are now fighting beside their new Belgian allies in the front lines.

"A French counter-attack against enemy motorized units was successful," it said. "A great number of enemy tanks were destroyed."

Roads leading north from the French border were choked with Allied troops moving up to the front, and the Government maintained strict supervision over the civilian exodus from Brussels to prevent its interfering with the movement of these re-enforcements.

The capital, already attacked from the air half a dozen times, was subjected to numerous air raid alarms yesterday.

In Louvain and Antwerp, which also have been bombed, the sirens screamed frequent warnings.

Behind the lines Belgian troops were kept busy mopping up German parachute troops which were dropped in widely scattered areas over the week end.

Nazi Flyers Pay Heavy Toll.

German aerial activity was heavy, and troop concentrations and lines of communication were subjected to a heavy rain of bombs.

It was officially estimated that twenty Nazi planes had been shot down over Belgian territory yesterday, and at least 100 on Saturday.

The Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak told correspondents that while the situation was serious the Government was not discouraged and that morale remained high.

The faces of the civilian population in Brussels, however, reflected the general feeling of anxiety as scattered reports filtered back from the front.

It was obvious that the developments of the last few days had awakened memories of the last war, when the Germans entered Brussels just sixteen days after first crossing the Belgian frontier. Not until three months later was the impetus of this drive halted by French and British troops after it had carried dangerously near Paris.

Blows Up Bridge.

Premier Pierlot said that the Germans effected their first crossing of the Albert Canal on Saturday opposite Maastricht, which is about fifteen miles north of Liege.

He said that the officer in charge of this sector was killed by an aerial bomb before he was able to carry out orders to destroy two bridges across the canal. The second in command hesitated to execute the assignment, and in the interval German motorized units poured across the waterway, gaining a foothold from which they were able to break through the Belgian defenses.

Later, M. Pierlot said, a Belgian officer made a suicide dash through the German lines and blew up one of the bridges.

The German drive westward through the breach in the Albert Canal defenses was supported by "an enormous mass of tanks and aircraft," M. Pierlot said.

Wounded Crowd Railway Stations.

Despite "fierce resistance," the Premier declared, the Nazi column pushed through Tongeren (Tongres) and reached a point near Waremme before being halted.

Waremme is about forty miles west of the Belgian-German frontier. To reach this point, however, the Germans actually traveled less than twenty miles across Belgian territory. For they began their advance from the Dutch "appendix" province of South Limburg, which juts into the northeast corner of Belgium.

Heavy fighting was reported continuing in the southern Belgian province of Luxemburg, near the French frontier, where strong German forces attacked east of the Mass (Meuse) River. Premier Pierlot said that Belgian troops had made strategic withdrawals at several points in this area.

The Belgian High Command made no estimate of losses, but the Brussels railway stations were crowded with wounded, and it was conceded that casualties were heavy.

The German Ambassador and his staff left the capital for Berlin on Saturday night.

A Nazi plane believed equipped with cameras flew low last week over the Saint Gallen region, where some of the newest forts of the Swiss Winkelried Line are. It was finally driven off by the fire of Swiss fighters.

Basle, whose citizens are within rifle shot of both the German West Wall and the French Maginot forts, has been hit hardest by the new war. Hundreds of families, including many Jews, have left the city for the interior of Switzerland.

Business at Basle is almost at a standstill due to mobilization and retirement of residents to other cities. No official withdrawal order, however, has yet been issued.

R. A. F. ATTACKS WAALHAVEN

Flyers Say They Set Fires and Pitted Field.

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today that British warships had bombarded German parachute troops who landed on the north coast of the Lowland countries.

The Admiralty's communique said:

"Since the German invasion of Holland and Belgium began, strong naval forces have been operating continuously off the coast of these two countries in spite of reported bombing attacks having been made on them.

"Allied operations on land have been supported. Enemy troops landing from the air on airdromes and beaches have been bombarded. Refugees have been evacuated from the war area and brought to this country."

MAY 14 1940

R. A. F. Bombs Waalhaven.

The Air Ministry announced today a series of bombing attacks by the Royal Air Force in the night on the Waalhaven Airdrome near Rotterdam, which German forces occupied on their invasion of the Netherlands, lost on Saturday, and then recaptured.

Its announcement said:

"R. A. F. aircraft carried out a series of successful bombing attacks during the night against the airdrome at Waalhaven near Rotterdam, which had again changed hands yesterday and was being used as a base by the enemy."

An Air Ministry statement said the bombing was pushed for twenty minutes by Beauforts, "the latest and best of British light, long-ranged bombers."

Say Flyers Saw Fires.

Returning personnel of the British squadron, the statement said, had seen the glare of many fresh fires they had started in the airdrome buildings. They asserted other bombs pitted the landing field.

The statement reported that a flight of coastal command Blenheims on patrol had beaten off a number of Heinkels and Junkers dive-bombing at an ammunition vessel in Flushing harbor in the Netherlands.

An authoritative informant said meanwhile that the main German attack on the lowlands was developing as expected into an effort to drive a wedge between the Belgian and Dutch armies.

There were many indications, not necessarily military, he said, that the Nazis "will stake almost everything in an attempt to win this war quickly."

Britons should not be disheartened when they hear of certain withdrawals and should not be unduly pessimistic, he said, emphasizing that reports for the next few days would be obscure, scarce and often inaccurate.

Information regarding parachutists in Rotterdam and The Hague, he said, was obscure and frequently contradictory.

British flyers reported that they saw many parachutes that had been abandoned by the Germans and the wreckage of burned planes at Rotterdam and the Hague.

An informant said that German planes destroyed in air combats, by anti-aircraft and on the ground were believed to exceed 200. The number included a number of Messerschmitt fighters shot down by the Royal Air force, he said.

He denied there was any truth in a German claim that twenty British Spitfires had been shot down, saying only that one of that type had been damaged.

[German claims were widened today in a report of DNB, official German news agency, that thirty-six Spitfires had been shot down in the Netherlands this morning.]

Dutch Queen Flees to England

Stories of Fifth Column Kidnaping Plots Drive Royalty From Holland.

LONDON, May 13 (A. P.).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands came to London tonight as a refugee from her war-stricken country and was met at Liverpool station by King George, who welcomed her to England.

She came only a few hours after the arrival of Crown Princess Juliana, heir to the Dutch throne; Prince Consort Bernhard and their two small daughters.

The Queen came to England aboard a British warship amid reports of fifth column plots to kidnap the royal family.

Juliana and Bernhard also were at the station. A royal car took the party to Buckingham Palace.

Queen Carries Gas Mask.

The fifty-nine-year-old Queen was wearing a navy blue coat and skirt with a dark blue hat and carried a gas mask over one shoulder.

King George, in the uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet, walked across a roped-off space on the station platform, clasped the Queen's hand and kissed her on both cheeks.

Princess Juliana led her two-year-old daughter, Beatrix, by the hand, while the nine-month-old Irene was brought in a gas-proof box.

Prince Bernhard carried one end of the box and a nurse the other.

The Earl of Harewood, brother-in-law of King George VI, met the royal family at the station.

They established their residence at the home of a former Dutch Minister to London.

The Crown Princess and her consort lunched with King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in Buckingham Palace.

Communique Issued.

A communique issued by the Foreign Office, with authority from the Dutch legation, stated that "Her Royal Highness Princess Juliana of the Netherlands arrived in London today, accompanied by the two young princesses, Beatrix and Irene.

"People of the Netherlands will be very happy to learn that their beloved Princess is in safety. It is, of course, of paramount importance even if the worst should happen (for which fortunately there is no indication atp resent) that the Royal House of Orange-Nassau should be safe.

"Prince Bernhard has accompanied the Princess and their daughters to London with the intention of resuming his duties as aid-de-camp to the Queen as soon as at all possible."

The name "Irene," signifying "peace," was chosen by Bernhard and Juliana for their infant daughter born within a month of the outbreak of the current European war because, Bernhard said at the baptism, "Peace has such great importance for all in the present times."

American Finds Belgium Swept By Hurricane of Aerial War

Witness Describes British Armored Cars and Tanks Moving Forward Under Terrific Bombing.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM, May 12 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Allied troops, ready for a storm, found themselves in the path of a hurricane today.

MAY 14 1940

As tanks and armored cars of the British threw their first fire into the advancing Germans, there was no doubt that the first great battle of this war had begun.

Informed spokesmen told me that the Germans had two armored divisions in the van of the attack; synchronized with a terrific bombing.

The hurricane rides on the wings of the German Air Force.

Despite serious losses in the Netherlands, Belgium and France—placed by some in the neighborhood of 200 planes—the German flyers are still hammering at their objectives.

A new front was established by landings of German parachute troops behind the Allied lines.

As I write, this dingy hotel shakes with the thud of bombs falling outside the town and with the deep "twung twung" of anti-aircraft batteries.

I have been on the Continent for just thirty-six hours, but I have heard sirens scream the "alerte" eleven times, have seen six Nazi bombers methodically lay their eggs, have watched two fall burning to earth and have seen scars of their operations.

A railway which the Germans bombed at dawn was uncut. A French observer counted eighteen craters, but said proudly: "They are hurried, those devils, look . . ."

Sure enough, there was a train chugging steadily along the tracks.

As I traveled nearly 300 miles over this little nation—just a bit smaller than the State of Maryland—I saw grim evidence of what total war means.

There was two-day traffic on the roads. Moving toward the distant sound of guns were British men, materials and munitions in trucks, widely spaced to offer unattractive bombing targets.

Moving painfully away from the guns was another army—the army of the homeless and stricken. Refugees went slowly through the thick white dust toward the safety that may lie behind the lines.

The rich rode in cars. The poor rode huddled in trucks, on burdened bicycles or walked.

Their voices haunt you:

"We knew nothing. Friday morning there came the explosion. Our windows broke. The little boy across the street—so bright a little boy—is dead. So we left."

"Those Germans. Four years of them we had when I was middle-aged. Now we go. No one can hold them."

ITALY STIFFENS POSITIONS ON FRENCH BORDER

MAY 14 1940

Calls Up Additional Troops as Demonstrators Cry Against the British.

ALLIED EMBASSIES GUARDED

2000 Trucks Commandeered in Capital Alone as Army Moves Men.

ROME, May 13 (A. P.).—In the midst of a rising anti-Allied campaign, Italy busily re-enforced her Littorio line of fortified positions along the western Alpine frontier facing France today and, according to Italian spokesmen, called out additional reservists to re-enforce her army of 1,250,000 men.

Anti-British demonstrations were reported tonight to have occurred in many Italian cities over the week end.

Crowds of students marched at Bologna, Forli, Bari, Florence, Velletri, Naples, Salerno, Aquila and Palmero.

In Bologna, hundreds of students tramped through the streets, waving flags and cheering the King, Premier Mussolini and Italian military leaders.

"Down with England!" they shouted.

At Forli, Mussolini's boyhood home, a well-organized group of thousands of schoolboys and Fascist flying cadets staged a similar demonstration.

Englishwoman Mauled.

Rough handling of an English woman tourist was reported to the British Embassy.

The victim, Miss Leontia O'Bierne, was said to have been thrust from a street car yesterday noon and mauled and twisted by the arm after she had torn an anti-British propaganda leaflet to pieces.

Miss O'Bierne was returning from a visit to the Church of Saint Paul outside the walls when one of the leaflets forecasting the defeat of Britain and France was thrust into her hand.

There were two major expressions of anti-Allied sentiment, one a series of student demonstrations that brought out 500 soldiers and police to protect the British and French embassies, the other continued propaganda against Anglo-French control over shipping in the Mediterranean.

Army Commandeers Trucks.

Troops and policemen prevented the student demonstration from reaching the two embassies. Students who had marched through the streets with an Italian flag dispersed after shouting, spectators said, for war.

No confirmation of the call for fresh reservists was available in authoritative quarters, on the ground that it was military information. But one informed spokesman said that the figure of 1,000,000 men published abroad was probably exaggerated.

The Italian authorities resumed the requisitioning of trucks for the second time since the outbreak of the war last September.

A reliable informant said that 2,000 trucks were requisitioned in Rome alone.

Authorities at the Scottish and English theological seminaries denied a report heard in church circles that the schools were closing. They said, however, that they were awaiting the advice of the British Consulate.

The Belgian seminary also is still open.

Italian units protecting the British and French embassies were estimated to total more than 500. Most of them were in the streets around the French embassy. Others have re-enforced the guard at the British embassy.

Most of the guards stood in doorways and courtyards out of sight but within call.

Newspapers Restrained.

Fascist newspapers refrained today from raising the possibility of war with the Allies over the vexations of contraband control in the Mediterranean as part of the blockade against Germany. The Italian press warned Great Britain and France, however, that they were playing a "dangerous game."

Il Popolo di Roma asserted that Italy would not be inclined to accept "certain arrogance nor are we a people to leave unsettled accounts running around."

"If we have marauders to deal with," the paper concluded by saying, "it is well to know right now that we have means and methods to reply fully with their methods."

Il Popolo described the contraband control as "piracy worthy only of the filibusters of Queen Elizabeth" with the "primary aim of damaging or, more exactly, hindering our shipping by every means." The paper said there was indignation throughout Italy at the "hatefulness of the blockade."

MAY 14 1940

The newspaper Tevere published a half-page cartoon showing Britain and France holding up ships at pistol point at Gibraltar, entitled "The Underworld in the Mediterranean." The sub-caption was "the Champions of Right and Legality at Work."

In one part of Rome "Down with England" slogans were painted on the walls during the night.

The British legation to the Holy See, as well as authorities at the Vatican, were reliably reported to have advised the English and Scottish students that it would be prudent for them to go home.

Infantry, carabinieri and mounted policemen, in doorways, courtyards and streets prevented groups of students from reaching the British and French embassies. It was reported that Italian students had been let off from their classes for what was planned to be a large demonstration.

Extremist Fascist quarters continued their criticism of the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano, and Premier Mussolini today indorsed an edition of the works of the pre-Fascist writer Alfredo Oriani which had just been placed on the Index of Forbidden Books by the Vatican.

Mussolini was reported to have told Ogo Oriani, son of the writhat he might visit Oriani's tomb, making the visit an occasion for a mass meeting of the Blackshirts.

30.24-2239

30.24-2239

There was an unconfirmed report that the sale of foreign newspapers, including Osservatore Romano, was to be prohibited in Rome.

Premier Mussolini ordered further improvement of the Littorio Line in a busy Sunday during which he conferred with high officers of the army, including those who command zones on the French border, on "military questions concerning their armies," as an official announcement phrased it.

The Littorio Line takes its name from the Lictors, guards who preceded the magistrates of ancient Rome and bore the symbolic fasces from which the modern Fascist emblem derives. Details of the fortifications have been kept secret, but they are believed to extend through the Brenner Pass and along the border with Germany as well as the French frontier.

Next Move a Mystery.

Il Duce also found time yesterday to pilot his own bombing plane for two hours over the coast near Rome and out to sea to survey shipping, which he considers unjustly hampered.

Whether Italy actually intends doing anything soon about stopping the search of its merchantmen by Allied warships and at Gibraltar and the Suez is not known. In this connection, the liner Rex, which is due at Gibraltar this week from New York, was being watched closely for a possible clew.

However, lacking unusual signs of military preparations, neutral observers held the opinion that the Italians would refrain from creating an incident.

There were street outbursts among Italians yesterday and last night, and differences of Italian opinion about the German entrance into Belgium and the Netherlands were widely reported. One woman who defaced an anti-British poster in Rome last night was roughly handled by a crowd, bystanders related, as ardent Fascists made clear their displeasure with Great Britain.

In several instances, copies of L'Osservatore Romano, which contained Pope Pius's expressions of support for the rulers of Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg, were torn from readers' hands by blackshirted Fascists.

Onlookers said that one reader was ducked in a fountain.

Students seized copies of the Vatican City paper from some railway news stands.

Out of all this, the general belief in neutral quarters was that Italy was not yet ready to enter the war but was willing to try to help the armies of her friend, Germany, by trying to disconcert or divert the attention of the British and French.

A previous anti-British campaign, these observers said, came in the midst of the war in Norway and succeeded to the extent of luring portions of the Allied fleets to the Mediterranean just before the Germans swung into the Low Countries.

Yugoslavs Watch Italian Fleet.

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia, May 13 (A. P.).—Yugoslavia's air force kept vigilance today over the movements of Italian warships in the Adriatic Sea.

The authorities pushed their defense precautions meanwhile, ordering householders along the coast to dig trenches in their gardens and prepare cellar air-raid shelters.

Belgrade Admittedly Fearful.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 13 (A. P.).—A high Yugoslav spokesman reported today that "all security measures," including the putting of 700,000 troops on a war footing, had been taken in Yugoslavia to guard against the possible entrance of Italy into the European conflict.

This spokesman asserted that the anti-British demonstrations yesterday and today in Italy "confirmed" the fears of the Belgrade Government that Italy would fight on the side of Germany if she entered the war.

He said that in this event both Yugoslavia and Greece were in immediate danger of Fascist invasion.

surprise and despite heavy defense measures, a thousand Belgians were taken prisoner."

Guesses in Berlin

It was known that Eben Emael fortress bristled with light and heavy guns, as well as anti-aircraft batteries. It stands, a high-walled block of masonry, at the juncture of the Maas (Meuse) river and the Albert Canal, on the Dutch-Belgian border near Maastricht.

The guesses in Berlin as to the nature of the new weapon ran the range of fancy. Some suggested it might be a new, unchallengeable flame-thrower; others a strange device to render guns or ammunition impotent, and still others, a mystery bomb which the Germans are credited with having used in Barcelona, capable of blasting whole city blocks.

Maginot Key Seen.

(Neutral military attaches at Bern, Switzerland, expressed belief the new weapon is a "nerve gas" which penetrates ordinary gas masks and temporarily disrupts muscular coordination.)

Germans discussed the possibilities of effective use of the new weapon against the Maginot line.

"The fundamental question of whether the attack on such works as the Maginot Line is possible may have received a positive answer with the capture of Eben Emael," said Dienst Aus Deutschland, a news commentary which is close to the Foreign Office.

Difference Pointed Out

The commentary said that guesswork abroad about the new weapon was "entirely justified because the swift fall of this modern fort furnishes proof that it might be possible any time for the German Army to conquer the Maginot Line defenses which are not so modern in their development."

It was said that Eben Emael was built closely after the French pattern. (It is to be noted, however, that the French forts are subterranean, equipped with elaborate ventilating and air-conditioning systems.)

New Nazi Weapon, Nerve Gas?

Military Attaches to Switzerland Appraise Such Data as They Can Gather.

BERNE, Switzerland, May 13 (A. P.).—A "nerve gas" which penetrates ordinary gas masks and renders its victims helpless and unable to co-ordinate their muscles may be the "surprise weapon" which enabled the Germans to capture Fort Eben Emael and thus drive an opening wedge into the Belgian defense lines.

That belief was expressed today by neutral military attaches to Switzerland, through whose hands passes a great deal of the war's military information.

They said that a gas of this type had been developed in Germany and studied in other countries in recent months, and that soldiers inhaling it would be overcome by lassitude and would stagger and fall.

The military experts explained that the gas, said to leave no ill after-effects, to be almost impossible to detect but to smell faintly like geraniums, would be effective against the Belgian garrison at Fort Eben Emael because they were equipped only with standard army filter masks.

They added that such a gas would undoubtedly be more effective in this type of fort than in the better ventilated fortifications, such as those in the French Maginot Line.

They also indicated that the Allies might be studying defense against this weapon, apparently capable of incapacitating entire garrisons. They reported that Allied and Belgian authorities were studying gas masks carried by German soldiers who were taken prisoners.

A Hint From Scientists Here.

Howard Blakeslee, Associated Press science editor, reports that the American Chemical Society at a meeting two years ago suggested that liquid acetyl choline, if it came in contact with a wound or break in the skin, would make a soldier unconscious for as long as an hour. It was not suggested, however, how the chemical, which appears naturally in the human body in extremely small amounts, might be adapted to causing unconsciousness through inhalation.

Mr. Blakeslee says the function of acetyl choline is not fully known, but that it plays a part in the nerves' work of transmitting impulses to the muscles, and that a few drops placed on a scratch in the skin cause unconsciousness within a few moments.

Such an application, however, leaves no bad after effects.

American military gas experts, he says, have discussed the use of gas in the present war from the viewpoint that variations in some of the gases used in the old war, rather than any totally new product, would produce a "surprise weapon." The surprise element involved would lie in the ability of the newly developed gas to penetrate all present-day types of masks.

Case of Blue Cross Gas.

In this connection American gas officers recall an accidental discovery made during the world war concerning blue cross gas, which made men ill, but which could be guarded against by wearing a gas mask.

A British soldier, in the spring of 1918, entered his dugout and dropped some blue cross out of a vial onto the top of a hot stove. His comrades, as he had expected, quickly donned their masks. That was all the practical joker had been striving for.

But he got much more. Blue cross is a finely divided powder, and the particles could be stopped by the fine mesh of the soldiers' gas masks. But dropping blue cross onto the hot stove caused it to explode into much finer particles, and these penetrated the masks with the result that the Tommy's comrades became ill and had to take off their masks.

The accidental discovery was followed up and confirmed by scientific investigation.

As a result, the British Army authorities were said to be preparing blue cross to be fired in shells which would explode with greater heat and thus penetrate all masks then in use. They had protected their own men with new masks equipped with a finer mesh. The war ended before the British were ready to test their discovery.

Direct nerve poisons are included among the standard gases. They affect the heart action and nerve reflexes or interfere with absorption and assimilation of oxygen in the body after the blood picks it up from the lungs.

Two listed in the United States Handbook of Chemical Warfare are hydrocyanic acid and carbon monoxide. Both were classified in the 1931 edition as not considered at present for offensive use in war.

Secret Weapon---Key To Maginot?

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 13—In the Nazi assault on Eben Emael fortress, one of the strongest in the Liege-Albert canal defense zone, that Germany tried out her secret weapon, or Angriffsmittel. The fortress fell, 1,000 Belgians laying down their arms, it was reported.

Little of a concrete nature was known of the weapon—save that it had been used by a handful of airmen, if official news agency reports were interpreted correctly.

Plane Lands Inside Fort.

DNB, official news agency, indicated that a Lieutenant Witzig sat a plane down within the fortress, an area perhaps 600 to 800 yards in diameter, and by using the "Angriffsmittel" made the fort an easy mark for a column attacking from the north.

"Lieutenant Witzig steered his machine into the center of the fort area," said DNB. "After immeasurable

The Texts of the Day's War Communiques

German

BERLIN, May 13 (AP)—Today's high command communiqué issued from Chancellor Hitler's headquarters with his army, said:

The attack of German forces in the West made good progress on May 12.

In Holland, German troops are moving forward west of the South Willem Canal. They have established contact with troops landed by air around Rotterdam.

In Belgium, the crossing of the Albert Canal was forced northwest of Hasselt. Our troops are moving forward west of Liége and north of the Meuse and have broken into the city of Liége.

The German flag has waved on the citadel since the forenoon of May 13 while individual outer forts still resist.

French troops have been thrown west of the Ourthe River and in Southern Belgium. Our troops are there in a fluid advance and are beginning to approach the goal set up.

South and southeastward from Zweibruecken [on the Westwall-Maginot Line Front] our positions were moved forward and several hundred prisoners were taken. The advance of our army was supported effectively by the air force with attacks on troop concentrations, march columns and railroads.

The air force continues its great battle for air superiority over the western area of operations with noticeable success. In all, on May 12, 320 planes were destroyed, among them 58 in air fights, 72 by anti-aircraft fire and the rest on the ground. Twenty-five planes were fought down during a British attack at Maastricht by anti-aircraft fire. A single air squadron succeeded in shooting down sixteen.

Our own losses, compared with the enemy's and measured by our successes, were slight again yesterday. They consisted of thirty-one planes.

The enemy also suffered heavy damage at sea.

Off the Dutch coast, a cruiser was heavily damaged by bomb hits. One cruiser of the Southampton class [British] as well as a transport of 15,000 tons were sunk and seven more supply ships were hit and set afire.

Off Narvik, where strengthened enemy fleet units appeared, a destroyer was seriously damaged by bombs and another destroyer was seriously damaged.

In Central Norway, reinforcements have been sent to certain troops operating at Mosjoeen and Mo. Our forces at Narvik are defending their positions against far superior enemy forces.

Another High Command communiqué stated:

The assertion of Herr Reynaud [French Premier] that German parachute troopers wore foreign uniforms or civilian clothes is a lie.

Herr Reynaud is no soldier. He appears not to know that parachute battalions are regular formations of the German Army set up in peace and trained for their particular task.

Their uniform is generally known and is adapted to the particular fighting manner of the parachute soldier. It is not to be confused either with civilian clothing or any kind of foreign uniform.

Should, nevertheless, Herr Reynaud seek an excuse to vent his hate on the brave parachute troopers, immediate reprisals against this breach of international law will be taken by German defense forces.

In the future, for every German parachute soldier shot, ten captured French soldiers will be shot.

Belgian

BRUSSELS, May 13 (AP)—A Belgian High Command communiqué today said:

Engagements took place at diverse points during the night. Our troops maintained their positions everywhere.

Early Monday, enemy motorized forces delivered new attacks against all our positions.

Belgian troops are fighting in close liasion with French and British forces.

A communiqué issued by the High Command tonight added:

Throughout the day our troops fought severe combats. Everywhere they put up stiff resistance to the enemy.

A village that had fallen in the hands of the enemy has been reoccupied after a counter-attack by Belgian units supported by tanks.

During the operations of the last few days, certain infantry units, cyclists, chasseurs in the Ardennes [Forest] and light motorized troops have particularly distinguished themselves, having fulfilled their mission with courage and bravery.

The crew of a Belgian airplane shot down in territory occupied by the enemy succeeded in regaining their posts after crossing the German lines.

PARIS, May 13 (AP)—The High Command communiqué issued early today follows:

In Holland and Belgium the enemy attack redoubled in violence, particularly in the region situated north of the Albert Canal, between this canal and the Lower Rhine, as well as in the region southeast of Tirlemont and in the Belgian Ardennes.

On the Luxembourg frontier from Longwy to the Moselle River there was no appreciable change in spite of intense bombardment. Farther east, there is nothing to report.

At the close of the day and during the night German columns were bombarded and machine-gunned by our aviation. Twelve German planes were brought down in the evening of May 12.

British

LONDON, May 13 (AP)—An Air Ministry communique announced tonight:

Intensive operations by the Royal Air Force continue on all parts of the front. Considerable numbers of enemy bombers have been encountered, often escorted by fighters.

Reports so far received indicate that over forty more enemy aircraft of various types have been shot down by our fighters at very small cost.

Striking success of our fighters' defense may explain the fantastic claims made by the enemy as to the number of Spitfire [fighter planes] destroyed. Actually only one was forced down after a battle near Rotterdam early this morning.

Attacks on our airdromes have today been less intense. Little damage to airdromes has been done. Casualties have been slight.

The advance of enemy troops has been impeded by a series of successful night bombing attacks on both sides of the Dutch frontier.

The reoccupation of Waalhaven [Rotterdam Airport] by the enemy has been followed by a series of bombing attacks which have been successfully carried out against enemy columns in Belgium and Luxembourg. Intense opposition was encountered, resulting in some loss to our bomber squadrons.

The coastal command aircraft have been engaged in patrolling the Dutch coast and have accounted for several enemy patrol vessels.

An earlier Air Ministry announcement said:

The Air Ministry announces that Whitby and Wellington aircraft of the R. A. F. carried out a series of attacks on enemy communications in Germany between the Rhine and Dutch frontier during last night.

A force of Blenheim aircraft also heavily bombed enemy troops advancing through Eastern Belgium.

All but one of the aircraft engaged in these operations returned safely.

Another Air Ministry communiqué stated:

R. A. F. aircraft carried out a series of successful bombing attacks during the night against the airdrome at Waalhaven, near Rotterdam, which had again changed hands yesterday and was being used as a base by the enemy.

An Admiralty communique states:

Since the German invasion of Holland and Belgium began strong naval forces have been operating continuously off the coast of these two countries in spite of reported bombing attacks having been made on them.

Allied operations on land have been supported. Enemy troops landing from the air on airdromes and beaches have been bombarded. Refugees have been evacuated from the war area and brought to this country.

HULL IS COOL TO ANY CHANGE IN NEUTRALITY

Shows No Enthusiasm for Argentine Proposal of Non-belligerency.

Capital Sees Legal Obstacles in Way of Plan—Uruguay Urges Conference.

WASHINGTON, May 13 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull displayed a lack of enthusiasm today over a proposal by the Argentine Foreign Minister for the adoption of a Pan-American policy of "non-belligerency" instead of neutrality.

The State Department chief said that naturally this Government gave the fullest consideration to the ideas or views suggested by any friendly country or countries, but that did not mean that we are subscribing to them.

Asked whether the Argentine move had been suggested by Washington, he said that was unquestionably not true in any sense.

Officials here also found legal objections to the proposal.

For one thing, it was said, the Washington administration is bound by a domestic neutrality law laid down by Congress. Officials said they saw no present prospect that the administration would ask for any change in the act.

As for international law, it was said that there was no such thing as non-belligerency; that there was either belligerency or neutrality.

New Conference Reported Urged.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, May 13 (A. P.).—With Argentina calling for the Americas to adopt a "non-belligerent" attitude toward the European war, Uruguay was reported today to have proposed a new conference to decide the future steps of the twenty-one American republics now pledged to strict neutrality.

President Alfredo Baldomir and Foreign Minister Alberto Guani were said to have dispatched a telegram to President Augusto S. Boyd of Panama urgently requesting a meeting of the twenty-one republics "in view of the gravity of the situation."

President Boyd was told that Uruguay "received with deep emotion the news of the invasions" of Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg.

When the Americas drafted their 300-mile neutrality "safety belt" last October, they arranged to consult in the event of untoward developments. The President of Panama, in whose country the neutrality conference was held, acts as a clearing house for the conference when it is not in session.

NEUTRALITY CONCORD

Uruguay Gives Consideration to American Pact.

MONTEVIDEO, May 13 (A. Uruguay Calls For New Parley On Neutrality

Asks 21 American Nations to Meet Again in Panama; U. S. Opposed to Change

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, May 13 (AP).—Foreign Minister Alberto Guani announced today he had requested Panama to convene a new neutrality conference of the twenty-one American Republics in view of the German invasion of the low countries.

Guani summoned diplomatic representatives of American Republics and requested them to inform their respective governments of his action.

When the Americas drafted their 300-mile neutrality "safety belt" last October, they arranged to consult in the event of untoward developments. Augusto S. Boyd, president of Panama, in whose country the neutrality conference was held, acts as a clearing house for the conference when it is not in session.

A "non-belligerent" attitude toward the war was suggested last night by Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo of Argentina after a conference with President Ortiz of Argentina, United States Ambassador Norman Armour and the Brazilian ambassador. Cantilo said neutrality is a "fiction" in the present circumstances of the world.

U. S. Opposes Argentine Plan

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—The United States has decided, officials said tonight, that it cannot accept Argentina's proposal to adopt a Pan-American policy of non-belligerency instead of neutrality.

They made this statement after Secretary of State Cordell Hull had said that although this government was always disposed to give full consideration to the ideas of friendly nations, this did not mean that the government subscribed to them.

Officials said that the United States was bound by the neutrality act and that there was no prospect of any change in the act at this session of Congress. They contended also that international law does not provide for a status of non-belligerency.

JAPAN ASSURED INDIES ARE SAFE

Allied Envoys Tell Arita No Changes Are Planned.

DUTCH WILL RETAIN HOLD

Netherlands Contends Forces on the Islands Are Sufficient.

TOKIO, May 13 (A. P.).—Great Britain and Holland both assured Japan today that they had no intention of altering the status quo in the Netherlands' rich Indies possessions.

The British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, informed Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita that Great Britain did not intend to interfere with the present situation in the Dutch East Indies, since she believed the Dutch forces there were sufficient to maintain the integrity of the islands.

Concern had been expressed in many Japanese quarters lest the British and French landings of forces in the Dutch West Indies might be followed by similar Allied action in the East Indies. Japan has officially notified interested Powers of her insistence that the European war shall bring no change in the status of the East Indies.

Holland also reassured Japan. Otto Reuchlin, secretary of the Netherlands Legation, informed the Japanese Foreign Office that Allied troop landings such as took place in the Dutch West Indies would not be necessary in the East Indies because of the presence of adequate Dutch military and naval forces.

He assured the Japanese that the status quo in the East Indies would be maintained, and explained that the troop landings in the West Indies were essential to prevent Germans from sabotaging the oil fields.

Dutch Ask No Help.

THE HAGUE, May 13 (A. P.).—The war between Holland and Germany "brings no change in the status quo of the Dutch Indies, which are an integral part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands," a semi-official statement declared today.

The statement was a reply to the hope expressed in Tokio by Japan's Foreign Office spokesman that Holland would not permit foreign Powers to intervene to protect the Dutch East Indies.

"The status quo will be maintained in the Dutch Indies just as strongly as in Holland itself," the statement said. "The Dutch Indies possess means to do that. They will not ask for help."

"In behalf of Curacao and Aruba (Dutch West Indies where French and British forces landed after the Germans invaded Holland), where the military situation is entirely different, the Dutch Government has called on the help of the Allies. This help has been given but would certainly not have been given had we not asked for it."

Dutch Trust Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 13 (A. P.).—The Netherlands Minister heard from his superiors today that they had the "absolute conviction" that the Allies contemplate no alteration in the status of the Netherlands East or West Indies, and felt "equally confident" about Japan.

The message, to Minister A. Loudon from the Netherlands Foreign Minister read:

"We have absolute conviction that no alteration in political or legal status of Netherlands East or West Indies is contemplated by the Allies and we feel equally confident about Japan."

Dispatches from Tokio have indicated Japanese uneasiness over the possibility of Allied troop landings in the East Indies, as they have done in the West Indies.

Moscow Expects Seizure.

MOSCOW, May 13 (A. P.).—The Moscow Teachers Gazette said today that European developments which had "forced Britain to retreat from the Far East" might tempt Japan to seize the Netherlands East Indies.

Only the United States would resist, the paper asserted, saying that the strategic situation was such that the Japanese probably would capture the Philippines at the outset.

"The dollar empire (presumably the United States) will not accept this lying down," the paper predicted.

CALLS IT DEAD CONCEPT

Foreign Minister Wants Us 'Non-belligerent.'

BUENOS AIRES, May 13 (A. P.).—Diplomatic circles were stirred today by the proposal of an Argentine Government official that the American nations scrap their policy of neutrality for a non-belligerent attitude toward the European war.

The proposal was voiced last night by Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo, who said that the "aggressive methods" employed in Europe had made neutrality a "fiction and a dead conception."

Cantilo made his statement after a conference with President Roberto M. Ortiz, United States Ambassador Norman Armour and the Brazilian Ambassador.

He said that discussions on the subject were started in diplomatic circles April 19, when the possible invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands was discussed. But some of the American republic were opposed at that time to any change in their position.

"Since the latest invasion with a wholesale disregard for international rules there has appeared a growing demand among these nations for a new expression."

Cantilo indicated he favored revision of the Declaration of Panama, in which the American republics last fall expressed their neutrality.

In Montevideo, Uruguay's Foreign Minister, Alberto Guani, was reported studying the possibility of a new American neutrality declaration through the Pan-American neutrality organization. He was said already to have exchanged views with other American government officials.

Cudahy Urges Funds For Fleeing Belgians

BRUSSELS, May 13 (AP).—John Cudahy, American Ambassador to Belgium, said today he was conferring with Belgian Red Cross officials. With refugees streaming south and west from the fighting zones, he said the feeding and housing of war refugees already was a tremendous job, and funds were needed.

Cairo Blackout to Continue.

CAIRO, May 13 (A. P.).—Officials here announced today that the blackout imposed throughout Egypt to test defense against aircraft would be continued in Cairo and other cities after the test period ends tomorrow.

The new dam across the apex of the Nile Delta, north of Cairo, was declared a prohibited area accessible only to British and Egyptian troops.

A trial removal of part of the capital's population is expected shortly.

PARIS, May 13 (AP)—The Americans in France are taking the outbreak of total warfare in the west with nonchalance. The number of Americans applying for exit visas is about as usual. Not more than 200 of the colony of 5,000 will be included in the capacity load the United States liner Washington will carry from Genoa, Italy, Saturday.

Most of the 200 are persons who intended returning to the United States eventually, in any case. The remaining Americans apparently are intent on staying in France "come what may," according to informed opinion.

Authorities said there definitely was "no sign of panic." Those desiring to stay will be compelled to renew their passports again next month under State Department regulations.

Didn't Know Boy Scouts Were Targets in France

Paris, May 13 (AP)—An American woman looked out a window of her country place north of Paris today and saw a sturdy young man in shorts running through the garden.

"Because I didn't know it was open season on Boy Scouts," she replied, pointing out the course the youth had taken.

U. S. Officials Bar "Non-Belligerency"

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—American officials found legal objections today to an Argentine official proposal that American nations drop their neutrality policy for one of "non-belligerency."

The U. S. is bound by a domestic neutrality law. Officials said they saw no present prospect that the Administration would ask for any change.

As for international law, officials said that there was no such thing as non-belligerency; that there was either belligerency or neutrality.

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The House Immigration Committee approved legislation today providing for a comprehensive revision of the country's nationality laws. It carried a provision which some members said was designed to prevent "Trojan horse" sabotage of American defenses, especially in Hawaii. F. D. R. to Ask Congress for Increase

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt plans to send to Congress this week a recommendation for more money for national defense.

Stephen Early, White House secretary, said the President had no specific amount in mind at present, but would decide on a sum after conferences with his advisers on defense. One such conference, with War and Treasury Dept. officials, was held today.

MAY 14 1940

Pending before Congress are army and navy requests for $2,000,000,000 for the year starting July 1. There has been conjecture that in view of needs emphasized by the war abroad, the President might request another $500,000,000.

Debt Limit a Factor

Asked whether the President's message might cover the subject of upward revision of the $45,000,000,000 limit on the public debt to cover expanded defense appropriations, Early said he knew nothing about it, but assumed that this was a point on which Treasury and budget officials would advise the Chief Executive.

Last January the President asked Congress to provide $460,000,000 in new taxes to help meet the mounting defense costs, but Congress has ignored the request.

It appeared likely that stronger mobile defense forces to safeguard the Western Hemisphere at any threatened point would figure in any revised estimates of armaments.

Administration quarters have indicated that this and a demand for speeding up munitions manufacture were embodied in War Dept. recommendations submitted to Mr. Roosevelt for week-end study.

Navy's New Test

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, May 13—Powerful units of the United States fleet were ordered to Lahaina Roads today for further training practice in Hawaiian waters which the navy unexpectedly ordered last week.

Additional ships of the main force will depart tomorrow for the rendezvous off the Isle of Maui, leaving only the normal Hawaiian squadron, and a few additional vessels, at Pearl Harbor, near here.

MAY 14 1940

The dicision to keep the fleet longer in Hawaii was disclosed last Tuesday when Admiral James O. Richardson, commander in chief, announced the navy had approved his request that it stay here for a time for additional tactical exercises.

The New Schedule

It had been expected originally that ninety ships comprising the fleet's main body would sail last Thursday for the California coast. The fleet put in here late in April after completing extensive maneuvers in mid-Pacific waters.

The new operations off Maui will be arranged in such a way that ships usually will depart on Mondays and return Thursday or Friday for week ends at Lahaina.

It was believed that the Hawaiian squadron, reinforced by the aircraft carrier Lexington, might operate as an offensive force to test the Lahaina defenses.

ARMY TO PUT 310,000 INTO FIELD IN AUGUST

War Games Will Set Peacetime Record for This Country

MAY 14 1940

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP)—The War Department estimated today that 310,000 officers and men of the regular Army, National Guard and Reserve Corps would be under arms during the August manoeuvres.

The figure, officials said, was an all-time high for American peacetime training activities. The manoeuvre plans were announced in anticipation of Congressional appropriation of the necessary funds, estimated at $6,000,000.

Secretary Woodring explained that it had been customary to hold manoeuvres in only one army area each year, but that "in the present state of the world" it was considered advisable to hold exercises in all four areas.

The first army manoeuvres, to be held in Northern New York between Plattsburg and Watertown, will engage about 100,000 officers and men, including the 26th, 27th, 29th, 43d, and 44th National Guard divisions, and the First Regular Army Division, together with certain corps and army troops from both the regular army and the National Guard.

The second army manoeuvres will be held in the vicinity of Sparta, Wis., and will involve about 65,000 men.

The third army manoeuvres, to be held in Louisiana, will involve about 65,000 officers and men, including the First Cavalry Division and the Second Infantry Division of the regular army and the 30th, 31st, 36th and 45th Infantry and the Twenty-third Cavalry Divisions of the National Guard.

The fourth army exercises will involve about 80,000 officers and men of the Seventh and Ninth Corps Areas. Mobile troops of the Ninth Corps Area will be concentrated in the vicinity of Fort Lewis, Wash., and Camp Ripley, Minn.

Large Cash Resources Freed

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP)—The United States made available to Holland and Belgium today their large cash resources in the United States for the purchase of defense weapons and other purposes.

No figures on the governmental deposits of the two countries were available, but Secretary Morgenthau's order was believed to have freed many millions of dollars.

Officials said that the situation of Holland and Belgium was different from that of the other three countries invaded recently by Germany, because their governments were in a position to give voluntary direction of the uses of their money. No such exemptions have been granted to Norway, Denmark or Luxembourg, whose funds in the United States also were frozen.

The purpose of the freezing orders was to prevent Germany from seizing the funds.

Nazi Oil Showdown

MAY 14 1940

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 13—The war in the Low Countries is pictured by some petroleum authorities as a race of German arms against time in the face of diminishing supplies of motor fuel, but the German fuel problem apparently is still far from acute.

Three factors tend to ease the effect of the Allied petroleum blockade against Germany. They are the unquestionably large reserves piled up before the war; the production of gasoline from Germany's unlimited quantities of coal, and the importation of oil from sources still available.

Long War Means Pinch

The petroleum experts who have written on the subject do not regard the German fuel situation as any too happy if the war drags on, but they add that the ingenuity of German engineers has been applied intensively to the problem.

Germany imported almost all her motor fuel before the war. When the Allied blockade was begun in September, the Reich's war machine was cut off from the North and South American fields, where she had obtained fully eighty per cent. of her imports. Ten per cent. came from Rumania and two per cent. from Russia.

140,000,000 Barrels A Year

One petroleum geologist, Max W. Ball, has estimated that Germany can obtain only one barrel of oil for every three needed, thereby placing a heavy drain on reserves. He believes Germany was using oil at the rate of 90,000,000 barrels a year in the inactive warfare which preceded the Norwegian invasion and is using it at a rate of 140,000,000 barrels in the active fighting.

Three petroleum engineers of the Cities Service Company, W. R. Garfias, R. V. Whetsel and J. W. Ristori, in February concluded that Germany must rely on Rumania to make up the bulk of its deficiency in oil to run its trucks, tanks, armored cars, submarines and airplanes.

Transportation Problem

Petroleum needs for civil use can be reduced, but cannot be disregarded entirely. Reductions already have been made in the warring countries.

Garfias and Ristori last October estimated that if Germany obtained all the Rumanian oil available for export—about 35,000,000 barrels—shutting off the Rumanian oil now going to Italy, 300 trains of tank cars in continuous operation would be required to transport it to German refineries. They inferred that the German rail system could not handle such traffic.

Russia Seen Little Help

The experts appear to write off Russia as a heavy source of oil for Germany, pointing to Russia's huge domestic needs and what they term the poor transport facilities both inside Russia and between Russia and Germany.

The Petroleum Press Service, published in London, lists as perhaps foremost among the German fuel problems the obtaining or producing of sufficient quantities of high-test gasoline for planes.

Domestic Production

A clue to what Germany is producing domestically came last winter with reports of widespread coal shortages for heating purposes. By a process known as the hydrogenation of coal, lignite tar and cracked petroleum residues, high-test gasoline is obtainable.

At least a dozen plants for processing coal, one at Brux, in the former Chezcho-Slovakian Sudetenland, have been reported under construction. The newest is at Stettin, on the Baltic.

By December, Germany is expected to be producing at the rate of 2,750,000 barrels of aviation gasoline annually from coal and twice that amount for other motor purposes.

Stocks Hit New Lows

MAY 14 1940

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 13—The heaviest selling of the year, touched off by liquidation of Dutch marginal accounts, swept through the Stock Exchange today, depressing prices to the lowest average level since September.

The market closed with many leaders off $2 to more than $7 a share. General uneasiness over possible repercussions of the war in Europe was evident in Wall street.

Commodities Slump

Commodities, in the main, turned downward with stocks. In the Chicago Pit, wheat lost 2¾ to 3 cents a bushel, and corn 1½ to 1 1-7 cents.

Bonds were mostly lower, with United States Government issues again under pressure, as financial circles looked for increased Government spending for armaments.

"War brides" along with stocks of companies that normally prosper in peacetime, were tossed overboard.

American Airlines, which recently rose more than $20 in a few weeks, fell back $9.87 to close at $60. Chrysler finished at $74.62, off $6.87; Allied Chemical at $168.50, off $8.50; International Paper preferred, $60.75, off $7.50; American Tobacco B, $80, off $5; United States Steel, $57.62, off $4.12; General Motors, $48.50, off $4.12; Sears-Roebuck, $78, off $5; Douglas Aircraft, $86.50, off $6.12; American Telephone, $165, off $6.87; Anaconda, $27.87, off $2.75; Pennsylvania, $18.50, off $2.37.

Cotton, which tumbled last week, held up against selling elsewhere and closed 15 to 30 cents a bale higher. Sugar was again firm. Such buoyant staples of last week as rubber and tin sagged.

Brokers said speculators in the Netherlands have been holding a fair amount of stock here on margin and in the decline of the past few days margins became impaired.

In many cases, brokers were unable to get in touch with their clients in Holland and, in any event, because of exchange restrictions, the Dutch speculators would presumably have been unable to send more cash to bolster their accounts. Under the circumstances, brokers had no alternative but to sell.

GUNFIRE STABILIZER DESIGNED FOR BATTLE

Westinghouse Head Reveals a Device, Especially for Ships

MAY 14 1940

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13 (AP)—New instruments of war to stabilize firing apparatus under shock of battle are being designed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, told an interviewer today.

The equipment would be valuable aboard ships, Mr. Robertson said, adding:

"We think it pretty good."

Mr. Robertson revealed their company had been approached by the British Government with a view to the machining of shells, indicating tentative estimates of a long war, as it would take the company a year to get into production.

So far the company has been doing little business that might be classed as a war orders.

Swastika Flies Over Belgian Citadel

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 13.—Adolf Hitler's legions hoisted their swastika today over the Citadel on the northern edge of fortress-ringed Liege, and broke into the Belgian city, the high command reported.

MAY 14 1940

German troops are still fighting with the Belgians for some of the outer forts of Liege, but others were west of the city, in the direction of Brussels, after piercing the Belgians' Albert Canal defense line.

A deep thrust of armored forces in the Netherlands, the high command said, established contact with troops landed by parachutes around Rotterdam, and DNB declared "the so-called Holland fortification system has been flanked."

18,000 Dutch Captured

DNB said one German force in the Netherlands captured about 18,000 Dutch soldiers; a Dutch general and his staff were taken.

While Hitler's army was driving for the heart of the Lowlands witn speedy armored cars leading the way, a tremendous fight went on for supremacy in the air.

The high command reported 320 enemy planes destroyed Sunday and more than 50 Monday morning. (According to an official French compilation, the Germans lost 400 planes up to Monday noon.)

DNB later said air attacks to a "hitherto unknown extent" characterized Monday's fighting and that more than 100 enemy planes were shot down by early afternoon.

French and Belgian troop concentrations in Belgium were attacked and the enemy suffered "heavy loss," DNB added. The agency also said that several "warships and transports were hit and set afire" and "sunk" in air attacks on British landing operations on the Dutch and Belgian coasts.

Westwall Action

On the Westwall-Maginot Line front the high command reported German positions had been moved forward south and southeast of Zweibrucken, opposite the northern boundary of the French province of Lorraine, in an action in which DNB reported the Germans captured 600 Frenchmen.

This raised the possibility of a frontal attack on the Maginot Line at a place where the Germans would not have the additional handicap of a Rhine crossing, although it might have been a feint to keep enemy forces diverted from other sectors.

GERMANS SMASH FAMOUS GREBBE WATER SYSTEM; QUEEN FLEES TO ENGLAND

Nazi Motorized Columns Only 15 Miles Away Threaten Rotterdam—Government Leaves The Hague, May Operate In London

MAY 14 1940

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Amsterdam, May 13—Outflanked from the north and from the south, with their famous Grebbe water defense line pierced and with Rotterdam threatened by German motor columns but fifteen miles away, the Dutch tonight vacated The Hague as the seat of Government and sent their Queen to safety in England.

The Dutch high command acknowledged in a communique tonight that the Germans had succeeded in taking "a small sector of the Grebbe Line," their main water-defense system running south of the Zuider Zee to the Rhine, and that, although Netherlands troops by fierce fighting had retaken the sector, they could not hold it when the Germans launched fresh attacks.

Within 15 Miles Of Rotterdam

To the south, the high command acknowledged that Germans with motorized equipment had raced through the Langstraat (south of the Maas river) and had reached and passed the Moerdijk bridge which crosses the Hollandsch Diep but fifteen miles south of Rotterdam.

In Rotterdam itself, German parachute and transport-landed troops were admitted still to be holding out "stubbornly."

Moreover, the Germans were acknowledged to be in possession of most of the northeast provinces and to have reached the east coast of the Zuider Zee, that great tongue of the North Sea which has turned partly to fresh water because of Dutch dikes.

Threaten Huge Zuider Zee Dam

From there the Germans threatened the huge dam at the mouth of the Zuider Zee for a march south on Amsterdam. The dam, however, is strongly defended.

A night communique said:

"In a small sector of the Grebbe Line the enemy won territory which was partly recaptured by us, but could not be held after renewed German attacks.

Nazis Established In North

"In the northern provinces the enemy has established itself. In the southern part of Rotterdam, German detachments which are present there are resisting stubbornly.

"German troops reported in the Langstraat have reached Moerdijk bridge south of Rotterdam, and have passed this bridge.

"Several units of the army and royal navy have by their heroic behavior carried on the best traditions of our people which are also reflected in the determined attitude of the citizens.

Big Nazi Air Losses

"According to statements of a captured German flying officer, the German air force suffered big losses in Holland, due to the excellent firing of our anti-aircraft artillery."

Announcement of the transfer of the Government was made a short time after it was disclosed in London that Queen Wilhelmina had arrived there.

Observers believed the Government planned to operate from England.

The text of the communique said, "in the stage at which the battle now has arrived, the Government considered it necessary, in the interest of the country and of the overseas possessions and for the maintenance under all circumstances of complete freedom of action, to move the seat of Government."

Follows Juliana

The 55-year-old Netherlands monarch aboard a British warship several hours after her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and Juliana's two babies reached a haven in London. It was reported in London that fear of a fifth-column attempt to kidnap the royal family prompted the flight from the war-ridden country.

A proclamation broadcast by the commander in chief of the Dutch forces from Hilversum announced the transfer of the seat of the Government to a secret place in order to maintain its complete freedom of action.

The Dutch, their ire aroused by the activities of traitors within their defense lines, arrested 300 persons today in a fifth-column mopup in Amsterdam. That brought to 900 the total of suspected persons arrested since the war began for Holland four days ago.

Although Amsterdam was quiet tonight, truckloads of military police and soldiers rode through the streets with rifles ready to fire.

The Germans were spread along the outer fringe of Dutch provinces from the coast on the northeast to the Belgian frontier in the south, like a great hand ready to crush a shell.

Driving Through 4 Provinces

Holland's high command acknowledged that the Germans were driving through the border tier of provinces—Groningen, Drente, Overijsel and Gelderland.

It admitted they had speared into the interior in North Brabant province and reached the North-sea coast and the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) at some points on the eastern shore on a drive through Friesland province.

But the Dutch said they had retreated within their defense positions according to plan and with small losses. They said they had fought merely a retarding action in the northern provinces, where there are no defense lines.

Reach Flooded Areas

At some places in Western Gelderland province, Nazi forces have penetrated to Dutch positions protected by inundations, high command announced.

The Grebbe line extends south from the Ijsselmeer to the big rivers, which cut east and west through the middle of Holland. Backed up by many fortifications, it forms the Dutch bulwark east of the main inundation defenses through Utrecht province.

South of the rivers, mechanized German units were reported by the communique to have pushed almost halfway through North Brabant province, which borders Belgium, to the Langstraat region north of Tilburg.

Heavy Nazi Air Activity

Intense German air activity was reported in Brabant, where the Dutch were supported by French forces.

Waalhaven airport near Rotterdam admittedly still is in German hands, but the Dutch said it was under artillery bombardment and air attack by British planes.

The Germans, meanwhile, continued harassing scattered communities with air bombardments, parachute soldiers and the activities of saboteurs.

Repeated Air Alarms

There were repeated air-raid alarms during the day in Amsterdam and The Hague. Two German Heinkels were shot down before dawn during the first alarm of the day here. No bombs were dropped during three later alarms up to 1 25 P. M., although several Nazi planes flew over after daylight and some parachutists were reported to have landed.

The army had the situation completely in hand in Amsterdam, however, and the city was generally quiet after troops had mopped up snipers in the southern district.

A communique declared "the army is completely the master of the situation" in the interior, Rotterdam is the only place where German troops were known to have reached any considerable number and it is now stated officially that the enemy virtually has been cleared from there.

BRUSSELS-LIEGE ARTERY PENETRATED; TEN-MILE NAZI THRUST INDICATED

Germans Hurl 1,500 Tanks Against Foe On Ardennes Front—"It's The Big Push," Paris Says—Invaders On French Soil

MAY 14 1940

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 13—NBC picked up a French communique broadcast from London today saying the Germans have "penetrated the main railroad line" between Brussels and Liege.

Cutting of this line would indicate an advance of ten miles southward by the Germans, who last were reported to have been engaged in a large-scale clash with French tanks and motorized troops in the neighborhood of St. Trond, west of Liege.

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 13—Allied advance motorized columns poured their fire into "massive" German attacks in the Netherlands and Belgium today but gave ground all along the line except west of Liege, Belgium, where the French counter-attacked with tanks.

A French War Ministry spokesman emphasized that while French, British, Dutch and Belgians were retiring slowly in the face of savage onslaughts by German motorized corps and "tremendous" blasting attacks from the air, the withdrawal was in accordance with strategic plan and could not be considered a retreat.

MAY 14 1940

2,000 Nazi Tanks Attack

The heaviest fighting, the French reported, occurred in the Belgian Ardennes Mountains, north of France, where the Germans threw several divisions of infantry and between 1,500 and 2,000 tanks into a smashing blow in an effort to sever Allied communications.

"It's the big push," said one official commentator, but "we've erected the wall against it."

On this wall, he said, "the great battle will be fought."

The Germans were "able to advance," said the nightly French communique of this sector.

Cavalry Units Retire

"Our cavalry units, after having fulfilled their mission to retard the enemy, fell back on the Meuse, which was reached by the enemy on a part of its course."

The Meuse (Maas) river swings southwestward, south of Liege, and after passing through Namur and Dinant, enters French territory at Givet, some forty-five miles west of the Luxembourg border.

The Germans were reported waging violent battle for possession of Longwy, French town at the junction of the French Luxembourg and Belgian borders. The French still held the town.

The battle line along Luxembourg was described as partly in French, partly in Luxembourg territory.

Admit Loss Of Fort

Farther north official spokesmen of the War Ministry declared the Germans had taken but one of the Liege forts, that at Eben Emael, fifteen miles north of the famous fortified center which stemmed the German advance twelve days in 1914.

German infantry with a spearhead of two motorized divisions which poured through this gap in the Albert Canal defense line appeared to have been checked in the sector west of Liege, French spokesmen said.

It was here, in the vicinity of St. Trond, thirty-five miles east of Brussels, the Belgian capital, and thirty miles northwest of Liege, that the French reported in a communique their counter-attack "mostly led by tanks."

Heavy Enemy Losses Claimed

"Heavy losses on the enemy" were reported inflicted in this clash of machine-age armies, fought to stop the Germans until the main Allied force can arrive.

A French force of tanks and armored cars was reported earlier today to have waged its first large-scale battle with a similar German column and broken it up.

Yet farther north, in Holland, the French said the Germans made progress "especially to the south of the lower Meuse river."

Air Battles "Tremendous"

North of the Meuse river, in the Netherlands, the Allies were withdrawing within the Grebbe water line to give the Dutch unique defense system its conclusive test against a modern war machine of motorized and air forces.

The spokesman said "tremendous" air battles were accompanying the troop movements on both sides.

An official French compilation showed the Germans have lost 400 airplanes in three and a half days of this violent activity.

Hundreds of planes on both sides bombed enemy objectives, seeking to break up moving columns.

Enemy attacks on the outposts of the French Maginot Line east of the Moselle and near the Saar were reported by the high command to have been repulsed.

Allied troops moving up to the line of battle in the Low Countries were described as progressing in "impeccable order and with perfect regularity" despite German air attacks.

Use Methodical Tactics

The Germans were using methodical tactics; motor-cycle troops in advance, then waves of tanks and finally their infantry.

Edouard Daladier, French defense minister, was in Belgium, where he inspected outposts.

Allied operations are proceeding under the supreme command of the French generalissimo, Maurice Gustav Gamelin.

Choking the roads were lines of refugees from the Netherlands and Belgium trying to get out of war's way.

Refugees arriving by rail in Paris told how their trains had been strafed by German planes. At least 800 came into the Paris north station, all wearing special arm bands and under the supervision of Belgian and French officers.

'Chute Troops Feared

Meanwhile, official spokesmen warning the public to be on the lookout for German parachute troops which might attempt "fifth column" activities in France, said this country has no intention of relenting on a decision to shoot all such troops found in French territory who are not wearing the regular German uniform.

Germany's threat to make reprisals—ten for one—was termed a "barbarism."

The threat to shoot German parachutists not in uniform, they said, meant those in civilian clothes or garb that would permit them to mix unnoticed with French people. A uniform which is not at once distinguishing as such could not be considered a uniform, they said.

"Can we afford to examine the inside of everyone's hat to determine whether he is an enemy parachutist?" asked the spokesman.

[Editor's Note—The Germans say their parachutists are uniformed in a gray-green coverall and wear an insignia on their helmets.]

Northern France had five air-raid alarms today, while Paris had three.

Nazis Say Air Battles Are Greatest in History

Report Downing 100 Planes in Morning, Losing 30

BERLIN, May 14 Tuesday) (AP).—Air attacks to a "hitherto unknown extent" characterized Monday's fighting, D. N. B., the German official news agency, said early today in a summary of the war situation.

More than 100 enemy planes had been shot down by early afternoon, the agency said, while the German losses were placed at hardly more than thirty planes.

Most of the air fighting occurred in the area north of the River Maas (Meuse), in the Netherlands, where the German air armada, in massed attacks, forced the way for the German infantry's continued advance, D. N. B. declared.

"Belgian retreat movements toward the west, and French advance movements, caused great congestion in the zone northwest of Namur," D. N. B. said. "German warplanes directed low-flying mass attacks on these troop concentrations and caused the enemy heavy loss."

British landing operations on the Dutch and Belgian coasts were attacked from the air, and "several warships and transports were hit and set afire," said D. N. B. "These were sunk."

Belgians Offer Enemy 'Stiff Resistance'

Day-Long Offensives Waged by Germans, Communique Reports

By Robert Okin

Associated Press Staff Writer

Brussels, May 13.—The Belgian high command acknowledged tonight that the Germans had waged day-long offensives on the entire Belgian frontier but declared they had been met with "stiff resistance."

Its communique said:

"Throughout the day our troops fought severe combats. Everywhere they put up stiff resistance to the enemy.

"A village which had fallen in the hands of the enemy has been reoccupied after a counter attack by Belgian units supported by tanks.

"During the operations of the last few days, certain infantry units, cyclists, chasseurs in the Ardennes and light motorized troops have particularly distinguished themselves."

MAY 14 1940

An earlier communique indicated Nazi pressure was almost constant. It said engagements had taken place "at diverse points" during Sunday night and that, starting early today, "enemy motorized forces delivered new attacks against all our positions."

It said Belgian troops had maintained their positons "everywhere" aganst the attacks Sunday night but neither communique gave details on the outcome f today's assaults.

With British and French troops alongside the Belgians in the front lines, optimism appeared buoyed after the first impact of the Nazi blitzkrieg offensive and experienced observers here said the outcome still was in the blanace.

The joint British-French-Belgian command established an inter-Allied censorship in Belgium.

As refugees streamed south and west from the fighting zones, United States Ambassador John Cudahy consulted with Belgian Red Cross officials.

He said the feeding and housing of the Belgian war homeless already was a tremendous job and funds were needed.

The Belgian government was prepared for flight itself, if necessary, but officials said that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

Behind the lines Belgian troops were kept busy mopping up German parachute troops dropped in widely scattered areas during the weekend.

German aerial activity was heavy, and troop concentratiosn and lines of communication were subjected to a heavy rain of bombs.

It was officially estimated that 20 Nazi planes had been shot down over Belgian territory yesterday, and at least 100 Saturday.

STUDENT RIOTS FAN NEW CRISIS IN DUCE'S LAND

Troops Posted Around British And French Embassies In Rome

MAY 14 1940

Englishwoman Reported Molested—Alpine Defenses Bolstered

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 13—Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy tonight as demonstrations throughout Italy against Britain and France fanned a new Mediterranean crisis.

Some of the Netherlands citizens were leaving for France. Some said they were leaving after consulting the Netherlands Legation.

Many Scandinavians also left Italy previously, at the time of the invasions of Denmark and Norway.

Allies' Embassies Guarded

Troops were posted around the British and French embassies in Rome, but their intervention was not necessary. A few police were able to divert the columns of well-disciplined Fascist students marching in the main streets of Rome and crying "Down with England" and yelling for war.

An Englishwoman was reported to have been molested while tearing up an anti-British leaflet, but no British protest was believed intended.

Italy moved to bolster her Alpine fortifications.

More Reservists Called

Some Italian sources said additional reservists had been called up to reinforce the 1,250,000 men already under arms, but authorities would not comment on the ground that the query involved military information.

However, authorities confirmed that Premier Mussolini had ordered further strengthening of the "Littorio Line" of fortifications along the French frontier.

Observers generally regarded both the "crisis" and the demonstrations as artificially staged to divert the attention of the Allies while Germany attempts to crash through Belgium and the Netherlands and defeat the Allies in France.

Demonstrators Active

Student demonstrators, some led or addressed by local Fascist leaders, were active in Bologna, Florence, Naples, Mussolini's boyhood home of Forli and other cities.

Rome official quarters would not comment on reports from Belgrade that Yugoslavia and Greece feared for their safety should Italy enter the war on Germany's side, reiterating only that Yugoslavia's security from Italian attack had been asserted repeatedly.

Some observers thought Germany might feel the need to encircle France and attack simultaneously on two fronts by attempting to pass through Switzerland and the Valley of the Po to the Italian-French frontier.

Trying To Keep Peace

Informed quarters believed Mussolini was tryihg to keep the peace and avoid an extension of the war, but with envelopment and mass attacks prominent in the German tactics they said Germany might attempt to undertake the encirclement of France with or without the support of the Italian army.

The Fascist press today said Italian indignation at British and French "piracy" in enforcing their contraband control against Germany was the reason for the student demonstrations. The press said nothing, however, about how Italy intended to remove the vexations about which it was complaining.

"Youthful Passion" Blamed

Italian newspapers reported the demonstrations as a spontaneous flaring up of youthful passions "against whoever makes an attempt on the dignity of the Italian fatherland and Italian interests."

A side issue of the crisis was friction between Fascists and the Vatican. Mussolini today again gave his approval to the works of a pre-Fascist author which are on the church's forbidden list.

Detectives stationed at the Vatican city gates were reported to have been reinforced without apparent reason.

The official Gazette today declared that the laying of submarine telephone and telegraph cables between Italy and Albania was a "public utility" of urgent importance. The announcement said work would start immediately on cables linking Durazzo with the naval ports of Brindisi, Bari and Taranto.

Britain Looses Secret Planes in Low Countries

The Defiant, Fast Fighter With Gun Turret in Tail, Counters Nazi Air Threat

LONDON, May 13 (AP).—Great Britain's new secret fighter plane with a sting in its tail and a greater fire power than the famed British Hurricane is being used in the fierce air battles over the Netherlands and Belgium to gain supremacy over the Germans.

MAY 14 1940

British communiques mentioned for the first time yesterday the new two-seater fighter, the Defiant, in telling of action over the Low Countries. In addition to an unknown number of machine guns firing from forward position, the Defiant is equipped with a power-operated gun turret aft.

This new fighter, whose details are secret, was known to have been in large-scale production last winter, and is believed to have appeared in surprising numbers in air battles over the Low Countries, where the Royal Air Force has reported bringing down at least 135 German planes since Friday morning.

The Defiant is powered by a 1,030-horsepower Rolls Royce Merlin III engine. It is a low-wing, all-metal monoplane.

The British reported early in February that they had the new fighter in production as an answer to a new German fast, long-rance bomber, which was expected to make its appearance this spring.

The power-driven turret is designed to swing easily at high speeds, whereas ordinary turrets are difficult to operate because of the wind pressure. The turret permits a broadside attack on a formation of enemy planes.

Fastest Plane of Class

The Boulton Paul Defiant, referred to by the authoritative British aviation annual "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" as a fighter "believed to be the fastest airplane of its class in service," carries a crew of two and features a Boulton Paul power-driven four-gun turret situated behind the pilot's cockpit. Unlike the ordinary single-seat fighter, which can fire at enemy planes only by pointing the whole plane at the target, the Defiant's turret allows guns to be brought to bear broadside at an enemy craft, as well as to the rear or at certain angles below.

30.24-2245

The specifications of the Defiant have not been disclosed by the British except for the fact that it has a wingspread of thirty-nine feet six inches. It is a smaller plane than the single-seat Hawker Hurricane, but is larger than the Supermarine Spitfire, Britain's chief pursuit craft. The Spitfire is powered with the same engine as the Defiant and has a top speed of 387 miles an hour, using 100-octane fuel. It is probable that the Defiant, being slightly larger and heavier while utilizing the same horsepower, is slower than the Spitfire, but faster than the 335-mile -an-hour Hurricane, which also is powered by a Rolls Royce Merlin III engine.

Nation Prepares For All Emergencies, But Fears Move By Italy

[By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, May 13—Egypt began removing civilian populations of all strategic western desert towns along the Libyan frontier today.

The military governor ordered immediate abandonment of all homes at three important centers, Mersa Matruh, Sidi Barrani and Sollum.

It was in furtherance of Egypt's preparations "for all emergencies and surprises"—with a view to a possible war move by Italy.

Blackout To Continue

Tonight was the last night of all-Egyptian blackouts in the test of defense against aircraft, but officials announced that the blackout would continue in Cairo and other cities.

Government sources declared the Mediterranean situation was "slightly reassuring," but emphasized that Egypt must constantly be "exceptionally cautious and vigilant."

Anti-British demonstrations in Rome contributed to uneasiness.

War Fleet To Remain

The Allied war fleet, engulfed today in a "dust-out" as a swirling sandstorm limited visibility to a few hundred feet, apparently was scheduled for a long stay here.

The concentration was described as the greatest Allied armada assembled since the war began. The French and British commanders maintained an attitude that "we are ready for anything, anywhere, anytime the Italians move."

Yugoslavia Is Prepared In Case Italy Enters War

Belgrade, May 13 (AP)—Authoritative Yugoslav quarters declared today they had taken all precautions, including the placing of 700,000 troops on a combat footing, to protect the country should Italy enter the war.

These sources said anti-British demonstrations in Italy confirmed the Yugoslav Government's fears that Italy would fight on the side of Germany. In this event, they said, both Yugoslavia and Greece would be in immediate danger of invasion.

Government circles dropped the appearance of outward calm of recent weeks based upon Fascist assurances that Italy would press no territorial claims against Yugoslavia.

Most Troops In North

Reliable sources reported strongest concentrations of Yugoslav troops are along the Italian and German frontiers in the north, but the Adriatic coast down to Italian-held Albania has not been neglected.

Additional divisions have been sent to the border of Hungary, through which Yugoslavs have long feared Germany might drive into southeastern Europe.

Work has been intensified on all border fortifications.

All-Day Air Patrols

The Yugoslav air force is maintaining all-day patrols over the Adriatic to watch Italian warship movements.

The strengthening of Yugoslav suspicion of Italy is believed to be based on purportedly outspoken Fascist aspirations to acquire the entire Dalmatian coastline along the Adriatic, of which Italian spokesmen have often said they were "cheated" by France and Britain when dividing the spoils after the last World War.

Budapest reports today admitted that Hungarian reservists had been called up ostensibly for May training.

BELGRADE, May 13 (AP).—Authoritive Yugoslav quarters declared today they had taken all precautions, including the placing of 700,000 troops on a combat footing, to protect the country should Italy enter the war.

Yougoslav government circles have dropped the appearance of outward calm, which, of recent weeks had been upon Fascist assurances that Italy would press no territorial claims against Yugoslavia.

Reliable sources reported that the strongest concentrations of Yougoslav troops were along the Italian and German frontiers in the North, but that the Adriatic coast down to Italian-held Albania had not been neglected.

SWITZERLAND AFRAID NAZIS WILL HIT THERE

Thrust Might Be Made To Draw Italy Into War On Germany's Side

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 13—The Swiss army stood fully mobilized tonight as reported German troop concentrations on the frontier strengthened the belief of foreign observers that Germany might strike through Switzerland toward the Rhone Valley of France.

MAY 14 1940

Such a thrust, these observers suggested, might be made to draw Italy into the war on Germany's side.

The German plan of attack—if it comes—presumably would lead through the area between Basel and Lake Constance.

Might Take War To Rhone

If a smash through Geneva succeeded, foreign observers said, the war might move into the Rhone Valley. Once there, the Germans would have a good military ground on which to persuade Italy to march with Germany against the French, who hold the areas Italy most desires.

Between the Germans and such an objective, however, stands the Swiss army, now estimated at between 550,000 and 600,000 men in first-line forts along the Rhine and in a second, deeper and stronger line from Basel through the junction of the Limmat and Aar rivers to the lakes of Zurich, Wallen and Constance.

Behind the lines the Swiss high command took a quick lesson from the German invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. They held back motorized units to clean up any troops which might be landed by air.

Airports Guarded

All Swiss airports were heavily guarded by anti-aircraft guns and troops.

Men too old and youths too young to be mobilized but able to use rifles were given forty cartridges each and ordered to be on the alert for parachute troops.

French artillery and Allied air bombs this afternoon blasted part of the Istein railroad tunnel under Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine"—the line providing direct communication between Basel and Germany's West Wall fortifications.

Kongsvinger, 20 Miles From Frontier, Is Reported As Military Center

Stockholm Clings To Belief That Baltic Status Quo Will Continue

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 13—With Sweden calmly preparing for any emergency, neutral military observers tonight heard reports of extensive German troop concentrations in southern Norway and of increased troop transport movements through Germany's Kiel Canal.

MAY 14 1940

Some reports said that Kongsvinger, a strategic point about fifty miles northeast of Oslo and twenty miles west of the Swedish border, is becoming a military center, with more than 100,000 men assembled in this area.

Troop Movements Unconfirmed

Rumors of ship and troop transport movements in the Kiel Canal, connecting the North and Baltic seas, increased during the day but could not be confirmed. There was no hint even of the direction of the canal movements.

However, experienced observers said they believed it was not likely the Germans would use the canal now for any extensive northward movement and some expressed the opinion that the Germans might be withdrawing some of their forces in Denmark and Norway for the Dutch and Belgian operations.

There was a widespread belief that the status quo of the Baltic area—quiet now since the invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg made Norway look like a sideshow—has a good chance of being maintained.

It was pointed out that any further German offensive would appear illogical in the face of Sweden's preparedness and the fact that no immediate advantage could be gained, especially as regards Narvik, by bringing on Swedish resistance.

A force of Germans is encircled by the Allies in Narvik, far-north Norwegian ore port. Sweden is adhering strictly to her neutral position which forbids granting transport facilities to Narvik for German troops.

The situation at Narvik was reported unchanged, but the Norwegian telegraph agency reported from "somewhere in Norway" that a German attempt to land troops to help the garrison at Narvik failed when several transport ships were sunk.

BERLIN, May 13 (AP).—The reports which were current yesterday abroad of a German fleet moving through the Kiel Canal with Sweden as its objective were branded officially here today as "a stupid swindle—not a word of truth in it."

Allies Outnumber Foe On Land, Sea and in Air

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—A tabulation of the land, sea and air strength of the five belligerents now battling across the Western Front showed today that the Allies outweighed Germany heavily in naval tonnage and manpower, though they were admittedly weaker in the air.

Official figures were available for armies and navies. However, only an arbitrary estimate based on pre-war statistics could be obtained for air forces. This gave the Allies a superiority in numbers of planes, but it was pointed out that Germany undoubtedly had more first-line planes.

Best available figures at the War and Navy Departments showed:

Hull Condemns Breach of Law Among Nations

Assails Nazis Indirectly as Peril to World, Before International Law Group

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The present war in Europe is a challenge of international lawlessness which threatens to wipe out the achievements of centuries of progress in the development of international law, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, tonight told members of the American Society of International Law, of which he is president.

Obviously condemning Germany for its forcible occupation of small, weak neighboring states, and for cruel and oppressive treatment of conquered peoples, Mr. Hull pleaded for a return to international law and arbitration to settle disputes, instead of the present method of resorting to force.

Mr. Hull also referred indirectly to the repeated breaking of treaties and pledges by Germany, although he did not mention that country by name during his speech.

In recent years there had been repeated breaches of solemn obligations, brushed aside with "contemptuous gestures and destructive action," Mr. Hull said.

His Bitterness Apparent

The Secretary's speech, following closely on the President's address on Friday in which he condemned the German invasion of the Low Countries, left no doubt as to the bitterness which the attack on the small, neutral nations of western Europe had aroused among Administration leaders.

"Powerful nations have built up vast armaments for the avowed purpose of attaining their national aims by force," Mr. Hull said, "and their action has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments."

In an obvious reference to Germany's policy of conquest by the use of "fifth columns" and traitors within small countries on its frontiers, Mr. Hull said that peaceful nations had been deprived of their independence by the use of "armed force or threat of force, combined with the exercises of fraud and treachery."

Mr. Hull said that conquered populations in these countries had been subjected to "new refinements of oppression and cruelty," while economic warfare on an unprecedented scale had not only become dominant in world markets, but had lowered the standard of living everywhere.

Even the United States, powerful as it was and determined to keep out of the European war, could not shut away the menace of this international anarchy by isolating and insulating itself, he continued.

Sees Victory of Concept

In closing Mr. Hull expressed his belief in the final victory of the forces of international law and morality over the forces of lawlessness and chaos, which he said were challenging every concept of order under international law. The institutions which had been built only with tremendous effort, withstanding repeated interruptions and setbacks, would triumph over the present challenge, he declared.

"I am certain of that triumph," Mr. Hull concluded. "I am certain that we and others who hold our beliefs will not falter in that faith or fail to do everything possible to restore and extend the full sway of effective international law over the relations among nations."

Mr. Hull's condemnation of force and oppression, which he termed a return to the level of the jungle, followed an earlier speech delivered at the morning session of the eighth American Scientific Congress, in which he attacked the use of scientific development to further the ends of oppression and brute force.

"Today we witness a stark demonstration of the possibilities of anti-social and anti-moral use of the achievements of science," Mr. Hull said. "In some nations, science has been reduced to the sorry estate of a handmaiden of oppression and brute force."

Mr. Hull added that science could not flourish under conditions in which freedom of thought was shackled, and that a nation which curbed freedom of thought or denied the dignity of the human soul was inevitably doomed to decadence.

Support Roosevelt Speech

The delegates to the Scientific Congress passed a resolution today expressing their appreciation to the President and wording their statement so that it constituted a gesture in support of his speech on Friday.

The resolution, introduced by Dr. Alberto Ulloa, delegate from Chile, read as follows:

"Having heard the address of the President of the United States of America at the inaugural session held on May 10, 1940,

"The eighth American Scientific Congress resolves:

"To express to his excellency, the President of the United States of America, the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, the cordial homage of the Eighth American Scientific Congress, the delegates to which represent the activities in the field of science of twenty-one American republics, all of which are adherents to the principle of the right of each nation freely to determine its own destiny."

Meanwhile, the growing sentiment for a revision of the neutrality policies of the twenty-one American republics was shown in reports from South American capitals that several nations advocated a more "realistic" policy in view of European war developments, and a proposal for such a change was outlined by Felipe A. Espil, the Argentine Ambassador to the United States, in a speech before the Scientific Congress.

Mr. Espil said that the distance between Europe and the Americas had narrowed perceptibly, adding: "The sooner we put an end to the superstition of immunity the better we shall be able to deal with the multiple problems that the present European war is creating for us."

Mr. Hull, when asked at his press conference about any change in the neutrality of the Americas, replied that the United States would give the fullest consideration to any proposals which other American governments might make.

However, he denied categorically any suggestion that the United States had initiated any move for such revision, saying that it was not true in any sense.

Hull Address to Society of International Law

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—Following is the text of an address delivered by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, tonight to the American Society of International Law at its thirty-fourth annual meeting:

"Fellow members and guests of the American Society of International Law:

"I am deeply appreciative of the privilege of serving as president of this society and of opening its thirty-fourth annual meeting.

"All of us who, as students or practitioners, are interested in this particular branch of jurisprudence, are profoundly conscious of the fact that today the subject of international law has an extraordinary significance. It is no exaggeration to say that never before, in the entire history of the human race, has the problem of the preservation and development of order under law presented itself with such urgent acuteness. Never before has it been so fraught with import for the future of mankind.

"The concept and the structure of a law of nations rose and evolved out of a spirit of protest against the ravages of international anarchy. In the ancient world and during the dark ages of the modern world, there widely prevailed a concept that each nation was a law unto itself, the sole arbiter of its international conduct, fully entitled—if it possessed sufficient strength—to engage in aggression and aggrandizement, to destroy by armed force the independence of other nations and to subjugate other peoples. Force reigned supreme. Human liberty, national independence, confidence in safety and security on the part of nations and individuals were in constant jeopardy.

Advances of 300 Years

"Over long centuries, voices raised in protest against the nightmare of international lawlessness grew in strength and influence, and ideas of how to achieve a law-governed world emerged more and more. Three hundred years ago, the genius of Hugo Grotius gathered these scattered voices and ideas into a sharp focus and gave a powerful impetus to a new spirit, to a more and more insistent demand that relations among nations be based upon acceptance and application of well defined rules of international conduct—upon a body of international law.

"Since then, enormous advances have been made in the character of relations among nations. There has been an ever-deepening and ever more widespread recognition of the inescapable fact that an attitude of unbridled license on the part of nations—in the same way that such an attitude on the part of individuals or groups within nations—is bound, sooner or later, to impair their own well-being and, in the end, lead them to destruction. There has been a wider and wider acceptance and application of the all-important fact that true social progress is possible only when nations in their relations with each other, as well as individuals and groups within nations, are willing to practice self-restraint and to cooperate for the greater good of all. Only thus can orderly processes exist and provide that social stability, security and confidence without which individual liberty and a free play of creative forces must necessarily be precarious, and the onward march of man must be halting if not altogether impossible.

"Institutions have been built up to give effect and reality to order under law within and among nations. They have been largely responsible for the flowering of our modern civilization in the spheres of political security, social justice, scientific progress and economic betterment.

"This progress has not been achieved without stupendous effort. There have been interruptions and setbacks. Frequently, forces have arisen which have challenged the very concept of order under law, especially in the sphere of international relations, and have plunged nations into war, the greatest of all deterrents to human progress.

"That these challenges and the conditions of international lawlessness which they created have not been permanent setbacks is proof of the inherent vitality and virility of the great principles underlying the whole concept of world order under international law. These facts attest the indomitable strength of the spirit which has been the great driving force behind the determination of the human race to rise from the darkness of lawlessness to the light of law.

Concept Challenged Today

"Today, mankind is the unhappy victim of another challenge of this sort—a powerful challenge which threatens to wipe out the achievements of centuries in the development of international law and to destroy the very foundations of orderly international relationships. In the face of this challenge, it is of the utmost importance that every citizen visualize clearly the cardinal features of international law and of order based on law, as well as the conditions which would prevail if they were destroyed.

"Order under law in the relations between and among nations requires scrupulous respect for the pledged word. It requires fulfillment of obligations. Without these, the whole fabric of mutual trust and, in fact, of civilized existence must crash to the ground. Without confidence that a promise made by a nation will be kept and that an obligation assumed by a nation will be honored, international relationships become reduced to the level of the jungle.

"Order under law in international relations requires that nations respect each other's independence. Unless all nations—large and small—can consider themselves secure in this respect, they must continually live in fear of being confronted with tragic alternatives of abject submission or armed resistance. National effort must then either be half-hearted in the shadow of ever-present dread or be increasingly diverted from activities for the advancement of national welfare to the intensive creation of means of defense.

"Order under law in international relations requires that disputes among nations be settled by none but pacific means, and that treaties and agreements, once entered into, be revised by none but methods of peaceful adjustment. It is necessary, as all right-thinking people agree, to the peace and tranquillity of the body politic of a well ordered state that individuals shall refrain from self-help and the employment of force and shall settle their differences by peaceful methods and, when necessary, by the judicial process. It is no less necessary, if we are to have an orderly international society—a society capable of rendering the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people—that members of the family of nations shall be governed by similar processes for the settlement of their differences.

"For centuries, efforts have been made to banish the use of armed force as an instrument for settling disputes and revising treaties and agreements. Extensive machinery of judicial procedure, of conciliation, of mediation and of arbitration has been built up for this purpose. The efficacy of this machinery has been amply demonstrated. It would suffice, if all nations would but resolve to have full recourse to it. Only by sincere determination to perfect it and to use it can mankind hope to relegate the international anarchy of war to the limbo of things forgotten.

Principles of Fair Dealing

"Finally, if order under law is to be stable and effective, it is essential that trade and other economic relationships among nations be conducted on the principles of fair dealing and equal treatment. Disregard of these principles leads to economic warfare, which undermines the foundations of peaceful and orderly international relations. Search for national economic self-sufficiency, discriminatory trade arrangements, failure to practice the doctrine of equality of commercial treatment are among the most powerful instruments of such warfare. These and other similar policies have the effect of disrupting the channels of trade, of reducing the volume of mutually beneficial interchange among nations of useful goods and services, and of impoverishing all nations. The resulting economic strain and distress create social unrest within nations and lead to resentment and conflict among nations.

"In recent years there have been truly terrifying developments in contravention of each of these essential conditions for the effective functioning of an orderly world. There has been a staggering multiplication of instances in which solemn contractual obligations have been brushed aside with contemptuous gestures and destructive action. Powerful nations have built up vast armaments for the avowed purpose of attaining their national aims by force; and their action has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments. Peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force or threat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery. Conquered populations have been subjected to new refinements of oppression and cruelty. Economic warfare on an unprecedented scale and unparalleled in its intensity has come to dominate the foreign trade and other economic policies of many nations, causing immense material losses to all nations and a marked lowering of the standards of living everywhere.

"The specter of a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the dark ages looms on the horizon today. I am profoundly convinced that it menaces the civilized existence of mankind—of every nation and of every individual. Every nation and every individual should be actively on guard.

"Our own nation—powerful as it is and determined as it is to remain at peace, to preserve its cherished institutions and to promote the welfare of its citizens — is not secure against that menace. We cannot shut it out by attempting to isolate and insulate ourselves. We cannot be certain of safety and security when a large part of the world outside our borders is dominated by the forces of international lawlessness.

Bases of Civilization

"We cannot close our eyes to what is going on elsewhere in the world and delude ourselves with the mere hope that somehow—somehow—all this will pass us by. Never in our national history has there been a more desperate need for a clear understanding by every responsible citizen of our country of what is taking place in the world and of how it affects us. Such understanding is essential to a wise charting and application of our national policies. Under our system of government, it is the most effective safeguard for the maintenance and promotion of the national interest.

"The world is today torn by conflicts, the outcome of which will affect the lives of future generations in all countries. The world is today threatened with an orgy of destruction — not only of life and property, but of religion, of morality, of the very bases of civilized society. The spread of international anarchy not only undermines law, justice and morality among nations, but also inevitably impairs, within nations, these essential foundations of civilized existence.

"In the face of existing conditions, we have no choice but to expand our program of armament contruction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means of defending this country's security and its rightful interests. But if mankind is to avoid a long-continuing period of chaos and retrogression, it can only be through the firm establishment of order under law. Never before has there been a greater need for our people to place the support of a wholly united public opinion behind our nation's efforts to exert the great weight of its moral influence in favor of a revindication and revitalization of the basic principles or order under law, which alone can give lasting assurance of safety, security and peace.

Certain of Triumph

"Upon those of us who devote their lives to the improvement and application of international law there devolves today a special duty. It is our task to help our fellow citizens to a better realization of the crucial importance which preservation of international law and of order based on law has for them and their country. It is our task to make the immense significance of international law a living reality in the mind and heart of every American.

"While doing this, we should constantly and persistently search for ways and means of strengthening the structure of international law and of making effective the translation of its principles into firmly established international practice. We should spare no effort to demonstrate that the spirit which has made possible, over the centuries, immense forward strides in the development of international law still lives.

"Stirred by the cruel events which unfold all around them, millions of men and women have become a prey to doubt, hopelessness and despair. It is all the more necessary for us, who believe in the eternal vitality of international law and of international morality, to hold fast to the conviction that law and morality will triumph over the forces of lawlessness and chaos which have again risen to challenge the very concept of order under law — just as they have, in the past, triumphed over similar challenges. I am certain of that triumph. I am certain that we and others who hold our beliefs will not falter in that faith or fail to do everything possible to restore and extend the full sway of effective international law over relations among nations."

$63,000,000 More Asked In President's Estimates

Congress Gets Score of Budget Deficiency Items

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt sent to Congress today more than a score of deficiency and supplemental estimates of appropriations for the current fiscal year, amounting to about $63,000,000.

The largest items included $21,190,000 for the Department of Agriculture and $19,398,000 for the Post Office Department.

The agriculture department request was composed mainly of a $20,000,000 item to increase the capital stock of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation to meet increased crop insurance indemnities for the 1941 crop program. Payments of indemnities under crop insurance, the President said in a memorandum, were expected to increase materially during the next year.

Hitler "Telegraphed" Punch In Low Country Blitzkrieg

Invasion, Shorn Of Surprise, Becomes War's First Real Test Of Strength

MAY 14 1940

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 13 — Adolf Hitler "telegraphed" his punch at the Low Countries. For the first time, one of his blitzkriegs was shorn of the element of surprise, and so becomes the war's first real test of strength.

The evidence shows the Netherlands Government knew not later than Saturday, May 4, that it faced a serious situation. How much it knew has not yet been revealed, but by Tuesday the situation was clear. That morning The Hague officials learned Germany was preparing to strike.

At least a few persons in the United States knew of the strong possibility of the impending stroke by Tuesday night. The Associated Press learned it then, reporting that German columns were advancing toward the frontier.

Within Easy Reach

By that time the information was sufficient for statement of at least two German objectives — Leeuwarden, on the northeast coast, from which even fast fighter planes could accompany bombers bound for England, and Arnhem, in the Netherlands "waist" on the route to Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

Arnhem fell to the Germans during the first full day of fighting. Yesterday they occupied northern provinces which Holland said she was not prepared to defend, and apparently this meant Leeuwarden, only about 200 miles from the English coast.

The Dutch had found out what was going to happen. That it became known in the United States almost precludes any possibility that England and France did not know it, and more.

Told To Take Over

How long the Dutch had known still has not been revealed, but as early as May 4 the Netherlands Minister in Washington had been instructed to take over administration of the Netherlands overseas empire in event of emergency.

At that same time Holland began making military preparations. Shortly, in the United States, President Roosevelt hurried back to Washington from Hyde Park with a suddenness which was generally attributed to some news from abroad.

There came a "scare" from the Balkans, where troops began to move around suddenly for no apparent reason except that Italy was conducting what she termed routine maneuvers in the Dodecanese Island area. In the light of events, a very reasonable question is whether Hitler wasn't making two feints at the same time.

Apparently Informed

One might have consisted of reports spread in the Balkans—the other the truth about what he actually planned, made evident so openly that the Low Countries and the Allies would not believe, but instead consider it the real feint. Twice before the Netherlands and Belgium have been thrown into excitement during this war by apparent Nazi preparations. Twice nothing happened.

This time it did. But Holland appears not to have been victimized. Her stout defense indicates that she either believed advance information or that, believing or not, she was taking no chances.

Last Wednesday's dispatches from The Hague, declaring an abatement of the tension was apparent, might mean that Hitler's "tell the truth" strategy almost worked.

Of course there is a possibility that Allied espionage, and not Hitlerian strategy, was responsible for Holland's information. But espionage reporting troop movements is one thing, and espionage reporting staff plans an entirely different thing.

Allies Had Time

But whether they took Hitler at his own word, or learned his plans through their own efforts, the Allies had time. At least forty-eight hours, more likely a week. For hadn't Chamberlain told the British Parliament that Germany was prepared to strike at the Low Countries, hinted that she was even expected to do so?

Whether Holland abandoned hopes of neutrality and took the Allies into full confidence in the days before the latest blitzkrieg probably will not be known until the war is over. But the Allies must have known. And so they must have prepared.

It is proved by arrival of British staff officers in Brussels and The Hague within a few hours after Germany's planes first droned across the borders with their bomb loads.

Summed up, it meant the element of surprise was lacking, except for the possible surprise of German parachute landings and resourcefulness of the invaders in crossing water and air defenses.

Nazi Secret Weapon Described As Death Ray

Machine Necessary Can Be Carried On Soldier's Back, Rome Radio Reports

New York, May 13 (AP)—A death ray machine, small enough to be carried on a soldier's back, is the new German secret weapon, according to a Rome broadcast intercepted tonight by C. B. S.

MAY 14 1940

An English language newscast from Rome's station 2RO-8, C. B. S. said, quoted the Munich radio as saying the new type weapon "is a kind of death dealing wave, or ray" which soldiers packed on their backs.

"These rays, according to the Munich radio, can exterminate any living creature in a radius of 1,000 feet," the Rome broadcast asserted.

"The German station went on to explain that the substance has been obtained from the splitting of atoms. No means of protecting oneself against the action of this new exterminator has yet been discovered, said the Munich radio."

Doubts New Weapon Is Gas

CHICAGO, May 13 (AP).—Dr. W. Lee Lewis, developer of the Lewisite gas, which was manufactured in large quantities at the end of the World War, said today he did not believe gas was the secret weapon the Germans were reported to have used in the Belgian invasion.

"More likely it is a tremendously powerful explosive," the chemist said. "Although there have been great advances in development of gas for defense, the emphasis in the present war has been on mechanism."

MAY 14 1940

Dr. Lewis was inclined to doubt reports that the new weapon was a gas which put soldiers to sleep for about an hour. He said: "There have been rumors of such a gas for a long time, but it has never been proved a reality. I personally don't think Hitler would spend his time developing a gas that would let his victims recover in an hour."

Lewisite, a desiccant-like mustard gas, was developed in 1918, but never used in combat. Dr. Lewis described it as an oily substance about the consistency of olive oil, which was slightly stronger than mustard and which, because of its arsenic content, was a systemic poison as well as a searing agent.

Allied Spokesman Estimates Amount Involved In Purchases In U. S.

French Air Expert Says Fastest Possible Delivery Is Being Asked

MAY 14 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 13—An Allied spokesman announced here today that England and France have bought about $350,000,000 of American airplanes and airplane motors within the last four weeks.

Rene Pleven, French air expert of the Allied purchasing mission, gave the estimate. He said that $150,000,000 additional purchases had been made since Arthur Purvis, director of the mission, announced $20,000,000 worth of purchases two weeks ago.

The recent purchases have been of Lockheed, Consolidated and Martin planes. Earlier contracts were for Bell, Curtiss-Wright and Douglas craft.

Pleven said additional contracts were near completion for North American and Boeing models. He estimated the Boeing contract would approximate $25,000,000.

The invasion of Holland and Belgium, Pleven told reporters, had not affected the plane-purchasing program because the Allies already were buying all they could and asking the fastest possible deliveries.

Asked whether the planes were being delivered fast enough, he replied: "They are never fast enough."

THIS FIGURE, IT WAS DECLARED, INCLUDED 34 SHOT DOWN BY FRENCH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND 88 BY FRENCH AND BRITISH AIRPLANES IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM.

FIFTY GERMAN PLANES WERE DESTROYED ON THE GROUND IN AIRDROMES IN THE NETHERLANDS WHILE THE OTHERS WERE SHOT DOWN BY THE BELGIANS AND BY ALLIED AND NETHERLANDS AIR FORCES IN THE NETHERLANDS AND GERMANY, IT WAS ADDED.

PANAMA, PANAMA, MAY 13-(AP)-A PROPOSAL BY URUGUAY FOR A NEW CONFERENCE OF THE 21 AMERICAN REPUBLICS TO CONSIDER THEIR FUTURE COURSE IN VIEW OF THE INVASION OF THE LOWLAND COUNTRIES

BY GERMANY WAS RECEIVED HERE TODAY BY PRESIDENT AUGUSTO S.BOYD.

THE PRESIDENT OF PANAMA ACTS AS THE CENTRAL AGENT FOR THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS UNDER THE MACHINERY SET UP LAST OCTOBER WHEN THEY DRAFTED THEIR 300-MILE "SAFETY BELT" AROUND THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

URUGUAY PROPOSED IMMEDIATE CONSULTATIONS AMONG THE AMERICAN NATIONS ON THE QUESTION OF RESPECT FOR THE RIGHTS OF NEUTRALITY BY BELLIGERENTS.

MAY 14 1940

URUGUAY'S FOREIGN MINISTER, ALBERTO GUANI, ADVISED PRESIDENT BOYD THAT THE AMERICAN NATIONS WOULD RECEIVE A TENTATIVE TEXT OF A PROPOSED JOINT DECLARATION WITHIN 24 HOURS.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN NATION, OFF WHOSE COAST WAS FOUGHT THE NAVAL BATTLE BETWEEN BRITISH FLEET UNITS AND THE GERMAN RAIDER ADMIRAL GRAF SPEE, TOOK ACTION TODAY SEVERAL HOURS AFTER THE ARGENTINE FOREIGN MINISTER, JOSE MARIA CANTILO, CALLED UPON THE AMERICAS TO ADOPT A "NON-BELLIGERENT" ATTITUDE TO THE WAR.

IN WASHINGTON, SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL DISPLAYED NO ENTHUSIASM OVER CANTILO'S SUGGESTION. UNITED STATES OFFICIALS ALSO FOUND LEGAL OBJECTIONS TO A POLICY OF "NON-BELLIGERENCY," POINTING OUT THAT THE UNITED STATES ADMINISTRATION IS BOUND BY A DOMESTIC NEUTRALITY LAW.

IN RIO DE JANEIRO, DR.CHARLES FENWICK, UNITED STATES REPRESENTATIVE ON THE PERMANENT NEUTRALITY COMMITTEE ESTABLISHED AT PANAMA, SAID IT WAS HIS PERSONAL OPINION THAT AMERICAN NATIONS SHOULD TAKE MEASURES TO COUNTERACT GERMANY'S ATTACKS ON EUROPEAN NEUTRALS.

EMPHASIZING HE SPOKE ONLY FOR HIMSELF AND NOT THE COMMITTEE, DR.FENWICK PRAISED THE ARGENTINE SUGGESTION AND ADVOCATED GIVING ONE SIDE "ALL ECONOMIC AID" WHILE REFUSING TO DEAL "WITH THE AGGRESSOR."

MADRID, MAY 13-(AP)-SPANISH INDUSTRIALISTS FEAR THEY WILL BE HARD HIT BY THE GERMAN INVASION OF BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS.

AT THE SAME TIME, PUBLIC CONCERN OVER THE POSSIBILITY OF SPAIN BEING DRAGGED INTO THE WAR WAS CALMED SOMEWHAT BY PREMIER FRANCISCO FRANCO'S PROCLAMATION YESTERDAY ORDERING SPANIARDS TO OBSERVE STRICT NEUTRALITY.

INVASION OF THE LOW COUNTRIES CAUGHT SPANISH BUSINESS MEN WITH LARGE ACCUMULATIONS OF BELGIAN, FRENCH AND DUTCH EXCHANGE EARMARKED FOR THE PURCHASE OF COMMUNICATION EQUIPMENT, FERTILIZER AND OTHER PRODUCTS NEEDED IN THE SPANISH RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM.

MADRID LEARNED THAT SEVERAL SPANISH SHIPS LOADED WITH FERTILIZER, WHICH ALREADY HAD BEEN PAYED FOR, WERE TRAPPED IN ANTWERP.

COMPARISONS OF THE AIR FORCES OF THE BELLIGERENTS IN EUROPE ARE LARGELY GUESSWORK, BOTH AS TO THE NUMBERS AVAILABLE AND ENGAGED AND THE NUMBERS DESTROYED SINCE GERMANY INVADED THE LOW COUNTRIES FRIDAY MORNING.

BEST AVAILABLE ESTIMATES PLACE THE RIVAL STRENGTH

IN THIS ORDER:

GERMANY: AT LEAST 20,000 WARPLANES, HALF OF THEM FOR "FIRST-LINE" SERVICE.

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE: PROBABLY NO MORE THAN 8,000, ONLY HALF OF THESE AVAILABLE FOR FIGHTING AND BOMBING.

(HALF OF THE 2,000 PLANES REPORTED DELIVERED TO THE BRITISH AND FRENCH WITHIN RECENT MONTHS ARE TRAINING SHIPS, UNFIT FOR WAR DUTY.)

(MORE)

BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS: PROBABLY NOT MORE THAN 1,000 TOGETHER.

NEW WARPLANE CONSTRUCTION IN GERMANY HAS BEEN ESTIMATED NOW PROCEEDING AT THE RATE OF 2,000 A MONTH; IN BRITAIN AND FRANCE, 1,500 A MONTH TOGETHER, ALTHOUGH THEY ARE BUYING HEAVILY FROM AMERICAN MAKERS IN ADDITION.

(NY) "THE BATTLE OF THE WEST" FOR POSSESSION OF THE LOW COUNTRIES WAS RAGING TODAY OVER LAND WHERE MEN HAVE FALLEN THROUGH THE CENTURIES SINCE CAESAR'S LEGIONS CROSSED THE IJSSEL RIVER TO SUBDUE THE GERMAN BARBARIANS.

THE FIGHTING GOES ON NEAR THE FIELDS WHERE NAPOLEON MET HIS GREAT DECISIVE DEFEAT AT THE HANDS OF WELLINGTON AND BLUECHER, WHERE THE BURGUNDIANS FOUGHT IN AN EARLIER DAY, AND WHERE IN A MORE REMOTE DAY ATTILA THE HUN WAS CRUSHED BY THE CHRISTIANS.

MEN ARE DYING THERE WHOSE FATHERS DIED IN THE BRITISH RETREAT FROM MONS, IN THE WORLD WAR ATTACK ON THE LIEGE FORTRESSES, THE TERRIBLE BATTLES OF THE MARNE AND VERDUN.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT SHELLS EXPLODE, ARTILLERY BOOMS AND MACHINE-GUNS CHATTER WHERE ARMINIUS AND HIS TEUTON HORDES SLEW LUCIUS QUINTILUS VARUS AND 20,000 BRAVE ROMAN LEGIONNAIRES IN HAND-TO-HAND CONFLICT.

AND THE BATTLE, ACCORDING TO REPORTS, IS JUST BEGINNING.

WHATEVER THE OUTCOME, IT IS BOUND TO GO DOWN IN HISTORY ALONG WITH THE GREAT BATTLES OF THE PAST--GETTYSBURG AND BLOODY SHILOH, SEDAN AND HASTINGS AND AGINCOURT, BLENHEIM AND BATHLES AS ANCIENT AS MARATHON.

MARATHON, FOUGHT BETWEEN THE PERSIANS AND THE ATHENIANS IN 490 B.C., IS THE FIRST OF FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES LISTED BY SIR EDWARD CREASY, WHOSE WORK WAS PUBLISHED IN 1851. HERODOTUS ESTIMATED THE PERSIAN DEAD AT 6,400 AND THE ATHENIAN AT 192.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, SON OF PHILLIP OF MACEDONIA, FOUGHT ANOTHER ANCIENT DECISIVE BATTLE IN 331 B.C. AT ARBELA OR GAUGAMELA ON THE PLAINS OF MESOPOTAMIA, ROUTING THE ARMY OF DARIUS THE PERSIAN.

MOVING FORWARD TO THE SECOND PUNIC WAR--BETWEEN ROME AND CARTHAGE--WE COME TO METAURUS AND THE YEAR 207 B.C. HANNIBAL HAD A BROTHER HASDRUBAL, LIKE HIMSELF A GENERAL. HASDRUBAL ELUDED THE ROMANS IN SPAIN AND STARTED FOR ITALY.

HASDRUBAL WAS DEFEATED AT METAURUS AND HIS HEAD THROWN OVER THE RAMPARTS TO HANNIBAL.

THE BATTLE OF CHALONS, IN 451, WAS FOUGHT BETWEEN THE GOTHS OF THE KINGDOM OF TOULOUSE, UNDER THEODORIC, AND THEIR ALLIES, AGAINST ATTILA THE HUN AND HIS VAST HORDES. ATTILA BESIEGED ORLEANS AND THE WALLS WERE ALREADY CRUMBLING WHEN THEODORIC AND AETIUS APPEARED. ATTILA RETREATED, BUT THE BATTLE WAS JOINED NEAR CHALONS, AND SOME CHRONICLERS SAY 162,000 WERE SLAIN. OTHERS SAY 300,000 WERE KILLED. IT WAS A NO-DECISION FIGHT ACTUALLY. NEITHER SIDE CLAIMED VICTORY, BUT NEITHER DESIRED FURTHER FIGHTING, AND THE HUNS LEFT GAUL FOREVER.

PARIS, MAY 13-(AP)-THREE AIR RAID ALARMS IN ONE DAY ARE THREE TOO MANY, BUT PARISIANS ACCEPT THEM CALMLY AND EVEN CHEERFULLY.

I WAS IN MONTMARTRE AT MIDNIGHT SUNDAY WHEN THE SIRENS FIRST SHRILLED. AN AMERICAN MECHANICAL ENGINEER, JAMES KENNEDY OF CINCINNATI, WAS WITH ME.

MAY 14 1940

WE HAD BEEN IN A NIGHT CLUB, LIKE THOUSANDS OF OTHER PARIS RESIDENTS. MONTMARTRE LIFE ON SUNDAY NIGHT--WHEN WARTIME RESTRICTIONS ON WHAT YOU MAY DRINK ARE SUSPENDED--WAS AT ITS HEIGHT.

BUT IT ALL STOPPED SUDDENLY. MUSICIANS CALMLY BUT NONE THE LESS URGENTLY PACKED UP THEIR INSTRUMENTS. WAITERS HURRIED FROM TABLE TO TABLE COLLECTING THE CHECKS AS THE CUSTOMERS AROSE WITH ONE UNANIMOUS IDEA: GET INTO AN AIR RAID SHELTER.

JIM AND I WENT DOWN INTO THE PIGALLE SUBWAY STATION, WHERE WE FOUND POLICEMEN DIRECTING TRAFFIC, AND HERDING THE MOVING OF PEOPLE LINES AND INTO THE DEEPEST SUBWAY LEVEL.

FIRST CAME THE HOLIDAY CELEBRANTS, MANY OF THEM STILL LAUGHING GAYLY AND SHOUTING TO THEIR FRIENDS AS THOUGH NOTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY WAS HAPPENING.

MAY 14 1940

THEN THOSE WHO HAD BEEN AROUSED FROM SLEEP SHUFFLED IN SOLEMNLY, MANY CARRYING SLEEPY-EYED CHILDREN WITH UNCOMBED HAIR. THE UNDERGROUND LIGHT AND NOISE MADE MANY OF THE BABIES CRY, BUT THEIR PARENTS CAME FOREARMED WITH CAMP STOOLS, BOTTLES OF MILK AND PACIFIERS.

I MET A FRENCH FRIEND WHO WORE A LOOK OF UTTER DISGUST.

"WHAT'S THE MATTER, ANDRE?" I ASKED.

30.24-2255

IN THE YEAR 732 CHARLES MARTEL FOUGHT A GREAT BATTLE AT TOURS, DRIVING BACK INTO SPAIN THE SARACENS WHO WERE THREATENING ALL OF WESTERN EUROPE.

TWO OTHER DECISIVE BATTLES WERE THOSE OF HASTINGS AND ORLEANS. IN THE FIRST, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR DEFEATED HAROLD, LAST OF THE SAXONS, IN 1066, AND AT ORLEANS IN 1429 JOAN OF ARC CRUSHED THE ENGLISH AND BURGUNDIANS AND MADE POSSIBLE THE CORONATION OF CHARLES VII AT RHEIMS.

MAY 14 1940

THE ENGLISH FARED BETTER IN 1588 WHEN PHILLIP II, HOPING TO DETHRONE ELIZABETH AND IMPOSE THE INQUISITION ON ENGLAND, RASHLY SENT FORTH HIS GREAT ARMADA OF GALLEONS, GALLEASES AND HULKS, ONLY TO MEET DISASTER. NOR MORE THAN HALF THE SHIPS REACHED SPAIN. MORE THAN 60 WERE LOST.

AT BLENHEIM, GERMANY, IN 1704, THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH, FAVORITE GENERAL OF QUEEN ANNE, GAVE THE BRITISH ANOTHER BRILLIANT VICTORY WHEN HIS ARMY OF ENGLISH, DUTCH, DANES AND GERMANS, MAINLY MERCENARIES, NUMBERING ABOUT 53,000 WITH THE FORCES OF PRINCE EUGENE OF SAVOY, DID SOME RAPID MARCHING, AND SKILFULLY PRECIPITATED A BATTLE. THE FRENCH AND BAVARIANS, NUMBERING ABOUT 60,000, WERE SCATTERED OR DRIVEN OVER THE RHINE AFTER 14,000 SURRENDERED.

IN THE SPACE OF TWO HOURS ON A SUMMER'S DAY IN 1709, CHARLES XII OF SWEDEN LOST THE FRUITS OF NINE YEARS' VICTORIES AND ALL OF HIS ARMY WHICH HAD TERRORIZED EUROPE. CHARLES MET THE ARMY OF PETER THE GREAT OF RUSSIA AT POLTAVA, A FORTIFIED CITY ON THE FRONTIER OF THE UKRAINE. THE SWEDES LOST 8,000 IN DEAD, 6,000 WERE TAKEN PRISONERS, 12,000 OTHERS LATER CAPTURED. SIBERIA WAS THEIR LOT.

THE BRITISH FARED BADLY IN 1777 AT SARATOGA WHEN THE AMERICAN COLONIALS UNDER GATES FORCED BURGOYNE AND 7,900 MEN TO SURRENDER AND THUS ENDED THE THREAT OF ATTACK FROM THE NORTH.

OTHER MAJOR BATTLES COULD BE LISTED: THE DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS AT SEBASTAPOL IN 1855 BY THE BRITISH AND FRENCH; GETTYSBURG WHERE THE TIDE TURNED IN FAVOR OF THE NORTH; PLEVNA IN THE RUSSO-TURKISH WAR WHERE OSMAN PASHA SURRENDERED 40,000 HALF STARVED MEN TO GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS WHO HAD LOST 16,000 RUSSIANS AND 5,000 RUMANIANS; SEDAN IN THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR WHEN 80,000 FRENCH SURRENDERED, 175,000 WERE SHUT UP IN METZ AND THE ROAD TO PARIS LAY OPEN.

THEN THERE WERE THE BATTLES OF MANILA BAY AND SANTIAGO WHEN THE UNITED STATES SHOWED ITS SUPERIOR STRENGTH TO THE SPANISH; AND THE GREAT WORLD WAR BATTLES OF JUTLAND, THE MARNE, FIRST AND SECOND, THE ARGONNE, AND TANNENBERG.

THE "LITTLE MAGINOT LINE"--EXTENDING FRANCE'S FAMED WALL OF STEEL AND CONCRETE FROM LUXEMBOURG PAST BELGIUM TO THE NORTH SEA--PROVIDES THE FRENCH REPLY TO A THREAT OF INVASION BY WAY OF THE LOW COUNTRIES.

FRENCH OFFICERS DECLARED AS EARLY AS LAST AUTUMN THAT THE FIELD FORTIFICATIONS OPPOSITE THE BELGIAN FRONTIER, BUCKLED BEHIND LUXEMBOURG TO THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE--FROM SWITZERLAND TO LUXEMBOURG--WERE READY TO MEET ANY EMERGENCY. IT WAS ALSO ANNOUNCED THAT A SECOND DEFENSIVE SYSTEM HAD BEEN BUILT IN REAR OF THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE.

MAY 14 1940

SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF WAR LAST SEPTEMBER, THE MAGINOT SYSTEM AND ITS GERMAN COUNTERPART, THE SIEGFRIED LINE, HAVE PRODUCED A STALEMATE IN HOSTILITIES ALONG THE FRENCH-GERMAN BORDER.

THE "LITTLE MAGINOT LINE" IS DESIGNED TO PREVENT FLANKING OF THE MAIN LINE AS WELL AS TO BLOCK THE CLASSIC ROUTE OF INVASION OF FRANCE THROUGH BELGIUM.

PLANS FOR EXTENSION OF THE FORTIFICATIONS TO GIVE FRANCE AN UNBROKEN LINE OF POTENTIAL FIRE FROM SWITZERLAND TO THE NORTH SEA WERE LAID EARLY IN 1938 WHEN GERMANY BEGAN ITS CAMPAIGN OF EXPANSION BY ABSORBING AUSTRIA.

FORESEEING A GERMAN INVASION OF BELGIUM ALONG THE LINES OF THE 1914 CAMPAIGN, THE FRENCH BEGAN ERECTING KEY FORTIFICATIONS OPPOSITE THE BELGIAN BORDER.

THESE FORTIFICATIONS WERE ADAPTED TO THE DENSE FORESTS AND JAGGED HILLS, BROKEN BY THE VALLEYS OF THE MEUSE AND THE OISE RIVERS, WITH CROSS-LINES OF FIRE DIRECTED FROM LIGHT FORTS ABOVE THE GROUND. IN THIS RESPECT THE DEFENSES THERE CONTRAST WITH THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE WITH ITS HEAVY SUBTERRANEAN FORTS.

ANTI-TANK DITCHES AND RAILS DRIVEN INTO THE GROUND RUN CLOSELY PARALLEL TO THE BORDER. BEHIND THEM LIE SMALL FORTS WITH ANTI-TANK GUNS, AND THEN A LINE OF LARGER FORTS.

MAY 14 1940

BEHIND THE GRAND DUCHY OF LUXEMBOURG, THE DEFENSE LINES SWING TO THE WEST THROUGH AN IRON-MINING REGION SCARRED WITH CLIFFS, SUNKEN MINES AND TANGLED WOODS. FARTHER WEST, IN THE FORESTS AND VALLEYS NEAR BELGIUM, THE FIRST LINE DEFENSES CONTINUE TO PRESENT A VARIETY OF PILLBOXES, WATER-FILLED PITS, CLOSELY STACKED POSTS AND BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS.

SINCE THE START OF WARFARE, THE WORK OF STRENGTHENING THESE DEVICES HAS CONTINUED, LEADING MILITARY EXPERTS TO THE BELIEF THAT THE EXTENDED MAGINOT LINE WOULD THWART INVASION THROUGH BELGIUM AS WELL AS ANY THRUST ACROSS THE RHINE.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE HITLERIAN BLITZKRIEG THUS FAR HAS BEEN MET WITH PROBABLY BETTER THAN NORMAL EXPECTANCY BY THE DEFENDERS.

THE BATTLE CRISIS IS GROWING THIS MORNING BUT THE ALLIES, HAVING PERFORMED THE ESSENTIAL TASK OF PREVENTING THE NAZIS FROM OVERRUNNING THE TWO LITTLE NEUTRALS IN THE FIRST FEW HOURS, CAN GATHER SATISFACTION FROM THEIR OWN STEADILY INCREASING STRENGTH.

EVERY HOUR NOW THAT THE ALLIES ARE ABLE TO HOLD THE ATTACK RAISES THEIR POWERS OF RESISTANCE THROUGH ARRIVALS OF ANGLO-FRENCH REINFORCEMENTS.

MAY 14 1940

THE NEXT TWENTY-FOUR HOURS ARE LIKELY TO BE CRUCIAL IN WHAT BOTH THE GERMAN AND FRENCH PRESS TODAY AGREE IS THE GREATEST ATTACK IN HISTORY.

THE NAZIS INCREASED THE FURY OF THEIR ASSAULT THIS MORNING IN AN EFFORT TO ACHIEVE A QUICK SUCCESS. HERR HITLER WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE GAMBLED EVERYTHING ON A SPEED WHICH WOULD GIVE HIM ANOTHER NORWEGIAN TRIUMPH.

THIS MAY EASILY BE THE TURNING POINT OF THE WHOLE WAR.

A GERMAN FAILURE TO BREAK THROUGH IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE AND ACHIEVE THE OBJECTIVES OF THEIR BLITZKRIEG MAY COST THEM THE WAR. I DON'T MEAN THAT THE CONFLICT WOULD NECESSARILY END AT ONCE, BUT THE END WOULD BE IN SIGHT.

OBVIOUSLY THE THING CUTS BOTH WAYS, AND A GREAT NAZI SUCCESS NOW WOULD LEAVE THE ALLIES IN A DESPERATE POSITION.

THE GERMANS THIS MORNING WOULD SEEM TO HAVE SUMMED UP THEIR ACHIEVEMENTS RATHER ACCURATELY. THEY CLAIM TO BE SWARMING OVER MOST OF THE NORTHERN HALF OF THE NETHERLANDS, TO CONTROL LUXEMBOURG COMPLETELY, AND TO HAVE CUT THROUGH THE BELGIAN DEFENSES ABOVE THE HEAVILY FORTIFIED LIEGE SECTOR.

THE IMMEDIATE OBJECTIVES OF THE GERMANS ARE THE ESTABLISHMENT OF AIR (AND SUBMARINE) BASES ON THE DUTCH COAST, AND APPARENTLY THE TURNING OF THE ALLIED LEFT FLANK.

THE SETTING UP OF AIR AND SUBMARINE BASES AMONG THE ISLANDS AND IRREGULAR POINTS OF LAND WHICH JUT OUT FROM THE JAGGED DUTCH COAST BETWEEN THE MOUTHS OF THE LEK, WAAL, MAAS AND SCHELDT RIVERS, NOT ONLY WOULD PERMIT OF A HEAVY ONSLAUGHT ON THE ALLIED BLOCKADE AND COMMERCIAL SHIPPING, BUT THE BOMBING OF ENGLAND.

I ASSUME FROM THE ATTENTION WHICH THE NAZI HIGH COMMAND IS PAYING TO THE LIEGE-MAASTRICHT DISTRICT AT THE JUNCTION OF THE DUTCH-BELGIAN-GERMAN FRONTIERS, THAT THEY ARE ATTEMPTING TO BREAK THROUGH AS THEY DID IN THE WORLD WAR AND TURN THE LEFT WING OF THE ALLIED FRONT.

IF SUCCESSFUL THIS WOULD ENABLE THEM TO ROLL THE ALLIED ARMY BACK TOWARDS THE SOUTH AND BRING THE NAZIS TO THE CHANNEL PORTS OPPOSITE ENGLAND.

MAY 14 1940

THE MUCH TALKED OF INVASION OF BRITAIN MIGHT THEN BECOME A NIGHTMARISH POSSIBILITY. CERTAINLY THE GERMANS WOULD BE ABLE TO UNDERTAKE TO GIVE THE BRITISH THE BLOOD-BATH FROM THE AIR WHICH BERLIN HAS BEEN TALKING ABOUT SO MUCH.

THE LIEGE FORTIFICATIONS REPRESENT THE STRONGEST POINT IN THE BELGIAN "MAGINOT" LINE BECAUSE, FORSOOTH, IT IS THE MOST VITAL.

JUST AS THIS WAS BEING WRITTEN THE GERMANS ISSUED A CLAIM TO CAPTURE OF THE CITADEL TO THE GREAT LIEGE FORTRESS, WHICH PLAYED SUCH A MOMENTOUS PART IN HOLDING UP THE FIRST RUSH OF THE GERMANS AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WORLD WAR. THIS DOESN'T NECESSARILY MEAN THE COLLAPSE OF THE ENTIRE SYSTEM OF LIEGE DEFENSES.

FROM THE SPEED WITH WHICH THE GERMANS STRUCK IT IS OBVIOUS THAT

30.24 -2259

THEY WERE WORKING FROM PLANS WHICH HAD BEEN THOROUGHLY PREPARED OVER A LONG PERIOD. AS IN THE CASE OF NORWAY, HERR HITLER PLACED MUCH RELIANCE ON HIS "FIFTH COLUMN", ESPECIALLY IN HOLLAND.

THIS LATEST DISPLAY GIVES US A RATHER COMPLETE PICTURE OF THE EFFECT OF NAZI ORGANIZATIONS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES. THE NAZIS NOW HAVE SHOWN THEIR HAND IN AUSTRIA, CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, POLAND, DANZIG, NORWAY, DENMARK, THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM.

THESE ARE APART FROM THE NEAR REVOLUTION IN RUMANIA AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR, AND DIFFICULTIES CAUSED IN NUMEROUS OTHER COUNTRIES BY NAZI AGENTS AND NAZI PARTIES CREATED AMONG CITIZENS.

MAY 13 1940

ALL THE NAZI ORGANIZATIONS HAVE PROVED TO BE AGENTS OF THE FATHERLAND, READY TO STRIKE AT THE GOVERNMENT OF THE COUNTRY IN WHICH THEY RESIDE IF AND WHEN THE FATHERLAND GAVE THE ORDER. MAY 14 1940

LONDON HEARS 'HOLLAND' BROADCAST; BERLIN SAYS ROTTERDAM HAS FALLEN

Netherlands Radio Station So Located It May Have Been Occupied by Germans—Proclamation Purported to Have Been Issued by Army Chief.

BERLIN, May 14 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced tonight that Rotterdam, the great western Netherlands seaport, had capitulated.

The text of the High Command's announcement:

"Under tremendous pressure of the attacks of German diving bombers and the approaching attack of armored units on the city, Rotterdam has capitulated and thereby preserved itself from destruction.

"In north Belgium, German armored units have reached Ligny, historic battleground of 1815, in pursuit of the retreating enemy."

Ligny is eight miles north of Charleroi, famous battlefield of the world war, where the Allies were forced to retreat to the Marne.

Napoleon defeated the Prussians there under Blucher two days before the battle of Waterloo.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—A broadcast heard in London tonight identified by the announcer as coming from the Dutch radio quoted the Dutch Army Commander, Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, as declaring "our resistance has been broken by overwhelming power."

(The Associated Press has no direct report on this from Amsterdam).

The broadcast said that Rotterdam and Utrecht, second and fourth cities of the Netherlands, had surrendered.

The broadcast said that Rotterdam had been bombed and Utrecht threatened with destruction so, "to save further sacrifice of men," the cities had surrendered.

It added that Dutch troops are "at the moment asked to exercise control and await the arrival of the German armies."

No Dutch broadcast was heard here after 8:10 P. M. (3:10 P. M., New York time).

[The Holland broadcasting station is at Hilversum, eighteen miles southeast of Amsterdam and just east of the main water line to which the Dutch have retreated. Thus, it is possible that the radio is now controlled by the German army.]

Before the intercepted broadcast, Queen Wilhelmina, now in exile in London, had urged her subjects not to give up hope and Gen. Winkelman had issued a communique which said the northern part of Rotterdam was firmly in Dutch hands and that a German attempt to force the Ijsselmeer dike had failed so far.

The broadcast voice heard here said:

"Our resistance has been broken by overwhelming power.

"We have nothing to reproach ourselves with. Dutchmen, you have behaved bravely. Keep behaving patriotically. Do not forget you are Dutch.

"The Netherlands has not ceased to exist.

"After the war is over Holland will rise again as a free nation."

Besides the little homeland of about 12,700 square miles and 8,600,000 population, in which resistance apparently is ended, the Dutch empire includes possessions in the East and West Indies, totalling nearly 750,000 square miles and with a population of more than 60,000,000.

The decision to remove the Government to a safer place in England was believed to indicate that, even should the Germans occupy all of Holland, the Dutch intend trying to hold together their empire.

OIL TANKS SET AFIRE.

AMSTERDAM, May 14 (A. P.).—Huge petroleum stores in Amsterdam were set afire today by the Dutch as a defense measure, it was officially announced, as the Dutch Army defending western Holland fell back to its main water defense line.

The retreat to the defense line in Utrecht province was announced in a High Command communique.

The Mayor of Amsterdam broadcast a message to the citizens of the Dutch capital assuring them that there was no reason for anxiety, since the fires in the harbor district were started by the military authorities as a precautionary measure.

The principal conflagrations were at petroleum storage places in the western part of the habor and the Battafsche petroleum depot across the harbor from the central part of the city.

Hold Zuider Zee Dam.

The Dutch High Command reported that a German thrust at the huge sixteen-mile dam across the Zuider Zee, which holds back the North Sea from the Zuider Zee had been repulsed.

A communique said that the attack on the dam was preceded by artillery fire for an hour.

The High Command report also said that German planes attacked ships of the Netherlands Navy yesterday along the coast of the north Holland province.

Five planes which came over the Dutch naval base at Den Helder were shot down yesterday.

Earlier today the High Command announced the Dutch Army had taken up positions in the strong defense line in Utrecht province.

The communique was issued by Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander-in-chief of Holland's land and sea forces and the highest representative in Holland of the Dutch Government, which now is in England.

He announced that German forces in control of Northeastern provinces had failed in an attempt to capture the vital sixteen-mile dike separating the Zuider Zee from the North Sea.

The Commander-in-Chief said that the Government left Holland in view of its duties to the entire Kingdom, including the Dutch overseas possessions, and could carry on as well in London as in The Hague.

Message From Wilhelmina.

In a proclamation broadcast over the Dutch radio, Queen Wilhelmina said that her country "remains a full member of the community of States and will be in position to continue co-operation with her allies. . . . The Netherlands will, by the grace of God, regain all their territory. Do not despair."

The communique summed up the military situation as follows:

"In the northern provinces the enemy has established himself. An attempt to force the Ijsselmeer dyke has failed up to now.

"The northern part of Rotterdam is firmly in our hands.

"The field army retreated last night and now holds our well-known new Dutch waterline.

"The position of Den Helder (North Sea naval base) is intact.

"The situation in Brabant is uncertain.

"The province of Zeeland is firmly in our hands.

"Our air defense remains, notwithstanding heavy losses, very active.

"The struggle is heavy. However, it is worth our while. Our independent national existence, which we won centuries ago under the leadership of the Oranges, is at stake. Long live her Majesty the Queen. Long live our native country."

[In London, authorities attached to the Netherlands legation said there had not been a single instance of failure in the Netherlands inundation defenses.

["The only trouble we experienced," said one official, "was the parachute troops."

[Asked if the Zuider Zee dam would be blown up if necessary, he said: "If it is necessary for the defense of the country you may say it definitely will be blown up."]

Germans Go Fast.

In the south, German troops, advancing with Blitzkrieg rapidity, marched west through the province of North Brabant, then struck north across the strategic bridge over the Hollandsch Diep, at Moerdijk, and into the vicinity of Dordrecht, only twelve miles southeast of Rotterdam.

In the southern section of Rotterdam itself, presumably around Waalhaven Airport, German detachments were still resisting stubbornly the Dutch efforts to dislodge them which have been going on since these Nazi troops were landed in one of the opening moves of the Lowland invasion last Friday.

Tanks Pass Over Marshes.

To penetrate far across the country, thus virtually cutting it in two, the heavily motorized German column apparently had forced its way through the defense system in the Peel Marshes, across the Maas River from the German border.

Gaining the bridge at Moerdijk put them in control of a vital line of communication. This bridge, which spans the Hollandsch Diep, one of the principal outlets of the Maas, not only connects the northern and southern portions of the country, but also is on the principal railway line between Belgium and the principal cities of the Netherlands.

The Dutch hoped for Allied relief from the German pressure, at least in the south. French troops two days ago were said to have established contact with the Germans in the eastern portion of North Brabant, the province which borders on Belgium, and today they were said to be receiving re-enforcements.

But the Dutch authorities did not know whether the French even with re-enforcements, were on hand in sufficient numbers to be able to cope with the German column.

In only one respect did last night's communique claim success. It said that a captured German flying officer had admitted the "excellent firing of our anti-aircraft artillery" was responsible for heavy German air losses.

Round Up Fifth Columnists.

The communique also paid tribute to "several units of the army and royal navy," saying they had "by their heroic behavior carried on the best traditions of our people, which are also reflected in the determined attitude of the citizens."

With the entire Royal Family, headed by the fifty-nine-year-old Queen Wilhelmina, and including Princess Juliana, Prince Bernhard and their two daughters, the Princesses Beatrix and Irene safely transported to England and The Hague abandoned as the seat of Government, the authorities continued their round-up of persons suspected of "fifth-column" activities.

The arrest of 300 in Amsterdam yesterday made a total of 900 taken into custody since the war began.

Allies Admit Peril In Southern Holland

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 14—Germany's smashing attacks created an "extremely serious" situation for Allied warriors in southern Holland today. In Belgium a great battle was developing for possession of the capital, Brussels.

A military source, appraising the widespread conflict for supremacy in the lowland countries, said that it would be a few days before the course of the war could be told, but that British troops were cooperating with Belgian soldiers in defense of Brussels.

"Rotterdam In Our Hands," Dutch Say

A Netherlands army communique admitted that the Germans held control the northern Holland provinces, but said that "Rotterdam is in our hands."

The Netherlands Government of Premier Derek Jan de Geer arrived here today to join Queen Wilhelmina and the other members of the Dutch royal family who sought sanctuary in England.

The British military source who said that the situation in southern Holland is "extremely serious" also said it was regarded in London as "likely" that Liege was isolated, but expressed belief that fighting is going on at the Liege citadel, which the Germans reported yesterday was captured.

British Envoy Among Refugees

Among the refugees from Holland to arrive in England today were the British Minister at The Hague, Sir Neville Bland and members of his staff.

The Netherlands Minister of Justice, Prof. Pieter S. Gerbrandy, said eleven members of the Government came to England aboard a British warship, as did the Queen and the other members of the royal family who arrived yesterday—Princess Juliana, Prince Bernhard and their two daughters, the Princesses Beatrix and Irene.

Sir John Monck, representing Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, met the Dutch Ministers at St. Pancras Station, where the greatest secrecy was invoked to shield the Cabinet members from the curious.

Refuge On Own Soil Bombed

The Netherlands minister to London, Dr. Michiels Van Verduijnen, said the Queen left Holland against her wishes, solely because her advisers convinced her of the importance of avoiding capture by the Germans and the disintegration of her Government.

He said the Queen's original intention had been to go to the south of Holland, which is strongly fortified. But before she could get there the German Intelligence Service learned of the proposed move and the area was heavily bombed.

The minister said Germany had commanded that Queen Wilhelmina and her Government be taken "at all costs."

May Take Over Arms Plants

With the appointment of Ernest Bevin, trade union leader, as Minister of Labor, Britain's powerful trade unions announced today that labor is putting all its energy into a drive to turn out munitions.

The Laborite Herald reported the Government is planning to bring all munitions factories under state ownership and control and to eliminate private profits.

Bevin declared that, if the Government would not allow the "vested interests" to stand in the way, "I will ask my people to work like hell to save the lives of our lads."

In addition to Bevin, Prime Minister Churchill's latest Cabinet appointees are L. S. Amery, as Secretary for India, and Malcolm MacDonald, son of Ramsay MacDonald, as Minister of Health. Lord Woolton was retained as Minister of Food.

British Warships Shell Nazis

Meanwhile, British troops rushed to stiffen the resistance of the Belgians, who appeared to be falling back from the salient formed by the River Meuse (Maas) and the Albert Canal, toward a shorter and more easily defended line.

The Admiralty announced that British warships were helping the Dutch and Belgian forces by bombarding plane-landed German troops on the coast.

A Dutch official who arrived today told of fourteen big German transport planes landing at the airdrome between The Hague and Rotterdam, believing it to be in German hands. Every man in the planes was captured.

An Air Ministry communique last night said the Royal Air Force shot down forty or more German planes in battles over the Low Countries and bombed German troop columns in Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. This brought the number of German planes reported shot down by the British since the start of the German invasion last Friday to approximately 135.

British Use Secret Planes

The British communiques revealed the R. A. F. has been using secret types of planes.

Until the war spread to Holland and Belgium, the British spitfires, hurricanes, Wellingtons and Blenheims bore the brunt of the war in the air.

A Bristol-Beaufort, described as the fastest twin-engined bomber in the world, took part in the attack on the German-occupied Waalhaven airdrome near Rotterdam. The Beaufort is said to be capable of "300 miles per hour plus."

The new bomber carries a crew of four—pilot, navigator, gunner and radio operator—and has a power-operated gun turret amidships, with four guns mounted forward.

Dutch Cabinet Reaches London

Wilhelmina Rules From Buckingham Palace —Plot to Kidnap Her Disclosed.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands was joined in London today by Premier Derek Jan de Geer and other members of the Dutch Government, who arrived here from Holland.

The Dutch Minister of Justice, Prof. Pieter S. Gerbrandy, said that eleven members of the Government came to England aboard a British warship, as did the Queen and the other members of the Royal Family who arrived here yesterday. Sir John Monck, representing the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, met the Dutch Ministers at St. Pancras Station, where the greatest secrecy was invoked to shield the Cabinet members from the curious.

Meanwhile Queen Wilhelmina ruled her people from England.

Rules From Buckingham Palace.

With refugees from the Lowland battlefields streaming into England, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth set an example of hospitality by turning over Buckingham Palace to Queen Wilhelmina until she could establish headquarters elsewhere.

Reported to have fled attacks by German bombers and a threat of kidnaping by Nazi parachute troops, the fifty-nine-year-old Queen crossed the North Sea in a British warship. King George, greeting her at a London railway station, kissed her sun-tanned cheeks. Then, in French, he told her she would stay at Buckingham Palace and that he and Queen Elizabeth were going to Dorsetshire.

Queen Fights Back Tears.

Queen Wilhelmina, dressed in a plain blue ensemble with a service gas mask slung over her shoulder, fought back tears when she caught sight of her daughter, the Princess Juliana, and her son-in-law, Prince Bernhard. They had arrived several hours before with their daughters, the two-year-old Princess Beatrix and nine-months-old Princess Irene.

The announcement that the entire Dutch Government had been transferred to London was made at The Hague, the seat of the Netherlands Government, at the time Queen Wilhelmina arrived here last night.

At Buckingham Palace Queen Wilhelmina received the Dutch Ministers already in London. Among these were Foreign Minister Eelco N. Van Kleffens, who came here by plane several days ago, and the Colonial Minister, Charles J. I. M. Welter.

Ordered Queen Kidnaped.

The Netherlands Minister to London, Dr. Michiels Van Verduijnen, said today that the Queen left Holland against her wishes, solely because her advisers convinced her of the importance of avoiding capture by the Germans and the disintegration of her Government.

He said that the Queen's original intention had been to go to the south of Holland, which is strongly fortified. But before she could get there the German Intelligence Service learned of the proposed move and the area was heavily bombed.

The Minister said that Germany had commanded that Queen Wilhelmina and her Government be taken "at all costs."

Dutch naval, military and air force attaches accompanied the Ministers to London, and some 200 civilian refugees were on the same train.

Winkelman in Charge.

AMSTERDAM, May 14 (A. P.).—Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, Commander-in-Chief of the Dutch Armed Forces, said today that the course of military operations caused Queen Wilhelmina and her Ministers to remove the Government to a safer place and "to assure the rule of all parts of the Kingdom."

The commander, now the highest representative in Holland of the Dutch Government, pointed out in a proclamation that the Dutch jurisdiction includes important possessions overseas.

Gen. Winkelman said in the proclamation:

"It is the clear duty of our Government to assure the rule of all parts of the kingdom. It may not risk being cut off by a local penetration of the enemy. It can also look after the interests of the Motherland when it is able to act and to take decisions elsewhere in close concert with our Allies.

"The Netherlands, therefore, remain under the rule of their legal Government. I am acting as its highest representative in this country.

"All departments of the Central Government, all administrations of provinces and municipalities remain under their respective authorities and assure providing necessities for the population.

"All communications coming from the enemy that the Dutch population would be deserted by its Government are therefore absolutely untrue.

"Citizens must go on doing their first duty: To bear with calmness and resoluteness the visitations to which we are innocently exposed, just as the military forces under extreme difficulties do their first duty—the defense of the Fatherland—with exemplary courage."

WINKELMAN ORDERS ALL TROOPS EXCEPT THOSE IN ZEELAND TO CEASE FIRE

General Acts To Halt Bloodshed As Nazis Occupy Rotterdam — Amsterdam Puts Torch To Stores Of Oil

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, May 15—"A state of war between Germany and the Netherlands continues," with fighting still in progress in the province of Zeeland by the Dutch navy, the Netherlands legation announced today, despite orders from Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, Dutch military commander, that the armies elsewhere cease the struggle.

The announcement was issued in London, where Queen Wilhelmina and her Government have established headquarters.

The German air attache at The Hague was heard to say over the Dutch radio that the Netherlands commander in chief had reported to him that Zeeland was exempted from the surrender "in view of the lack of communications."

[By the Associated Press]

Amsterdam, May 14 — Bomb-blasted and encircled, the Netherlands high command tonight ordered its troops to cease fighting the German invader everywhere except in the fringe of low islands on the kingdom's southwest coast.

The order was given by Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander in chief of the small Dutch army which for five days took all the punishment the German army could administer.

General Empowered To Act

Holland's Queen and Government, in leaving the country, had made General Winkelman their highest representative and empowered him to make any military decisions he considered necessary. He had supreme power, therefore, to issue the "cease fire" order.

The Government had fled to England with Queen Wilhelmina. From there she will rule the Netherlands colonial possessions, an empire of 750,000 square miles and a population of 60,000,000.

Zeeland Still Fighting

But the proud, rich motherland, with 8,600,000 people and a territory of 12,700 miles, has fallen in the war between Germany and England and France from which she tried so hard to stay aloof.

Fighting still was going on tonight in the Zeeland Islands, valuable to Germany as submarine bases from which to attack England. But General Winkelman told his army elsewhere to cease fighting in order to "save the civilian population and prevent further bloodshed."

His order was issued after the Germans had forced the surrender of Rotterdam by furious bombing which had set afire a large part of that great seaport city.

Water Defenses Broken

Into this western seaport, behind all the labyrinth of rivers, floodwaters and canals upon which the Dutch had counted to defend it to the last, the Nazis had driven the claws of their armored columns.

Utrecht, in the center of the main line of water defenses, where the Nazis had broken through, was threatened "with complete annihilation," in the words of General Winkelman.

The general, in ordering cessation of resistance, told his troops to "maintain order until the arrival" of the Germans.

Queen Wilhelmina declared in London:

"The Netherlands will one day, with the help of God, rewin its whole European territory."

Oil Stores Are Fired

Meanwhile, defenders of the Netherlands, caught in their last water and land defenses by the tightening fingers of German invasion, built a great wall of flame and jet-black oil smoke at the harbor edges of Amsterdam, largest city of the kingdom.

Great petroleum stores, both in the eastern part of the harbor at the depot of the Batafsche Petroleum Company and at the western end in petroleum haven, were fired by order of General Winkelman.

The oil fires were started shortly before noon in a dozen tanks used to fuel ships. There were several explosions and a huge column of black smoke and flame bellowed into the sky.

Told To Stay Home

Amsterdam's 800,000 people were told to stay at home and be calm; that the fires were for defense (presumably both as a screen against attack from east or north and to keep the Germans from getting the oil). The harbor is north and east of the central part of Amsterdam.

This act by the high command literally wrote in letters of fire the gravity of the military situation.

The German armies, or at least their "blitz" platoons, have circled below the nation's vaunted main line of flood water and gun defenses and have come up behind, crossing the great bridge over the Hollandsch Diep, southern North Sea inlet on the lower west coast.

[Associaed Press Editor's Note—The Diep, according to military plan, was to have formed the southwestern flange of the water line, but the fact that the great bridge was not destroyed made it impotent as a defense for western Holland.]

Swarming On Rotterdam

These columns were swarming on Rotterdam, a greater part of which was reported afire. Parachute troops and seaplane transports first struck at Rotterdam last Friday, and the fighting in and outside that great seaport has been continuous.

The Hague, seat of Government abandoned last night by Queen and Cabinet, is but fifteen miles northeast of Rotterdam.

To the north, at the eastern end of the sixteen-mile dyke and motor road which runs across the outlet of the Zuider Zee and connects the two northern peninsulas of the country, the Germans are attacking. Last night they assaulted the dyke after an hour's shellfire, but were repulsed.

Should the Germans cross the dyke to De Oever, they would be less than forty miles due north of Amsterdam, with virtually open country between.

Dutch Warships Pounded

This morning German planes pounded Dutch warships off the base at Den Helder, just west of the dam. Several were shot down.

Within the main, or "new" water line, running from the Zuider Zee east of Amsterdam, south through Utrecht and thence curving southward to the Hollandsch Diep, the last-line field armies tried to cling to their redoubts, built by the hundreds in mound-like islands.

The assault of the main German armies drove them back. They began their retreat last night, fighting as they withdrew from the positions east of Utrecht.

The Dutch, at last reports, claimed to be firmly in possession of the island province of Zeeland, in the southwest, which is important to the Germans for bases of attack on England.

But the Germans, by driving to the Diep and crossing it, had cut off all lower Holland. They overran all the eastern and northeastern provinces, and, in all, held sway over perhaps three-quarters of Holland by tonight.

Why Holland Quit

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, May 15—The radio announcement of t he Dutch commander in chief, General Winkelman, follows:

I, H. G. Winkelman, supreme commander of the Dutch land and sea power, am telling you personally that we had to lay down our arms this afternoon.

It could not be otherwise. Our troops did all in their power and our air force was so small that it was not able to support our troops.

Our towns have been bombarded, our women and children have been bombed and the German air force took a toll of thousands of victims.

Military and non-military objectives were bombed.

Our soldiers did their best. They held on bravely and fought against an overwhelming enemy.

But they were not equal to modern weapons.

Not only the soldiers but even the civil population has suffered enormously.

Rotterdam was bombed and destroyed. You can imagine what was going on.

Utrecht had the same fate. Thus we were compelled to lay down our arms.

I, the commander in chief, gave the order to cease firing in order to spare further bloodshed and complete destruction of the country. At least a small part of our beautiful country will be saved.

As commander in chief I had obtained from the Dutch Government the power to act according to my own mind to prevent further bloodshed. So many Dutchmen may ask how all that happened, but you can understand how hard it was for me to decide as I did.

Hollanders, keep your faith in the traditions of our country. Let us bear our lot with calmness. Be faithful in the future. Keep order and calm.

Our fatherland will be restored, because that is our first duty.

Long live her Majesty the Queen and long live our fatherland!

defense zone—directly in front of France's "Little Maginot" line extension to the North Sea. It was here that France suffered her most disastrous defeat of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870.

The British acknowledged that Nazi Blitzkrieg legions were driving through south Holland to make the situation there "extremely serious" for the Allies.

The Dutch Field Army defending western Holland fell back before the savage German onslaught, retiring to their main waterline defense line in Utrecht province, the High Command announced.

Berlin reported that German forces in central Holland have blasted through the Dutch Grebbe defense system and are advancing toward Utrecht.

The Nazi drive through the Holland Line, to the south, has carried, the Germans said, as far as Rotterdam. Berlin also claimed that her legion had crossed the Meuse in France.

HITLER'S FORCES PUSH ACROSS FRENCH BORDER

Heavy Fighting Under Way Near Frontier of Luxemburg---Berlin Claims Wedge Has Been Driven Between Dutch and Belgian Armies.

By the Associated Press.

Germany dealt two smashing blows in the war in western Europe today and claimed to have driven a wedge between the Dutch and Belgian armies.

It said that French and British forces were unable to reach the Dutch armies to help them and that the Dutch, therefore, either must surrender or be annihilated.

The French conceded the "probable" fall of historic Sedan—ten miles inside the French border in the fortified Franco-Belgian

PARIS, May 14 (A. P.).—A French military spokesman conceded today that the city of Sedan, ten miles within France in the fortified border zone below the Belgian border, has probably been taken by the Germans.

The French High Command admitted that the Germans, gaining momentum in their push through southeastern Belgium, had crossed the northern border of France, and it was generally conceded that the long-awaited "great battle of the west" had at last begun.

The German advance, the French communique disclosed, was part of a push which had carried the Germans to the Meuse River on an eighty-mile front extending northward from Sedan through the Belgian town of Namur to Liege, the key point in Belgium's eastern defenses.

Chosen for Decisive Fight.

Military advices have indicated that it was along this line that the Allies planned to make their stand against the Germans in a battle which is expected to prove a decisive factor in the outcome of the entire war.

The Germans were reported to have concentrated a massive attack, supported by tanks and airplanes, in the Sedan sector. The town, which is on the south bank of the Meuse, was emptied of its civilian population.

Equally heavy fighting was reported at the Belgian town of Dinant, fifteen miles south of Namur on the Meuse.

Dinant likewise was abandoned by civilians.

The French communique said that the Nazi attack was increasing everywhere, and that the Germans had used two full divisions in their drive to the Meuse. Sedan is in the northern extension of the Maginot Line.

Bitter Street Fighting Reported.

The French reported repulse of a German assault at Longwy—inside the French frontier near the junction of the Belgian and Luxemburg borders—after bitter street fighting. The French still are holding the town, a spokesman said.

Two Nazi attacks in force in the Forbach-Saar sector, east of Longwy, also were reported turned back. German patrols were said to have been driven off near Wissemburg, at the eastern end of the 100-mile front stretching from the Moselle to the Rhine.

French military spokesmen said that the Belgian forts at Liege—with the exception of only one—were still holding out. Northwest of Liege a great battle between mechanized units was reported continuing near Tirlemont.

Text of Communique.

The official communique said:

"The German attack developed increased volume.

"Nothing important to report from central Belgium.

"The enemy reached the Meuse from Liege to Namur and Sedan.

"The latter towns were evacuated and particularly desperate fighting is taking place in the immediate region as well as the region north of Dinant.

"The battle continues from the southern outskirts of Longwy to the Moselle.

"Enemy attacks were repulsed in the region of Wissemburg.

"Everywhere our troops and Allied troops are fighting gallantly against the enemy who is putting forth his most intense effort, chiefly by means of his tanks and aviation.

"By the end of May 13 sixteen enemy planes were brought down. These must be added to the number given in the evening communique of May 13.

"In the course of the night our aviation carried out numerous reconnoissances."

Attack German Railway Yards.

The German campaign, military spokesmen said, combined terrific air attacks on both the front lines and Allied troop concentrations at the rear, direct thrusts from tanks and motorized divisions and heavy artillery barrages.

The Belgian High Command opened its lines after the first shock to allow passage of French troops into the battle zone where the fighting was the heaviest.

French tanks moved against the German mechanized forces while "armored cavalry" deployed on the flanks.

French and British pilots attacked German railway yards and airports. German pilots bombed French and Belgian airdromes while Nazi parachutists, instructed to spread havoc behind the lines, were dropped in increasing numbers.

Tell of Vast Tank Battle.

"Mere preliminaries," is the way a French spokesman described yesterday's air battles, infantry drives and a gigantic mechanized engagement in which the French said they had dispersed between 1,500 and 2,000 German tanks in the Belgian Ardennes, mountains north of France.

The "real" struggle for possession of the Netherlands and Belgium, he said, will come on the new Allied line.

Military commentators said that the Ardennes fight yesterday was the first in history in which two such fleets of "land battleships" had matched tactics and guns.

Sketchy dispatches told how the tank battle was fought in bright sunlight on a flat terrain between Tirelmont and Tongres where the machines were able to maneuver freely.

Tanks Rush In at Top Speed.

The French corps, en route to the battle line since the invasion on Friday, rushed into the engagement at full speed, it was said. The dust raised by the encounter could be seen from afar. The roar of the tanks' guns could be heard for miles.

A French staff officer said that a battle between "the full weight of the Allied mechanized army and the full weight of the German armored divisions may come now within a few days." Two French divisions, re-enforced by some reconnoissance elements, were reported to have been pitted against two German divisions in the Ardennes battle.

Report Heavy Nazi Losses.

The French reported Nazi losses in men and material there were heavy.

Advices from the front said that the German offensive appeared to be general north of the Moselle. Observers cited three objectives which the German General Staff might have immediately in mind: 1. To divide the liaisoned fronts of the Netherlands and Belgium in a drive to the coast; 2. To win the left bank of the Meuse River and drive on to Brussels, and 3. To force the French defenses along the Luxemburg border where the German army corps got a running start through the defenseless Grand Duchy.

It was emphasized by a spokesman for the French War Ministry that slow withdrawals by British, French, Dutch and Belgian troops could not be considered a retreat because that action was merely the following out of a pre-arranged plan of strategy.

Warn Against Over-Optimism.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—Warning strongly against overoptimism about the Lowlands campaign, a British military spokesman said today that in Belgium British troops now were co-operating with Belgians in covering Brussels. He added that a great battle was developing in the area east of Brussels. "It will be a few days yet," this spokesman said, "before we can estimate the position" in this phase of the war.

The German attack was described as bearing to the west rather than to the south, and observers here expressed the view that the smash at Sedan — which the Germans reached today—is part of the drive against Belgium, rather than the beginning of a blow against the Maginot Line.

British spokesmen said that there was "no confirmation" of a real attack on the Maginot Line thus far.

The military spokesman asserted that it is regarded in London as "likely" that Liege itself is isolated.

But he added: "We believe that fighting is going on in the (Liege) Citadel and have no reason to believe that Liege has fallen or need fall in the near future."

British Warships Helping.

Meanwhile, British troops rushed to stiffen the resistance of the Belgians, who appeared to be falling back from the salient formed by the river Meuse (Maas) and the Albert Canal, toward a shorter and more easily defended line.

The Admiralty announced that British warships were helping the Dutch and Belgian forces by bombarding plane-landed German troops on the coast.

An Air Ministry communique last night said that the Royal Air Force shot down forty or more German planes in battles over the Low Countries and bombed German troop columns in Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg. This brought the number of German planes reported shot down by the British since the start of the German invasion last Friday to approximately 135.

Report Defenders Split.

BERLIN, May 14 (A. P.).—The Belgian and Dutch armies have been separated by a powerful German wedge, DNB, the official German news agency reported from the western front today.

The Germans said that French and British forces were unable to raech the Dutch armies to help them and that the Dutch, therefore, either must surrender or be annihilated.

The German tactics, DNB declared, has rendered unimportant Belgium's Albert Canal position, which was conceived as a strong defense line between the North Sea coast at Antwerp and Liege, near the German frontier—in other words, from the Scheldt River to the Meuse.

Rumors that the Belgian city of Antwerp had already fallen were denied in official quarters, where it was intimated, however, that its capture could be expected soon.

Germans Enter France.

German troops crossed into France today, the fifth day of the Blitzkrieg through the Low Countries, and the Nazi High Command declared that it also had smashed through key defenses in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Today's communique claimed these successes:

FRANCE—"The French-Luxemburg and French-Belgian border up to the point of Mezieres-Charleville has been reached nearly everywhere and crossed in many places.

HOLLAND—"We succeeded in expanding our piercing of the Grebbe line southeastward of Amersfoort and gained area in the direction of Utrecht. Our troops pierced through as far as Rotterdam."

BELGIUM—"The city of Liege is in German hands. In the region south of theline from Liege to Namur our troops left the Ardennes behind and vanguards reached the Meuse between Namur and Givet."

Planes Protect Attack.

A heavy tank battle was fought north of Namur, with the Germans attacking Allied tanks after Nazi bombing.

The penetration of French soil, the High Command said, was made "under the protection of continuously attacking German fighting planes, Stukas (dive bombers) and destroyer-plane units."

Apparently the Germans had advanced in some spots at a rate of forty to sixty miles a day despite solid Belgian resistance, backed up now by increasing French strength.

The crossing of the Meuse carried the Germans into the region of Sedan.

Dutch Reported Weakening.
